Besides the "Collier moon," there was on exhibition a large number of enormous photographs of various sections of the earth's satellite, a series known as the Paris atlas. There were actual photographs taken by a camera attached to the great telescopes of the Paris observatory. They are considered the finest series of pictures of the moon in existence. Two members of the staff devoted more than twelve years to this work, taking thousands of photographs in order to secure suitable ones for this atlas. Mr. Collier stated that in sculpturing his work he used these pictures as a basis, not only on account of their wonderful detail, but also as a foundation for accurate measurements. By such photographs it was possible to place every crater, every prominent physical feature, definitely by scale. Familiarity with the moon by telescopic observation was not sufficiently trustworthy, the eye alone being unable to transfer other than a somewhat indefinite impression.

"Some people claim the moon looks to them as big as a washtub; others a dinner plate; others a big pumpkin. It it quite startling to learn that the end of an ordinary lead pencil held at arm's length will hide the whole moon, or the sun either, from the eye," he pointed out.

An interesting feature the lecturer discussed was how small an object can be seen on the moon. Would a man be seen? Would a tree show? The human eye can discern an object in size one-half minute of arc. This means, simplified, that an object one inch in diameter should be visible some 555 feet distant; or a beauty plaster of one-eighth inch on the fair cheek of a debutante be discernible 70 feet away," he said. The argument showed that even when magnified one thousand times through the largest telescopes in existence, an object must be sixty yards square to even show as a mere speck on the moon. No human being would be seen. A single tree would not show. It would have to be a very large building to be discernible at a distance of 240 miles, to which the thousand power of the telescope would bring the moon to the eye. Nevertheless the wonderful detail shown through the telescope even with but 100-power was marvellous to behold.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM SKUCE.

Another pioneer of Ops township passed away last night in the person of the late William Skuce at the ripe old age of eighty-one years and seven months. The deceased gentleman was widely known throughout the district and his many friends will regret to learn of his demise. He has been ill since early in February so his dissolution was not unexpected. He was born in Cork, Ireland, and came to this country in 1850. He settled immediately in Ops and has lived there ever since. His wife, whom he married after he came to Canada, predeceased him the latter end of last July.

There survive him a sister, Mrs. Thos. Newman, of Emily, six daughters and five sons. The daughters are Mrs. H. McGahey, of Kearsage, Mich., Mrs. Jas. Southam, Bury's Green, Miss Charlotte Skuce at home, Mrs. Geo. Flett, Oakwood, Mrs. Jas. Walker, Peterboro, and Mrs. J. R. Williams, of Bellemont, Manitoba. The sons at home are: Messrs. James, William and Wesley, while two other sons, Mr. Richard Skuce resides in Emily township and Mr. John Skuce in West Virginia.—Lindsay Post.

BELVA COWIE.

Belva Cowie, aged seven years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cowie, 493 Sherbrooke Street, passed away Saturday in the Isolation Hospital from Diphtheria.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery.

MISS VIOLET ANDERSON.

Miss Violet Anderson, aged ninteen years, daughter of Mr. Laughlin Anderson, 580 Rogers Street, passed away yesterday at Nicholl's Hospital after a lingering illness. Deceased was well known, and a general favorite by all who knew her.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon, service at the house at 1.45, and funeral at 2.15 to the Little Lake Cemetery.

THE LATE MRS. HUNTER.

The death occurred last evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Dickson, 321 Rogers Street, of Mrs. Margaret Hunter, widow of the late William Hunter, at the age of 83 years.

The deceased had been a long resident of this city, and had been in poor health for the past five years. She was a member of Bethany Tabernacle. She leaves to mourn her death, four sons, Mr. Thomas Hunter, of this city; William, of Douro; James K., of Lansing, Mich.; and Warne, of Toronto; also two daughters, Mrs. J. A. Dickson, East City, and Mrs. Taylor, of Toronto.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Dickson, 321 Rogers Street, on Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

THE LATE MISS DARRAH.

Christina Darrah, daughter of Mr. Isadore Darrah, 147 Stewart Street, passed away yesterday afternoon in the General Hospital, at Toronto. Deceased was eighteen years of age, and was employed at Eaton's. She contracted pneumonia a few days ago and on Saturday her parents were summoned to her bedside and were with her when she passed away.

The body was brought to the city to-day and conveyed to the residence of her father at 147 Stewart Street.

Funeral announcements will be made later.

DIED THIS AFTERNOON.

Mrs. John Bickell, of Wolseley Street, passed away suddenly this afternoon.

Further announcement will be made later.

EXPLICIT INSTRUCTIONS.

They Accompanied the Rose Which Wifey Pinned on Hubby's Lapel.

Every morning the wife of the Wall street man pins a flower to his lapel as he starts for the office—a rose when she has one, a blossom of some plainer sort when roses are scarce.

This morning she had a rose, but she withheld the usual delicate attention, and for the first time he perceived an ominous look in her eyes.

"You never have the flower in your buttonhole when you come home in the evenings," began his wife sarcastically. "How do you always contrive to lose it?"

"I do not lose it," he replied. "I wear the flower until I reach my desk. I feel that that is far enough for a plain business man to carry a flower."

"After reaching your desk, what do you do with the flower?" she asked.

"I give it away," he replied.

"To the girl stenographer?" suggested his wife icily.

"Oh, no, I give it to the office boy," he answered.

"I beg your pardon, but you do not give it to the office boy," she retorted with acerbity. "You give it to the stenographer. I have seen it pinned on her shirt waist every day that I have called at your office. I think I shall discontinue the flower."

"In that case I shall lose an office boy—probably by suicide," remarked her husband, meeting her indignant eyes frankly. "He is head over heels in love with the stenographer and is trying to make a hit with the flower."

Hastily she pinned a rose to her husband's lapel and said:

"Be careful not to lose it—and give it to the office boy as usual."—New York Times.

Chancellor Boyd Gives Judgment for Thos. Brightman the Plaintiff

The first case on the list of the non-jury spring assizes of the High Court presided over by His Lordship Chancellor Boyd, was completed this morning when His Lordship gave judgment in the action of Thomas Brightman, of this city, against M. J. Quigley, formerly of Hastings, but now of Fernleigh, B. C. The action was for the recovery of $2,985.54, advanced as a loan. In giving judgment, His Lordship made som epointed comment as to the actions of the defendant and John Welch, his uncle. S. T. Medd appeared for the plaintiff, and G. N. Gordon for the defendant. According to the evidence, Mr. Welch had secured a cheque from Mr. Brightman, and turned it over to Mr. Quigley, who in turn promised to pay as soon as his father's estate was wound up.

The defendant was not present, his evidence, which was taken by commission, being read to the court.

In giving judgment, His Lordship said in part: "In times of form my opinion might differ, but in this case it is a matter of substance. I do not care to judge between the truth of the statments of Welch and Quigley. It is evident from the evidence that the defendant wanted money. It was borrowed by Welch and paid to the defendant. Of that there is no doubt. It was paid by Brightman and through the conduct of Welch reached the hands of Quigley. He knew that after he had also received his share from the bank that he had been paid twice. He should have paid the money into court. He was right in not paying it to Welch who had committed a breach of trust by drawing some of the money from the bank to be used for his own purpose. The bank also committed a breach of trust and suffered for it. I do not regard Quigley's trumped up affidavit about Welch owing him something. I give judgment for the plaintiff with interest of five per cent. from May 29, 1911, and direct that Quigley pay the costs."

Asked for Advance.

Thomas Brightman in his evidence stated that in September, 1907, Mr. Welch visited his office and asked him if he could advance Mr. Quigley the sum involved in the suit. Welch stated that Mr. Quigley would meet the debt as soon as he received the money due him from his father's estate. On September 25 the check was issued by the witness. It was made payable to Mr. Welch, who took it to Toronto, and endorsed it over to Mr. Quigley.

Under cross-examination the witness said he had faith in Mr. Welch, and was sure the money was for Mr. Quigley.

"Did you not know at the time

TOUGH SAILING FOR THE FURRIERS

Mild Weather and Money Stringency Cut Down Business.

According to local furriers, the season just closed has been the most disastrous in years. The mild weather which prevailed up until the first of the year put a large-sized crimp into receipts and the depressing condition of the money market which made itself felt to a great extent robbed the furriers of any chance to receive a fair trade when the real cold weather set in. There has been, at least, a dozen failures in men dealing in furs in Toronto since the first of the year, but fortunately the Peterborough dealers have been able to weather the storm.

CHARITY BOARD IN REGULAR SESSION

At the meeting of the Charity Board last evening, the back report showed a balance of $1,241.41.

Mr. P. Francis representative of Mark Street Methodist Church was formally welcomed to the Board.

No action was taken in regard to the application of Mrs. Bourbonis for a ticket from Montreal to Peterborough.

The case of an inmate of the Protestant Home named Fenwick was left in the hands of the Chairman and City Relief Officer Finch Miller to deal with.

No further action was taken in regard to the case of Mrs. Girven. The accounts to date are

SECOND CHILD SUCCUMBS TO DIPHTHERIA

On Saturday diphtheria caused the death of little Belva Cowie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cowie, 493 Sherbrooke Street, and yesterday the hand of death came again unheralded to the same family, and took away their oldest child, Della, aged nine years. The circumstances are indeed sad, when one thinks of the young mother robbed of her two children, her greatest joy. The parents will have the heartfelt sympathy of the community in this trying hour. They have another little child, also ill with the same disease, but she is convalescing.

The funeral of little Della took place this afternoon from the Isolation Hospital where she passed away, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

SAYS MEXICO IS NO PLACE FOR WHITE MAN

Should Leave Danger Zone Until Trouble is Over.

A commercial traveller last evening, in conversation with a Review scribe, made a rather startling remark, when he stated that the United States was in for a war with Mexico that would last for more than this year, anyway. The rebels and Federals will fight. They won't get together, but will get after the Americans independently.

This is the firm belief of the knight of the grip, who was down around Mexico last year while in the southern states for his firm.

"It's no place for a white man," he said. "The whites ought to come home until the trouble is straightened out."

The intervention of the United States was absolute necessary. This affair, as he characterized the trouble, had been coming for a long time, and could not come too soon. No matter who is in power and any one that has interests there, they must pay regular tribute. It doesn't matter which band of robbers either. They all prey upon legitimate interests. The biggest part of the rulers are cut throats, bandits, and there certainly can not be any peace in such country until it is cleaned up. Some staple form of government must be adopted before matters will settle down. Every intelligent person, no matter what nationality, should approve of the stand taken by the Americans, he said.

THE TRAFFIC REGULATIONS

POLICE CHIEF PROPHESIES SOME POLICE COURT CASES

"Oh, a few days will see some of these people before the Magistrate," was the remark of Police Chief Thompson yesterday afternoon when speaking of the traffic regulations for the city.

The Chief handed the reporter some of the following interesting and important facts concerning the by-law to regulate the traffic throughout the city.

Vehicles except when passing vehicles ahead of them shall keep as near to the right curb or side of the street as possible.

Vehicles meeting shall always pass on the right.

Vehicles overtaking others shall pass on the left and not pull over to the right until sufficiently clear to avoid an accident.

Vehicles passing from one street to another shall turn the corner as near the right hand curb or side of the street as possible.

Vehicles passing one street to another shall not directly cut across but go beyond the centre of the street before making the turn.

Police and firemen, also ambulances shall always have the right of way.

When the above are approaching the other vehicles will stop as near the curb as possible.

Vehicles going northerly or southerly shall have the right of way over vehicles going in a westerly or easterly direction.

Vehicles when stopped shall always remain in control of the driver by weight or other means and on the right side of the street.

Vehicles shall not be kept on the side of a street longer than it takes to transact the owner's business.

Slow moving vehicles shall keep as near the right hand curb as possible.

Upon conviction of an infraction of any of the above regulations a fine not exceeding $50 may be imposed.

NEW MARBLE COUNTER.

A handsome new white marble counter has been installed in the Marathon Candy Store, which reflects great credit on its builders, the Coughlin Monumental Works of this city. The marble is of the very finest quality and the manner in which the joints were made speaks very highly for Mr. Coughlin.

DETROIT POLICE BELIEVE THEY HAVE MAN WHO STARTED FIRE IN WHICH WALTER LIBBY MET HIS DEATH

The mysteries surrounding the fire in the Houghton Elevator Co.'s five-storey building at 55-55 Woodbridge Street, Detroit, Mich., in which Mr. Walter Libby, eldest son of Mr. Walter Libby, Parnell St., lost his life as did James Law, a fellow workman; practically every supposed incendiary fire in that city during the past year and also the murder of Patrolman Fred Holwedel are believed to be cleared up in the arrest of George A. Kelly, discharged city fireman of 824 Lafayette Avenue, Detroit, who is said by the police to be a dangerous maniac with a homicidal tendency. The Detroit Journal says:

Anonymous letters written to the police, supposedly by Kelley, detailed the "confession" of the writer to having committed these crimes.

Following clues furnished them in the shape of three letters, addressed to Capt. Robert S. Palmer of the detective bureau, Detectives Grossman, Piles, Gill and Quinn brought about the arrest of Kelley and also took the man's brother, William Kelley, 32, 824 Lafayette boulevard, and John Hanrahan, 38, no home, both of whom are held as witnesses.

Comparison of the letters received by Capt. Palmer, telling of the fires which the writer claimed to have started, show the writing on them and the writing of George A. Kelley to be identical. The letters are scrawled in pencil on cheap wrapping paper and while fairly legible and coherent, denote the mania with which the arrested man seems afflicted. He was discharged from the fire department and has been continually brooding over it.

Insane cunning is written on ev-

NATIONALIST VOLUNTEERS ALSO LAND WAR MUNITIONS BY ELUDING COAST GUARD

Canadian Press Despatch.

Londonderry, April 28. — Irish nationalist volunteers last night rivalled the exploits of the Unionist volunteers by running in a large consignment of arms and ammunition from the America. The steamer lay off Donegal coast for several nights till last night, several fishing craft approached her and brought the war munitions ashore, eluding the coast guard at a remote spot on the shore where they were distributed through the country.

DOCTORS IN FAVOR OF THE PULMOTOR

Are Heartily in Accord With Proposal of City Council

When the purchasing of a pulmotor was provided for in the estimates of the Fire, Water and Light Committee by the City Council, the chairman of the committee, Alderman G. W. Green, instructed Fire Chief Howard to arrange for a meeting of the medical men of the city and receive their expression of opinion as to the advisability of buying the machine. Dr. Hammond, President of the Medical Society, arranged a meeting between the Fire Chief and the local medical men, and it was held in the board room of the public library.

There was a very large attendance and after the Chief had placed his views, on behalf of the city, the question was given considerable discussion. The result was, that a resolution unanimously carried, heartily endorsing the proposed action of the city in purchasing the pulmotor and also agreeing that the Fire Station was the most suitable place for the machine. The resolution also assured the city of the hearty co-operation of the medical men in its use.

Dr. J. B. Mann has written to Chief Howard officially notifying him of the resolution and the committee will now go ahead with the purchase.

Obtaining the promise of the medical men that they will co-operate in the use of the pulmotor is a big asset to its popularity, for there are various rules among men of that profession to step out if another steps in. If the firemen are working over a victim of some accident with the pulmotor and a doctor arrives, there is no question at all about his getting to work over the victim at once.

The pulmotor in the fire station is generally recognised as the best possible method of having it always at the disposal of the public. If a person is the victim of a drowning accident, or comes in contact with a heavily loaded wire, the firemen can be depended upon to be on the spot a few moments after they are summoned. The inventors of the pulmotor claim that they can resuscitate a person who has been in the water for some time, hence no matter how sure parties are that one who is asphyxiated with gas or smoke or the victim of a drowning accident, is dead, the pulmotor should be summoned.

A Young Life Saved.

Yesterday's London Advertiser records a recovery by use of a pulmotor as follows:

"Four-year-old Johnnie Woodfine, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Woodfine, 138 Emery Street, found by his parents late Saturday afternoon floating in the cellar on the surface of about four feet of water, owes his life to Allie Jones' knowledge of resuscitation and a pulmotor.

"Doctor Nelson George was summoned and the pulmotor sent for, but prior to the arrival of both, Allie Jones, a boarder at the Woodfine home, and a first aid expert, arrived on the scene, and with his help and the pulmotor operated by Chief Operator C. H. Colby of the hydro station, life that had seemed to be extinct, returned to Johnnie Woodfine."

ASK DEPARTMENT AT TORONTO FOR RULING

The License Commissioners met again last night to pass on the petition for a license for the Maple Leaf hotel. It was decided to send the matter to the department at Toronto for a ruling.

THREE FINES OF $50

David Parsonson, G. Patterson and E. Donahue were this afternoon fined $50 each by Magistrate Dumble for their part in the game of pool at Joe's Pool Room on George Street.

AGAINST MORE MONEY FOR C.N.R.

MR. J. H. BURNHAM LEAVES CAUCUS, WHERE PROPOSALS WERE DISCUSSED

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, April 28.—The Government's proposals for aid to the Canadian Northern in the form of a bond guarantee of about forty-five millions were discussed at a prolonged Conservative caucus this morning, when Messrs. Nickle, Bennett and Burnham dissented, and left the room. It is understood that the rest of the caucus approved, and a formal notice of the bill will probably be given in the House to-night. An official announcement was that the discussion was interesting and satisfactory.

Messrs. Bennett and Nickle say, after listening to the proposals: "We came away from the caucus because in our opinion they were proposals in the interest of railway promoters and not of the people."

Mr. Burnham said he was against giving more money to the Canadian Northern, but he did not object to the Government acting as a receiver for the company.

WILSON WILL SEND FEDERALS TO COLORADO

Canadian Press Despatch

Washington, April 28.—President Wilson has decided to order Federal troops to Colorado to restore order in the mining districts, where a virtual civil war exists.

U.S. ADMIRAL SEIZES PROPERTY OF BRITISH CO.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Vera Cruz, April 28.—Admiral Fletcher, has seized the piers, yards and buildings of the Terminal Company, a British owned concern, the control over which he regarded as necessary, but could not come to an agreement with the owners as to the price to be paid.

The manager had raised the British Flag over the buildings, but this made no difference to Admiral Fletcher.

London, April 28.—Regarding the seizure of British propery in Vera Cruz by an American admiral, Foreign Office officials say this is all quite regular. The owners can make representation for damages through the consul to the Foreign Office, who will pass the claims on to Washington.

CHEMONG BRIDGE.

The Chemong bridge which was partly destroyed by the high winds recently has been repaired sufficiently to allow traffic to pass over. The permanent repairs will take some further time but the structure is repaired sufficiently at present to accommodate traffic.

BOYS TOLD THE OFFICERS THEY WERE NO GOOD

So P. C. Reid and Patterson Say at Police Court.

The charge of disorderly conduct against a local youth heard before Magistrate Dumble this morning, was dismissed. Mr. Dan. O'Connell appeared for the accused. Several lively remarks passed between the Chief and counsel in regard to the case.

Constables Reid and Patterson both gave evidence to the effect that while coming through East City last Sunday, and after advising the defendant and his pals to move on, arrested him. He acted in a disorderly manner.

Their evidence was to the effect that the youths had announced that the cops were no good.

Constable Reid admitted to Mr. O'Connell that he was not on duty at the time, but made the remark that a policeman was on duty all the time.

The accused in the box said they had merely met there a few minutes before the officers came. They were on their own property. The other boys moved, but, as he was on his mother's land he refused. "Is that your candid opinion of the Police Force, that they are no good?" asked the Chief, of the defendant.

"You needn't acquire a reputation," remarked Mr. O'Connell.

The youth denied acting in a disorderly manner, but admitted that he had stated he was on his own land, and had refused to comply with the constable's advice.

"The officers are positively harmful if they prevent boys from talking on Sundays," said Mr. O'Connell.

"Oh, we are not in Quebec," was the announcement of the Chief.

"Rather reflecting remarks, Chief, I think," replied Mr. O'Connell.

Continuing he stated that they even played golf in this city, and that evidently there was a law for the rich and one for the poor.

Other witnesses testified in favor of the defendant to the effect that there was no evidence of disorderly conduct.

MARTIN HARVEY

English Actor May Visit Peterboro Again

Patrons of the Grand Opera House will be pleased to learn that the management is endeavoring to secure a return engagement of Mr. Martin Harvey, who is now returning to the East after an extended tour in the West, where the great English actor and his company were received with open arms.

Mr. Turner, sen., said this morning that it would be a hard matter to book Mr. Harvey, but that every effort would be made to secure another visit.

IN ROME DO AS THE ROMANS DO

"When you live in a civilized place you must act decently," remarked Magistrate Dumble this morning to Percy Ashman, charged with being disorderly on Hunter St. yesterday afternoon.

Ashman was warned to get out of the city at once, and if he re-appeared a term of six months in Central awaited him.

FREIGHT CARS LEAVE THE RAILS

Broken Flange Supposed to Be The Cause

Five freight cars loaded with grain, on a Grand Trunk train en route to Belleville, jumped the track about 6 o'clock this morning between Madoc Junction and Halloway. The passenger arriving here at 8 o'clock passed the freight at Madoc Junction, at five-fifty a.m. and a few minutes later when the freight drew near to Hollaway the accident happened. There is no switch at the point where the cars jumped, so that it is thought that the cause was a broken flange. The Lindsay auxiliary was sent down and had the track cleared by noon.

WITH THE FARMERS.

Reports from the rural districts is to the effect that plowing, and in many cases, seeding, is well advanced. With the recent rains the pasture lands are becoming green, and the farmers are looking forward to results that are said to be better than preceding years around the district.

ADDITION TO POOLROOM.

Work began yesterday on the construction of an addition to the poolroom of Mr. Louis Yeotes, on George Street. It is to be extended at the rear and will afford ample accommodation for several more tables. Mr. Yeotes' idea is to confine the lower floor to pool and have the second at exclusively for English and American billiards.

SITE FOR PLAYGROUNDS.

One of the many suggestions made by local citizens for the purchasing of sites for the public playgrounds is that of the purchasing of the George A. Cox property. Have the south section arranged for sports and the remainder for a park.

With this suggestion, is in mind the great need for recreation grounds in the western section of the city.

MOVEMENT FOR BATHING PLACES AND PLAY GROUNDS GIVEN ANOTHER BOOST

A. E. McCOIG

Liberal M.P. for West Kent. In a speech in the House of Commons he declared himself as vigorously opposed to any further financial assistance to the Canadian Northern Railway.

Two Committees Are Appointed to Look Into the Matter of Sites

A meeting which was unanimous in its desire to promote a public swimming place was held last evening at the City Hall. The result was that a sub-committee consisting of Ald. Johnston and Ald. Stratton will investigate the advisability as to the securing of sites for the swimming places. Ald. Stratton suggested that the use of Inverlea Park, Jackson Park and others be considered and reported on as soon as possible was adopted by the committee which consisted of Ald. Johnston, Ald. Stratton, Ald. Duffus, Dr. Morrison, B. F. Ackerman, J. H. Connal and others.

Mayor Buller, Ald. Duffus, J. H. Connal, Dr. Morrison will comprise the committee to report on the playground proposition.

The report will be based on information regarding sites, and information as to the probable cost of construction and maintenance, etc.

Buildings for dressing will also be considered.

Ald. Johnston presided. He stated that the meeting had been called to promote the suggestion of public swimming places and also deal with the playground question.

The matter respecting the establishing of open air skating rinks for the children around the city had been broached at the council last year but nothing had been done in regard to the matter. He was of the opinion that amiable arrangements could be made for public playgrounds, public skating rinks and one of the most important that of public swimming places.

The matter should be considered from the general and public standpoint. The council was to take the initiative step.

A Good Idea.

"The expense is not very great,

GOVERNOR GENERAL'S PARTY WHO WILL VISIT THE CITY

Those who will accompany H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, and H.R.H. Princess Patricia on their visit to this city on June 1st are:

The Hon. Katherine Villiers, Lady-in-waiting to the Princess.

Lieut.-Col. F. D. Farquhar, D.C.S. Military Secretary.

Captain the Honorable G. E. Boscaween and Captain A. C. D. Graham, Ades-de-Canmp.

A. F. Sladin, C.M.D., Private Secretary.

From the present program being arranged the Royal visitors will be shown the city before being entertained at luncheon.

DECORATION OF THE CITY FOR THE ROYAL VISIT

What Might be Done in the Way of Distinctive and Appropriate Decoration — We May Equal, if not Excel, Decorations of Fifty Years Ago

To the Editor The Review:

Sir—Presently the call will go out that we do some forms of decoration in honor of the visit of the Duke of Connaught, the Governor General of Canada and the Princess Patricia. We have done some things in the past that have been creditable. Have we public spirit to do better? The impressions of a place, on such an occasion are wholly those that come from at best a hasty look. There can be no time for the royal visitors and staff to make even a general inspection.

After an interval of fifty-four years since the last royal visitor came to Peterborough we should do ourselves proud. What is done should be well done, even if there be not so much of it. This with reference to public decoration. Private display will be made at the will of each citizen and may be relied on to be pretty general and in many cases elaborate and good. But our public should extend beyond the putting up of a few lines of streamers and flags. That is very well for a society reception but we want something distinctive.

The conspicuous feature of the display at the reception to the late King, at the time the Prince of Wales, was the fine arches erected. So far as I have been able to learn in no town the size of Peterborough and in few of the cities visited, was anything similar attempted. Four arches were put up. One in East ward, at the top of the hill, going up from the bridge. One about opposite St. John's Church, another at the crossing of Brock with George Street. These were erected under the direction of the committee. That at St. John's Church was of the style of the Tudor times. Two massive towers, crowned with battlements and pierced with narrow openings. The whole covered with evergreens nailed on the sheeting. The effect, when blazoned with many flags and banners was very fine. One gained some idea of what it meant to hand the banners on the outer walls. The arch in Ashburnham was of Roman style. Plain, massive, with the broad circular opening distinctive of this style of architecture a conspicuous feature. Trimmed in evergreens, and decorated. The arch at Brock St., built in the Gothic style. Hexagon towers, pointed arches, latticed windows, the whole thing realistic and striking.

Conspicuous by its simplicity, massive construction, and typical of the times and industries was the fourth arch, put up by the lumbermen. These men were giants, so to speak, in those days. The arch was piled, it was not built, at the corner of Charlotte St. and George St. The lumber was furnished by Messrs. Snyder and Dickson, the teams by lumberers generally. The piling done by the artists from the mill yards, who could lay the boards to a hair. Mr. N. Shaw had charge of the piling and the whole thing was completed in fourteen hours. It was a triple arch, the lumber piled so as to show three openings, the widest in the centre, and the curves resulting from skilful placing of the oars drew most complimentary remarks. On top of it were placed a couple of deer, on each side of these a bark canoe, and as the procession approached twenty-five lumbermen, in red flannel shirts, with cant hooks and peevys were ranged on the sides of the piles. In addition to evergreens the decorations included many mottoes, such as "The Source of our Wealth," and "Ships, Colonies and Commerce." There was neither nail or saw used in its construction, and after the celebration the material was drawn to the station and shipped as usual.

Can we not have a couple of arches, just to show the newer generation how their fathers did things. No doubt the lumber could be had for the trouble of hauling, and we have skilful pilers among us as yet. As for evergreens, the woods are full of them. Why not? Who will move in the matter? Will the new Board of Trade, of young men, set about it? Let us have a few distinctive faunes, that may be remembered because they are too good to forget instead of a lot of smaller decorations showy, but lacking civic character.

FRANK H. DOBBIN.

SIR HUGH GRAHAM'S POSITION.

THE MONTREAL MAIL quotes with much gusto the Kingston Standard's words to the effect that newspapers like the Montreal Herald and Star cannot have much influence because dominated by Sir Hugh Graham, and because the Herald supports the Liberal and the Star the Conservative party. The reasoning is very faulty since the erudite conclusion is not in accordance with facts. The Montreal Herald and particularly the Star are papers of great influence and power in Dominion as well as in municipal politics and no newspaper is more cognizant of that fact than the Montreal Mail.

There seems to be considerable animus against Sir Hugh Graham because he dominates two papers in Montreal. In principle, there is nothing unreasonable in doing so. As long as the government of this country is based on party politics many political questions are capable of two solutions or at least of two points of view. Take the naval question for example. It is quite reasonable for one man and one party to advocate a nationalist policy and for others to advocate an Imperial policy. Ownership of two papers such as Sir Hugh Graham controls involves, besides profits from them as commercial enterprises, the control of their policies, or in other words of furthering a Liberal or a Conservative opinion. The two points of view are put forth and the people may choose between them. In theory no fault can be found with Sir Hugh's position as owner of two newspapers of opposite policies. It must not be forgotten that newspapers are commercial enterprises, operated not for the public benefit but for private profit. There is a duty to the state or to the public to conduct them in the best interests of all, just as the owner of a big store has a duty to conduct his business to a certain extent in the public interest. Thus he should not misrepresent his goods. He should try to give the public as good goods and as efficient service as possible and he reaps the profits from the business. He may start or buy another store, run one in competition with the other, advertise the goods of one against the other and no one would reasonably declaim against him for doing so. Sir Hugh Graham owns two daily newspapers. Very well, he is a successful business man and deserves praise for the success he has attained. So long as his papers present fair opinions to their readers the matter of ownership is outside newspaper criticism.

But there is another side to such an extraordinary position as Sir Hugh Graham occupies in the newspaper field. It is the power of ownership to prevent, on occasions, the fair presentation of two opinions on a public question; the power to swing the influence of two powerful papers to one opinion that may be not in the public, but entirely in corporate or private interest; the power not to allow electors a free choice but to influence them to the side of one party, one faction, or one machine. Power in any field of human activity of such extent does not mean that it will be misused, however great the possibilities are for public exploitation and private advantage. Men of the present time must not forget that the tyrants of ancient Greece and Syracuse were among the best governors of classic days.

Sir Hugh Graham's position as king of the evening newspaper situation in Montreal, places the onus of a great responsibility on his shoulders. To conduct two journals with due regard to their public obligations, requires mental and moral qualities of the highest kind. Sir Hugh's claim to the respect of his fellow men and to reverence from posterity depends on sinking private ends to public service, in presenting fair opinions so that each side has an equal chance.

A TRIUMPH FOR SURGERY.

SOMETIMES the medical profession is criticised adversely in regard to operations. Although it is usually the opinion of uninformed persons, we have heard medical men say that the knife was unnecessary. Be that as it may, surgical operations are performed every day that are successful, but being of a common sort, excite neither comment nor admiration. One operation for rupture was performed on an old lady eighty-one years of age the other day in a Western State and she has since been buried. Possibly the operation in that case was unnecessary considering the great age of the patient. That is one case that is open to criticism.

On the other hand, the Montreal Mail contains an account of an operation that was performed in the Royal Victoria Hospital that was a distinct triumph for the science of surgery. The case was that of a youth, nineteen years of age, Bruce Moffatt, afflicted with a disease called pericarditis. He is now lying at the Royal Victoria Hospital with a tube attached to his heart and there is every hope that the single operation will have done away for ever with the pericarditis from which he suffered.

Moffatt was strangling to death with the disease, when he was rushed to the hospital. The veins stood out on his neck as he drew in air with all the strength of his lungs and unconsciousness was expected to take place at any moment. Pericarditis is a disease that contracts the heart, preventing breathing, and when it reaches the acute stage brings on death slowly, but almost too quickly for medical aid to prevent. Details of his condition had been forwarded to the hospital by telephone. As the ambulance was dashing through the streets at top speed with him, the operating table was being prepared, while the two specialists and a physician were holding a conference. They made ready, with all speed, for an operation that had only been performed once before in the Royal Victoria Hospital. It was successful then, being performed by the late Dr. Bell.

So weak was the boy when laid on the table that it was impossible to administer ether, and a local anaesthetic was injected into his body, about the heart. In consequence he was able to watch the surgeons cutting into his breast. With rapid strokes of the scalpels, the skin and flesh was cut through until the distended heart was bare. Then with the incision into the pericardium, the fluid secretion that had been stopping the heart from beating flowed out and the boy felt relief at once. A tube was inserted to drain the chamber in which the fluid had been, and as it passed away in five minutes the heart resumed its normal beat, the smaller veins relaxed and the boy spoke. The duration of the operation was two hours.

In case of pericarditis a fluid of the same nature as tears accumulates between the pericardium and the heart, the pericardium being a membrane enclosing the heart proper. As the fluid is secreted, having no outlet, it distends the pericardium, and at the same time contracts the heart. With the gradual contraction of the heart there is increased difficulty in its beating and strangulation follows. The only possible relief is to draw off the secretion and to do that it is necessary to cut through the pericardium without injuring the heart.

The two cases are interesting. In the former an operation was unavailing; in the latter the knife was the only means to save a life. Had scientific surgery not been developed two deaths would have ensued. Frequently, the failures in surgery are heard by the public, but, when the successes often fail to reach them, criticism should begin with a grain of hesitation. Medical science undoubtedly can chronicle many mistakes, but, at the same time, its signal services and progress should receive their due and praise.

OUR NEW RIVALS.

An American statistician writes as follows of the marvellous growth of the South American republics:—"During the past five years we (the U.S.) have exported 153 thousand tons of meat. Argentine has exported 1500 thousand tons, or nearly ten times as much. During the past three years, while we were exporting 118 million bushels of wheat, Argentine exported 236 million bushels or nearly twice as much. . . While we were exporting 80 million bushels of corn, Argentine was exporting 172 millions of bushels.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WE OBSERVE that the Montreal Mail has copied our editorial on St. George. We trust it was of some interest to its large number of readers.

A New Hat, A New Bill.

Wife (delightedly): "Is my new dress becoming to me?" Husband (cuttingly): "Yes; and I suppose the bill will be coming to me."

Pints and Pints.

"Do you call this a pint?" asked the sharp servant-girl of the milkman. "Yes." "Well, it won't do. When we want condensed milk we buy it at the grocer's."

Didn't Forget the G.

The smallest boy in the class read haltingly: "I see—a man—flyin'."

"Don't forget the 'g,' Danny," reminded the teacher; so Danny read again: "Gee, I see a man flyin'."

Little Kids Have Large Ears.

Exchange.

Mrs. Kawler (to hostess' child)—Are you glad to see me again, Edith?

Edith—Yes'm, and mamma's glad too.

Mrs. Kawler—Is she?

Edith—Yes; she said she hoped you'd come today and have it over with.

A Scotchman's Fears.

Dugald was ill, and his friend Donald took a bottle of whiskey to him. Donald gave the invalid one glass, and said:

"Ye'll get anither in the mornin'."

About five minutes elapsed, and then Dugald suddenly exclaimed:

"Ye'd better let me hae the ither noo, Donald, ye hear o' sae mony sudden deaths noo-a-days."

An Admonition Worth Remembering.

Guelph Daily Herald.

It is worth remembering that the four New York gunmen executed on Monday were all brought up on the streets. Their graduation in crime was an easy result. How important it is, therefore, that the young people should be kept off the streets.

Some Facts About Ice.

Recently formed ice one inch and a half thick will support a man; four inches thick will support cavalry; five inches thick will support an eighty-four cannon; ten inches will support an army: eighteen inches thick will support a railroad train.

Recognition From Lindsay.

Lindsay Warder.

F. H. Dobbin, a master printer, has been elected by acclamation to the position of alderman in the City of Peterboro. He is a former Lindsay citizen, and life-long connection with newspaper work should fit him well for the position around the civic board. He is observant and quick to grasp the kernel of situations. In fact, Peterboro in general, should benefit as a result of his election to the important position.

Conjugal Felicity.

A teacher in a Liverpool school was trying to find from a tiny child the name of his father. He seemed quite unable to think of it, so to help him she asked:

"What do you call him?"

"I call him father," was the reply.

"Well, what does your mother call him?"

The response was eloquent of the manners of the neighborhood: "She doesn't call him anything—she likes him."

Wits in the Council.

Dundas Star.

Deputy Reeve Douglas put through the dog by-law. He hasn't a dog. Councillor Moss was not enthusiastic over the dog by-law, but would have been if it had been cats instead. He has a dog. Councillor Angold was a strong supporter of the dog by-law, but would not support Coun. Moss on cats. He has a cat. Councillor Dickson thought it was more important to have a chicken by-law. He doesn't keep hens. The Mayor thought a squirrel by-law might be in order. He lives on Victoria St., where the squirrels are killing the shade trees.

SNAKES

By Walt Mason

These sunny days bring forth the snakes from holes in quarries, cliffs and brakes. The gentle bullsnake, mild and meek, sets forth his proper prey to seek; of all good snakes he is the best, with high ambition in his breast; he is the farmer's truest friend, because he daily puts an end to mice and other beasts which prey, upon that farmer's crops and hay. He is most happy when he feasts on gophers and such measly beasts; and being six or eight feet high, when stood on end, you can't deny that forty bullsnakes on a farm are bound to do the vermin harm. The bullsnake never hurts a thing; he doesn't bite, he doesn't sting, or wrap you in his slimy folds, and squeeze you till he busts all holds. As harmless as a bale of hay, he does his useful work all day, and when at night he goes to rest, he's killed off many a wretched pest. And yet the farmers always take a chance to kill this grand old snake. They'll chase three miles or more to end the labors of their truest friend. They'll hobble forth from beds of pain to hack a bullsnake's form in twain, and leave him mangled, torn and raw—which shows there ought to be a law.

Birthdays & Note

TUESDAY, APRIL TWENTY-EIGHTH

TO-DAY, children young and old might well extend a word of congratulation to that delightful entertainer, PALMER COX, creator of the Brownie Books, who is celebrating his seventy-fourth birthday on this date. Perhaps it may not be generally known that Mr. Cox is a Canadian. Though he has lived most of his life in the United States, he still spends several months each year in his native town of Granby, Quebec, where he has a fine residence called "Brownie Castle." He began his art work when quite young, but it was some time before he hit upon the idea of writing and illustrating a series of stories about the brownies. These little fellows became immensely popular in no time and the author-artist soon grew rich from the sale of his books about them.

BELLEVILLE MAN IS SUDDENLY STRICKEN

BELLEVILLE, April 28. — John Luscombe died suddenly Sunday night from heart failure, aged 73 years. He was born in England, where for many years he was connected with the 20th Regiment, and saw active service in India, Japan, and Africa. He came here 30 years ago, and for over 25 years was engaged as a car inspector on the Grand Trunk Railway.

Inspecting U. S. Prisons.

BOSTON, April 28. — J. Herbert Thewlis, former Lord Mayor of Manchester, Eng., and chairman of the police commission of that city, inspected the state prison yesterday, accompanied by Robert Peacock, Manchester chief of police. The English officials are in this country studying prison administration.

Famous K. C. Dead.

LONDON, April 28.—Mr. Danckwerts, K.C., the famous ecclesiastical and Appeal Court advocate, died yesterday. He was born in South Africa, 61 years ago. The late Mr. Danckwerts was a familiar figure at the English Bar, where his abnormal stoutness was the subject of much humorous comment. He has briefed many Canadian appeals before the Privy Council.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Bishop Farthing of Montreal yesterday opened Woodstock's new Nurses' Home in the presence of a large and well-pleased audience.

Wabash passenger train No. 2, and a Grand Trunk freight, met in head-on collision at Newbury, Ont., yesterday morning. Nobody was hurt.

In a fit of despondency, Mrs. Mary Gardiner, aged 31, 212 First avenue, Toronto, drank carbolic acid. She had been in ill-health for the past four months.

Early yesterday morning a large residence in Regent street, Welland, occupied by Daniel Hobden as a dwelling and boarding-house, was swept by fire.

A man broke into the Waterloo Golf and Country Club at two o'clock yesterday morning, but was overpowered by the steward before he could secure any booty.

The death occurred suddenly in London, Eng., of Sir George Doughty, M.P., a famous Grimsby fish trader who had many interests in Canada and especially in British Columbia.

A cold wave struck the Western Provinces Sunday night, Humboldt, Sask., recording 17 degrees of frost, and at most points in the three provinces the temperature went below the freezing point.

Frank Dale, a Galt workman, had a narrow escape yesterday when a rifle bullet fired by somebody unknown shattered a pane and imbedded itself in the wall within a few inches of where he stood.

Queen Eleanor May Not Come.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, April 28.—Queen Eleanor of Bulgaria has decided to cancel her proposed visit to the United States in case of war between the United States and Mexico. Her Majesty had contemplated sailing at the end of May.

TOTAL LOSS 250 LIVES.

All Hope of Escape of Sealer Southern Cross Now Abandoned.

OTTAWA, April 28. — Word was received here yesterday from W. B. Nicholson, Canadian trade commissioner at Newfoundland, that the total loss of life in the recent Newfoundland sealing disaster will run to 250. In view of the extent of the calamity the Government has under consideration an increase of the grant made to the Newfoundland Government for the survivors. Mr. Nicholson reports that there is no doubt now that the Southern Cross, which had 175 men on board, has gone down with all on board. A letter is expected daily giving full details of the loss of the Southern Cross. The first ship lost was the Newfoundland. Sixty-nine bodies from this ship were brought in by the Bellaventura, and eight men were missing, who it was supposed had walked off the ice. The mourning when these 69 men were brought in was almost indescribable. Members from Cape Breton say that it is rumored amongst the fishermen of that coast that there is still a third ship lost, but there is no confirmation.

Shock of Mother's Death Kills Nun.

LONDON, Ont., April 28.—Shock consequent upon the death of her mother at Orillia, coupled with ill-health, caused the death from heart disease of Sister Bernadine, for many years connected with the Sisters of St. Joseph of this city. The body was brought back here and the funeral service held at the same hour as that of her mother at Orillia.

MAY INCREASE FLEET.

Squadron In Mexican Waters To Be Strengthened If War Goes On.

LONDON, April 28.—The British Government has had under consideration the possible necessity of strengthening the British fleet in Mexican waters, in order to insure the protection of British subjects and property. Nothing has been yet definitely decided and in view of the latest news from Mexico it is hoped by officials that it will be unnecessary to send more war vessels there.

According to information received by the Government the danger which threatened British subjects in Mexico has largely passed, but any recurrence of that danger will probably be met by the despatch of a sufficient naval force to protect British subjects and their property.

CHAPTER IV.

In Which the Truth Trespasses.

LORD and Lady Bazelhurst, with the more energetic members of their party, spent the day in a so called hunting excursion to the hills south of the villa. Toward nightfall they returned successfully empty handed and rapacious for bridge. Penelope, full of smoldering anger, had spent the afternoon in her room, disdaining every call of sociability. She had awakened to the truth of the situation in so far as she was concerned. She was at least seeing things from Shaw's point of view. Her resentment was not against the policy of her brother, but the overbearing, petulant tyranny of her American sister-in-law. From the beginning she had disliked Evelyn; now she despised her. With the loyal simplicity of a sister she absolved Cecil of all real blame in the outrage of the morning, attributing everything to the cruelty and envy of the despot who held the purse strings from which dangled the pitiable fortunes of Bazelhurst. The Bazelhursts, one and all—ancestors thrown in—swung back and forth on the pendulum of her capriciousness. Penelope, poor as a church mouse, was almost wholly dependent upon her brother, who in turn owed his present affluence to the more or less luckless movement of the matrimonial market. The girl had a small, inadequate income—so small that it was almost worth jesting about.

Here was Penelope, twenty-two, beautiful, proud, fair minded and healthy, surveying herself for the first time from a new and an entirely different point of view. She was [illegible] pleased with the picture. She began to loathe herself more than she pitied her brother. Something like a smile came into her clouded face as she speculated on Randolph Shaw's method of handling Evelyn Banks had she fallen to him as a wife. The quiet power in that man's face signified the presence of a manhood that—ah, and just here it occurred to her that Lady Bazelhurst felt the force of that power even though she never had seen the man. She hated him because he was strong enough to oppose her, to ignore her, to laugh at her impotence.

The smoldering anger and a growing sense of fairness combined at length in the determination to take her brother and his wife to task for the morning's outrage, let the consequences be what they might. When she joined the people downstairs before dinner there was a red spot in each cheek and a steady look in her eyes that caused the duke to neglect woefully the conversation he was carrying on with Mrs. Odwell.

Dinner was delayed for nearly half an hour while four of the guests finished their "rubber." Penelope observed that the party displayed varying emotions. It afterward transpired that the hunters had spent most of the afternoon in her ladyship's distant lodge playing bridge for rather high stakes. Little Miss Folsom was pitifully unresponsive to the mirth of Mr. Odwell. She could ill afford to lose $600. Lady Bazelhurst was in a frightful mood. Her guests had so far forgotten themselves as to win more than $1,000 of the Banks legacy, and she was not a cheerful loser, especially as his lordship had dropped an additional $500. The winners were riotously happy. They had found the sport glorious. An observer given to deductions might have noticed that half of the diners were immoderately hilarious, the other half studiously polite.

Lord Bazelhurst wore a hunted look and drank more than one or two highballs. From time to time he cast furtive glances at his wife. He laughed frequently at the wrong time and mirthlessly.

"He's got something on his mind," whispered Odwell in comment.

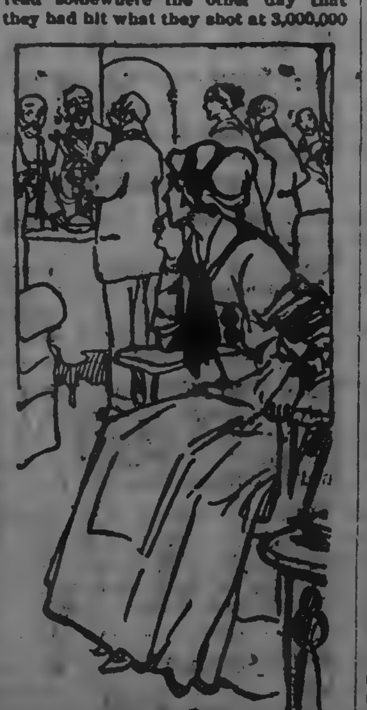
"Yes; he always laughs when there is anything on his mind," replied Mrs. De Peyton. "That's the way he gets it off."

After dinner no one proposed cards. The party edged off into twos and threes and explained how luck had been with or against them. Penelope, who could not afford to play for stakes and had the courage to say so, sat back and listened to the conversation [illegible] her brother and the group around [illegible]. The duke was holding forth on [illegible] superiority of the Chinese over the Japanese as servants, and Bazelhurst was loudly defending the Japanese navy.

"Hang it all, Barminster, the Japs could eat 'em up!" he proclaimed. "Couldn't they?" to the crowd.

"I'm talking about servants, Cecil," observed the duke.

"And shoot? Why, they're the greatest gunners in the world. By Jove, I read somewhere the other day that they had hit what they shot at 3,000,000 times out of—or, let me see, was it the Prussians who fired 3,000,000 rounds and"—



Penelope Started and Flushed.

"Oh, let's change the subject," said the duke in disgust. "What's become of that Shaw fellow?" Penelope started and flushed, much to her chagrin. At the sound of Shaw's name Lady Bazelhurst, who was passing with the count, stopped so abruptly that her companion took half a dozen paces without her.

"Shaw? By Jove, do you know I'd completely forgotten that fellow," exclaimed Cecil.

"I thought you were going to shoot him or shoot at him or something like that. Can't you get him in range?"

"Oh I wasn't really in earnest about that, Barminster. You know we couldn't shoot at a fellow for such a thing—"

"Nonsense, Cecil," said his wife. "You shoot poachers in England."

"But this fellow isn't a poacher. He's a—a gentleman, I daresay—in some respects—not all, of course, my dear, but"—

"Gentleman? Ridiculous!" scoffed his wife.

"I—yes, quite right—a ridiculous gentleman, of course. Ha, ha! Isn't he, Barminster? But with all that, you know, I couldn't have Tompkins shoot him. He asked me the other day if he should take a shot at Shaw's legs, and I told him not to do anything so absurd." Penelope's heart swelled with relief, and for the first time that evening she looked upon her brother with something like sisterly regard.

"It didn't matter, however," said Lady Evelyn sharply. "I gave him instructions yesterday to shoot any trespasser from that side of the line. I can't see that we owe Mr. Shaw any especial consideration. He has insulted and ignored me at every opportunity. Why should he be permitted to trespass more than any other common lawbreaker? If he courts a charge of birdshot he should not expect to escape scot free. Birdshot wouldn't kill a man, you know, but it would"—

But Penelope could restrain herself no longer. The heartlessness of her sister-in-law overcame her prudence, and she interrupted the scornful mistress of the house, her eyes blazing, but her voice under perfect control. Her tall young figure was tense, and her fingers clasped the back of Miss Folsom's chair rather rigidly.

"I suppose you know what happened this morning," she said, with such apparent restraint that every one looked at her expectantly.

"Do you mean in connection with Mr.—with Jack the Giant Killer?" asked her ladyship, her eyes brightening.

"Some one of your servants shot him this morning," said Penelope, with great distinctness. There was breathless silence in the room.

"Shot him?" gasped Lord Bazelhurst, his thin red face going very white.

"Not—not fatally?" exclaimed Evelyn, aghast in spite of herself.

"No. The instructions were carried out. His wound in the arm is trifling. But the coward was not so generous when it came to the life of his innocent, harmless dog. He killed the poor thing. Evelyn, it's—it's like murder!"

"Oh," cried her ladyship, relieved. "He killed the dog. I daresay Mr. Shaw has come to realize at last that we are earnest in this. Of course I am glad that the man is not badly hurt. Still, a few shot in the arm will hardly keep him in bounds. His legs were intended," she laughed lightly. "What miserable aim Tompkins must take."

"He's a bit off in his physiology, my dear," said Cecil, with a nervous attempt at humor. He did not like the expression in his sister's face. Somehow, he was ashamed.

"Oh, it's bad enough," said Penelope. "It was his left arm—the upper arm, too. I think the aim was rather good."

"Pray, how do you know all of this, Penelope?" asked her ladyship, lifting her eyebrows. "I've heard that you see Mr. Shaw occasionally, but you can't be his physician, I'm sure."

Penelope flushed to the roots of her hair, but suppressed the retort which would have been in keeping with the provocation.

"Oh, dear, no!" she replied. "I'm too soft hearted to be a physician. I saw Mr. Shaw just after the—ah—the accident."

"You shaw Saw—I mean you saw Shaw?" gasped Bazelhurst.

"She sees him frequently, Cecil. It was not at all unusual that she should have seen him today. I daresay he waited to show you his wound before going to a surgeon."

Penelope could not resist the temptation to invent a story befitting the moment. Assuming a look of concern, she turned to her brother and said: "He is coming to see you about it tomorrow, and he is coming armed to the teeth, attended by a large party of friends. Mr. Shaw says he will have satisfaction for the death of that dog if he has to shoot everybody on the place."

"Good Lord!" cried the duke. There was instant excitement. "I believe the wretch will do it too."

"Oh, I say, Bazelhurst, settle with him for the dog," said De Peyton nervously. He looked at his watch and then at his wife. The entire party now was listening to the principal speakers.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Lady Evelyn. "He won't come. It's all bluster. Don't let it frighten you, Cecil. I know the manner of man."

"I wish you could have seen him this morning," murmured Penelope, thoroughly enjoying the unexpected situation. Her conscience was not troubled by the prevarication.

"By Jove, I think it would be wise to send over and find out what he valued the brute at," said Cecil, mopping his brow.

"Good! We'll send Penelope to act as ambassador," said her ladyship. "She seems to be on friendly terms with the enemy."

"To act as ambassador from Cowardice Court?" questioned Penelope loftily, yet with cutting significance. "No, I thank you. I decline the honor. Besides," with a reflective frown, "I don't believe it's diplomacy he's after."

Always break rather than cut asparagus. Discard any pieces too tough to snap with the fingers. If the asparagus is to be broken in small pieces before cooking, the cook will do well to add the tender upper ends only after the tougher stalks have become tender.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, April 27.—Beneficial rains thruout most of the winter and spring crop belts had more influence in making the wheat market bearish today than the assumed outlook for peace. The close, which was comparatively steady, showed ⅛c to ⅜c net decline. Other leading staples, as well as wheat, all finished at a loss—corn ⅛c to ⅝c, oats ⅜c to ½c, and provisions 5c to 25c.

Butchers'.

Choice butchers' steers sold at $8 to $8.25; good to choice at $7.75 to $8; medium at $7.50 to $7.75; common at $7 to $7.40; choice cows at $6.75 to $7.25; good at $6.50 to $6.75; common cows at $5 to $5.75; canners and cutters at $3.50 to $4.50; choice bulls at $7 to $7.50; good at $6.50 to $6.75; common bulls at $6 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

The market for stockers and feeders held about steady. Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $7.25 to $7.50; steers, 600 to 700 lbs., sold at $7 to $7.15; stock heifers, $6.25 to $6.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts were not large, not more than twelve or fifteen being offered. These sold from $50 to $90 each.

Calves.

The run of calves was light, only 95. Prices were firm; choice calves sold at $9 to $10 per cwt., good, $8 to $9; common, $4.25 to $7.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were not as large, with prices very firm. Sheep, ewes, sold at $6.50 to $7.50; rams at $6 to $6.50; yearling lambs at $7.75 to $9.50; spring lambs at $5 to $10.75 each.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $9; $8.65 f.o.b. cars; $9.25 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 27.—Offerings at the C.P.R. live stock market were 550 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 600 calves.

There was no actual change in the market for cattle as compared with this day week, the feeling being steady because of the fact that the supply was about equal with requirements, but the general impression was that drovers were losing money at the present prices as the quality of the stock offered was much better than it has been of late and must have cost more in the interior. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and as the weather was fine and cool the disposition on the part of the packers and butchers was to operate more freely, and in consequence the demand was better, and a fairly active trade was done. Sales of full loads of choice steers were made at $8.25; good at $7.75, and medium at $6 to $6.25. Small lots of picked choice steers brought as high as $8.50 per 100 pounds. The tone of the market for butchers' cows was stronger and prices advanced 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, which was due to the fact that the supply was smaller than usual. Sales of picked lots of choice stock were made at $7.25 to $7.50, while the top figure paid for choice bulls was $7.25 per 100 pounds.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.25 to $8.50; butchers' cattle, medium, $6.25 to $8.00; butchers' cattle, common, $5 to $5.50; canners, $3.75 to $4; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; butchers' cattle, medium, $5.75 to $6.75; butchers' cattle, bulls, $6 to $7.25; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90; milkers, common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $50 to $65; sheep, ewes, $7 to $7.50; bucks and culls, $6 to $6.50; lambs, $8.50 to $9; hogs, off cars, $9.50 to $9.75; calves, $3 to $10.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., April 27.—Cattle—Receipts, 4600; fairly active and steady to strong; prime steers, $8.75 to $9; shipping, $8.25 to $8.65; butchers', $7 to $8.50; heifers, $6.75 to $8.15; cows, $3.75 to $7.25; bulls, $6 to $7.25; stockers and feeders, $6.50 to $8; stock heifers, $6 to $7; fresh cows and springers, active and strong, $3.50 to $8.

Veals—Receipts, 2000; active and steady; $6 to $9.

Hogs—Receipts, 1000; slow and steady to 10 cents lower; heavy, $9 to $9.10; mixed and yorkers, $9.10 to $9.15; pigs, $9 to $9.10; roughs, $8.10 to $8.25; stags, $7 to $7.50; dairies, $8.90 to $9.10.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 16,000; sheep, slow and steady; lambs, active, 25 cents lower; lambs, $5.50 to $7.50; yearlings, $5 to $6.75; wethers, $5.50 to $5.75; ewes, $2.50 to $5.25; sheep, mixed, $3.25 to $5.50.

Noted Priest Drops Dead.

PITTSBURG, April 28. — Rev. Father Dionysius Francis Best, of Englewood, N.J., general superior of the Carmelite order of the United States and Canada, dropped dead on Sunday as he was about to enter the Holy Trinity Church to attend the silver anniversary and jubilee of his ordination. Father Best, who had been ill for some time, arrived here Saturday night from the east to participate in the celebration. He was 52 years old. His brother was close by when he succumbed.

The little tango cap is in Dutch bonnet effect, made of chiffon and lace with a bridle ribbon of black velvet.

Mission For Navvies.

What an interesting man Mr. J. M. McCormick, head of the Navvy Mission in Canada, is. Mr. McCormick is at present in London endeavoring to raise $100,000 for his praiseworthy mission, says a London paper. As he put it, to me, "In Canada the navvy is the man that faces death, disasters, and mutilation every day to build the lines that pays the investor's dividends. I want just a little share of those dividends to send out another dozen missionaries and a few hospitals." And I am glad to learn that Mr. McCormick is in a fair way of accomplishing his object.

HEADACHES ALMOST DROVE HER WILD

Until A Friend Advised Her To Use "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURY, ONT., May 29th. 1913.

"About four years ago, I was in a dreadful run-down condition, weak and hardly able to walk up stairs. Weakness peculiar to women was the chief trouble. I had Headaches that almost drove me wild, and most distressing constipation. I took many dollars' worth of medicine from the doctors without any good results.

A neighbor advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and they proved to be the best medicine I ever got and the only medicine to do me any good. Today, I feel as a young girl, and am able to go about my household duties as usual. My health is splendid and "Fruit-a-tives" is the cause of it". MRS. WM. CRIM.

Sense of Direction.

The apparently marvelous way in which Indians, Eskimos and other primitive people make their way through forests, snow covered areas or other regions which have little to indicate direction to white newcomers has led to a widespread belief that they possess a mysterious sixth sense of direction. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the arctic traveler, who has lived much with Eskimos, is very skeptical about the existence of any superiority of sense of direction among primitive peoples of any kind and gives strong evidence from personal experience that Eskimos have no such superiority. The ability of Indians and others to find their way he attributes solely to their familiarity with the country through which they are traveling. They note many things that they have seen before and that have no significance to the stranger in their land. White men can and do acquire the same ability to find their way when they have learned to know a country. When the land is equally strange to the white man and the Indian or Eskimo, the white man, because of his better developed reasoning power, is more likely to have a correct idea of direction than the Eskimo. —Indianapolis News.

SCANDAL IS UNEARTHED

GOVERNMENT TO HOLD ANOTHER MARINE DEPARTMENT INQUIRY

QUEBEC, April 28. — Once again Quebec is the scene of a graft scandal. This time it is the Marine Department, which was thought to have been investigated to the bottom in 1908, that is to be the subject of investigation. The padding of pay lists for eight years with names of those who were not working for the Department at the time they figured on the rolls, and also with the names of persons who had no existence whatsoever, constitutes the irregularities now alleged.

Mr. Doutre, of Ottawa, the purchasing agent of the Department, has arrived at Quebec and it is expected that a commissioner will be appointed to-day to conduct an investigation.

It is said the irregularities, which cover a period dating from 1906 up to within a few months ago, were brought to light through the fact that one of the men in the Department turned informer. His charges were so serious that the Department sent down a detective to enquire into their veracity with the above result.

Mr. Doutre gave out a statement last night in which he said that a commission would in all likelihood be appointed to-day, and that the Government was determined to take most prompt and drastic action to stamp out all wrongdoing as an effective deterrent for the future. He said that, contrary to the general impression, no one had been dismissed or even suspended. He further stated that there was not the least indication that there had been the slightest irregularity with regard to the purchase of supplies, the sole issue being the padding of payrolls, while the sums obtained from these alleged irregularities had been apparently devoted to expenditures on work or material unauthorized by the Department.

TIME FOR RAILWAYS AND CANALS IS PAST, SAYS MR. J. H. BURNHAM

USE DIRIGIBLE BALLOONS

OTTAWA, April 28.—The House of Commons spent most of the day in supply and dealt, among other things, with the estimates of the construction of the new Welland Canal. This led to a general discussion of the transportation question, and the rival merits of the Georgian Bay and the Welland Canal. Mr. Burnham (Con., W. Peterboro) thought the day for building canals and even railroads was past. All the wheat of Canada, he said, could be quickly transported to the seaboard by dirigible balloons. It would only be a matter of a short time until all passenger and freight traffic was handled by aerial navigation.

"You may scoff at me," he continued, "but remember that the people scoffed at Noah."

Mr. Lemieux, Hon. Geo. P. Graham and other Liberal members said that the Laurier Government had been fully committed to the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal, and had only delayed the commencement of the work until the National Transcontinental neared completion.

Hon. Dr. Reid said there was no hostility between the Welland Canal and the Georgian Bay Canal enterprises. The new Welland Canal was urgently demanded by immediate traffic needs and was therefore being pushed with all possible speed. No doubt the transportation needs of the country would also require the Georgian Bay Canal, but the necessity was not so urgent.

Mr. Lemieux said he believed the Government had no intention of building the Georgian Bay Canal. It had recently appointed a commission of three upon the subject, one of whom was known to be inimical to the project.

Postmaster-General Pelletier said the Government certainly would not act until it received the report of the commission.

Mr. German (Welland) said the estimated cost of the Welland Canal, 24 miles long, was $50,000,000. On that basis the Georgian Bay Canal, 440 miles long, would cost about a billion.

LITTLE CHANGE

French Election Results Not Complete Till May.

PARIS, April 28. — Although 351 Deputies were definitely chosen in yesterday's general election for the French Chamber of Deputies, the country will have to await the result of the 251 second ballots on May 10 before it can tell whether the present Government will obtain a majority.

The known results do not indicate any remarkable change in the composition of the parties, but from the votes cast it would appear that the combination of groups led by former Premier Aristide Briand and Louis Barthou, known as the federation of Democrats of the left, was more favered by the voters than the groups forming the present Government's majority.

This may undergo a change at the second ballot, and it may be necessary to take a test vote in the Chamber itself before it can be known with certainty whether the Government will stand or not, as the 602 Deputies are divided into thirteen groups.

DE LEON SPRING---FLORIDA

By a Peterboro Lady

Our latest trip from De Land to the rural districts included a visit to De Leon Spring, a sort of Mecca for Florida winter visitors. A few words of portrayal may not be amiss, as queer legends are associated with it, and the famous old Spaniard who discovered it.

There is a huge natural basin, somewhat elliptical in form, and 250 feet in diameter by 150 feet the shorter way. This cavity (if it may be so called) is forever boiling over with its clear blue water from unknown and unfathomed depths; the water is strongly impregnated with sulphur and lime, but is used by invalids as a beverage. This boiling motional centre of the spring is quite curious. The overflow of the spring forms a pretty cascade, expanding into a creek and lake which meander to their outlet, the St. John's river. The waterfall at the spring was utilised by the sons of Spain for sugar making, and the ancient mill, with its enormous wooden water wheel is still to be seen; also a ponderous chimney, near by, whose bricks were made in Spain. These old landmarks awaken reveries of Castillian enterprises and prowess; the thoughts wandering on to the ill-fated Maximillian, the records of whose cruel death by Mexican perfidy stains the historic page, and revives commiseration for the immured life of his adored Carlotta. One great iron water wheel on the bank or beach of De Leon Spring exists in a kidnapped condition—Mother Nature being its captor; a great tree, has perseveringly sent its strong water-laved roots through every opening and crevice of the wheel, and there they stare at you, mutely proclaiming the kingship and strength of nature and nature's God.

The De Leon woods look charming in their bright new vestments, but you cannot take a forest ramble in these south-lands, as species of cacti manage to interview the venturer with persistent effrontery! De Leon village, one mile from the spring, is a picturesque place, with pleasant homes, but small public means for entertainment of the tourist. Public highways in Volusia County are at the tax-payer's expense, convict labor being utilized. Cities and thoroughfares to the Coast have shell-paved streets and roads, and in other sections they are built of "pine straw," which is really pleasant, soft and noiseless, except for the going of countless automobiles. Nice soft water is abundantly obtained by deep wells which are sunk and curbed with cement. All complete the wells cost from 80 cents to $1.00 per foot. Many country homes have regular water works—a huge tank, high in the air—an automatic engine to pump it full, and plumbing to convey it where needed. Climatic conditions are less exacting in summer than is usually supposed, because of the cool sea breezes and shaded avenues; but fresh fruit, and fresh vegetables are at a premium in summer. Gardens are not prosperous in the latter season. The "blacks" live in villages of their own adjacent to the city. They have respectable churches and school houses, and mostly comfortable looking homes; they are well dressed, and very courteous, but have reputation of unreliability. The majority go out to service, thus learning the modes of higher civilization; they lodge at home, carrying their food when their work is distant. In case of employment of permanence, they dwell in the employer's "cabin."

Prohibition rules here, hence no intoxication is seen; and now that the Czar of Russia has set the pace, will not progressive Peterboro keep step!!

De Land is the seat of the stately "Stetson University" composed of many large and elegant buildings. "College Arms" hotel is worthy of the city's pride—modern to the limit, it is a spacious and satisfactory home for the millionaire winter tourists who frequent it. Much wealth is represented in the cultured city of De Land. The name of John B. Stetson" will not die. He was emphatically a benefactor in Volusia County, although now laid to rest, yet hundreds live comfortably from employment in cultivating and beautifying the "Stetson Estate" (many thousand acres', while his widow, now "Countess Eulalia" is not forgetful of the enterprises of the deceased. The brilliant magnolia trees are now donning their ornaments, a large, fragrant, white blossom, and the oleanders are beginning to flaunt gay clothes.

ADJOURNED VESTRY AT ST. LUKE'S CHURCH

Business and Pleasure Combined Make an Interesting Meeting

The adjourned vestry meeting of St. Luke's Church was held last evening when a large number of the congregation was present. In addition to the usual business transacted, a congregational re-union was held, and a short musical programme rendered. The rector, Rev. F. J. Sawers, occupied the chair and the meeting opened with prayer, after which the vestry clerk, Mr. R. B. Rogers, read the minutes of the last meeting. Mr. A. G. Carruthers, on behalf of the auditors, stated that they had found the financial report as presented by Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., late people's warden, to be a true statement of the finances.

Then followed the reports of the various organizations, read by the secretaries as follows: Woman's Auxiliary by Mrs. John Butcher, Ladies' Aid by Mrs. J. W. Hickey; Girls' Auxiliary by Miss Clara Adams; financial statement of Girls' Auxiliary by Miss K. Leary;; Mission Band by Miss Lillian Rogers;; Chancel Guild by Miss K. Leary; Men's Club by the Rector; ;Parish Magazine by Mr. P. A. Crane; Sunday school by Mr. Merton Adams; Primary Department of Sunday school by Miss Clara Adams; the font roll by the Rector on behalf of Mrs. Sawers; the choir by the Rector on behalf of Mrs. Greenslade, and the Rector's Bible class by Miss Ella Curtis.

Rector's Report.

The rector gave his own report, which was full of interest. He referred to the splendid financial standing of the Church as a result of the hearty support given it by the members. Last October there was an indebtedness of between $900 and $1,000 against the Church. At the present time it was in the neighborhood of two hundred dollars, a remarkable decrease for such a short while. A number of permanent improvements had been made both in the Church and the Rectory. Mr. Sawers also referred enthusiastically to the spiritual growth in the Church, for which there was reason for much thankfulness. He thanked the members of St. Luke's for the splendid support given him.

Votes of thanks were tendered the choir for their splendid services during the past year, the Sunday school teachers and officers, Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., for his work in connection with the envelope system, the Rector's Bible class, the Ladies' Aid, and to Messrs. R. H. Turner, Merton Adams and P. A. Crane, for their work in connection with the Parish Magazine.

Following the business of the evening a short musical programme was given, including pianoforte solos by Misses Wilhelmine Gaskins and K. Leary, and a vocal solo by Mr. Maurice Park. Mr. Park sang in splendid voice, "Mother Machree," and so insistent was the applause, Mr. Park had to respond to an encore, singing "Believe Me of All Those Endearing Young Charms." Miss Leary acted as accompanist in her usual capable manner.

At the conclusion refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

STEEL WAS LAID IN RECORD TIME

Mr. W. P. Hinton, Assistant Passenger Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, has reached Winnipeg after witnessing the driving of the last spike on the G.T.P. at Nechako Crossing. For intensity of interest, Mr. Hinton states that he has viewed no event to compare with that of laying the last mile of steel on the most modern of Transcontinental railroads.

"Tuesday, April 8th, at 11 o'clock was appointed for the laying of the last mile of steel," he writes. "The first gang to reach the centre post was to receive all honors. It was 12.30 before the crews were ready, and in view of 1,500 people, the contest began. The track-laying crew from the east won out, however, and the point they stopped at was immediately east of the centre post so as to give the moving picture machines a chance to obtain the best record. The approximate half-mile was laid in 38 minutes. Final rails were cut and the last one laid in place at 1.32 p.m. Each of the general superintendents drove a spike, the division superintendents each one, the foremen of the track-laying crews each one, and the chief engineer the final spike. The foremen of the track-laying crew were presented with a gold watch and chain as a momento of their hard work and in recognition of the fact that they had jointly laid 142 miles of steel since the first of January.

Located Him at Last.

A man who became wealthy by a sudden windfall of fortune decided to go back to his college town and settle up some of the debts he had left there many years ago. First of all he went to a tailor shop. The clerk looked through a book labeled "Good," but the name was not there. "I have another book marked 'Slow,'" said the clerk, but again the account was not to be found. "Well," said the tailor's assistant rather apologetically, "there is still another account book, which we label 'Bad.'" The rich man nodded his head. "It might be there," he admitted. A search, however, proved fruitless. With a clear conscience the man started down the street. He had gone only a few yards when the clerk tapped him on the shoulder. "Come back," he cried. "Why," said the man, "you looked through your books labelled 'Good,' 'Slow' and 'Bad' and my name was not there." "But," interrupted the clerk, "I found you in a fourth book that's labeled 'Hopeless'."

DETROIT POLICE BELIEVE

ery feature of the man and he apparently takes delight in the manner in which he evades answers to the direct questions put to him by the detectives.

Partial accounts of every large fire in Detroit and the manner in which the blaze was started by him are given in the letters written to the captain of detectives shortly before Kelley's arrest. The last of these was the Fort Street Presbyterian Church fire, which followed the incendiary fire at Belle Isle, which the letter writer declares he started.

The following letter was received a few hours before the church fire:

Mr. Palmer: How did you like the run to the island fire last night and the two false alarms on the west side? You will hear more from me today. It won't be a false alarm, either. You all all ——.

There was no signature to this note. When the first alarm came in from the Fort street fire, Capt. Palmer detailed every available detective to circulate amongst the spectators of the fire and to pick up anyone who might be exulting in the blaze. The firebug eluded the police, however.

Hatred for members of the fire department, under whom he worked, filled the mind of the prisoner, the police say, and the man is said to have told friends that he would duplicate the Iroquois theater fire horror of Chicago in Detroit to gain the revenge he sought.

Kelley's Alleged Letters.

The letters follow:

Mr. Palmer, read this, a confession: I have started the following fires in Detroit since August last for spite against the Detroit fire department: Riverside Storage Co., about 6 at night, August 26, on third floor, west side of building. I nearly got caught on this job. The manager, a short, stout fellow, whose office is in the same building where the fire was, kicked me out of the building the day before the fire. I sneaked in on this day to start the fire, but he seen me and put me out and gave me a kick and called me a vile name. He also caught me the same day I started the fire and gave me another good kicking and put me out again. And I told him then I would get him if it took me ten years; I would kill him, and I will. He has a swell head because he has got a good job and some money and is good looking. I know where he lives and I will either kill him or burn him to death while he is asleep, while he is at home on the east side, upstairs. I also started the Gorman building fire on Saturday noon in the attic, and the Norris laundry fire the same Saturday night at about five on the third floor. I also started all the Michigan Central fires. You all know where the first fire started; the second fire started on the second floor in a small closet, shelves all around it, about two o'clock in the afternoon on side facing the river. There were a lot of empty boxes on the same floor and I started the third fire there in the attic, where all the old books are kept, about 3 in the afternoon, eight next to the blueprint room.

You will find a large smokestack runs up through iths room, which makes it very dry. I also started one in the Biddle house, on Jefferson avenue, under the stairs, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. I also started the one at the Houghton Elevator Co. on Woodbridge street, about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, on the third floor, which was empty, but full of old bags and paper, near the elevator. I hid in the toilet on this floor, which is on the same floor in the front next to the stairs, for one hour. I also started the fire in A. Fisher's, on Fort street west, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, in a small paint room back of the office, on the west side of the building. I also started a boathouse fire at the foot of Fisher avenue, about 8 o'clock at night, and some good boats were burned. I also started one a long time ago at Rivard and Franklin streets. They turned in three alarms. I then jumped on a car and got off on street.

Why John Was So Eager That Mother Meet His Adored One.

"CONGRATULATE me, mother! Congratulate me, Lizzie!" exultingly exclaimed John Loveluck, bursting in upon his mother and sister. "Ruth Sweetly has accepted me, and I'm the happiest man alive!"

"Why, John!" simultaneously exclaimed his hearers. "We hardly know her, you know."

"Yes, I know. But she is the dearest, sweetest, loveliest girl in the world," said John Loveluck, "and I want you to go with me and call on her tomorrow afternoon."

"Um-um! I don't think I can go tomorrow," said his mother.

"And I'm sure I can't," said Lizzie.

"Bother!" said John. "Can't you arrange it somehow?"

"I'm sure she's a nice girl," said his mother. "I know my John wouldn't engage himself to any one his mother didn't approve of."

"Of course not," said John.

"I don't see why you're in such a hurry to have us call on her," said Lizzie. "You'll marry her whether we like her or not."

"Approve of her? Like her?" said John. "Why, I want to know whether she likes you."—Puck.

WHERE SLAVERY IS STILL PRACTICED

A Central Africa Missionary Speaks at Gospel Hall

At the Gospel Hall last evening every seat was filled and a most interesting and instructive address was given by Evangelist Gammon, accompanied by lantern views of where slavery is still practised. Mrs. Gammon spoke to a woman's meeting at seven o'clock and Mr. Gammon at eight. To-night there will be two more meetings with illustrations. Lantern views of the change the Gospel effects on these downtrodden heathen. A hearty invitation is given to all for to-night.

MACREADY TAKES COMMAND OF POLICE FORCES IN BELFAST

No Troops Have Been Moved Into the Unionist Zone Although Certain Regiments Have Been Warned to Stand Ready.

LONDON, April 28.—The nature of the steps which Premier Asquith announced in Parliament the Government intended to take in Ulster is not yet known, except that Major-Gen. C. F. N. Macready of the adjutant general's staff of the War Department, has taken over the command of the police forces in the Belfast district.

No troops have yet been moved north from Dublin although it is understood that certain regiments have been warned to hold themselves in readiness. Five warships arrived off Larne, 17 miles from Belfast, Sunday, and last night played searchlights on the town.

The second Cabinet meeting within 24 hours will take place this morning. The Government have already begun to set the force of law at work and the police in outlying Ulster districts are already reinforced and instructed to search all automobiles and arrest the occupants if any are carrying arms. The budget statement has been postponed till Monday.

The following amendment to yesterday's vote of censure on the Government has been tabulated by several Liberal members, "In view of the serious nature of the preparations made by the Privy Councillors, members of Parliament and others in Ulster, supported by leaders of the Unionist party, to resist the administration of law, resulting in unprovoked outrages on persons and property, including obstruction of the highways, interruption of telephone and telegraphic services, holding up the police, customs house officers, and coast guardsmen, in the execution of their duty, this House undertakes to support the Government in whatever measures are necessary to vindicate the authority of law, to protect the officers and servants of the King in the execution of their duty and secure to his Majesty's subjects the enjoyment of their legal rights."

Yesterday's actual and reliable information from Belfast is that three battalions of infantry are expected to-day. Gen. Macready, the new military governor, has arrived, and will issue an important proclamation, the nature of which is not yet known. It is expected that all arms landed have now been stored. The work was finished at three o'clock yesterday morning, a further supply having been brought in Sunday night.

Hamilton Fyfe, wiring to The Mail from Belfast, concludes: "Of course, everyone is saying, 'What will the Government do?' and in the flat moments which follow the unusual exhilaration a few are asking themselves whether, after all, Ulster's strength did not lie in sitting still. But that is only the mood of a few. The general feeling is one of exultation.

"A leading member of the Unionist organization expressed himself thus, when someone suggested that English opinion might be inclined to jibe at Ulstermen openly breaking the law. 'What do we care for English opinion?' We wanted rifles and we had to get them. It was just as well to give the Government a hint what they may expect if they pass the Home Rule bill as it stands'."

Barter in Africa.

Lecturing in London on his African experience, H. K. Eustice says he once saw a native sold as a slave for seven goats, which in open market fetched 1.44 apiece. As values go in some parts of Africa the price was high, for within a few hundred miles of the equator wives are transferred for less. Marriage, of course, is by barter, and the indemnity demanded by a father for the loss of a daughter used to be $2.40 from the bridegroom. To-day it has risen to about $5, but the scale of values is shown by the fact that a native will gladly give his labor for a week in reurn for an empty medicine bottle with a metal screw stopper.

Dead Air Man's Romance.

A romantic attachment to a girl of fourteen is disclosed by the will of the late Lieut. Arthur, an army airman aged twenty-nine, who was killed at Montrose last May.

The will, which was proved in the Dublin courts, leaves the whole of his fortune, $62,000, to Winsonne Constance Ropner, daughter of a West Hartlepool shipbuilder and granddaughter of Sir Robert Ropner.

On the dead body of the airman was found a miniature portrait of the girl, which he was in the habit of wearing on his breast.

LIBERLAS FOUGHT REDISTRIBUTION BILL EVERY INCH OF THE WAY

AMENDMENTS TO THE PHONE ACT

Liberals Protest "A" and "B" Seating in Toronto Occupies Most of the Afternoon and When House Rises at Night Most of the Clauses Are Pat Through Intact

TORONTO, April 28.—The provincial redistribution bill slowly forged its way through the Legislature yesterday and last night, and when the House rose the clauses had been passed without change.

During the afternoon a long debate hinged upon the justice of the double seating system which prevails in Toronto and which is renewed in the present bill. Mr. Rowell insisted that the Government had no justification for not constituting ten separate districts with single seats. The basis of population was largely ignored in the bill. "Why should the northwest district, for instance, have 89,000 electors and the northeast 55,000 electors?" he asked. The aim of the Government was obviously to embarass the Toronto Liberals. At the last election approximately 40 per cent. in the country had voted Liberal, and this percentage of members should obtain in the House.

Hon. Thomas Crawford defended the Toronto arrangement, as did Geo. Gooderham and W. D. McPherson. Wm. Proudfoot, Allan Studholme, W. E. Sinclair, T. Marshall and Dr. McQueen denounced it as a return to the system of double voting.

William McDonald (Lib., C. Bruce) made a vigorous protest against his constituency being wiped off the map. He quoted statistics from all Ontario to show that the population discrepancy in his riding was outdone by that of many others which were not being chagned. In Lambton for instance, why had not the Provincial Secretary changed the boundaries where there was a difference of over 10,000?

Mr. Hanna stated that they might easily have switched 600 Conservative votes over into the next riding and left 500 majority for himself. Did they wish him to do it?

Liberal Whip Bowman followed by moving that the boundaries be left unchanged, but the motion was lost.

When the reorganization of Essex was under discussion, Mr. Rowell charged that the district had been gerrymandered. "This talk of equalization is the sheerest excuse," he declared. "Everyone knows that the Government is only trying to make safe the seat of the member of North Essex (Dr. Reaume)."

Hon. Dr. Reaume replied that there was no political advantage, one way or other, in the change, and W. N. Anderson, Conservative member for the South riding of Essex, declared that the change was the inevitable creation of a city riding consequent upon the growth of Windsor and its environs.

Mr. Rowell also protested changes in the boundaries of the Greys, but the protest was of no avail.

It is now probable that no change will be made in connection with Monck.

The public will be protected in the future from unfair duplication of telephone lines, and to prevent companies from extending their lines in a way which is not conducive to the best service of the people permission of construction must be obtained from the Ontario Railway Board. This is the substance of an amendment to the telephone bill added by Hon. I. B. Lucas yesterday. At the same time provision is made to protect girl operators from being forced to work overtime to the detriment of their health.

The board will henceforth be the authority in all 'phone matters. The board instead of the Lieutenant-Governor in council will approve company sales, and will also ratify toll schedules.

MEDIATION PROPOSALS GIVE NEW ASPECT TO MEXICAN SITUATION

Washington is Officially Advised That Huerta Has Accepted the Offer of the Three Latin Republics to Negotiate for Peace—Navy and War Departments Are Still Busy Completing Plans.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The tenseness of the Mexican situation was distinctly relieved yesterday as the representatives of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, supported by pressure from all Latin-America and from the foremost powers of Europe, concentrated their efforts toward a pacific adjustment of the crisis.

The success of the first steps toward mediation—the prompt acceptance by the United States and the announcement of the Spanish Ambassador that Huerta had accepted the tender of good offices—produced a feeling of distinct hope, which was reflected not only in Administration quarters, but in Congress as well, where "war talk" gave way to a spirit of conciliation.

Throughout the day the three South American envoys, who have undertaken the task of mediation, held frequent conferences to arrange the preliminaries of procedure. Pending receipt of the formal acceptance by Huerta no proposal will be submitted to either the United States or the Huerta Government. Also it has been made plain that no conditions from either party as to the terms that will be accepted has as yet been formally placed before the intermediaries.

The President and Secretary Bryan were assured through two separate Diplomatic sources that Gen. Huerta was ready to acept the tender of good offices and was now drafting a formal acceptance. Pressure from Germany, Great Britain and France advising Huerta to accept the first steps toward mediation, and the approving attitude of Latin-American countries to the settlement of the controversy by Pan-American diplomacy, emphasized the world-wide influences which are working to bring about peace and avert a conflict of death and bloodshed.

Meanwhile the Navy and War Departments are continuing their efforts to care for refugees and perfecting the machinery of the army and navy for any unexpected turn in events.

Secretary Daniels announced that he had telegraphed the full text of the mediation offer and its acceptance by the United States to both Rear-Admirals Badger and Howard, with instructions to have the commanders of all ships on the east and west coasts spread the news throughout Mexico. By this Mr. Daniels hopes the feeling toward Americans may be alleviated and refugees enabled to depart without molestation.

Advices received through the British Embassy told of the completion of arrangements for the safe departure of Americans from Mexico City, while the French Ambassador gave the State Department a message he had received from the French Legation stating that while there had been some anti-American manifestations in the Mexican capital, order now prevailed.

Secretary Bryan said he was able, after receiving information through embassies and legations, to say that no Americans had been killed or injured since the crisis of the last two weeks began, and that, though many had been detained at Aguascalientes, Cordoba and Orizaba, efforts were now being made to obtain their release.

Order prevails in Vera Cruz. Brig.-Gen. Funston and the army are expected to be in command of the situation to-day.

U.S. POPULATION IS 98,000,000

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Continental United States now has a population of more than 98,000,000 while the country with its possessions is peopled with more than 109,000,000 persons, the census bureau announced yesterday. Census experts have calculated that the population of continental United States on July 1, 1914, will be 98,781,324, against 91,972,266 on April 15, 1910, when the last census was taken. For the United States and its possessions they estimate that population this July will be 109,021,992, compared with 101,748,269 in 1910.

BLACK KNIGHT

Rev. J. H. Hector, Well Known In Ontario, Dies in York, Pa.

TORONTO, April 28.—News of the death of Rev. J. H. Hector, universally known as the Black Knight, at his home, York, Pa., has reached the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance. He was very well known in Toronto, as in many other cities, as an influential temperance speaker.

He was the son of negro slaves, and although he had little education, was a gifted speaker. After fighting as a volunteer in the Civil War in the U. S., and being employed as a railway engineer, he became a minister of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

Emperor's Condition Unchanged.

VIENNA, April 28.—The official bulletin on Emperor Francis Joseph's condition issued last night says that there has been no amelioration in the catarrhal condition, but that in other respects progress has been satisfactory.

MOVEMENT FOR BATHING PLACES

and the idea one of the best," remarked Ald. Stratton. The benefit to the boys is very great. Inverlea Park with its river would make an ideal spot. Properly fenced and supervised, one could not wish for anything better. Another swimming place, most ideal could be constructed at Jackson Park at a little cost. Another location could supply the wants of the southend. He would suggest Crescent Street. As to supervisors, there were sufficient teachers in the city interested enough in the matter to assist in supervising the various places.

The committee were all agreeable to the suggestion of both speakers.

School Yards as Playgrounds.

Continuing, Ald. Stratton said that with the co-operation of the Board of Education, the school yards could be used as play grounds.

"This would undoubtedly work out most advantageously for both. If we work in conjunction with the Board I think we can prevail upon them to assist us," remarked the centre ward alderman smiling at Dr. Morrison chairman of the Board of Education who stated that the Board were always ready to assist.

"The boys who need the playgrounds are not the school children but the boys from fifteen to twenty," announced Dr. Morrison. They are the ones without playgrounds. Go to any of our schools and you will see fifty or sixty boys engaged in playing. Ald. Strattion asked "why not get the Industrial Exhibition grounds for these boys?" The new south end park could be divided into sections and that two acres could be set aside for nothing but sports.

Dr. Morrison.—We have room for three baseball diamonds at the King Edward. Speaking of the north end, Dr. Morrison said that there was the laxity of playgrounds. "You really lack playgrounds in the west end of the city for the older boys who work in the offices." He pointed out the central part of the city as another spot and suggested the purchase of the Riverside park. This would probably cost about $50,000, but they would have something to be pround of.

Use Fair Grounds.

Ald. Johnston pointed out the possibility of using the Exhibition grounds. The utilization of these grounds would do away with a considerable number of young fellows around the parks and give better opportunities for playing the various games.

People Spoke Before.

Ald. Duffus, who up to this time had been a keen listener, sprunk a surprise. "You can't blame the council. They submitted a by-law a couple of years ago, and the people turned it down flat. We could have bought property for a song," and concluding with a smile, "Ald. Johnston could have done the singing act."

"The little gaffers will certainly appreciate this," remarked Ald. Johnston.

Mr. J. H. Connal, President of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A., spoke of the coming of their new physical director, Mr. Carson, who was supervisor of the Winnipeg playgrounds. Mr. Carson could give them considerable advice on supervision of playgrounds. Peterborough is just beginning to feel the pinch of the lack of playgrounds concluded the chairman, and the meeting adjourned.

Other prominent business men in the city have signified their intention of rendering assistance in the new movement.

Busy Police.

"Gent uptown telephones for an officer at once. Burglar in the house."

"Let me see," said the captain reflectively. "I've got four men out censoring plays, two inspecting the gowns at a society function and two more supervising a tango tea. Tell him I can send him an officer in about two hours."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Difficulty.

"I thought you were going to save so much of your salary every week?"

"That was my New Year's resolution."

"Are you doing it?"

"I started out to, but the wife kicked when I started to take the savings out of her allowance."—Detroit Free Press.

LIBERALS WILL END SESSION WITH ATTACK ON HANNA

TORONTO, April 28.—Charles M. Bowman, Liberal Whip in the Legislature, gave notice last evening that he will, on a question of privilege, make a statement and charge against Hon. W. J. Hanna in connection with the sending of Provincial License Inspector Snider to the Counties of Welland, Huron and Peel, and that he will, in that connection, move a motion of address to Lieut.-Governor Gibson asking for the appointment of a royal commission to enquire into and investigate the matter of the statement and charge, the commission to be composed of two judges of the Supreme Court.

The debate will be likely opened during the afternoon.

REGULARS MET DEFEAT BEFORE THE SLANTS OF SCHETTLER AND TRACEY

(Special to The Review.)

Youngstown, April 28.—The Peterboro regular team went down to defeat before the Yannigans yesterday afternoon in a fourteen inning encounter, which was featured by several spectacular spears and a few long drives. Schettler and Tracey were on the slab for the second string men, Mully Miller did the receiving, while the rest of the team was made up of Flanagan, first; Schrage, second; Rockford, short; Miller, third; O'Hearne, Kelly and Gorman in the outfield. Both the pitchers worked hard, and had the regulars batting like a man with a willow wand and the sun in his eyes. The final score was 9-5.

Schrage Featured.

The work of Schrage was the feature of the game. The boy has a hard proposition ahead of him when he attempts to shove King, Price or Byrne off the team, but, nevertheless, he's going at it in the right way. That is, he's showing that he has class, too. He is fielding perfectly, but that is only a lesser quality. What gets the boys is the way he is slamming the pill. Every time he walks to the plate he plants out a Texas leaguer or a hard single, and tears around the paths a la Ty Cobb style.

Rockford, who played short for the Yannigans, is the only local recruit left. He possesses an arm like old Pete Behan, but he has not had the experience in fielding or in batting. Blount will undoubtedly let him out, but it is a certainty that he will keep a string on him. Gaffney replaced Blount as centre for the regulars and the Cleveland boy displayed considerable speed. He is of real baseball stock, as his father was a former big leaguer. He is a natural batter and takes a good healthy wallop which often results in an extra base hit. Gaffney is going to give some of them a battle royal for a place. It looks at present as though Frank Fox will land the right field and utility infield job. He is going faster than ever and has been clouting the ball.

Kaute Helting's arm has come round again and he is showing up well. He, Terrill and Sterling twirled for the regulars, while Ruberg held the big mitt. Terrill's arm is a trifle sore, but is slowly getting into condition. The weather is perfect and prospects are for a good week's training.

RUSSELL FORD MADE THEM TAKE NOTICE AT HIS START IN BIG SHOW

Russell Ford, who deserted the New York Yankees this spring to try his luck with the "outlaw" Federal league, has just passed his thirty-first milestone. "Russ" is a Canadian by birth, having been born in Manitoba on April 25, 1883. That was a couple of years before the half-breed Riel started his outlaw league in Western Canada, and Ford, if he is acquainted with history of his native Dominion, knows what happened to Mister Riel. Although he had several "chiefs" in his line-up, and pulled off a few victories early in the season, Riel and his league soon came to grief and blew up with a bang. However, that is none of our funeral.

Ford's first appearance as a professional pitcher was made with Cedar Rapids, Ia., in the Three-I league, in 1905. While he pitched excellent ball, his swatting average came near to establishing a new low record, being only .46. After two seasons with the Iowa club he went to Atlanta in the Southern league, where he played two seasons, and helped largely to capture a pennant for the Georgia metropolis. In the southern city Ford had as his battery mate Ed. Sweeney, who, like Ford, later joined the New York Yankees. Ford was purchased from Atlanta by New York in 1908, but that season was turned over to Jersey City, in the Eastern league. In 1910 Ford made his big league debut with the Highlanders, and with his old pal Sweeney wearing the mask, startled the baseball world by scoring twenty-six victories to six defeats his first year out. He also batted .208, which is pretty good for a pitcher and a considerable improvement over the Cedar Rapids record. That same year King Cole made his phenomenal debut with the Chicago Cubs, sharing recruit honors with Ford. In 1911 Russ hung up another fine record, winning twenty-two and losing eleven games, which was a pretty nifty performance for a twirler on a team that finished dangerously near the cellar. In 1912 Ford slumped and had twenty-one defeats and thirteen victories. That year and in 1913 Russ showed frequent flashes of his old form, but lack of support weighed on his spirits. Last year Ford tied one record with Walter Johnson—he permitted nine home runs to be scored off his delivery, the same number that were marked up against the great Washington hurler. In that dubious honor Ford and Johnson were in a class by themselves, their nearest competitor having been Tom Hughes, who permitted the enemy to land on him for eight smashes good for the round trip.

Ford

More Canadian Fords are now shipped in one day than in the entire first year of the Company's existence. That's a wonderful record of growth in ten years. But we must grow if the world insists on riding in Fords.

BASEBALLITIS

Buffalo All Stars slipped one over Erie on Sunday, 5-3. Eddie Linneborn, who is to report to London to-day, played third for the All Stars, while McNeal, last year with the Petes, did their receiving. By the murmurings of the Erie people one is led to believe that "Mac" will be with them this season.

Osborne worked three innings, and struck out six, but that was only part of his performance, for the box score credits Osie with a hit. We believe the first part, but the latter is a trifle leary.

Harry Corns, the slugging middle gardener of the Hamilton team, will receive a boost in pay.

The police of Hamilton failed to secure enough evidence against Bert Molyneaux, the pitcher with Hamilton in 1912, and St. Tomas last year, and the charge has been withdrawn. He is being held for theft.

The Peterboro park is in far better shape to-day than it was this time a year ago. Left field has been very much improved.

The proposal to stage a post season series between the winners of the Pacific Coast, International and American Association Leagues has been shelved till 1915.

Smykal has been selected to cover the keystone sack for the Senators. The champs. will again be weak offensively at that position.

In a list of officers for the baseball team of Queen Mary School, appeared the name of Carl Kincade, as water boy. This name should not have appeared but was added by way of a joke, at the suggestion of a number of the school boys. Everett Graham, who brought the report to The Review office is sorry that the incident occurred and hopes that this apology will be acepted.

IDEAL DISTRICT FOR PETERBORO L'ACROSSE CLUB

Players Can Make Good Train Connections at Each Town

It is anticipated that the lacrosse sticks will arrive in the city in the course of a few days, and then it will be all lacrosse. The local club has been placed in an ideal group, every town having excellent train service, thus eliminating too much expense. This is a big factor in the success of a young club scuh as the Peterboro Lacrosse Club. The game is so old that it will be practically new and it's going to take time and patience to educate the fans to it. If the expenses are high the club will not be able to hang on till it starts paying, as the ball team has done, and the result will be that the national game will sink farther than ever into oblivion.

Hastings and Campbellford can be played in the afternoon and the players get back to this city the same evening, while in Havelock, if the railroad bugs start their game a little early the team can get the 4.33.

When the sticks arrive a meeting of the local club will be called, and arrangements for the distribution of the sticks then made. A delegate will be appointed to meet representatives of the other three clubs in the district and draw up a schedule. It is probable that the first game will be played in this city on Saturday, May 30, while the baseball team is in London. No arrangements have as yet been made for grounds, but there's no need of bibbling much on that, the main thing is will the fans turn out and help it along. Time will tell.

THE CANADIAN LEAGUE RATING

One week from to-day the Canadian League will enter upon its first season of Class B baseball. The outrating will be watched with interest come of the organization's higher all over the circuit, as there are many who believe the men behind the league should have been satisfied to remain in Class C for another year. The dropping of Berlin and Guelph and the placing of clubs in Toronto and Erie was the one big argument of the magnates who favored the going up process. J. J. McCaffery, is stated to have demanded Class B ball or no team in Toronto. So far as can be learned none of the club owners strenuously opposed the move, but it is safe to say that the Peterboro owners would have been just as well satisfied to remain as Class C. In fact, E. T. Carr, secretary of the local club, gave it as his opinion that the class of ball would not be so much better, as the fans are being led to believe. It will also cost the club owners some $1,000 per month more, the Class B maximum being $2,500, as compared with a limit of $1,400 under Class C. rating.

The Class C classification was not so much responsible for the corner lot article displayed as were some of the club owners and managers. One has only to look back and think of Hamilton. One year ago to-day Knotty Lee, who is now but an unpleasant memory, had in training at Hamilton about fifteen human beings. The ball players of that number were few and far between. Lee very seldom had a team for the opener, and by the end of the first month he had made more alterations than all the other club members put together. He did not look for men in the spring, but engaged them by post card. Knotty was also a strong believer that the first month of the league was the spring training term. This year the Hamilton club, under new ownership and new management has twenty-two ball players in training, and the team looks good enough to be in the fight all the time. Had Lee and his colleagues got down to business in a business way instead of holding off, Hamilton would have been a money maker all over the circuit. The Berlin and Guelph clubs were in the same boat. Brantford was rather unfortunate in signing up what was admitted by all the critics to be a grand team, but which proved to be a bunch of cripples. If Hamilton, Guelph and Berlin had been properly looked after the league would have been a bigger money maker for all concerned.

It is difficult to figure how anything but a deficit can face Peterboro, Brantford and St. Thomas, providing the other clubs take advantage of the Class B maximum and go the limit, which is $2,500. If the three clubs fail to keep pace with the others they will prove poor attractions at home as well as on the road, whether it be Class B or Class C. The owners would do well to get together and work out some agreement to protect the smaller cities. Otherwise the future is doubtful with the present circuit.

BOWLING ON THE GREEN

"No other pastime in Canada has made such rapid strides in the past ten years as bowling on the green. Like curling, which it closely resembles in many things, and is as radically different in others, it was originally dominated by the older generation. Ten years ago bowling was a pastime—nothing else. It was a pleasant way of killing a couple of hours on a bright sunny afternoon. The company was usually select—the game being a leisure class amusement — the environment delightful and the refreshments such as might be expected.

It would scarcely be accurate to say that now the drinks and cigars have been eliminated, but it is an undoubted fact that they no longer play such an important part. It is also true that the game is no longer dominated by the elder generation. This is the young man's age, and the younger man has taken possession of lawn bowling along with the more athletic sports, and the supremacy of the veteran skip is challenged. The veteran has not stepped aside by any means. That is one of the subtle attractions of the game. It knows no age limit, there is no handicapping, all stand on an equal footing, and the more skillful player given an even break in the luck, gets the bacon.

I attribute the improvement in the game which has been manifested in Ontario in the past five or six years, largely to the participation of the younger generation in the sport. It has become much keener, more aggressive and to-day a rink that cleans up a tournament of any consequence has not only to have a reasonable share of lucky breaks, but must play with great skill and unerring judgment.

Thus does C. O. Knowles refer to lawn bowling through the columns of the Canadian Sporting Life, which has just made its initial appearance in the journalistic world. Being an old bowler himself, Mr. Knowles is in a good position to state the progress or changes in the game, and his statement of the infusion of a younger element can therefore be accepted as authentic. The Peterboro Lawn Bowling Club has perhaps been a trifle dormant during the past few years, but the strides or rather the spirit of making strides as referred to by Mr. Knowles has reached it and the members appear to be imbued with a feeling to shake off that old style. The first step was similar to the step made by the Peterborough Curling Club when it commenced forging ahead, it was decided to draw up a constitution. A strictly adhered-to constitution is as much a necessity to a bowling club as it is to any other club. Without it there is neither harmony between the officers and members or harmony between the officers themselves.

The club this year is commencing a banner one, all reports state, and the capable list of officers they have selected, can be relied upon to be on the job all the time. Mr. J. P. Cunningham, the president, is of the "younger bunch," and possesses all the vim and energy to do his part in such a big undertaking. Last year the Brinton Carpet Co. organized a bowling club, and this year there are great possibilities of another club being started in connection with the Sacred Heart T.A.S. With three clubs in the city, and all of them more or less sprinkled with the desired younger men, there is no reason why lawn bowling in this city should not be as Mr. Knowles requests the bowling in Ontario to be, that is: "on the same footing as it is in Great Britain, where the game is given recognition, which it merits."

FIRST ROUND IN STRATTON TROPHY

Golf Competition Begins on Saturday Afternoon

The first round for the Stratton Trophy will commence on Saturday, May 2, at 2.30 p.m. All intending competitors should be present at that time, when the draw for the competition will be made. Those unable to play on Saturday must finish the first round not later than May 9th.

Anyone finding it inconvenient to attend at the Club House on the date specified for the draw may have his name posted at the Club House prior to May 2, or by notifying the Captain, who will have his name entered in the list of competitors.

The proper way to fill a hot-water bottle is to run it only half-full of water.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE

A meeting is called for Thursday evening of this week in the Y. M. C. A. of all fans interested in the formation of a Mercantile or City Baseball League. Some lively discussion is anticipated, so a good turnout is urgently requested. Any team wishing to enter should be represented.

RENTING ROOMS
The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expenses by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If You have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

WATSON—FOWLER.

At the Knox Church manse, Saturday afternoon, April 25th, Mr. John Haswell Watson, of Peterboro, and formerly of Belfast, was united in marriage to Miss Bessie Fowler, formerly of Aberdeenshire, by the Rev. H. J. Keith.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson will reside on Park Street.

The final practice for chorus and orchestra in "Judas Maccabaeus (to be presented to-morrow night), will be held in the Collegiate Hall to-night at 8 o'clock. Please be prompt. The secretary will be on hand at 7.45 to receive tickets and cash, which must be handed in to-night.

The Conservatory Orchestra will rehearse with the chorus.

A social and musical evening was given by Miss Palmer, at her home, 468 Gilmour Street, Monday, April 20th, from 8 o'clock to 10.30, in aid of the Literature Fund of St. John's W.A.

Very many guests were present and enjoyed a delightful evening.

An enjoyable programme was given. Those who contributed were Miss Dean, Miss Logan, Miss Palmer and Mr. Dean, who composed the orchestra and gave several appreciated selections. Miss Logan and Miss Palmer, violin duets. Miss Given Smith, accompanying at the piano.

Miss Palmer's violin solo was a gem, the delightful tones of the "Amati" being heard with rare pleasure. Miss Given Smith's piano solo was gracefully executed. Miss Hinchcliffe gave two very sweet vocal solos. Mrs. Boyd was also heard in vocal numbers, and was much appreciated. Mr. H. Morphet contributed two vocal solos, his well known voice, always delights. Miss Flowers and Miss Dean played the accompaniments faultlessly.

Mr. Arthur Flowers left to-day for St. Catharines, where he will reside in the future.

Mr. W. J. Cannon, of Toronto, is among the guests at the Oriental.

Mr. H. S. Eckert, of New York, is in the city.

Mr. Victor Boorman left for Toronto this morning on business.

Mrs. Kelly, who has been teaching in Apsley, has given up the school, and the vacancy is being filled by Mr. Colin Lees, of Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Gammon, Missionaries returning to Central Africa, are in the city for a few days, and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Y. C. Yonge, Dickson Street.

Mrs. Harry Cox of 300 Wolfe Street, underwent an operation in Nicholls Hospital for appendicitis yesterday and is reported progressing favorably.

Mrs. Dr. McClelland and two children and Mrs. McClelland's mother, Mrs. Goheen, departed this morning to reside at Long Beach, Cal. Dr. McClelland has completed arrangements with Dr. Moir, 196 Brock St., whereby they continue their practice together at Dr. Moir's office.

Miss Mabel Sawyer of Lakefield, and Mr. Milton Hunt of Havelock, were united in marriage at St. John's Church, Lakefield, Saturday morning at 7 o'clock, by Rev. Mr. Ben. Oliel. The bride is a sister of Mrs. R. McKee, of this city.

W. M. S. PRESBYTERIAL.

A large number of delegates from the three local Presbyterian churches left this morning for Port Hope, to attend the two days' session of the Presbyterial of the W. M. S.

WHAT THE MASTERS SAID OF HANDEL

Thep erformance of Judas Maccabaeus to-morrow night is striking evidence of choral vitality in this city.

The task of singing the heavy choruses is much harder than in either the "Messiah" or "Elijah," and the mere fact of placing it before the public is highly commendable.

Handel's music still attracts, and pleases. J. Cuthbert Hadden, in his book, "Master Musicians," says that when Handel played "See the Conquering Hero Comes" to a friend he asked for an opinion, and was told that it was not nearly so good as some of his other numbers. "No," replied Handel, "but it will live long after many of the others are forgotten," which has been verified. Beethoven said of him, "Handel is the unapproachable master of all masters." Haydn's verdict was that "Handel is master of us all."

Reference in musical papers show that this work has been put on twice in the last thirty wears in Toronto.

If Peterborough can produce high-class Oratorio yearly a record will be established that cannot be equalled in any city of its size in the Dominion.

CARD OF THANKS.

Before leaving the city, where I have spent some days on account of the illness and death of my father, the late George E. Roseborough, I desire to express my gratitude through your columns to those who have been so kind to us during these trying days.

The Board, the Superintendent and Nurses of Nicholl's Hospital, the fraternal society to which he belonged, the Men's Association of Murray Street Church, besides hundreds of citizens and others have shown their sympathy in a most helpful way, and I feel that it should have at least this acknowledgment.

HALL ROSEBOROUGH.

THEATRICAL

Mutt and Jeff in Panama, a laugh producing musical comedy based on the comic cartoon creations of Bud Fisher, attracted a capacity house to the Grand last evening. Had the playhouse contained a greater seating capacity the box office receipts would have been larger than they were, as hundreds were turned away. The audience was more than satisfied with the offering, and appreciated the efforts of the company in an unmistakeable manner. Sufficient it is to say that the applause was well merited. Like all musical comedies there was a plot, for the simple reason there must be a plot in order to unload the comedy, which in the case of Mutt and Jeff in Panama is spontaneous. The interpretation of the title characters was excellent, Earl Redding and Jerry Sullivan, the latter as Jeff, keeping the audience in good humor by their rapid fire dialogue and antics. Miss Russell, who had a leading role, possesses a pleasing voice and personality, and displayed finished dancing qualities, while Jethro Warner, Harry Hoyt, Miss Edith Carlisle and Miss Bonton, sang their roles in good voice. Miss Sheldon won warm praise for her amusing delineation of the old maid. The chorus possessed action and good vocal properties, while the costumes and stage settings were quite in keeping with the standard of the piece.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN BICKELL.

The death occurred very suddenly yesterday of Mrs. John Bickell, of this city, who resided at the corner of Benson and Wolsley Streets. The late Mrs. Bickell was taken ill only a few days previous to her death and her illness was not thought to be a serious one. She was able to be up and around yesterday morning and death came very suddenly. Deceased was 61 years of age and leaves to mourn her loss her husband, two brothers, Jas. Baptie, of Smith, and Douglas Baptie, of this city, as well as one sister, Miss Agnes Baptie, of Peterborough. No children survive her.

The funeral will be held from the family residence to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery.

LAID AT REST.

Numerous friends and acquaintances took the opportunity to pay their last respects to the late Miss Violet Anderson, when the funeral was held this afteroon to the Little Lake Cemetery. The late Miss Anderson had been very popular, with a wide circle of friends, and she will be greatly missed. The sympathy of their many friends will be extended to the bereaved parents.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH.

The adjourned vestry meeting of All Saints' Church was held last night, with the Rev. R. B. Grobb presiding.

The auditors' report was presented, and the statement found to be satisfactory. There were several other items of business discussed.

When the tablecloth wears out on the edges, cut out the centre in a square, hem it, and you have a lunch cloth. The remainder of the good portion cut into squares and you have every-day napkins.

OFFICERS FOR ST. JAMES' CHURCH EPWORTH LEAGUE

The Epworth League of St. James Methodist Church held a very enthusiastic meeting last night. The various reports were read showing excellent progress, speaking well for the officers who worked so untiringly to bring the league to its present high position. The officers under whose guidance the league will this year endeavor to surpass all previous ones, are:

President—Mr. J. O. Fife.
1st Vice-President—Mr. J. Sanderson.
2nd Vice-President—Miss M. Kidd
3rd Vice-President—Mr. J. Moss.
4th Vice-President—Mr. W. McLaren.
Secretary—Miss F. Emmerson.
Treasurer—E. Holston.
Pianists—Miss Viola Palmer and Mr. James Jackson.

OCCUPANTS OF RIG ESCAPED SERIOUS INJURY

A man, child and two women narrowly escaped serious injuries at the corner of Concession and Douro Streets yesterday afternoon, when their horse suddenly plunged down the sharp bank, throwing the occupants heavily to the ground. In some miraculous manner, they escaped injury, although the horse, belonging to Jones Bros., was slightly injured. The rig was also badly damaged. As near as can be ascertained, the man in some manner swung the horse from its feet, and the animal plunged down the bank, which at this point is fully nine feet deep.

that Mr. Welch had accepted monies belonging to the Quigley children and dissipated them?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"No," replied the witness.

AN Executor of the Will.

John Welch when called stated he was an uncle of the defendant, and also an executor of his father's will. The estate amounted to $7,000, made up solely of insurance. He stated his nephew, who was employed at the Bank of Montreal in 1907, asked him to borrow some money from Mr. Brightman, and said he would pay it back when a settlement of the estate was reached. He accordingly floated the loan and endorsed the check over to his nephew.

Under cross-examination, he admitted that about $4,600 had been drawn from the Union Bank, where the $7,000 was being held, as per directions of the will, until the youngest son became of age. The money was used to reduce a liability against John Welch and Company, hide dealers. Mr. Quigley's mother was a member of the company and it was at her request that the money was drawn out. That transaction occurred in 1906. He also stated that the oldest son, Harry, had been paid his share previous to that.

"Well, if that is so, there was no share left for the defendant. He could not expect to meet the debt from any share, as there was no money in the bank to the credit of the estate," was His Lordship's comment on the witness's statement.

The witness also admitted writing letters to the defendant asking him for $600. He explained that the three Quigley boys sued the bank for the money due them. They had been given judgment, the court holding that the executor had no right to use the funds of the estate for any other purpose than that specified in the will, which was a division between the three boys.

The witness stated he was the chief witness for the boys in their action against the bank. He said that when judgment was given for the three boys he asked M. J. Quigley to pay the sum he owed Mr. Brightman on the check. Mr. Quigley refused.

"I told him he had received his share twice and he was trying to steal the money and if he did not pay I would show him up as a thief," shouted the witness. Continuing he stated that his nephew secured a house from his mother. It was turned over to him so as to be free from litigation which was threatening from debts the defendant's mother had contracted.

It was after judgment had been given against the bank that the witness wrote asking for $600, and his explanation of the letters was that he and the defendant's bother intended purchasing a business and the money was to be used to complete the deal.

The evidence of the defendant was read. He denied asking Mr. Welch to borrow the money from Mr. Brightman, and claimed the reason Mr. Welch turned the check over to him was to prevent an action which he threatened because of Mr. Welch's in removing money from the bank to meet a business liability.

The Quigley family interested in the action were former residents of Hastings. The defendant is at present employed at Fernleigh, B.C., while John Welch makes his headquarters in London, Ontario.

Father Against Son.

The only other action on the list which was reduced owing to mutual agreement of counsel interested in the cases, is that of George Elliott vs. his son, W. M. Elliott, for the setting aside of deeds which conveyed lands to the defendant. The action promises to create unlimited interest, and when the case was called early this afternoon, the court room was well filled by numerous witnesses for both parties and friends eager to hear the testimony. The plaintiff, who is more than seventy years of age, claims that after he deeded his lands to his son, he was denied residence with the latter, as the result of an alleged quarrel. The aged plaintiff is at present residing with a sister who is well up in years.

Peck, Kerr and McElderry are acting for the plaintiff, and G. N. Gordon for the defendant.

Settled Out of Court.

The action of Samuel Althouse v. Ontario Rock Company was also settled out of court. The plaintiff lost an eye while in the employ of the defendant company.

Peck, Kerr and McElderry acted for the plaintiff, and Beatty, Blackstock and Company, Toronto, for the defendant.

Ordered to Pay Costs.

A young lady, stylishly dressed, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this afternoon on the charge of getting goods from the Reid Company under false pretences. The case was settled by the Magistrate allowing her out on suspended sentence and payment of costs, which amounted to $10.55. Acting Attorney Wearing, M.A., conducted the prosecution.

HEWITT BOSTOCK COMMANDS MAJORITY IN UPPER HOUSE

Successor to the Late Sir George Ross Is Within a Few Weeks of His Fiftieth Birthday and Came to Canada Twenty-One Years Ago—He Has Been Rancher, and Provincial and Federal Legislator.

That Senator Hewitt Bostock would be the choice of the Liberal members of the Dominion Senate to take the leadership of the party in the Upper House in succession to the late Sir George Ross was a foregone conclusion. Senator Bostock stood second in the balloting which resulted in the elevation of the late leader to the post at the opening of the session of 1911-12, and upon the death of the late leader became practically without opposition the commander-in-chief of the majority of the Senate.

Hon. Mr. Bostock is an Englishman by birth and education. He is the eldest son of Samuel Bostock, of the Hermitage, Walton Heath, Surrey, England, and on May 31st will be fifty years of age. He is, therefore, a much younger man at the time of his ascension to leadership than either Sir Richard Cartwright or Sir George Ross, his two predecessors. He was educated by tutor at Sutton, Brighton, and Guilford, and then went to Cambridge, where he received his Master of Arts degree in 1885, in mathematics tripos, third class. After three years' study of Blackstone and other legal authorities he was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1888.

Five years' experience as a barrister was sufficient for young Bostock. He heard the call of Canada, gave up his profession, crossed the big pond, and went all the way across Canada to British Columbia, where his name to-day is almost as much a household word as that of Sir Richard McBride. He went into ranching and fruit-growing, and his hard work for the honest development of the Pacific Province so attracted the admiration of his new neighbors that three years after his arrival he was nominated as the Liberal candidate for Yale-Cariboo, and was elected by 245 majority. Yale-Cariboo was a new constituency just formed by uniting the former ridings of Yale and Cariboo, both of which had elected Conservatives before Mr. Bostock's appearance in the field. In the House of Commons he rapidly made himself felt as a powerful force, and was chosen as a Whip by the Liberal party. He introduced the bill in 1899 which compelled the railway companies to issue passes to members of Parliament. In 1904 he was called to the Senate, where he has been one of the most useful members.

Fruit ranching was not the only British Columbia enterprise that attracted Senator Bostock's attention. For a while he was proprietor of The Vancouver Province, the leading Liberal newspaper of that part of Canada. He has large investments in a number of industries and spends most of his time at his home at Monte Creek Ranch, Ducks, B.C. He is a Fellow of the Royal Colonial Institute and of the Royal Agricultural Society.

Sincerity is the dominant keynote of his character. He is in politics for what he can do for Canada, and not for what Canada can do for him something that unfortunately is not true of all legislators.

The Senator's wife has been one of the greatest factors in his success. She was before her marriage on June 12, 1891, Miss Lizzie Jean McCombie, youngest daughter of Hugh McCombie, Esq., K.C., of Ithamdale, Wimbledon, England, and Chancellor of Durham.

POTATO SPRAYING

Spraying potatoes is an important subject. This operation must be conducted in a thorough manner to control the potato bug and the potato blight. The following spray is a good combined fungicide and insecticide: Lime, four pounds; copper sulphate, six pounds; water, 40 gallons; arsenate of lead, two pounds.

The foregoing mixture is made the same as the four-forty Bordeaux, and should be applied as soon as the plants attain four or five inches in height. Spraying must be continued as the plants grow and produce new surface for the ravages of the bug and the blight. If you spray often and well, nothing need be feared from either of these dis-

MOUNTAIN PONIES.

Canadian Rockies Have a Breed of Animals All Their Own.

The origin of the famous Rocky Mountain ponies of Western Canada is shrouded in mystery. The indigenous horse of North America, which, modern scientists hold, was evolved from a sort of native five-toed dog, has for centuries been extinct. It is supposed that the so-called Rocky Mountain ponies are an Indian breed, originally imported from Mexico or South America. Before summarizing their general qualities and uses it will be interesting to note how they differ, first, from the ordinary horse used on the prairies, and how, secondly, from the horses employed by the Northwest Mounted Police. Technically, the Rocky Mountain ponies are described as "clean-footed" horses—that is to say, they are not subject to the diseases of the hoofs which affect the prairie horses. If the ponies were not thus "clean-footed" they would be quite useless for their primary work as pack horses for carrying supplies up the scarred heights of the Rockies. They differ from the Northwest Mounted Police horses solely in the matter of height. They possess all the qualities, except height, that are desirable in the animals used by the Northwest Mounted Police. They have all the speed, agility and endurance required for the work, but they lack by two or three inches the height necessary to carry considerable weight, such as that of an able-bodied man, at top speed. The Government, therefore, mated Rocky Mountain pony dams with thorough-bred sires, and their offspring are the strong, active, untiring, fleet horses which have proved themselves a phenomenon in a class of work that would have proved too arduous for any ordinary breed of horses.

Besides being clean-footed and fleet, the Rocky Mountain ponies are a particularly hardy breed, enduring any sort of weather in summer or winter. Though standing only fourteen hands high, they have well-compacted muscles and bones, and are very strong, and possessed of untiring energy. Further, they are as sure-footed as a mountain goat, and will take the extreme edge of a precipice with absolute safety and fearlessness. Finally, they are very agile in climbing mountains or in turning quickly and safely from points of imminent danger, and they carry packs with ease.

It is for these qualities that the British Government is considering the establishing of a "remount" farm on the foothills and plateaus of the Rockies for the purpose of evolving these ponies into hardy, clean-footed, fleet and serviceable horses for use in the British army, especially in countries where the cavalry and the commissariat department will move under extraordinarily impeding conditions. Capt. R. Grant Thorold of Dutch Creek, in the Columbia Valley, and other ranchers once thought of breeding the Rocky Mountain ponies for use as polo mounts. But Capt. Thorold found that their height was not sufficient to allow them to carry the required weight at top speed, and that, in any case, to breed them for commercial use would yield much greater profits. The polo mount project was, therefore, given up.

The chief uses to which the Rocky Mountain ponies are put are, briefly, these: They are superior animals for tourist carrying, packing supplies for mountain-climbing and hunting parties, for light teaming, for clearing and for logging in timber camps. They are strictly a product of Canadian industry, and the men who live and work in the mountains swear by them.

Easy Made Money.

With a cigar box label and a five-dollar-bill of the Bank of Hochelaga, a presentable fifty-dollar-bill can be made. Two such bills were taken from John Rougard, of Napierville, Que., recently, in the store of Napoleon Daoust, Notre Dame street west, Montreal. Rougard was placed under arrest.

He said that he was a farmer and claimed he had received the bills in payment of stock he had sold in the city. On the other hand, it is said by the police that once in the station he seemed to throw away concealment by saying: "I'm caught. It took me three months to make them."

The method used to manufacture bills apparently was to neatly cut out from a cigar label eight number "50's" and three printed "fifty's." The eleven clippings were then placed on to the five dollar bill and in a dim light would pass well if no examination were made.

Wanted to Go Back to Ireland.

Among the steerage passengers on board the Allan liner Scotian, which arrived in Halifax the other day, was a young man from the north of Ireland, who, just before the ship entered Halifax harbor, decided that he did not want to enter Canada, and although he had a through ticket to Winnipeg, requested the purser to permit him to return home. When the ship arrived the man's case was taken up by the Nova Scotia immigration agent, who finally induced the man to stay in Canada, offering him a position in Nova Scotia. The man was given a refund on his ticket with the understanding that he would be placed on a farm immediately.

PEACE.

Him only shall peace find
Who plans no more, and long hath ceased to sue,
Existent only in the flawless mind,
Accounting nothing as his due:

Whose soul hath set aside
Desire and hope; who lives no more in fee,
But looks far forth, and casts his spirit wide
On Nature and Eternity:

Who sees this glorious earth—
An open radiance, a script sublime—
Regarding in her elemental mirth
Not now, nor yesterday, but time:

To whom the marvellous sun,
The daedal spectacle of earth and sky,
In endless forms and beauty never done
The night's slow-moving majesty:

Life's never-flagging tale,
An infinite pursuit, a vast employ,
In lonely brightness far removed from bale,
Bring wonder and sufficient joy.

This is to live in truth,
To plant against the passion's dark control
The spirit's birthright of immortal youth,
The simple standard of the soul.

"PILTSIE" IN AFRICA.

Edmonton's Perambulatory Newsboy Is Reported at Cape Town.

Piltsie Ryan, the Canadian "newsboy," who is walking round the world, from Edmonton, Alberta, for a prize of $4,000, paid an unexpected visit to Cape Town recently, says The Cape Times. He has been in South Africa for some little time, having worked his passage from Australia to Durban. The Mother City of South Africa is not on Ryan's route, but he has come here to get his book signed by Lord Gladstone, as he missed him in Pretoria.

Ryan has already covered 32,540 miles, to Pretoria, that is, and sells newspapers and postal cards to pay his expenses. "Newsboy" is rather a misnomer, as Piltsie Ryan is now twenty-nine years of age, and has sold newspapers for twenty-three years.

In Johannesburg he met Sir Lionel Phillips and Gen. Botha, who signed his book. "He treated me finely, and I had a fine chat with him," is Ryan's opinion of the hon. member for Yeoville; and of Gen. Botha he says, "He was a very fine man to me."

During his travels Ryan has had many adventures, having been to Mexico and South America. He says that in the latter country he was arrested four times as a spy, and escaped every time. The last time he escaped he was under sentence of death as a prisoner of war, but a motor-car took him away in good time. He returned to the U. S. A., and from San Francisco managed to work his passage to the Hawaiian Islands, and then went to Suva, New Zealand, and Australia.

Car Wandered Away.

Some years ago, at Nelson, B.C., a freight car was discovered quite by accident in ten or fifteen feet of water off the dock.

If the railway company had ever missed the car there was no record of it at Nelson, and the only explanation that the local agents could make was that some careless switching engineer had bumped the car off the dock and had failed to report its loss, possibly through fear of being reprimanded or losing his position.

The contents of freight cars frequently disappear equally mysteriously. Some years ago a valuable consignment of ore from a Canadian mine was sent to New York for delivery to a local smelter. The ore did not arrive, and the usual "tracers" sent out from both ends failed to find the missing shipment. Months afterward this was discovered. Through some oversight the papers were missing when the freight train drew into the New York terminal, and the car was shunted to a side-track to await information. It happened that this track was one where car-loads of cinders from the round-house were accumulated.

When these cars were ready, a switch engine coupled them all and took them to fill in a swamp. They took along also the car of ore, which was dumped with the cinders into the mud. The discovery of a few pieces of rich silver ore among the ashes attracted the attention of track-walkers or others, and led to inquiry. Of course it was impossible to rescue the ore, and the railway company had to pay the shippers for its estimated value.

Cheap Salad Dressing.

When eggs are expensive and salads so essential in the average home, one should know of different salad dressings which lose none of their fine flavor if eggs are not included.

One may use olive oil or butter for the purpose. It should be boiled with red pepper and celery seed, then strained and to it added the desired amount of salt, sugar and mustard, with a fourth teaspoonful of cornstarch to a small quantity of dressing to give it the smooth effect obtained with eggs.

Beat this with an egg beater, add a very small quantity of vinegar and, when possible, the least bit of whipped cream. The secret of an exceptionally delicious mayonnaise is the vinegar used. It is spiced and sweetened with brown sugar and strained for use. It gives that flavor over which one is certain to wonder "What can it be?" and yet cannot discover.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION

A FROCK FOR MANY PURPOSES.

Here is a graceful suggestion for one of the new pussy willow taffetas that are having such a vogue this season, the beauty of the flowered effects making a simple design all the more desirable. Two tones of deep blue, edgings and bows of blue ribbon and a hat in blue, and patent leather button boots, and here is a costume that is quietly elegant for any use between luncheon and dinner, with a wrap or without one.

SELLING VALUE OF A COW

The following general rules for calculating the actual selling value of grade cows and pure bred females and bulls have been compiled by a well-known Western dairy authority, Mr. George P. Grant.

1.—The value of any dairy cow, granting she is sound and not too old, should be based upon her ability at the pail.

If she produces 160 pounds of butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $48.

If she produces 260 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $78.

If she produces 360 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $108.

If she produces 460 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $138.

If she produces 560 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $168.

If she produces 660 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $198.

2.—The estimated value and selling price of a yearling heifer is half that of her dam as figured above.

3.—The estimated value of a pure bred cow is four times that of a grade based on the above figures. By this way of figuring, the 160 lbs. pure bred is worth $192. As a matter of fact the 160 lbs. pure bred is not worth anything if that is all she is ever capable of making.

4.—The estimated value of a pure bred bull calf is the average of the sum of his dam's record in pounds of butter taken with the average production inheritance of the bull's sire; for example, if a well marked and good individual bull calf is out of a 400-lb. fat dam or 480 lbs. butter, and his sire has two A.R. daughters whose average record is 500 lbs., fat or 600 lbs. fat, or his dam has a record of 500 lbs. fat, and the grandsire two A.R. daughters, with an average of 500 lbs. fat, and 600 lbs. butter, we add the 480 lbs. and 600 lbs. together, divide by 2, and we have 540 lbs. of butter multiplied by 30 cents gives $162, the estimated selling price of the bull calf.

5.—Some animals whose prepotency has been demonstrated are priceless in building up a good herd.

Inmates of the "Pen."

The Kingston Penitentiary report shows 516 inmates, including 48 "lifers," of whom two are women. Six prisoners are over 70 years old, and 35 under 20; 193 are married, and eight are widowers. Sixty men and nine women inmates are wholly illiterate. Nearly every trade and profession is included, with the law represented by three lawyers, a detective and a policeman.

According to habits, 184 are temperate, 118 are total abstainers, and 206 are intemperate.

SHEEP RAISING

The Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture is prepared to offer practical assistance this year to Associations of Wool Growers in the preparation and display of their wool clips for market. Associations, in order to receive this aid, must be organized in accordance with the regulations of the Branch and membership is limited to actual owners of sheep. West of Fort William an Association must contain at least 3,000 sheep, or sufficient to comprise one car load of wool; east of there, a relative number. The services of expert wool classifiers, who will take charge of and perform the grading, classification and preparation of the wool, will be provided.

This proposal represents much more than a mere continuation of the work undertaken last year, when two wool classifiers, in the employ of the Live Stock Branch, visited the Western Provinces and gave practical instruction and advice to sheep-raisers upon wool growing. Rather it means the introduction of a definite scheme whereby wool producers may be actually assisted in preparing and presenting their wools upon the market in the most acceptable fashion and thus be in a position to cater more directly to the requirements of the market. Moreover, it should prove effective in developing and improving the general status of sheep-raising and in creating an impetus to the production and preparation of an improved grade of wool and indirectly a better class of mutton.

The Branch will also provide the means for the establishment of a central bureau for the distribution of current information respecting domestic and foreign markets of wool, so that the Associations may be constantly in command of complete knowledge concerning the source of the demand and the ruling price of all grades. Reliable information of this nature will serve as an excellent asset to an Association in directing its policy and placing it in closer relationship with the demands of the trade.

Sheep-raisers desirous of taking advantage of this offer and of forming an Association should write, for detailed information and application forms to the Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa.

Towards Mixed Farming.

During the past few weeks the special demonstration train of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture's dairy branch, visited seventy-two points throughout the province for the purpose of demonstrating dairy work. That a total of 6,535 farmers attended and exhibited the keenest interest in the instruction, is taken to indicate most unmistakably the present trend toward diversified agriculture.

TRANSPORTATION IN INTERESTS OF FARMERS

Mr. J. H. Burnham in discussing the question of ocean transportation, in the interests of the farmers, is reported by Hansard as follows:

Mr. Burnham: Representing a large number of farmers who have often expressed their opinion to me on these matters, I feel it my duty to say that this difficulty which is presented in various forms, whilst being undeniable, is not insurmountable. The hon. minister has just outlined the fact that the problem before him is difficult and the Government hesitates to undertake to solve it, but that does not excuse the Government. Great Governments will do great things. If this country were at war, they would take possession of all the means of transport, guard all the avenues of output and of import and see to everything. Napoleon once held Europe in the palm of his hand. He blockaded the whole continent of Europe at one time.

Mr. Foster: Yes, and Europe had a hard time of it for many years.

Mr. Burnham: Yes, because he was in supreme control; that only emphasizes the point I am trying to make. Surely in this age we are not going to throw up our hands and say, because a difficulty is a great one, that it is therefore insoluble. The very fact that some system of national insurance could be contrived, if the different interests of the country would bind themselves together for that purpose, shows conclusively and at a glance that it is the Government's duty, as representing the people, to undertake that very thing. That is the function of government. People combine in communities and in nations for the purpose of having combined interests and managing them in a combined or national way. Governments, I submit, are elected for that purpose and accordingly as they display capacity for administration, so do they make for the success of the national interests, as well as of the individual. If the farmers must be told that their produce will have to run the chances of an inclement clime, of rivers difficult of navigation and of all the other troubles that arise in a country like this; if that is the final finding of this Government, why then we must accept it. If it is a correct finding, we must resign ourselves to our fate, but the simple fact that the problem is a difficult one is surely no excuse for leaving it unsolved.

Mr. J. J. Hughes: Change the Government.

Mr. Burnham: That would only make it worse. We surely may expect that such a minister as we have will, grapple with great things and solve them. We have tremendous means of internal transportation, but we are blocked by the sea. For my part, I have been thinking this question over for many years; I have been reading it up to the best of my ability and associating myself with those who understand it, and I must confess that I do not understand it, notwithstanding the fact that I have brought myself in contact with those whose interests are most involved. I cannot help saying however that I view with great disappointment any statement to the effect that another year is about to close without some supreme effort being made to solve this question. It is all very well having commissions of various kinds who bring in effectual findings, which are pigeon-holed and that is the end of it, we farmers want to see these things grappled with; we want to see them solved. Speaking in a somewhat radical way, I think that if a government at any time finds that it cannot do things, it is that government's duty to give place to another. I am speaking in a general way; I do not know that anybody in this country would for one moment advise such an exchange of horses as was suggested a moment ago. But it is a well-known maxim of law and equity that there is no wrong without a remedy. It is certainly no sign of strength, no sign of progress, no sign of aptitude that year after year we cannot do what other countries can do. Look at little Holland, covered with the sea, as it was. She shut the sea out; she actually defied the sea by raising dykes and pumping them out. Holland is a country of marvellous prosperity; she has become a country of happy and prosperous people. Now here are we with enormous natural resources, as we are told every day, and with great wealth; yet, in confusion, we are actually throwing up our hands before one of the most ordinary difficulties of everyday life. The farmers ought to feel that those in charge are capable and are ready and willing to do their duty in this respect. The farmers must know that the Government have some plan or will mature some plan which will give the farmers better facilities for the carrying of their produce and the transaction of their business. The farmers, as we all know, not being banded together in well-connected relationship like other classes of business men are unable to grapple with these questions for themselves; therefore they must be particularly looked after by the Government. Other branches of business can by instantaneous communication or by well-conducted methods of business contrive plans for the solution of their problems. The farmer is, of course, an authority on the question of the productions of the soil; he is not an authority on business by any means. I cannot emphasize it too strongly that the wish, nay, the demand of the farmer is that the present or some Government will rise up in Canada and solve the question of ocean transportation; and it must be solved.

HINTS ON POULTRY

CARE OF SITTING HEN.

A broody hen if left to her own devices will frequently select her nest, lay her eggs in it and bring off a good hatch of healthy chickens. That leads many to believe that the sitting hen which has not the freedom to select her nest, and to come and when she likes, will get along with next to no care. That idea is a wrong one. The hen that steals her nest and brings off a good hatch usually uses the hen sense that nature gives her and does her work in the natural way. The hen that is moved on to a nest prepared for her and then shut up most of the time is at a great disadvantage, and that disadvantage must be overcome by better care. In the first place, the hen that cannot find a dust bath and dust thoroughly should have her plumage filled with lice-killing powder when she is first set on the nest, and should have another dose of the same powder at the end of the first and the second week, care being taken to fill her plumage full. This will take care of the vermin, which must not be allowed to exist on sitting hens.

Unless she is free to get off the nest and on again when she desires, she should be taken off at regular intervals; that is, at the same time each day. Her food should consist mainly of whole corn, of which she should have all she will eat, and fresh, clean water, charcoal and grit should be within reach at each meal time.

It is wise to remember that whatever makes the hen more comfortable and more contented helps to produce the good hatch which all poultry-keepers desire.

HOW TO DRESS POULTRY.

In the first place, keep 18 hours without food before killing. To dress chickens, kill by bleeding in mouth or open veins of the neck. Leave head and feet on and do not remove the intestines. For scalding chickens, the water should be as near the boiling point as possible. Be careful not to tear or remove the outside skin, as it spoils the sale of them. To dry-pick chickens properly the work should be done while the chickens are bleeding; do not wait and let the bodies get cold. Before packing and shipping, poultry should be thoroughly dry and cold, but not frozen. Always see that the animal heat is entirely out of the body. Appearances add to the sale and, of course, price. The same applies to all the rest of poultry.

PROFIT IN GEESE.

There is no fowl that will respond to treatment or furnish better results than geese. A generous supply of drinking water is all that is required. There are many places on the farm that are worthless for cultivation, but could be used with excellent results for goose raising.

Many farmers or their wives are profiting by this, and are adding a handsome sum to their incomes annually. The care required for raising geese is small, when compared with returns, and the cost of feed is smal when compared with the cost of feed used for other birds bred for market. A goose on a range will gather a large portion of its food, consisting of grasses, insects and other vegetable and animal matter to be found in fields and brooks. The goose occupies the same place in poultry as sheep do among live stock, and if cared for properly is just as profitable in proportion. It is just as necessary to pluck the feathers of a goose as it is to sheer the wool from the sheep. The feathers may be plucked about four times during the summer, and each large goose of the Toulouse variety will yield about two pounds of feathers, which are worth about $1.50.

RAISING GOSLINGS.

Goslings, while young and before their backs are feathered, must be kept from running through wet grass or standing out in a rain storm. It pays to be particular in this respect, as they die off alarmingly if allowed to get wet and cold.

Overfeeding is a mistake that many make and one which nearly always proves fatal to the gosling. Dry bread soaked in water is best for the first few days while they are learning to jerk off grass blades. They should have a small amount of corn meal wet up stiff each morning, a large teaspoonful to a gosling is enough, and all the drinking water they want to run to, besides an abundance of short grass. Short pasture or door yard grass is their best feed. They cannot eat the tall wire grass.

Goslings should be allowed a free range from the first, and if there is no running water for them to go into while young it will be better for them, as the water chills them and stunts their growth and the turtles draw the helpless young ones under.

Feeding heavily on soft corn when the goslings are well grown should be avoided, as it causes leg weakness and death in heavy birds. Full grown goslings will feed on corn fodder as well as cattle and thrive on it. During the heat of the day goslings do not eat much and should have plenty of drinking water placed in a shady corner [illegible] they are in the habit of [illegible]

WOMEN WHO ARE ALWAYS TIRED

May Find Help in This Letter.

Swan Creek, Mich.—"I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. When through neglect or overwork I get run down and my appetite is poor and I have that weak, languid, always tired feeling, I get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it builds me up, gives me strength, and restores me to perfect health again. It is truly a great blessing to women, and I cannot speak too highly of it. I take pleasure in recommending it to others."—Mrs. ANNIE CAMERON, R.F.D., No. 1, Swan Creek, Michigan.

Another Sufferer Relieved.

Hebron, Me.—"Before taking your remedies I was all run down, discouraged and had female weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash, and find today that I am an entirely new woman, ready and willing to do my housework now, where before taking your medicine it was a dread. I try to impress upon the minds of all ailing women I meet the benefits they can derive from your medicines."—Mrs. CHARLES ROWE, R. F. D., No. 1, Hebron, Maine.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Specialist Could Not Remove Stone in The Bladder

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

JOLIETTE, P.Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder.

He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush. I returned home and was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS.

They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS, and to my great surprise and joy, I passed the stone.

GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did me so much good, I will recommend them all the rest of my life". 170

OLIVIA'S PRIZE PACKAGE

And the Secret it Revealed.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

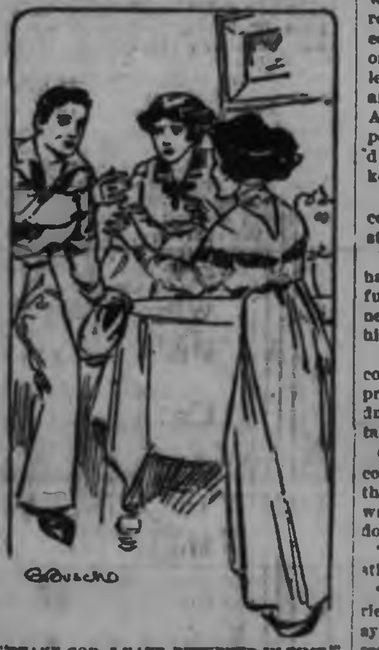
The red auction flag fluttered from a tree over the front gate and told to the village of Wayboro that the household effects of the late Zebedee Paine would be sold to the highest bidder.

Ada Paine, a niece of the dead man and his only known representative and heir, was here, there and everywhere, whispering a word of advice to one concerning some especially choice article, finding a comfortable seat for some good gossip of the neighborhood or detailing her own future plans to an interested group of listeners.

Miss Paine had been Zebedee's housekeeper for fifteen years preceding his death. It was Ada who had soothed the old man's last hours, and some people said that Ada Paine was now reaping the reward for which she had so ardently labored. Others said that young Zebedee Paine would never have left home and lost his life in the sea if it had not been for his black eyed cousin Ada's sharp tongue.

Olivia Deering walked slowly up the path and bent her head to enter the low, old fashioned doorway. She was a tall, stately woman with abundant brown hair lightly flecked with gray at the temples; her skin was clear and rosy and her hazel eyes shining and lustrous. She wore a simple white lawn dress and a plain hat.

People turned and stared and nodded at Olivia, and many of them wondered how many years had passed since Olivia had been under that roof. It was known that once she had called to see old Mr. Paine concerning the reported death of his son, and it was rumored that Olivia had not been permitted to see old Zebedee and that Ada Paine had sent her away with burning cheeks and anguished eyes.



"THANK GOD, I HAVE RETURNED IN TIME!"

Since then Olivia Deering and Ada Paine had not been on speaking terms.

Now Ada's black brows drew together in a frown when she saw Olivia's dignified form moving through the crowd.

"Some folks ain't got any sense of delicacy," sneered Ada in a stage whisper.

"I expect likely she wants to buy some of little Zebedee's belongings for a keepsake," tittered Louise Ramsell, the sharp tongued village dressmaker.

"There ain't going to be any personal belongings put under the hammer," said Ada hastily, not knowing that at that very moment the auctioneer's zealous assistant had just dug out from a hiding place in the garret an old mahogany workbox which had belonged to Mrs. Zebedee Paine and which Ada had hidden there herself long years ago.

And in the next room to the one in which Ada was now whispering to Louise Ramsell Olivia Deering was watching the auctioneer with a pallid face as he held the mahogany workbox high in the air above the curious crowd.

"And now this here mahogany box, locked fast, to be sold sight unseen. What am I offered?"

As in a dream Olivia lived the next few moments. She heard her own voice bidding steadily against that of some unknown person. For some unexplainable reason she wanted that workbox more than anything in the world. Then, because Wayboro folk preferred to know just what they were buying and very many of them possessed ancient workboxes similar to the one offered for sale, the other bidder dropped out, and Olivia found herself the possessor of it for the sum of $3.40.

Somehow after this purchase Olivia's interest in the sale ended, and, wrapping the box in her light summer shawl, she left the house. Her tall, graceful form hurried up the street, turned at a corner and went up a grassy road, where her little white painted cottage stood in a lovely garden at the end. From the white cottage Olivia could glimpse the sea, and winter and summer for twelve years its distant murmur had seemed to whisper some message to her from the lost lover of her youth.

Now she tossed aside her hat and sat in the window overlooking the sea. The mahogany box was in her lap, and her shapely fingers rested lightly upon it.

The box was heavy. Something moved about within it. Very likely it had not been opened since Zebedee went away to sea. Olivia recollected that Zebedee had told her that his dying mother had given him her workbox for his very own, and he had whispered that he kept Olivia's letters in it and a curl of her hair and the first roses she had ever given him.

Then all at once Zebedee had gone away to sea.

Without a word to Olivia he had left her, and Ada Paine, who was in love with her handsome young cousin, had whispered here and there that Zeb was tired of Olivia and was taking that way of getting out of his engagement.

Olivia was thinking of all these things as she sat there alone, looking at the sea, with the mahogany box in her lap.

Presently she looked down at the box without a key.

"I wonder," she said dreamily; "I wonder if he took my letters when he went away or if he left them behind?"

She went to a small table, and from the drawer she took a bunch of keys of assorted sizes. Finally one tiny twisted key fitted into the little lock. The bolt moved, and in response to Olivia's touch the cover of the box was raised.

For a long time she sat staring down at the contents of the mahogany box. They were so unexpected.

Instead of a bundle of old creased and yellowed love letters there was a little heap of unopened letters. Some were the letters she had written to Zebedee during the winter she spent with her aunt in Lansing, and others were his letters which she had never received because they had never passed through the postoffice, and it was on her return to Wayboro that she learned that Zebedee had gone away and that she was jilted. At that time Ada Paine had been assisting in the postoffice during spare time from her duties as her Uncle Zebedee's housekeeper.

Olivia wondered if there was any connection between the two circumstances.

There was the evidence that Zebedee had written to her. He had been faithful, and at last convinced of her fickleness he had gone away to sea to lose his life in a shipwreck.

From her seat in the window Olivia could look down the grassy road, and presently she saw Ada Paine's short, dumpy form hurrying toward the cottage.

Olivia gathered up the letters and concealed them in a locked trunk in the spare room. Then she made her way downstairs in time to open the door to Ada Paine's insistent rapping.

"Will you come in?" asked Olivia stiffly.

"Yes," panted Ada Paine as she hurried into the sitting room. Her black eyes darted here and there and finally rested on the mahogany box.

She crossed the room and held the box close to her breast.

"How dare you come to my house and buy this?" she demanded fiercely.

Olivia surveyed her coolly.

"It was a public auction. I had a perfect right to attend and to buy anything that was put up for sale."

"This is a mistake. It was not intended to be sold. It is mine—my personal property." There was anxious inquiry in Ada's sharp eyes as she looked at the pale, composed face of the woman she had wronged.

"If it is your box, Ada," said Olivia, "why does it contain letters that belong to me—letters that I never received from your Cousin Zeb, letters that he never received from me—why?"

Ada Paine gazed in horror at Olivia.

She dropped the box with a bitter cry and flung her hands over her face.

For a long time they stood thus. They did not hear footsteps approaching by the grassy road and enter the house by an open side door.

"Ada, why did you suppress my letters to Zeb? Why did you withhold my letters to him? I never could understand his desertion. I believed him fickle, and he was true to me, and, Ada Paine, you have much to answer for. I loved Zebedee Paine, and he went to his death believing me to be false to him!" Olivia's self control wavered. A voice came from the doorway—a man's deep throated tones, thrilling with emotion.

"No, Olivia, I didn't go to my death. I am very much alive, dear. Thank God, I have returned in time to save my old home and, what is more precious, my sweetheart, my only love!"

Olivia turned to find herself in the arms of a handsome middle aged Zebedee, sun browned under tropic skies, where he had been held prisoner by a savage tribe of south sea islanders for the past three years, so that his self enforced exile had become actual imprisonment.

While he whispered in Olivia's willing ear the wretched woman who had so foully shadowed their lives suddenly dropped the mahogany box and fled from the house.

And it was a sign that the years of separation had not embittered their hearts that Olivia and Zebedee made haste to find Ada and to assure her of their forgiveness.

And Wayboro people, agog over these sudden happenings, whispered that when Olivia Deering bought the mahogany workbox she certainly had found a prize package, but this they could only guess because of the resultant happiness for all concerned, for no word of these things ever passed the lips of Olivia or her husband or their much chastened cousin.

WHEN BOILING FISH.

Thoroughly cleanse the fish and rub it with vinegar or lemon juice. This whitens the fish and makes it firm.

Add salt and a little vinegar to the water in which the fish is boiled.

The water must be boiling and just sufficient to cover the fish.

Allow the water to boil for three minutes after the fish is put in and then simmer very gently until the fish is cooked.

Overboiled fish is tasteless and unappetizing. Underdone fish is not fit for human food.

The time allowed for the cooking of fish is ten minutes to every pound and ten minutes over. Common sense must be brought to bear with regard to thickness of the fish, when a fork or skewer should be used to test the fish, for as soon as the flesh parts easily from the bone it is ready.

Dish the fish at once. Never allow it to remain soaking in the water after it is ready, or it will become "woolly."

If there is not a fish kettle at hand the fish should be placed on a dish and tied in a cloth. The stock, if not too salt, should be used in the making of the sauce.

CHIC HAND BAGS.

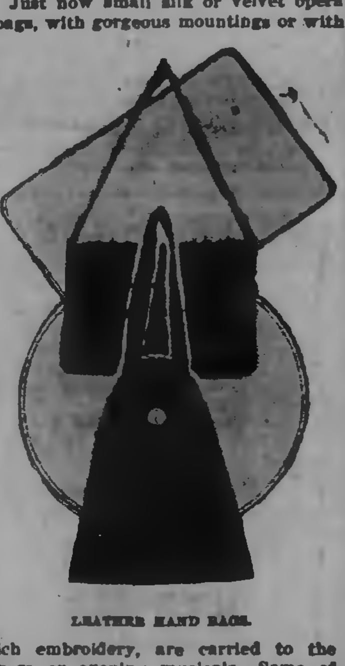
Many Novelties in Bags For Wear With Elaborate Costumes.

With one of the coquettish, short jacketed spring suits made of silken stuff draped upward to reveal high heeled, buttoned boots, clipped off in the sleeves to display gloves of embroidered silk and trimmed fetchingly with tassels, sash bows and frills of lace, a fine seal leather hand bag with leather handles and a square frame would be quite out of the picture. The elaborate tailored suit of the moment demands a dressy hand bag, just as it demands the soft, graceful gloves and the coquettish buttoned boot.

Department stores, specialty shops and even jewelers are showing a greater assortment of bags and reticules than previous seasons have disclosed. There is no limit to the number which can be utilized in the fashionable wardrobe, for they are as varied as the gowns themselves and chosen to match or suit this and that costume.

Just now small silk or velvet opera bags, with gorgeous mountings or with rich embroidery, are carried to the opera or evening musicale. Some of the latest opera bags are made of silk with embroidery sections mounted over pieces of pasteboard.



LEATHER HAND BAGS.

A combination of silver or gold thread embroidery with beads is even richer on a background of chiffon velvet. The peacock colorings are beautiful and easy to carry out with iridescent beads.

Fine dull jet beads closely sewn together on black silk make very handsome mourning reticules, which are used a great deal in place of leather bags.

Leather novelties for spring include many attractive and convenient hand bags for women. The envelope bag of leather and the long silk or leather bag, with a tiny watch set into the side, are convenient and attractive. The little watch may be consulted by the busy shopper without the trouble of taking out her own watch from underneath her wrap.

"Mabel, I'm drawn on the grand jury."

"So am I, Gertrude."

"Our responsibilities will be heavy."

"I realize that. What shall we wear?"—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

It's easier to keep a good name than to regain it.

Spring Beauty Hints.

The hands require special attention in the early spring. The sudden changes are apt to leave their hallmarks of chapping and redness on the hands. It is essential first of all that they should be kept comfortably warm.

The question of gloves has to be considered carefully. Every woman who goes out much should be provided with several pairs of varying degrees of thickness and should change her gloves to suit the weather. The heavy ones she has been wearing all the winter must be discarded as soon as a warmer day comes. Some very good authorities on the subject say that to keep our hands too hot is prematurely ageing. Our thick gloves should be kept in a convenient place until the decided warmth comes. They may often be required on odd days when winter seems once more to assert itself.

Some girls are very much bothered with cracked lips in the spring. They probably possess an unusually delicate outer skin which is affected by all changes in the weather.

It is a wise precaution to rub a little cold cream on the lips before going out when it is particularly cold. If this warning comes too late and some poor sufferers are already smiling agonized smiles on account of cracked lips treat with boracic ointment to heal them.

First, about the complexion, which suffers most from the vagaries of spring weather. Great care must be taken to avoid exposing the tender skin of the face directly to the cold north and east winds.

A little very good face cream or skin food should be rubbed gently into the skin before going out of doors when cold winds are blowing. The skin food is preferable because when it is properly applied no greasiness or shine is perceptible.

The cream serves as a protection against the strong air. A very little powder may be added. It helps too.

A veil is an indispensable article when the keen winds are blowing. A wise girl knows that she must make a careful choice of her veil for this purpose. It must not be one of those delightfully thin gauzy things which can be worn with impunity when the warm weather comes. Chiffon is a particularly suitable substance for the purpose. It forms a very good protection for the face. Shetland veils are very much recommended for the out of door girl, who has to face the elements in all their moods.

Waving the Hair.

Are you one of those troubled with hair that is quite straight? Every woman cannot help noticing when she changes the style of her coiffure that the hair does not take easily to the new order of things. In fact, it takes half a dozen dressings in the new way before it settles down comfortably.

The present fashion for simple hairdressing makes training essential, for simplicity may be "plain Jane-ish" to a degree, or it may be extremely artistic.

If you hair needs a wave try this method, which cannot spoil your hair as hot irons are apt to do. It is quite easy and you will be delighted with the result.

Part your hair in the center and again lower down on each side. Take the hair between the partings on each side separately, damp it and pin it up in an even line with hairpins placed at short intervals. Leave the hair like this until it is quite dry. Remove the pins and the pretty wave in it will remain for several days.

Sparkling Eyes.

Most persons have a great admiration for sparkling eyes and would love to possess them. Here are a few simple directions about the care of the eyes which will produce good results in an entirely natural manner. The eyes should always be well bathed in a good lotion after they have been exposed to dust. Girls are so apt to neglect this little matter, and it is really very important. The dust has an injurious effect on the eyelids and lashes and effectually takes away the bright, healthy appearance of the eyes. Then you should be careful not to overstrain your eyes in any way. Reading or fine needlework should be done only in good light. Of course the main thing to remember is to keep healthy and well in yourself. Take plenty of exercise in the fresh air, eat lots of good, nourishing food and sleep well (if you can). Your eyes will then reflect the sparkle of health and vigor.

Preventing Blackheads.

If you are troubled with blackheads your blood must be in a poor state. You should take some simple corrective mixture for about a week or so. Plenty of exercise is essential for keeping fit. You should drink plenty of water between meals. These general precautions should improve the state of your blood and help to prevent the blackheads from putting in an appearance. To remove those that are there steam your face over a jug or basin of hot water and press out the blackheads with the tips of the fingers. Rub a little boracic ointment on the sore places. This treatment should be done once a week. Avoid all rich, fatty foods or anything likely to cause indigestion. It is a frequent cause of blackheads and unhealthy skin.

SPECIAL CORNER FOR AFTER DINNER READERS

AN INTERFERENCE

By JOHN Y. LARNED

"What's the matter, Billy?"

My sister Beth asked me the question one morning when I was sitting on the porch looking dreamily on the buds that were opening on the trees.

"Nothing," I replied.

"Yes; there is."

Beth and I were great chums. There was not much more than a year between us, and I was used to giving her my confidence about everything. I resolved to throw my burden upon her in this case.

"You know Alice Woodson"—

"Oh, a case of lovesickness."

I made no reply to this. I was sorry I had begun a confession.

"Go on, Billy," Beth added.

"I won't. You'll only poke fun at me."

"Not a bit of it. I'll help you. Don't you know that I, being a girl, know just how a girl should be treated to be won?"

"You can't tell me how to win Alice. In the first place, she's in love with Fred Perkins; in the second, she seems to have some sort of grudge against me, and in the third"—

"That's enough. You needn't tell me any more. Now, listen to me. I knew all about this before I asked what was the matter with you. I've been watching you and watching Alice, and I'm convinced she's playing you."

"What?"

"Playing you—a sort of cat and mouse business."

"Oh, bosh! For a week past she has treated me abominably and all the while has been looking up with her eyes at Fred like a"—

"Like a chick in a thunderstorm. Will you do what I tell you to do?"

"That depends upon what you tell me."

"The next time you meet Alice pretend to be thinking about something else and don't see her."

"That will make matters worse."

"Very well; if you won't take the medicine I prescribe, go your own road."

I concluded to try Beth's prescription. The next time I saw Alice coming I pretended to be absorbed in something else, and just before we were to come together I turned off in another direction. That was in the morning. In the afternoon of the same day we met again. I couldn't play the same game twice in the same day, so I looked at her. She looked at me, too, or, rather, she stared at me with a cold, blank, withering stare that froze the marrow in my bones. I went to Beth and abused her for getting me into such a pickle.

"You're as weak as watered milk. I'm sorry I tried to do anything for you. I couldn't love a man I could bluff like that."

"What would you want him to do?"

"Crush me like a worm."

"How crush you?"

"Will you simply do nothing so far as Alice is concerned and leave the rest to me?"

Since I felt entirely incapable of carrying on such a contest myself I agreed to this Fabian policy. During the next few days I kept out of Alice Woodson's way so far as I could. When I saw her coming toward me I changed my course. I tried not to look troubled or angry or anything in particular. I did my best to show no especial emotion while waiting for Beth to do something.

One day I met Alice face to face. She bade me good morning in a rather huffy tone. I replied to her salutation.

"I can understand now," she said, "your recent unfriendliness to me since I have learned the cause."

"What cause?"

"Oh, don't pretend ignorance! I used to think that you had a mind of your own."

"And you don't think so now?"

"You're the first man I ever knew who would permit his sister to run him."

I began to catch on to what was at the bottom of this. Beth had evidently been at work.

"What do you mean by my sister running me?"

"I'm not supposed to tell, but I made no promise. Beth has told me all about it."

"About what?"

"About your new fancy, Mr. Ignorance, or, rather, her fancy. Any one can see that she is trying to bring it about herself, and with such a pliable brother I dare say she will."

I plucked up a lot of courage at this. Beth had evidently produced a revolution.

"Do you mean to say that my sister has been betraying my confidence?"

"Your confidence! Why, she told me herself that she was bent on making a match for you. She said she wanted you to marry a girl that was her friend."

I was pretty stupid, but not so stupid as not to see Beth's device and what it had accomplished. I cut the matter short by saying that when I married I would consult no one but the girl I wanted and began to talk of something else.

It would have been better for me to have had the pluck to manage the affair myself, for my wife has never forgiven my sister for "trying to switch me off to one of her especial friends." I have told her the true story, but she won't believe it. Beth doesn't expect her to believe it. She says she wouldn't believe such a thin story herself.

Descriptive.

He was accustomed to drinking straight, plain drinks. But one day they inveigled him into taking one of those mixed affairs, one of those that not only includes a combination of liquids, but also orange peel, pineapple, a cherry and other rank outsiders.

"Well, what do you think of it?" he was asked by the bunch that had done the inveigling.

He looked disapprovingly at the sunken garden before him.

"Boys," he said, "I object to drinking a mince pie."—New York Times.

Coming Back Hard.

Mrs. Beanbrough—How do you like my cake, dear?

Mr. Beanbrough—It is very good, but not as nice as the cake my mother makes.

"Indeed?"

"Mother makes marble cake that looks like the real thing."

"Yes, you are right, and that's just the way it tastes, too."—Youngstown Telegram.

Woman's World

Mrs. Chu and the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

MRS. TING CHI CHU.

The Chinese government has contributed very generously to make its exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition a success. One of the republic's cleverest young statesman has been appointed to the post of commissioner to the exposition. This gentleman is the Hon. Ting Chi Chu, who is counselor to the ministry of industry and commerce in China. Mr. Chu, although only twenty-seven years of age, is well qualified for his task. He was born in Shanghai and attended the Peiyang university when Wu Ting Fang, Chinese minister to this country, was president. Later he graduated from Harvard university.

Recently Mr. Chu was married to clever little Miss Piuga Hu, one of the bright students from the orient who graduated from Wellesley university in the class of 1913. She is intensely interested in the success of the Chinese exhibit and will advise and assist her husband in regard to the exhibit of woman's work.

Chinese women do wonderful work in many lines. Their embroideries are exquisite. The new China is distinctly progressive, and its women are taking a place in the industrial, artistic and professional work that may surprise many occidental people.

The Chinese government has ordered the governors of provinces to co-operate with the central exposition bureau that he may be able to make a suitable display of the progress and wealth of the country. The young commissioner and his wife will have facilities never before available for making China as it is known to the occidental world.

Mrs. Chu is the delegate from China to the international child's welfare congress, which convenes in Washington in April under the auspices of the National Congress of Mothers, Parents and Teachers' association.

HOUSEKEEPING NOTES.

Tiny Tips That Will Lighten the Daily Tasks.

To keep a chimney free from soot sprinkle a little saltpeter over the fire occasionally.

To sift ashes without raising dust sprinkle them with water or let them get wet with rain before sifting.

When buying shoes to get comfortably fitting shoes buy them in the afternoon, when the exercise of the day has spread the muscles of the feet to their largest extent.

Scrubbing brushes will last twice as long if they are put to dry with the bristles downward. If turned the other way the water soaks into the wood and rots the bristles.

To prevent stockings from being torn by the clips of stocking suspenders try doubling the stocking down before placing the clip in them, and you will find they will never tear.

When a tag comes off a bootlace a little black sealing wax carefully pressed round the end of the lace and shaped to a point makes a quite serviceable new one and lasts a long time.

To keep the ironing sheet free from creases pin it on to the board with drawing pins. These hold it securely, prevent risk of it suddenly tucking up and can easily be removed when desired.

When winding a skein of wool put two flatirons on the table a sufficient distance apart to allow of wool being stretched tightly over them. They will answer as well as any one holding the skein.

After washing white muslin, handkerchiefs, etc., soak them for a short time in clear water in which a tablespoonful of borax has been dissolved. This takes away the odor of soap, slightly stiffens them and makes them beautifully white. A tablespoonful to a gallon of water is the right quantity.

'Varsity Men as Miners.

A curious fact about the class of men employed in the Senghenydd pit was mentioned recently at the Home Office inquiry into the disaster. The "unskilled hands" included musicians, butlers, artists, chauffeurs, gardeners, railwaymen, tinplate workers, and University graduates.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

Time Now to Start Plants to Set Out Later in the Season.

It is now time for the suburban or country woman to begin to think about her garden.

In planting herbaceous borders, which may be started now, she should think of their future and not overcrowd. Plenty of room should be left for later development. Clear spaces when kept free from weeds and well hoed are by no means unsightly.

She should make the holes sufficiently wide to allow for the spreading of the roots. When the planting is finished dress the beds with a scattering of leaf mold.

Chrysanthemum plants will be requiring attention now. Many of those which were propagated indoors during the two last months will now need repotting.

To discover those that want shifting carefully shake the plant from the pot. Should the roots be coiled thickly round a mass of mold this shows the plant is needing more space. Supposing it has been in a three inch pot, it will now require the five inch size.

No manuring should be necessary until after midsummer, but the success of these plants depends largely on the watering. It must be systematically carried out. If overwatered the mold turns sour and the roots do not assimilate nourishment. If kept too dry they shrink, wither and ultimately in many instances perish.

New plants coming from a distance should never be unpacked in the open during frost. Select a sheltered but cool place.

Respecting the verbena, aim at early culture. If the sowing is left too late the winter frost will kill the plants while the bloom is at its best.

The seeds may be sown in January, but it is not too late now. Glass covered pans should be used, and a greenhouse temperature is required of about 60 degrees. When the third leaf begins to uncurl transplant the seedlings about an inch apart. Boxes or pans are preferable to pots at this stage.

The Verbena venosa, or veined vervain, is a most useful border plant. It wants warmth and a rich light soil. It is a bluish violet color and grows to a foot and a half in height.

Given a sunny aspect it should commence to blossom in July. In cold localities it is safer to lift the roots before winter.

KEEPING THINGS CLEAN.

Household Utensils Must Be Kept Spick and Span to Secure Good Results.

Some housewives who have experienced a good deal of trouble may be glad to have some suggestions given for keeping the home clean. For example, to prevent stooping over so much in using a dustpan either buy one with a long handle or else add a handle to an ordinary tin dustpan in this way: Saw the handle of a discarded broom and insert it in the hollow handle of the dustpan.

In sweeping uncovered stairs a medium sized, soft paint brush will be found an excellent article. After it has been used no one will like to go back to a dust brush. It reaches the corners of the stairs and also between the sticks supporting the railing. A paint brush is very good, too, for use in cleaning dust out of any crevices, for it does the work better than a duster.

Small dish mops also make good soft dusters. They are easily shaken out and easily washed when dirty. Keeping a soft cloth in an apron pocket saves many steps as the housekeeper goes about her home in the morning straightening things out. Little boys are not the only offenders in the matter of using a handkerchief for the purpose not intended for that article. A duster at hand cleans the piano or table or the stair railing, almost without the realisation that the work has been done.

To make a carpet sweeper more useful clean it often, removing the brush to get out the hairs and lint. A wire hairbrush, which may be bought at a ten cent store, is useful for cleaning the brush of the carpet sweeper. It may be kept in the brush closet for that purpose.

When shaking or cleaning rugs they should never be grasped at the ends, but always at the side. In this way, if there is a fringe, it is protected and the ends do not ravel. The shape of the rug is also preserved.

FURNISHING HINTS.

Always try to cut curtains "on the thread" if you would have them hang true.

The living room table should never be crowded with books. A few are enough.

Try beating carpets and rugs on a set of bed springs. They will look as if done by a professional.

If a rug curls moisten it and wrap it around a broomstick in the opposite way from its trend; then tie and let it dry.

Paint the inside of bureau drawers with white enamel if you would have them always fresh and easy to keep clean.

Black walnut furniture or furniture made of any dark rich wood should be cleaned occasionally with a soft rag dipped in kerosene, then polished with another soft rag.

If your kitchen is small and crowded take out the kitchen table and have a hinged shelf made. A shelf answers every purpose of a table and can be put down out of the way when not in use.

Points for Mothers

The Children's Stockings.

The first requirement in stocking economy is to buy substantial stockings which will wear well. When you buy a new pair of stockings soak them in water for a couple of hours and dry them in the open air. This loosens the texture and softens the threads. Being more pliable, they will wear twice as long.

It is well to buy children's stockings as long as possible. Some careful mothers turn them in around the top, thus doubling that portion of the stocking about the knee. The tops are whipped just below the knee, and loops of tape are sewed on for the stocking supporters.

Certain reliable grades of stockings if treated in this way will last the children two seasons. Of course different weights are worn in winter and summer.

Some mothers lengthen the life of stockings by putting new feet on old legs, others by firmly believing and following the old maxim, "A stitch in time saves nine." The foundation darning stitch is one which all who embroider need to know.

It is a splendid plan to rub the heels and toes of stockings after they have been washed with paraffin. This prevents the sliding of the shoe from wearing a hole in the stocking, as the paraffin has to be worn off first. A person who has to walk very much had better wear thick stockings, as they run less risk of blistered feet.

Colds and Chills.

Colds and chills however slight must not be neglected. "Only a cold," we say and try to still anxiety, but it must be remembered that bronchitis and pneumonia frequently follow close on the footsteps of an apparently simple cold.

At the first sign of a chill give the little one an aperient, then put him in a warm bath with a tablespoonful of mustard in it. Next wrap him warmly in a blanket and give a hot breakfastcupful of nourishing broth; then pop him into a warm bed. If the temperature is normal and there is no sore throat you need not worry. Baby will probably be himself again in the morning.

Children who are susceptible to colds need cod liver oil. The following is a good way to give it them: Thoroughly beat two new laid eggs, add half a teacupful of cod liver oil, stir well, then mix in the same quantity of honey. Add slowly, stirring all the time, the juice of half a lemon. Give the little ones a teaspoonful or two night and morning during the treacherous winds. It will strengthen the constitution, soothe the chest and keep the cold out, and—this is a grand recommendation—it is a nutritive food, not a medicine.

Let Girls Help Mother.

Many girls nowadays suffer from overmothering. They are never given a chance to help in the slightest degree with the running of the house because mother sees to everything. They never do the least little bit of sewing or knitting or mending for themselves because mother always says: "I don't think you can do that, dear. I'll do it for you." At every step they are overshadowed by their too energetic mother.

Consequently they grow up ignorant of the domestic arts. And in after years no one laments their incapacity more than their mother. But, though she acted with the very best intentions, it is really her fault. The children who turn out the best are usually those who are left to fend for themselves a good deal.

When Accidents Happen.

A child should never be whipped for anything done by accident, such as knocking an ornament over, breaking the window or some similar thing which he did not intend to do. Corporal punishment should always be reserved for deliberate and persistent naughtiness, not for mere carelessness.

The second point to remember is never to whip a child while you are angry about his offense. Take time to cool down and consider matters. While you are reflecting the child will probably do the same, and presently you may find that he is really sorry and the whipping is not needed after all.

Baby's Last Meal.

The time for a year old baby's last meal for the day depends somewhat on the baby. If the child appears quite satisfied with supper at 7 p. m. it is sufficient until 7 a. m. the next morning. On the other hand, should baby want to be fed when it awakes at 10 p. m. (and most babies do), it may be given the following: Milk, six tablespoonfuls; water, one tablespoonful; limewater, one tablespoonful; sugar of milk, one teaspoonful.

Blisters on the Lips.

Sulphur is a good, safe corrective for blistered lips, and glycerin and borax should be applied locally. Give the child so afflicted half a teaspoonful of flowers of sulphur in a dessertspoonful of molasses before breakfast. It is an old fashioned remedy, but most effective. Mix half an ounce of borax with two ounces of glycerin and smear on the tongue and lips where blistered.

Jet earrings continue in great favor.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

BOWSER, GOLFER

He Essays a Winter Game to Cure His Rheumatism

By M. QUAD.

MR. BOWSER had come home from the office two hours ahead of time.

"I've got that rheumatism back in my knees again, and I thought I'd work it out," he explained.

"You mean you are going to take massage?" queried Mrs. Bowser.

"Better than massage. I'm going to work the muscles and thus work out the rheumatism. The trouble with me is that I haven't used my legs enough."

"But you don't mean that you are going to climb telegraph poles and jump over fences? If you're going to climb around"—

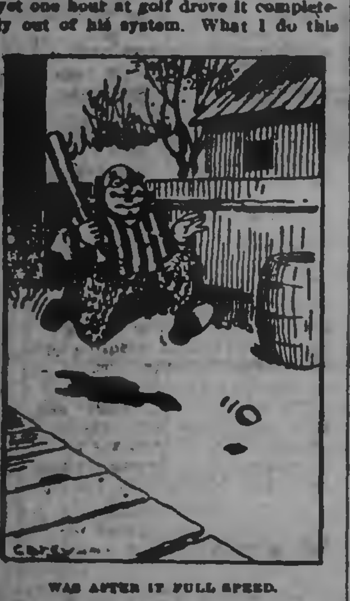
"Who's going to climb?" demanded Mr. Bowser, as his nose began to redden. "You talk as if I were a child or a fool. What I need, and the only thing to cure me, is a quick motion of the knees—so."

And he held up his right leg and worked his foot up and down to illustrate his meaning. Mrs. Bowser couldn't grasp the idea.

"You've heard about golf, of course?" said Mr. Bowser.

"Yes."

"Great exercise. You use your brain and muscle at the same time. I'm going to practice a little golf—fall and winter golf. Robinson had had rheumatism for twenty-eight years, and yet one hour at golf drove it completely out of his system. What I do this evening will be preliminary—just a warning to my pains and aches of what is coming."



WAS AFTER IT FULL SPEED.

"But where are you going to perform?" she asked.

Preliminaries.

"Right out here in our own back yard," he answered. "In a week or so, after I get the hang of things, I shall go up on the links. You know what the links are, don't you? Even if you don't play golf you ought to post up on the terms. There's caddy, links, left field, halfback, upper cut, knuckle down, catch as catch can and I don't know how many more."

"Well, you'll go ahead, of course, but something will happen."

"Yes, something will happen. I'll limber up my knees and be able to jump over the table when I come in. You oppose it, of course, just as you oppose everything else I do, but I'm not going to walk around on a pair of crowbars to please you or anybody else."

Mrs. Bowser argued no further, and Mr. Bowser divested himself of coat, vest and hat, and carried a baseball bat and three or four croquet balls into the back yard. The golf sticks, the balls and the holes and the caddy were to come later on. Before beginning the performance he looked all around to see if the neighbors were interested. As far as he could observe they were not. Not even the head of a hoodlum showed above any of the line fences. Mrs. Bowser was looking out at him from a window, but that didn't count.

"If I'm going to work my knees I've got to get up a run," he mused as he spat on his hands and gripped the bat. "The idea is to whack a ball and follow it up and keep it going and here goes."

He sent the ball flying over the snow as if shot from a cannon, and was after it full speed. It had not ceased rolling when he struck it again and for five minutes he was jumping about like a man working for $40 per day and board and washing thrown in. Then the ball took a fly and crashed through the basement window into the kitchen and struck the cook in the back. She uttered a yell of pain and surprise, and the next instant appeared at the back door to exclaim:

"It's golf, is it! It's golf to hit a poor working girl in the back with a cannon ball. Pay me my wages and I'll leave at once!"

The Cook Is Pacified.

Mrs. Bowser came down and Mr. Bowser came in, and Mrs. Bowser's sympathies, added to Mr. Bowser's promise to raise the girl's wages $4 per month, finally brought about a sort of calm.

"You—you see!" said Mrs. Bowser as he was ready to return to his golf.

"Yes, I see," he replied, "and my legs feel better than for a year before. That was simply an accident. If she'd been attending to her business she'd have dodged."

Two minutes later he was knocking a ball about again, but by this time all the boys in the neighborhood had assembled and were perched on the fences.

"What's de game, cully?" called one.

"De ole man has got de high jinks!" shouted a second.

"Gully gee, but he's as limber as an elephant!" yelled a third.

Mr. Bowser's way was to stand on his dignity and ignore the presence of spectators. He succeeded fairly well for a few minutes and gained unlimited applause. Thereupon he became ambitious to spread himself. He got four balls in motion and followed them about, and his antics and exertions brought him a curtain call every thirty seconds.

The Inevitable Happens.

Mrs. Bowser had thrown up the window to give him another sort of call when the climax came. After giving one of the balls an awful whack he followed it on the jump. It struck the fence with a smash, which provoked enthusiastic and long continued applause from the boys, but it bounded back on a line with Mr. Bowser's solar plexus, and when it struck him he threw up his hands and went down like a log. Twenty boys, Mrs. Bowser and the cook were surrounding the body a minute later. Mrs. Bowser was agitated and hysterical, but the boys were as cool as ice.

"De ole guy's gone, and yer a widder," remarked one in businesslike tones.

"He'll never amble around in dis cold world no more!" added a second.

"All de fun has been razzle dazzle, and I'm goin' to move away!" sighed a third.

There were a clothes basket, an old chair, a lawn mower and a hammock in the yard, and the boys gobbled them up and departed while Mrs. Bowser and the cook were working over Mr. Bowser. In the course of three or four minutes he opened his eyes.

"Well, have you got the rheumatism out of your knee?" queried Mrs. Bowser.

He did not answer. Presently he sat up, looking around, and it all came back to him. Then he got up with unsteady gait and made his way into the house.

"I feared at first that you were killed," remarked Mrs. Bowser.

Mr. Bowser Vents His Anger.

"You feared!" he shouted as he turned on her. "Why don't you say you hoped and expected and that you are grievously disappointed? Who hit me in the back with bricks? Who tried daylight assassination? Woman, I understand. I have the proofs."

"But the ball must have bounded back from the fence," she replied.

"That will do. I know all about bounding balls. It will take me about an hour or so to arrange the papers, and then, Mrs. Bowser—then would be murderess and victim will go their separate ways. If any one calls I shall be in the library, and meanwhile you might occupy your time writing out your confession—your confession that it was a plot to murder me in cold blood."

Brave Little Woman!

"If you don't help to keep down our expenses," he complained, "I shall be driven to desperation."

Tact.

There is a certain middle aged bachelor in this town who makes it a practice never to give a tip at a restaurant or cafe. And he boasts that the waiters think just as well of him and that he never leaves a table without receiving every attention, obsequious bows and a 'Thank you, sir,' from the waiter who has served him.

One who doubted this recently did a little gum shoe act after this tipless customer last week to see if he was telling the truth. And, sure enough, when the luncheon was finished and the exact amount of the check paid all the polite things happened.

Then the amateur detective approached the waiter.

"That man gave you no tip?" he said.

"No, sir," said the waiter.

"And yet you said, 'Thank you, sir,' in a loud tone."

"Yes, sir. Do you think I want other customers to know that some people don't tip?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

New York Lad Makes Up as a Famous Personage.

POSES FOR CHARITY'S SAKE.

Entertainment and Instruction For Children—A Game That Tests the Memory—Some Facts About the Blustering Month of March.

It has long been the custom among the rich people of New York to provide ways and means for raising funds to help the needy. Every winter they give balls, dances, theatrical entertainments, etc., with this worthy purpose in view. Recently a series of tableaux were given in which children took the leading parts. Some of the little folks were dressed and posed to represent noted paintings, while others posed as famous individuals. One of the best of these was the impersonation of George Villiers, first Duke of Buckingham, a famous courtier of the reign of Charles I. Master Walter Maynard portrayed this character, and those who have ever seen a picture of that old time gentleman will agree that Master Maynard made a pretty looking duke.

One Old Ox.

This is a game of memory in which you pay forfeits for mistakes and also for laughing.

The players sit in a circle. One begins by saying solemnly, "One old ox opening oysters." Everybody repeats this in turn. Then she begins again. "One old ox opening oysters; two tired turtles trotting to Trenton." This goes round the circle. The next is, "One old ox opening oysters; two tired turtles trotting to Trenton; three tame tigers taking tea." This is repeated by each one, beginning always with "One old ox" and adding a new alliteration each time. Some examples are given here, but it is more fun to make them up as you go along:

"Four fat friars fishing for frogs."

"Seven salmon sailing southward."

"Ten taciturn tomcats traveling tandem."

"Eight elegant engineers eating early eggs."

"Ten tall tinkers tolling tremendously."

"Five flirting fairies fighting fireflies."

Month of March.

March was called by the ancient Saxons the Lenct monath (Length month), because in that month folks began to clearly notice how the sun rose earlier and sank later each day. It is a blustering, windy month and was named in honor of Mars, the god of war, the strong, ceaseless winds that sweep over the fields and pastures dry out the moisture that fills the ground, and thus it is a month for planting and sowing.

Many of our little neighbors of the woods, like the rabbits, come cautiously out in search of the tender green dainties which March kindly bestows on them.

The sign of the zodiac for March is Aries, the Ram. As the ancients thought of the sun as having horns of light and heat, so the twisted horns of the Ram symbolize the increasing power of the sun's rays in this month. This genial, welcome warmth melts away the last patches of soft snow from the hollows of the fields and places shaded by trees or rocks.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

Showing That Even an Undesirable Cat Has Its Uses.

THEY were talking about the crooked streets that characterize some of the older towns the other night, when Congressman J. Henry Goeke of Ohio was reminded of the conversation between Smith and Jones.

Smith and Jones met in the smoke end of a Pullman car one afternoon and during the gabfest that ensued Smith referred to the town into which he had just moved.

"The streets of the blooming burg," he eloquently described, "are the crookedest of anything in that line on the face of the earth. You many not believe it, but a couple of days after we got there my wife wanted to lose one of our cats and told me to take it over and leave it along the river about a mile distant. Well, sir"—

"I see, old pal," smilingly interjected the other. "That's where you lost the cat all right."

"You've got another guess," returned Smith. "If I hadn't followed the cat I would never have found my way back home."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Involved.

Young Albert was a very practical youth, and everything that he learned at school he endeavored to apply in his daily life and work.

The lad had recently become very friendly with a little boy who had lately moved in that vicinity, and one afternoon his mother asked him if his little playmate was an only child, whereupon Albert looked very wise and triumphant.

"He's got just one sister," he said. "He tried to catch me when he told me he had two half sisters, but I guess I knew enough about fractions for that."—Harper's Monthly.

Tree Roots.

An article by A. Howard in the Agricultural Journal of India describes the attempts made at the Pusa experimental station to protect field crops from injury by the roots of neighboring trees, by digging a deep trench each year between the trees and the adjacent cultivated area. In the case of some trees this plan proved successful, but not in the case of others, such as the pipal, banyan and teak. When the trenches were opened up it was found that the several roots had become connected again. New roots had been formed at the cut extremity. They had grown across the trench, which was twenty-four to thirty inches wide, and united with the severed portion of the root by a process of natural grafting, followed by a rapid thickening of the connections, which attained a thickness of .8 to 1.1 inches in twelve months.

FURTHER INTENTIONS TO PAVING PROGRAM

L. J. COLLING.
Principal of South Central School, elected Secretary of Public School Baseball League.

Probabilities do not Forecast all the Work Being Done This Year

The aldermen took different views last night on the matter of street paving extension, which subject Ald. Duncan introduced by recommending that the following extensions be made to those already passed by Council.

At a former meeting of council it was decided to make the following extensions: Charlotte street from the G.T.R. tracks to Park street and on the same street from George to Water; north on Water to Brock street; north on Aylmer from Charlotte to Brock and the cross streets, Simcoe and Brock.

The New Idea.

Ald. Duncan said ratepayers had asked for further extensions, viz., Aylmer street north to McDonnel St., to George St., and south to Brock; Murray St. from Aylmer to George; Simcoe St. from Water to Queen, north to Hunter and west to Water.

Some Objections.

Ald. Anderson objected to the extension on Simcoe from Water to Queen. Ald. Stratton also objected.

Ald. Johnston questioned the advisability of further work on Hunter east of Water in view of the probabilities of a new bridge. He suggested adding George street from McDonnel to Smith, as it was a main street.

Ald. Anderson said that Hunter St. was also a main thoroughfare and important also because of St. John's Church and the grounds. He objected to the Simcoe St. extension as there were other streets where is was necessary to pave but as the engineer had advised the work already laid out was ample for this year.

Ald. Duffus—We need a lot of it. If the ratepayers want it, give it to them, if we can do it.

People Want it.

Mayor Buller said he had first suggested the extension of Hunter St. Mr. Parsons had informed him that the bridge approach would not be near Queen St. and a great many of the leading citizens had drawn his attention to this section and asked that the work be done. Many people wree driven there to see the church and the beautiful grounds. With the consent of his seconder, Ald. Duncan added the George St. extension to his motion.

Ald. Anderson moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. McIntyre that the Simcoe to Queen extension be struck out. This amendment was defeated, and the motion of Ald. Duncan was carried.

George St. Extension.

The George St. extension in particular will not likely be laid this year. One object in making the addition is to hurry along the water, gas and sewer connections, and complete other work, necessary before paving operations can be proceeded with.

A Word of Caution.

Mayor Buller gave a word or Caution on account of the condition of the money market. Other muncipalities were holding down.

Ald. Anderson supplemented these statements by adding that "We're adding to the debt by making further extensions in paving." He would lay down a reasonable amount.

TOOK ADVICE OF CHANCELLOR

Father and Son Reach an Agreement in Their Dispute

Acting on the advice of His Lordship Sir John Boyd the parties in the action of Elliott v. Elliott settled the case without going to trial yesterday afternoon, thereby closing the spring session of the high court assizes. The action was launched by George Elliott against his son William M. Elliott to set aside the conveyance of lands to the defendant. Peck, Kerr and McElderry acted for the plaintiff and G. N. Gordon for the defendant. The terms of settlement were not announced.

Some time ago the plaintiff who is a farmer of the vicinity deeded his farm to his son. In the agreement the son agreed to pay his father $200 a year should the father decide to cease residing with his son. A quarrell arose a year ago and since then the father who is more than seventy years of age has been residing with a sister. The plaintiff set forth in his statement of claim that at the time he conveyed the property he was not in the best of health and therefore incompetent. The defense claimed that the plaintiff was in full control of his faculties and also it was through his own error he left the son's farm. The settlement provides that the father will remain with his sister and it is understood the allowance from the son will be somewhat more than $200.

His Lordship expressed satisfaction at the outcome of the case and stated it was one of a nature in which every effort should be made to eliminate court procedure and he was glad to know the parties had taken that course.

STREET WATERING SUNDAY MORNINGS

Sprinkling to Be Carried Out at Early Hour.

Speaking of street watering, Ald. Anderson, said last night that he would not like to see the watering carts out on Sunday. He would sprinkle the streets late Saturday night.

The Board of Works contained a recommendation that the business section be sprinkled on Sunday and it was adopted.

Ald. Duncan explained that it was not intended to have the carts out to any great extent. The work would be done early in the morning so as to minimize the nuisance for people worshipping in the central churches.

The above advertisement appeared in the Daily Mail of London.

Major Meiklejohn was attending an inspection in Hyde Park last June when his horse bolted. To avoid some children he put the animal at the railings but it failed to clear them and he was fatally injured.

THE IMPERIAL HOME RE-UNION

Passed Recommendation to Bring Out Three Persons

The Advisory Committee of the Imperial Home-Re-Union met at the office of G. N. Gordon and passed recommendations for to bring to Peterborough three persons upon the application of local residents. On account of industrial conditions this winter not being the best the Imperial Home Re-Union did not encourage the coming to Peterborough of the families of British workingmen in the Old Country. However the persons who are coming under the auspices of the Association now are those who can take positions at their various trades and in no case likely to find themselves without work when they reach Peterborough.

APPEAL MAY BE ENTERED

COUNSEL FOR M. J. QUIGLEY WRITES FOR COPY OF EVIDENCE

G. N. Gordon, who appeared for M. J. Quigley in the action of Brightman and Quigley, heard at the high court yesterday, is considering an appeal against the judgment of His Lordship Chancellor Sir John Boyd, who gave judgment for the plaintiff, Thomas Brightman.

Mr. Gordon has written to Toronto for a copy of the evidence, and will decide on future action after thoroughly considering it. The action in question was for the return of money loaned.

NO HOPE HELD OUT FOR NEARLY TWO HUNDRED ENTOMBED MINERS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Eccles, West Va., April 29.—One hundred and ninety men entombed and given up as dead, eleven known dead and sixty-one rescued alive is the latest report as the result of an explosion which wrecked No. 5 mine and damaged No. 6 mine of the New River Collieries Company here yesterday. The entrance of the two mines are far apart, but the workings come close together, and when the dust exploded in No. 5, the fumes entered No. 6, and there the eleven known dead perished. Many of those rescued are severely burned.

General Manager Bayles said at midnight that he believed the 190 men known to be still in No. 5 had perished, and this belief is also accepted by mining experts and by the missing men's relatives. It is not believed that one man in No. 5 escaped, as the flames followed immediately on the explosion.

GOVERNMENT'S PROPOSAL TO HELP C.N.R. WILL SAFEGUARD INTERESTS OF THE PEOPLE

SPLENDID PLAN HAS BEEN EVOLVED

Ottawa, April 29.—Interviewed to-day by your correspondent, relative to the C.N.R. situation, Mr. J. H. Burnham said:

"The statement that I left the caucus yesterday, appearing in different newspapers, as a protest against the announcement by the Government of its proposition regarding the C.N.R. difficulty, is absolutely false. When, however, we see Hon. W. T. White, Hon. Robt. Rogers, Hon. A. Meighen and others charged with the same thing, in various papers, we can only wonder at the so-called enterprise of press agencies.

"The Government's proposal will be found to be a complete safeguarding of the public interests. Something had to be done, and I believe a splendid plan has been evolved: No Government can sidestep the people's interests for its own convenience."

HOPE TO PROROGUE THIS AFTERNOON

Canadian Press Despatch

Toronto, April 29.—After rejecting at twenty minutes to three this morning, Mr. Bowman's motion for an inquiry regarding the Inspector Snider case by seventy-six to eighteen, the legislature sat until four, and then adjourned until noon with the hope of being able to prorogue this afternoon.

SUPPLY OF COAL.

Scott and Co. and W. J. Wolstenholm will supply the municipal coal demands at $6.75 per ton. The contract was awarded last night.

SCAVENGERS PAY $1.

Scavengers hereafter will have to take out a license at $1. A by-law passed last night by the Council places all scavengers under the eye of the Sanitary Inspector, who hopes to control a situation which in the past has not been satisfactory.

MANY NEW TELEPHONES

BELL COMPANY WILL EXTEND IN SMITH, EMILY AND MONAGHAN.

BIG CITY INCREASE.

Estimates for nearly one hundred telephones to be installed throughout Smith, Emily and North Monaghan were received by Manager G. O. Cameron of the Bell Telephone Company this morning.

The work of making the extensions will be commenced immediately, and gangs of men are being dispatched to the districts.

So far this year the city increase in telephones has averaged fully thirty per month.

$50 GRANT FOR BOARD OF TRADE

To Help Boost Peterboro at Ad. Club Convention at Toronto

The City Council last night passed a grant of $50 for the Board of Trade to assist in the advertising of the City, which is the purpose of the Board, at the convention of Ad. Clubs in Toronto, in June.

The Board has secured a booth and will display in this space, photographs of local manufacturing concerns, and views of Peterboro. They will also boost the city as an excursion centre.

There will be 5,000 representatives from manufacturing concerns in Canada and the United States, at the convention, and in all 15,000 men who will represent various interests.

The Board will use $50 of its own funds. They would also distribute to advantage some of the souvenirs being published by the Salvation Army.

President B. D. Hall and two of his lieutenants, Messrs. G. O. Cameron and J. A. McNabb, addressed the Council, and at the conclusion, Mayor Buller said he was in perfect sympathy.

"It should be granted," said Ald. Duncan.

The motion, providing the grant of $50, was moved by Ald. Johnston and seconded by Ald. Duncan.

Ald. Johnston said the proposal to distribute some of the souvenirs was a good suggestion.

STEAMER IS LOST WITH ALL ABOARD

Life Savers Were Foiled, Owing to the Heavy Sea

WRECKAGE ASHORE

Canadian Press Despatch

Duluth, April 29.—The steamer Benjamin Noble has been lost off here with all on board, numbering twenty. Life savers were unable to launch a boat, owing to the heavy sea. Wreckage has come ashore at Spark Point.

SITUATION IN TROUBLE ZONE

THREE OR FOUR DAYS BEFORE ANOTHER MOVE IN MEXICO.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Washington, April 29.—Scores of Americans, continuing their hurried departure from Mexico, General Funston's troops completing the occupation of Vera Cruz, and representatives of South American republics resuming peace negotiations at Argentine Legation, sums up the Mexican situation this morning. The next move will probably not occur for three or four days.

Constitutionalist forces continue a desultory attack on Tampico. Commander Tweedie, of the British cruiser Essex, who went to Mexico City to intercede for foreigners held there has returned to Vera Cruz and announces that he received assurances from Huerta and his ministers they would release the American prisoners, and that all desiring to do so might leave, but their trains would not be provided with an escort. Commander Tweedie did not find it easy work, and had to call in the assistance of the British Ambassador, who was visibly annoyed upon leaving the office of the Mexican Foreign Minister.

FORMER GOVERNOR GENERAL IS ILL

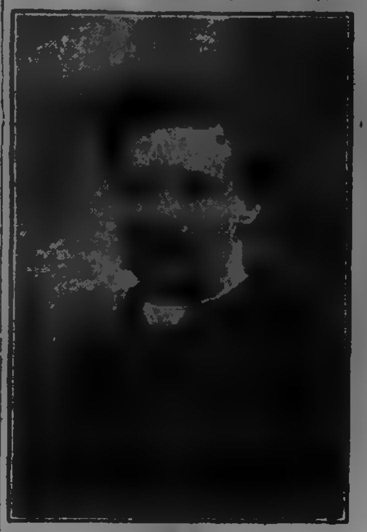
Canadian Press Despatch

London, April 29.—The Duke of Argyle, formerly Governor-General of Canada, is seriously ill from double pneumonia.



REV. J. G. POTTER.
Of Montreal, a former minister at St. Andrew's, who will preach at the anniversary services on Sunday, May 3rd.

RADIAL COMPANY NOW WORKING AT THE C.P.R. STATION

The Peterboro Raidial Company has closed that section of their track between the C. P. R. tracks and King Street on George, and are laying the heavier steels to be in readiness for the laying of the pavement. Their work between McDonnel and Brock Streets has been completed and while the pavement is being laid in that section they intend having the bricks placed between the rails on the track from Charlotte Street. This will leave but the one break in the service.

When the section between King and the C. P. R. is completed, the part from King north to the end of last year's operations will be started. It will be the most difficult, as the traffic at the corner of Charlotte and George is very heavy.

The last excavation on George Street from McDonnel to the C. P. R. is at present under way between King and Sherbrooke Streets. The sewer main along that section has enough to dispose of, so surface drainage is being placed a few feet underground and connected to the creek running across Sherbrooke Street. This will drain the road for that block and thus lighten the volume of the sewer.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES

The Act respecting the City of Peterborough received its third reading last night and will no doubt receive the Royal Assent in the course of a day or two.

The Bill substitutes for the name of the Water Commissioners, the name, The Peterborough Utilities Commission, as that body will now have not only control of the water supply system, but also all the municipal electric power and lighting system.

The new Act makes clear that the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company which the City can expropriate is the distributing plant of that Company owned by them in April, 1912, and the additions made thereto since that time.

The Act also requires the Company within one month after it comes in force to furnish to the City a complete inventory of such property and further provides that the City upon passing a by-law for that purpose may on ten days' notice take possession of all such property on giving security for payment of the value thereof, which value is to be determined by arbitration in the usual way.

A change in the law which may be interesting to persons proposing to lay out roads upon their property will also shortly come into force. Under the present law a road less than 66 feet wide cannot be laid out either by a private individual or by the municipality. The change about to be made will provide that a road of a less width can be established if the consent thereto of the Provincial Municipal Railway Board is obtained and approval of the Municipal Council is obtained.

BOOK AGENT WILL TAKE OUT LICENSE

Business With Local Customers Will Continue Without Interruption

A book agent named L. A. Fisher, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on the charge of selling books without a license, contrary to the Transient and Traders Act. The case was adjourned until Friday, meanwhile the defendant having given sufficient security will continue his business. Evidently it is a case of mistake. The defendant in court this morning claimed that he had been selling books for some time in Canada and had never before had any trouble by not taking out a license. The firm had sold books here for fully ten years without a license.

Mr. Fisher informed the Review that he would take out a license and his business here will continue.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 29, 1914

LEADER ROWELL AT GUELPH.

MR. N. W. ROWELL, leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, has received a letter of recommendation from the Globe. That newspaper hails him as the coming Premier. As long as he is only the coming Premier he is quite harmless, and we have no wish to see him lose that title. As leader of the Liberals he is certainly the best man they have had for a long day, but the necessity to serve mere party interests has led him into the usual inconsistencies and platitudes of Liberal leaders.

Thus, when he was stumping at Guelph the other day, he held that the Whitney Government's appropriation of one million dollars for a prison farm was a fallacy and that abolition of the bar would be better. He stated that the bar was responsible for fifty per cent. of the prisoners being at the farm. He expressed appreciation of the work of reforming the prisoners but prevention is better than cure. He further amplified his banish the bar policy by declaring that club licenses would be also abolished.

In the very first instance Mr. Rowell claims too much for his policy. Recall how Cobden once extolled the advantages of Free Trade in England, and how very far short he was from realizing his prophecies. All nations did not become free traders nor were swords beaten into ploughshares. So with Mr. Rowell's policy. He proposes to legislate out of existence in a single day the evils that have been here for ages, evils that went unnoticed only half a century ago. He says 50 per cent. of the men on the prison farm are there through drink, and even admitting this statement to be true which it is not literally, banishing the bar would not make a prison farm unnecessary. It would not prevent men from getting drunk for Mr. Rowell says the liquor question is not one of prohibition. He has never said that liquor stores will be abolished. Men will be able to buy liquor whenever they want it and no one has said that the number of liquor store licenses would not be increased. The same cause for a prison farm still exists and would be necessary were every bar in the Province refused a license. Rowell's banish the bar policy has never been shown to be capable of clearing prison farms of drunks. It has not been shown to be capable of regenerating the wayward and down fallen although he preaches it as an apostle of good tidings. The glaring inconsistency in his whole policy is to claim for it the power to keep men sober and righteous while leaving liquor stores under their noses—stores well stocked with every quality and kind of booze, sufficient to satisfy the most fastidious taste.

Place beside this programme the Whitney-Hanna policy. Where conditions warrant it, total prohibition is provided in the Local Option Act. Where there is not Local Option a restrictive policy is vigorously enforced. Places of reform are established. In other words Rowell's policy attempts to anticipate public opinion, and is, therefore immature, while the Conservative policy runs with public sentiment. If history teaches anything it shows that legislation must have public sentiment behind it to make it safe and effective. That is the Conservative position.

FARMERS' BANK DEPOSITORS.

DEPOSITORS in the Farmers' Bank will be gratified to know that the Hon. W. T. White is taking measures to secure them against loss. The Conservative Minister of Finance has given notice that he will move the following resolution: "That it is expedient to provide that there may be paid and applied from and out of the consolidated revenue fund of Canada a sum not exceeding in the whole $1,200,000 to pay to persons who were creditors for money on deposit in the Farmers' Bank of Canada the respective amounts standing to their credit in the books of the bank when the bank suspended payment."

The lack of security for depositors' money has always seemed to many people an injustice. When hundreds, or perhaps thousands of persons placed the savings of years in a chartered institution and have them swept away by such ruthless methods as those adopted by the manager of the Farmers' Bank, the lack of redress appears to be an injustice. The people seem to be open to exploitation by unscrupulous bank managers. The law attempts to safeguard, to a certain extent, the depositor in upholding the face value of the paper currency, in necessitating a government deposit, in requesting a large minimum capital with which to start a bank and in demanding the double liability of all stockholders. The banking law has not looked to the depositor, but first to the note holder and to a substantial basis for the foundation and conduct of a bank's affairs. As the law stands, a depositor is quite safe, for a bank that is operated according to law will be a successful and a safe bank—that is successful and safe as it is humanly possible to be. When a bank manager breaks the law and wrecks the institution, those who lose their money, as depositors sometimes do, suffer, not from unjust banking laws, but from the consequences of one man's evil acts. A man who suffers loss from robbery does not blame the law or the government if these exist in proper operation, but the baseness of the thief. That is why depositors have lost money in other bank failures and not been recompensed by the government.

There is another reason why a depositor is not reimbursed for loss. He is a lender when he deposits money in a bank. A lender places his funds for gain and must take the risk arising from investment.

The chartering of a bank is a detail that complicates the problem, because it gives a bank the government's stamp of approval. A private bank may be good or bad, the government grants it no charter, and beyond the laws of exchange has little responsibility. But a chartered bank has government approval which means that the Minister of Finance has examined its affairs and grants it a charter as an approved institution. That is the principle that the Hon. W. T. White has recognized in granting relief to depositors of the Farmers' Bank. The Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, in Laurier's cabinet, granted a certificate to this bank in spite of various warnings as to the dangerous character of the undertaking. In this case the government is responsible for the ruin caused to the extent of granting it a charter when such should not have been given it. The Hon. Mr. White is thus not creating a dangerous precedent to reimburse persons for financial loss when they are not entitled to it. He is merely making good the government's obligations arising out of a serious mistake of the last Liberal Minister of Finance.

COURTESY.

TO EVERY EMPLOYE of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways a message has been sent out from the president's office. This message deals with "efficiency and courtesy," and is signed by Mr. E. J. Chamberlain, President of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways. Courtesy is a quality not strained. It is twice blessed, blessing the possessor and the persons met. It should be instilled into every child in the home, not kicked into half grown folks by hard knocks from the world. Mr. Chamberlain's message is worthy of imitation by employers throughout Canada. Good manners include courtesy and too often in this country business is made boorish by fresh youths who have not been taught to respect the rights and feelings of others. The President's two messages are worth noting.

> "The railroad man has a great opportunity for passing out kindness and good will. He comes in contact with every kind and condition of individual; the old, the young, the rich, the poor, the illiterate, the learned, the happy, the prosperous, and those in defeat, saturated with sorrow and distress; he sees them all and through intuition knows to which class they belong. A smile, a kind word, or a kindness done to any of these, cannot fail to leave its impression for good, and this good cannot help but expand. Try it."
> "The needs and wishes of shippers and consignees should be anticipated as much as possible. When cars are ordered the matter should receive close attention and in case it is not possible to furnish as ordered, shipper should be notified, so he may arrange his plans accordingly; he should be made to feel that you are interested in his welfare, and that his business is worthy of consideration. Do not discommode a shipper, because of some omission of his own, but try to help him out. Railroads are the servants of the public, and it is their duty to serve well."

Sir Wilfrid is Considerate.
Montreal Gazette (Con.)

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's amendment offered in the House of Commons on Thursday calls not for a considerable, but for a "considerate" removal of taxation. The word is a new one to use in such a connection. It might be harder to define than was the word "adequate," which Conservatives were once given to advancing as the measure of the protection they thought Canadian interests should receive in the tariff. It has one advantage, however, that may make up for its lack of exactness. It permits believers in protection for steel, like Mr. Carroll, of Cape Breton, and believers in no protection for manufacture of steel, like Mr. Clark, of Red Deer, to vote together. Perhaps that was why the word was selected.

Frederick Weyerhaeuser.
Colliers.

He came to this country as a laborer. When he married he was earning a dollar a day working on the slab pile of a sawmill at Rock Island. Those who appraise his fortune, largely invested in growing timber, as potentially worth a billion dollars, do undoubtedly exaggerate—but the figure itself is not material. From a brewery hand to one of the richest men in the world is the span of the career of Frederick Weyerhaeuser. By our laws we threw away the legitimate interest of the people in our great forests, and Mr. Weyerhaeuser picked it up. That a German immigrant boy could amass such a fortune in fifty years is quite to his credit, but it is vastly more to the discredit of our laws which allowed him to do it. He died the greatest monopolist of our forests, but it was not the fault of Weyerhaeuser that we threw them away. He took them over, and is said to have been rather in advance of the age in conserving them. Possibly it is better for the nation for a Weyerhaeuser to own forty million dollars' worth of our children's heritage in forests and mines than to have it distributed among four hundred less efficient men, each owning timber lands to the value of a hundred thousand dollars. Whether this great natural resource belongs in morals to the Weyerhaeuser heirs is a question for the future. The generation which allowed him to acquire the title to it acted for itself—and professedly for all future generations; but future generations were not consulted, and may have something to say for their claims. "The earth hath He given to the children of men"—not some of the children of men, and not alone to the generation of the children of men who allowed Mr. Weyerhaeuser to acquire the paper title to the forests of a continent. The future will probably try titles with the Weyerhaeusers and their like in one way or another.

BLEAK DAYS
By Walt Mason

The clouds are gray and grim today, the winds are sadly sighing; it seems like fall, and over all a sheet of gloom is lying. The dreary rain beats on the pane, and sounds a note of sorrow; but what's the odds? The genial gods will bring us joy tomorrow. We have the mumps, the doctor humps himself around to cure it; we're on the blink and often think we simply can't endure it; to all who list we groan, I wist, and tell a hard luck story; but why be vexed? Week after next we'll all be hunkdory. The neighbor folks are tiresome blokes, they bore us and annoy us; with such folks near it's amply clear that no one can be joyous; things would improve if they would move—we really do not need them; but let's be gay! They'll move away, and worse ones will succeed them. The world seems sad, sometimes, my lad, and life is a disaster; but do not roar; for every sore tomorrow brings a plaster. The fool, he kicks against the pricks, all optimism scorning; the wise man goes his way—he knows joy cometh in the morning.

Birthdays of Note

WEDNESDAY, APRIL TWENTY-NINTH

EDWARD FEILD HEBDEN, who succeeded George Hague as general manager of the Merchants Bank of Canada nine years ago, was born in Hamilton sixty-three years ago to-day. He entered the service of the Bank, with which he is still associated when he was twenty and rose through the various ranks to his present position. He is a man of quiet, retiring disposition, intent on his own affairs, though he has shown considerable interest in hospital work. He likes hunting and fishing and belongs to several clubs where he can enjoy these sports; he also plays golf at the Mount Royal Club in Montreal.

BYE-ELECTIONS

Deaths in British Commons Lend Excitement to Situation

LONDON, April 29. — The death yesterday of W. E. Harvey, the miners' representative from Northeast Derbyshire, creates a vacancy in the Parliamentary representation of Northeast Derbyshire. The late member's majority was 1,750 over Dr. Court, local Unionist, who has several times contested the seat. The bye-election will be rather piquant. Harvey joined the labor party, but supported Barnet Kenyon, in the neighboring Ilkeston division, who is now classed as a Liberal.

Both sides in Grimsby are unprepared for an election through the death of Sir George Doughty. Sir Berkeley Sheffield is spoken of as the Unionist candidate. The Grimsby contest is certain to be a momentous one. The Radicals already are prophesying the winning of the seat, seeing that Doughty had a peculiar hold on the constituency's favor which another Unionist is unlikely to maintain.

Still Wrangling Over Terms.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 29. — The offer of Major R. W. Leonard of a military residence at Queen's University over which there has been much controversy, was discussed at a meeting of the council of university yesterday afternoon. No recommendation was made, the matter being left over for the trustees to decide at the meeting to-day.

The council is divided on the question, one half holding that Queen's should have full control of management while others claim the board of control should be equally divided between members of the militia and the college.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

A military aviator named Wally was killed in the fall of his aeroplane at the aerodrome in Vienna yesterday.

Charles Stiff, 73 years of age, for many years secretary of the Board of Trade of Hamilton, died there yesterday.

W. P. Bailey, of St. Thomas, has been appointed purchasing agent of Fort William, Ont., at a salary of $1,800 per annum.

Magistrate Boulter, of Welland, an autoist, was in the St. Catharines police court yesterday charged with violating the bylaw prohibiting passing a funeral.

Chas. C. Roystone, an aviator, fell 600 feet at Domingues Junction, south of Los Angeles, yesterday and was so badly injured that he died shortly afterward.

Decreased membership and improved finances were reported by the officers yesterday in Boston at the meeting of the Grand Lodge, Ancient Order of United Workmen.

Jas. A. Publow, one of the original members and founders of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, died in Hamilton yesterday. He was born in Perth, Ont., 59 years ago.

Loosened by rain and warm weather, boulders slid down from the hills beside the C. P. R. tracks, 100 miles east of Fort William, shortly after midnight, blocking all traffic.

Ten graduates of medicine at Queen's University are the latest to offer themselves for service in Mexico. They have asked the U. S. Consul at Kingston for a place on the medical corps.

TROOPS ARE SENT.

Wilson Orders Federal Forces To the Scene of Strike Riots.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—On the urgent request of Governor Elias M. Ammons of Colorado, President Wilson yesterday ordered Federal troops sent to the scene of strike disorder, and issued a proclamation directing all persons "engaged in or connection with said domestic violence" to retire peaceably to their homes on or before April 30. Secretary of War Garrison at once directed the 2nd Squadron, 5th Cavalry, at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, under command of Major Lucius R. Holbrook, to go to Trinidad, Colo., and troops E. and H, 12th Cavalry, at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyom., under Major Nathaniel F. McClure to Canyon City, Colo. These troops, which will go out without their horses, will arrive probably some time to-day.

The President made it plain in his proclamation, and in a long telegram to Governor Ammons, that the Federal Government was taking no sides in the dispute. The proclamation enjoins "good citizens of the United States against aiding, countenancing, sheltering or taking part in such unlawful proceedings."

British Baptist Fund.

LONDON, April 29.—The Baptists of Great Britain Monday night celebrated by a great mass meeting in Albert Hall the completion of the fund of $750,000 to provide more adequate stipends for the ministers of the church. At present 140 ministers receive less than $375 yearly, while 700 are paid less than $750.

There is some heart-burning amongst the more strict members of the denomination, because it is claimed that participation in the benefits of the fund means control of the individual minister by the board of trustees.

COWARDICE COURT
BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

"I say, what the deuce do you suppose the confounded savage has in mind?" exclaimed the duke. "I've heard of the way these cowboys settle their affairs. You don't imagine"—and he paused significantly.

"It looks like it's going to be a da— rather disagreeable affair," said De Peyton sourly.

"Good heavens! What are we to do if he comes here with a lot of desperadoes and begins to shoot?" cried Mrs. Odwell, genuinely alarmed. "I've read so much of these awful mountain feuds."

"Don't be alarmed. Lord Bazelhurst will attend to the gentleman," said Lady Evelyn blandly. His lordship's monocle clattered down and the ice rattled sharply in his glass.

"To—to be sure," he agreed. "Don't be in the least worried. I'll attend to the upstart. What time's he coming, Pen?"

A door banged noisily near by, and every one jumped as though a gun had been fired. While the "Ohs!" were still struggling from their lips Hodder, the butler, came into the room, doing his best to retain his composure under what seemed to be trying circumstances.

"What is it, Hodder?" demanded her ladyship.

"The cook, your ladyship. She's fallen downstairs and broken her leg," announced Hodder. He did not betray it, but he must have been tremendously surprised by the sigh of relief that went up on all sides. Lord Bazelhurst went so far as to laugh.

"Ha, ha! Is that all?"

"Oh, dear, I'm so glad!" cried Miss Folsom impulsively. "I was frightened half to death. It might have been Mr."—

"Don't be silly, Rose," said Lady Bazelhurst. "Where is she, Hodder?"

"In the laundry, your ladyship. There are two fractures."

"By Jove, two legs instead of one, then. Worse than I thought," cried Bazelhurst, draining his glass.

"Send at once for a doctor, Hodder, and take her to her room. Isn't it annoying?" said her ladyship. "It's so difficult to keep a cook in the mountains."

"Don't see how she can get away without legs," observed De Peyton.

"I'll come with you, Hodder. Perhaps I can do something for her," said Penelope, following the butler from the room.

"Don't take too many patients on your hands, my dear," called the mistress with a shrill laugh.

"Yes. Remember tomorrow," added the duke. Then suddenly, "I believe I'll lend a hand." He hurried after Penelope rather actively for him.

CHAPTER V.

"I shall go tonight."

LORD BAZELHURST visited his wife's room later in the night, called there by a peremptory summons. Cecil had been taking time by the forelock in anticipation of Shaw's descent in the morning and was inclined to jocundity.

"Cecil, what do you think of Penelope's attitude toward Mr. Shaw?" she asked, turning away from the window which looked out over the night in the direction of Shaw's place.

"I didn't know she had an attitude," replied he, trying to focus his wavering gaze upon her.

"She meets him clandestinely and she supports him openly. Isn't that an attitude, or are you too drunk to see it?"

"My dear, remember you are speaking of my sister," he said with fine dignity but little discrimination. "Besides, I am not too drunk. I do see it. It's a demmed annoying attitude. She's a traitor, un'stand me? A trai-to-ter. I intend to speak to her about it."

"It is better that you should do it," said his wife. "I am afraid I could not control my temper."

"Penelope's a disgrace—an absolute disgrace. How many legs did Hodder say she'd—she'd broken?"

"Oh, you're disgusting!" cried Lady Evelyn. "Go to bed! I thought I could talk to you tonight, but I can't. You scarcely can stand up."

"Now, Evelyn, you do me injustice. I'm only holding to this chair to keep it from moving 'round the room. See that? Course I c'n stan' up!" he cried triumphantly.

"I am utterly disgusted with you. Oh, for a man! A man with real blood in his veins, a man who could do something besides eat and drink at my cost. I pay your debts, clothe you, feed you—house your ungrateful sister—and what do I get in return? This!"

Lord Bazelhurst's eyes steadied beneath this unexpected assault, his legs stiffened, his shoulders squared themselves in a pitiful attempt at dignity.

"Lady Bazelhurst, you—you"—and then he collapsed into the chair, bursting into maudlin tears. She stood over by the dressing table and looked pitilessly upon the weak creature whose hiccoughing sobs filled the room. Her color was high, her breathing heavy.

There came a knock at the door, but she did not respond. Then the door opened quietly and Penelope entered the room, resolutely, fearlessly. Evelyn turned her eyes upon the intruder and stared for a moment.

"Did you knock?" she asked at last.

"Yes. You did not answer."

"Wasn't that sufficient?"

"Not tonight, Evelyn. I came to have it out with you and Cecil. Where is he?"

"There!"

"Asleep?" with a look of amazement.

"I hope not. I should dislike having to call the servants to carry him to his room."

"I see. Poor old chap!" She went over and shook him by the shoulder. He sat up and stared at her blankly through his drenched eyes. Then, as if the occasion called for a supreme effort, he tried to rise, ashamed that his sister should have found him in his present condition. "Don't get up, Cecil. Wait a bit and I'll go to your room with you."

"What have you to say to me, Penelope?" demanded Evelyn, a green light in her eyes.

"I can wait. I prefer to have Cecil —understand," she said bitterly.

"If it's about our affair with Shaw it won't make any difference whether Cecil understands or not. Has your friend asked you to plead for him? Does he expect me to take him up on your account and have him here?"

"I was jesting when I said he would come tomorrow," said Penelope, ignoring the thrust and hurrying to her subject. "I couldn't go to sleep tonight if I neglected to tell you what I think of the outrage this morning. You and Cecil had no right to order Tompkins to shoot at Mr. Shaw. He is not a trespasser. Some one killed his dog today. When he pursued the coward a second shot was fired at him. He was wounded. Do you call that fair fighting? Ambushed, shot from behind a tree. I don't care what you and Cecil think about it, I consider it despicable. Thank God, Cecil was not really to blame. It is about the only thing I can say to my brother's credit."

Lady Bazelhurst was staring at her young sister-in-law with wide eyes. It was the first time in all her petted, vain life that any one had called her to account. She was at first too deeply amazed to resent the sharp attack.

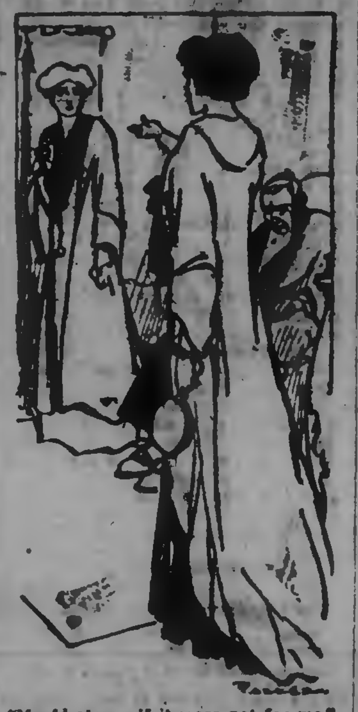
"Penelope Drake!" was all she could say. Then the fury in her soul began to search for an outlet. "How dare you? How dare you?"

"I don't mean to hurt you. I am only telling you that your way of treating this affair is a mistake. It can be rectified. You don't want to be lawless; you don't understand what a narrow escape from murder you have had. Evelyn, you owe reparation to Mr. Shaw. He is"—

"I understand why you take his side. You cheapen and degrade yourself and you bring shame upon your brother and me by your disgraceful affair with this ruffian. Don't look shocked. You meet him secretly, I know. How much further you have gone with him I don't know. It is enough that you"—

"Stop! You shall not say such things to me!"

"You came in here to have it out with me. Well, we'll have it out. You think because you're English, and all that, that you are better than I. You show it in your every action; you turn up your nose at me because I am an American. Well, what if I am? Where would you be if it were not for me? And where would he be? You'd starve if it were not for me. You hang to me like a leech—you sponge on me—you gorge yourself"—



"You'd starve if it were not for me."

"That is enough, Evelyn. You have said all that is necessary. I deserve it, too, for meddling in your affairs. It may satisfy you to know that I have always despised you. Having confessed, I can only add that we cannot live another hour under the same roof. You need not order me to go. I shall do so of my own accord—gladly." Penelope turned to the door. She was as cold as ice.

"It is the first time you have ever done anything to please me. You may go in the morning."

"I shall go tonight!"

"As you like. It is near morning. Where do you expect to go at this hour of the night?"

"I am not afraid of the night. Tomorrow I shall send over from the village for my trunks." She paused near the door and then came back to Cecil's side. "Goodby, Cecil. I'll write. Goodby." He looked up with a hazy smile. "G'night," he muttered thickly.

To be Continued.

Spanish Prisoner Again.

The Spanish prisoner is at it again. Once more letters are being sent to Canadians offering $160,000 reward if the party would help him to recover a portmanteau containing secret papers which would realise $480,000. The party wishing to help is requested to cable first.

This old fraud has been carried on for years, and many people have been asked to help Mr. Ivanovitch, the poor Russian banker, who is the imprisoned suppliant.

Halifax to Have Seawall.

Contractors are organizing to commence the construction of a mile of seawall, forty feet high from the bottom and on two great piers, the whole of which construction work will cost $5,000,000. Public expenditures of considerable magnitude are under way, and the work on the railways connecting the I.C.R. with the site of the new terminals has been rapidly going on through the winter season.

INDIAN LIFE.

Priceless Records of Canadian Artists Now in Ontario Museum.

On the walls of two of the large rooms of the new Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto, there is spread out a history of Indian life in Canada on canvas, which forms one of the most valuable treasures of which the city can boast. They are the combined paintings of Paul Kane, Edmund Morris, and John Catlin, the gift to Toronto of Sir Edmund Osler, and there are 190 paintings in all. Many of these have hung until recently on the walls of University College, where they were not so accessible to the Toronto public as their broad historic value deserves.

They are a prairie breeze medley of G. A. Henty and Fennimore Cooper, with only two detractions. One is their sad lack of heart interest; only one squaw being visible, and that one absolutely impossible. The other is that they are evidently historically accurate.

In the sixty-odd paintings by Edmund Morris, the student of physiognomy may form a different theory as to the origin of Lo, the poor Indian, each time he wanders past. All of these paintings are life portraits of Chieftains of the Plains Tribes. When it is remembered that evolutionists are already preparing to say good-bye to the last redman as he steps off into the setting sun, the value of these splendid portraits to future Canada will be seen.

First are the Blackfoot Indians, and their terribly slanted foreheads have the stamp of the negroid races. In the race of the Crees are the high-bridged noses identical with the race which takes all our sneers and our money back to Jerusalem, while the slanted eyebrows, long, sharp eyes, and high cheekbones of the Assiniboine tribes only need a coating of powder to pose for Japan.

And over all the faces is the black tragedy of the people who asked no mercy because they showed none, and who froze, starved, or burned themselves to the Happy Hunting Grounds in gloomy calm and dignity, until the white man brought the fire-water.

"Stapiedlamsink," is the name of one solemn-eyed Cree person, and this on being translated reads: "Slow coming over the hill," but it was probably the name which delayed him. "Man Sitting in the Middle of the Sun," "Man Standing Above Ground," and "Man Who Ties the Knot," are some others of the chiefs represented, but the face of one called "Pound Maker," unless the artist idealized it, carries all the poetry and blackness of the Indians' losing game in his fathomless eyes.

Apart from the historic value, the paintings of Morris are splendidly executed, very little dress detail being used, lest it detract from the centre theme, the spirit of the Indian race.

The Paul Kane pictures of life among the Indians make it very evident that these artists lived for years with the Indian tribes to become imbued with their life. They breathe the open air of the larger Canada. Few of them are remarkable from the artists' viewpoint, but they all lean together and shout "Canada" till the walls fade away and you hear running water dashing through little rocky crevices and over sheer rocks while the sun weaves rainbows through its thin green mist. Then crouched in the grass, just safe, you watch the wide red tongue of flame lick the green covering from the prairies. "Indian Summer" can almost stand up for criticism, with a brown mist of water, grey-green frost-bitten meadows, and a wet, pink, mournful sky.

The buffalo predominates on the canvasses of Catlin, a weird sketch showing the artist and a hunter disguised in wolf skins lying close to the herd in order to sketch them.

Move Dead by Night.

In future the bodies of persons dying at the Toronto General Hospital will be removed from that institution after nightfall, whenever such an arrangement can be made with the relatives of the deceased. Sensitive persons who have seen bodies removed from the hospital in the day time have complained of the unpleasantness of seeing the passing of the dead, and the authorities have wisely decided to curtail that awesome sight as far as possible in the future.

Should Beat Wife Once a Month.

Joseph Wyseluk appeared in the Hamilton police court recently charged with assaulting his wife. Doctors told of the woman's injuries. Through an interpreter the man said, "I don't beat my wife every day, I have not time to because I work sometimes. I think she ought to have a trouncing once a month to keep her quiet."

Called to Bar at 60.

Magistrate William Trant, of Regina, Sask., has just celebrated his 70th birthday. He came to that city twenty years ago, and took the editorship of The Leader, Nicholas Flood Davin's organ. At 60 years of age Mr. Trant was called to the Bar, and in 1907 was appointed police magistrate.

Odd Claim For Damages.

Action for damages has been taken by a citizen of St. John, N.B., named Galbraith against the commissioners of the general public hospital based upon a claim that when an operation was performed upon him nine years ago an instrument was sewed up inside him and only discovered last spring, when he was again operated upon.

Snow Beautiful But Costly.

For removing the snow from the streets during the winter, the City of Montreal has spent $400,000 with the account still open. The largest item was $201,142, for keeping the street car tracks clear, for which expenditures the Montreal Tramways contributes one-half.

Some of the large Atlantic steamers have 160 firemen each.

LINER AGROUND

C.P.R. Steamer Runs on Island Of Orleans During Fog

QUEBEC, April 25.—The C. P. R. steamer Montfort, bound from Antwerp to Montreal, with 160 passengers and a general cargo, went aground while approaching the harbor of Quebec at 9.30 o'clock yesterday morning during a fog. She went aground on the beach just below the Island of Orleans.

The tide had been running down over two hours when the accident occurred. Experts said there was no danger for the vessel, except injury by her own weight, as she was lying on a sandy bottom.

RHEUMATISM

Sciatica and Lumbago, Quickly Cured by "Kephaldol."

A druggist in Toronto said that he was asking an Old Country customer of his about KEPHALDOL TABLETS. This customer told him "I suffered from severe Rheumatism and Sciatica for twenty years, hardly ever being free from these troubles. I read about KEPHALDOL in the Glasgow papers and sent for some. Three hours after taking two tablets, the pain was almost gone, and after taking six or seven, I hadn't a bit of pain."

This druggist went in to see his doctor about his wife and asked him if he had ever heard of KEPHALDOL. The doctor said, "Yes, I understand KEPHALDOL is a reliable sedative and anodyne, relieving pain without affecting the heart or vital organs. Since KEPHALDOL has been introduced into Canada, I have prescribed it in cases of severe Headache and Neuralgia, and just recently succeeded in helping a most severe case of La Grippe with it."

Since then, this druggist has ordered KEPHALDOL and recommended it to those of his customers who wanted something to relieve pain. If you are unable to get KEPHALDOL Tablets at your druggists, send 50c. to Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Irritability.

In the case of young children fleeting attacks of irritability generally mean passing disorders such as indigestion or teething, or else they are owing to insufficient sleep and overexcitement. Children learn to crave excitement as easily as adults do, and hours of boisterous play are very often followed by other hours of peevish boredom. Remember, too, that one serious disease—meningitis—often begins with a steadily increasing irritability, the cause for which is not understood until other symptoms, such as headache and vomiting, squinting or drawing back the head, make the diagnosis clear.

In adults a condition of neurasthenia or nerve fatigue will usually cause more or less irritability. It also accompanies some chronic diseases, especially the heart or kidneys, so that where it is very marked it is always well to seek the advice of a physician.

In the Asylum.

"Why is that man over yonder keeping up such an awful mowing with his mouth?"

"He? Oh, he's a former suburbanite, and he thinks his wife is calling him to go to work on the lawn."—Baltimore American.

Unpardonable.

"What are your reasons for wanting a divorce, madam?" inquired the judge.

"Failure to support."

"But you live in apparent luxury."

"He failed to support me for a nomination that I wanted."—Washington Press.

Sympathy.

Small Elsie told her aunt she was a "chump." She was reprimanded by her mother and told to apologize. Toddling up to her insulted relative, she said, "Auntie, I'm sorry you are a chump."—Chicago News.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION

COTTON FROCKS BECOME VERY ELABORATE.

This little dinner frock is all in cotton, yet vies with more pretentious stuff in its prettiness. One of the new batiste machine embroideries in a dainty all over pattern and a still daintier edging makes the corsage and the shepherdess drapery which is held with pink velvet roses, matching the tone of the velvet girdle. The sleeves and the second tunic are of cotton edged with a banding of the machine embroidery, while the narrow lower skirt is of plain batiste.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

Norwood, April 29.—Mr. G. Andrews, who is graduating at Albert College, Belleville, is now at his parents' home in town, Mr. and Mrs. James Andrews.

Mr. Jacob Kerr, who has been carrying on a boot and shoe repair shop in the Metcalf Block over winter, has sold his business to a fellow countryman, and purposes moving away in a short time.

Mr. Deen Baker, at Tuckers, has moved from his home on Queen St., to another residence on Belmont Street.

Miss Ila McDowell, who has been engaged in Richardson's insurance office for the last two years, is now visiting her home in Janetville, having given up her position here.

Miss Elizabeth Douglas, who has been taking her holidays with friends in Tweed and vicinity, returned to her position in the inucrance work on Monday of this week.

Mr. O. Howson visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Howson, in town over Sunday of this week. He was also accompanied by his son, who is about four years old.

Mr. McBride, of Peterboro, was in town on Monday and Tuesday of this week on business.

Mr. Jacob Kerr was in Lindsay on business on Monday last.

Mr. John Clark made a short visit to Peterboro on Monday last.

Miss D. Moffatt made a short trip to Toronto this week on business.

The girls of the Norwood High School are now busily engaged learning to play basketball. Under the coaching of Miss Morton, also Miss Brooch, assistant teachers in the High School, it is expected that the girls will make a good team.

Although their time is limited until mid-summer holidays, it is hoped by all that under the training of the teachers the girls will learn considerable in the short space which is afforded them.

On Friday night of last week the 2nd and 3rd forms played their first match in basketball. Although the boys are new at the game, they show good points that would give a spectator the impression that their prospects were good for making a good basketball team. By the greater amount of practicing and the very bright work of Waters, Bolin and Burgess, the 3rd form managed to put it over the 2nd by a score of ten to six. Referee for the game was Mr. Ernest Hall.

On Monday evening of this week another meeting was held of the Order of the Daughters of the Empire, and the rifle club in the armouries, discussing the preparations of the celebration of the 24th of May here. Final plans were made, and it is expected that a grand time may be had for all. It has lately been arranged that Hastings play Norwood a game of lacrosse here that day. There will also be a callithumpian parade in the morning, which will include merchants and manufacturing concerns of the towns.

Mr. J. Alf. Finlay, of town, has sold his new Ford automobile to Mr. Greely, of Hastings, who carrys on a livery business there.

The Old Rubber Concert under the auspices of the League of the Methodist Church proved to be a great success, which has been similarly preceded in other years.

Chairman for the evening was Mr. R. J. Lawlor.

Programme was as follows:
Solo—Miss Ruth Hedren.
Piano Instrumental—Miss Muriel Searight.
Recitation—Miss Lilian Elliott.
Solo—Mr. Lloyd Duffield (absent).
Reading—Miss Rhea Snyder.
Instrumental—Miss McDonald.
Solo—Mr. Arthur Searight.
Instrumental—Miss May Smith.
Lecture—Miss B. Pearce.
God Save the King.

The most interesting item of the programme was the speech by Miss Pearce, which was on her trip through Venice and Italy. The speech proved exceedingly interesting throughout, and was well applauded.

On Friday evening the Young People's Society of the Baptist Church held a shadow social in the council chamber in the town hall, and which proved to be a success. Under the auctioneering of Mr. Ernest Hall the girls sold at a high price, and also very rapidly. One gentleman was so greedy that no less than five young girls were needed to manage him for supper. Proceeds after paying expenses amounted to about ten dollars.

MEDIATION PROCEEDS, BUT U.S. IS RUSHING TROOPS TO THE FRONT

Long Sessions at the Argentine Legation are Being Held by the Three Envoys, But in the Capitol Mexico Has Been Forced Out by Colorado Affair.

WASHINGTON, April 29. — The Mexican crisis is now centreing on the issue between those who are seeking, through the good offices and intermediation of Latin-America, to find some middle ground for pacific adjustment, and those who regard a resort to arms as an inevitable consequence of what has occurred.

Throughout the day two distinct branches of activity were manifest here—that of the envoys of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, in formulating a plan of adjustment to be submitted to the United States and the Huerta regime, and that of the military and naval forces of the United States, which continue to go forward steadily in preparation for any eventuality which may develop. The arrival of Gen. Funston and a brigade of 5,000 troops at Vera Cruz, was one of the notable military developments of the day.

Chief interest was directed to the sessions of the South American envoys, lasting through the day and late into the evening. The meetings are held at the Argentina legation, where, seated about a long mahogany table, the three envoys deliberated much as an international court would weigh a case of supreme importance pending its decision.

At the White House President Wilson and his Cabinet advisers held a lengthy meeting, devoted chiefly, however, to the Colorado situation, although the Mexican crisis continued in the foreground. To a large extent, however, it was felt that the Mexican situation was now before those who had undertaken to exercise their good offices, and care was taken not to embarrass the efforts of the envoys by any announcements of conditions of settlement which the United States would insist upon. A spirit of optimism over the progress of the negotiations was distinctly apparent in executive quarters.

Mr. Herb Blackwell had a thrilling experience with his hired man, who, without provocation, attacked him with a pitchfork as he entered the stable early one morning, recently.

Lucky for Mr. B. that he was the better wrestler and he quickly upset the culprit whom he held down, till a neighbor appeared and helped to tie up the apparently demented hired man. The culprit was handed over to County Constable Cornwall who took him to the jail at Lindsay. At the conclusion of the trial, judgment was reserved in order to have the laborer examined as to his mental powers. The possibility is that the vicious hired man will be deported to his native European country.

A FULL PROBE

Investigation Into Marine Department to Begin at Once

OTTAWA, April 29.—In the House yesterday Hon. J. D. Hazen outlined the position in Quebec, where graft charges in the Marine Department are being investigated. Mr. Doutre, the purchasing agent of the Department and an official of the Justice Department have been sent down to investigate.

In reply to Sir Wilfrid's question Mr. Hazen explained that the pay sheet had been padded in 1908-1909. The timekeeper, the accountant of the Department and the paymaster had all passed the accounts, and they were paid to persons who were not really employed.

This was admitted by the accountant and another official. The investigation would commence immediately, and four officials were now suspended.

LOCAL MARKET

Eggs are on the decrease, and some farmers prophesy that they will be down to 15 cents in two weeks. There is nothing around the local market but consoling murmurings from one farmer to another over the passing of the by-law governing the sale of produce on the market. The by-law comes into effect on May 1st.

Calgary Not To Get It.

Calgary is not to be the home of the largest telescope in the world as was hoped. Mr. Bennett has communicated the sad news to the city. It seems that there is an unsteadiness in the atmosphere which seems to prevent the location.

Here is what Mr. Bennett said in his communication:

"The chief astronomer, in writing me regarding the selection of Calgary for the erection of a new telescope, says: 'While the first meteorological requirement, the prevalence of fine weather and the absence of clouds, is well fulfilled in Calgary, it has been found by observational tests made at Medicine Hat and Banff (as typical points) that, with apparent clearness, there may be an unsteadiness in the atmosphere which seriously interferes with telescope definition. This unsteadiness is probably connected with the large range of temperature from day to night and during the night, which prevails generally to the east of the Rocky Mountains. As this unsteadiness would prevent the best use of the telescope, we have been looking for a place where the temperature conditions and the atmospheric conditions connected therewith are better'."

Had the Young Man Smoked.

A youth, whose name did not transpire, secured from Mr. Justice Middleton recently an order for the payment to him out of the estate of Emma J. Moore of $500. There was a further bequest of $50 if the young man had not used tobacco by the time he was 21 years of age, but no application was made for the anti-tobacco bonus.

Made Faraday Hot.

When Faraday was allowed a pension for his remarkable additions to scientific knowledge, from which untold millions of pounds sterling have inured, an ignorant lord was selected to announce the grant, but informed Faraday that he did not think much of this science business and said "Now, really, Faraday, it's all a humbug, anyway, isn't it?"

The insulted chemist refused the pension until other better informed officials apologized humbly for the impertinence of "his lordship."

Preaching and Practice.

"I despise a hypocrite."

"So do I."

"Now, take Jackson, for example; he's the biggest hypocrite on earth."

"But you appear to be his best friend."

"Oh, yes; I try to appear friendly toward him. It pays better in the end."

NUPTIAL KNOT AN END TO MANY TROUBLES

Marriage Bureau Movement a Right Step, Says Adjutant McIlhiney.

Marriage as solution of all troubles, is one of the pet theories of Adjutant McElhiney.

Recently he advanced a few suggestions and his own personal view of the matter which is to the effect that he is in favor of the marriage bureau movement now under way extensively in the States. The first of the bureaus to be established in America in accordance with the wish of the late General Booth, as expressed in his book entitled "Darkest England" has been opened in Chicago.

"It's certainly a move in the right direction," said the local officer and some day I hope to see it taken up extensively. The object of the marriage bureau is to encourage marriage among the "down and out class" and will be under the direction of the department of charities and prisons of the Salvation Army. At these bureaus applicants can get free of charge a wife, husband, job, and in case of absolute necessity, a marriage license. Of course ,there would be certain rules attached to the application.

Unemployed—A Solution.

Marriage is the solution of the unemployed question to considerable extent. It makes men ambitious. The more children there are the less the unemployed question will trouble the public. Seven reasons can be advanced for the starting of such a bureau.

All persons ought to marry, because God intended it and expects them to do so.

All not fit should be so advised, and, if possible, made fit.

Equal numbers of men and women show God's plan for them to marry.

Thousands among the best women and men in the world are not married because they never had a chance.

There are large communities of women and men that need to be brought together. It would be better for all concerned.

The Salvation Army believes in marriages and families and that if there were more of these there would be less of the great social evil.

Religion and nationality are said to be the greatest divorce breeders.

HOUSE FOR BERNHARDT.

"Divine Sarah" Gets Place In the Legion at Last.

All the preliminaries have been fully complied with, and the world's greatest actress, Madame Sarah Bernhardt, now, at last, ranks among the immortals of the French Legion of Honor.

The decoration comes to her late in life, and only after she had been many times proposed for membership in that officially distinguished fraternity. The "Divine" Sarah is now a great-grandmother. Each time the solemn council of the Legion of Honor erased the name of Madame Sarah from the list—because, as a theatre manageress, she had been through the bankruptcy court. It does not seem to be generally known that this was the sole reason why the council refused Madame Sarah's nomination.

Of course, for many years the council refused to decorate any actor, far less an actress, just as to this day the French Academy rejects the player's profession altogether as disreputable and not worthy of the "immortality" which it confers.

The first actress to receive the Red Ribbon was Adelina Patti, but she was not French. The first French actress to receive the Ribbon was Madame Bartet, but she was honored solely as a professor at the Conservatoire, and the fact was solemnly ignored that she was an actress also. Indeed, all actors who have received the Red Ribbon were similarly decorated solely as professors at the Conservatoire, and in each case the council continued solemnly to shut its eyes to the fact of their not only teaching, but also acting themselves.

Madame Sarah herself was given, some years ago, a lectureship at the Conservatoire by the Government solely to enable the council to have an excuse for decorating her, as she was scarcely ever asked to "profess" at all. But the council still stubbornly held out.

Madame Sarah has waited long, but she has the satisfaction of knowing that she is the first French actress to receive the Red Ribbon solely as an actress. Even the council has had to give in at last, and it certainly cannot pretend to ignore the fact that Sarah is an actress. The new Knight of the Legion of Honor still plays the very juvenile part of Jeanne Dore, in which this astonishing actress is not only as good as ever, but one may really say has yet improved upon her art in restraint, intensity and depth.

Quebec Rejoices at News.

QUEBEC, April 29.—The bells of all the Roman Catholic churches of this city pealed out joyously at 11 o'clock yesterday when the news of the elevation of His Grace Archbishop Begin to the dignity of cardinal was officially confirmed in a communication from Mgr. Stagni, apostolic delegate at Ottawa, in which he also transmitted the cablegram which he received from Cardinal del Val.

More For Newfoundland.

OTTAWA, April 29. — In the House yesterday afternoon the Prime Minister alluded again to the Newfoundland sealing disaster and stated that, as it was worse than at first was thought, the Government proposed to increase its grant to the relief fund from $10,000 to $25,000.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he had great pleasure in supporting the motion.

Wall Papers That Will Lend an Air of Distinction to the Home

Home decoration is an art—wall paper is the foundation; every housewife will admit the logic of this statement, and yet many go ahead without one thought of whether the wall covering will blend with the other furnishings of the room.

Now, it is our business to give advice, and we are only too pleased at any time to give suggestions as to color schemes that will satisfy individual tastes. From our large and varied stock we can pick you out many artistic designs that will surely please you—not only because of their charm, but because they are so different from those you have seen elsewhere.

Take for instance the Robert Graves papers — direct American importations, many of these are shown with the Crown effects, having the borders printed directly on the roll, thus saving all the trouble of cutting out and matching. These we are showing in a number of pleasing designs suitable for any room. Also a large and varied range in Embroidered Gilts, Tiffany Bends, Cordova and Ooze Leathers and Oatmeals. To say nothing of a choice range of Bedroom Papers in neat floral and striped effects. Come in and look over our display, you will be delighted with the low prices that are prevailing on such new and up-to date stock.

MINERS ENTOMBED BY COLLIERIES' EXPLOSION

Is the Second Largest Disaster in the History of West Virginia

ECCLES, W.Va., April 29. — All hope for the rescue alive of 203 miners entombed by an explosion yesterday in mines Nos. 5 and 6, of the New River Collieries Co., here, was abandoned late last night. Rescuers were unable to force their way into the burning shafts. Fifty-nine men, all burned severely, were rescued alive from No. 6 mine and are receiving medical treatment in improvised hospitals. Four bodies were recovered from the same shaft.

The disaster, the second largest in the mining history of West Virginia, was caused by a gas explosion in the 600-foot level of mine No. 5. It was followed five minutes later by a second explosion, which completely wrecked the mine and partially demolished mine No. 6, a connecting operation.

One hundred and ninety men were at work in mine No. 5 and not one of them reached the surface. The mine immediately caught fire and attempts at rescue work were futile. Late last night all hope of getting the miners out of mine No. 5 was given up and rescue parties, driven back by the intense heat and deadly gases, were forced to halt their effort to reach the entombed men.

The four dead and 59 injured men were taken from mine No. 6 through one of the four shafts of the mines not injured by the explosions. Thirteen men are still in No. 6.

BILL ALMOST LAW

Compensation Act Ends Course In Legislature Amid Cheers

TORONTO, April 29—A loud burst of applause echoed about the legislative chamber yesterday afternoon, when the workmen's compensation bill wound up its career on the order paper and stood merely waiting the gubernatorial sanction to become law.

Liberal amendments to include a first aid provision, to limit the term of commissioners to ten years, and to make certain alterations in the classification of industries, were voted down.

Hon. Adam Beck's two bills to amend the Power Commission Act passed their third reading yesterday. The first provides for the public construction and operation of Hydro Radials, and was exhaustively explained by Hon. Mr. Beck a few days ago. The second bill Mr. Beck explained yesterday. The first section provides for the expropriation of flooded lands on behalf of municipalities. The next section gives certain powers to townships to make appropriations for the lighting of highways.

"The third clause," said Mr. Beck, "refers to the amendment to the act, giving the commission power to authorize and approve of inspectors to look over wiring and plant installed by municipalities."

Church—What part did be take in the play?

First Printer's Devil.

In the early days of printing this art was much of a mystery, and ignorant people thought the printer evoked the aid of the powers of evil. Aldus Manutius, the famous Italian printer of the sixteenth century, went to Africa on an exploring expedition and brought back with him a very black negro boy. Negroes were a rarity then. The report immediately gained circulation that the printer had been employing the Black Art in his work and that the pickaninny was in reality an imp of Satan. He was called the "Little Black Devil." The charge became so serious that the printer was forced to exhibit the negro in public. In his announcement he said:

"Be it known to Venice that I, Aldus Manutius, printer to the Holy Church and to the Doge, have this day made public exposure of the Printer's Devil. All those who think he is not flesh and blood may come and pinch him."

And that is how the term "printer's devil" had its origin.

Why Eggs at Easter?

Few people understand why eggs play so important a part in Easter celebrations. The reason is that the mediaeval law in England forbade eggs during Lent, and hence, at Easter, the hungry mediaeval populace returned to their favorite dish with rejoicing. With us to-day, when Lent no longer forbids eggs, there is no reason for featuring them upon our Easter Sunday breakfast menu. But we do so—it is the pretty survival of an obsolete custom.

In Elizabeth's time he who ate flesh during Lent was fined $15. He who so much as had meat in his house was pilloried or set in the stocks.

But the rich, as usual, dodged the harsh Lenten laws, and they who could afford it bought licenses to eat meat in Lent. For these licenses a lord was charged 26 shillings, a knight 14 shillings and a commoner 7 shillings.

Between Tears and Laughter.

"Do you ever think, George, dear," said she, and her voice was soft and low, as befitted the perfect beauty of the night—"do you ever think how closely true happiness is allied with tears?"

"I don't believe I ever do," admitted George dear, "but I will, if you like."

"Yes," she went on, gazing up into his face, and her lips were very close to his. "When one is truly and wholly happy, George, dear, there is but little to divide a smile and a tear."

"Well, that's a fact," assented George dear. "But I never thought of it before. After all, there's nothing but the nose."—London Answers.

HON. MR. HANNA VIGOROUSLY DENOUNCES "PEANUT POLITICS"

Formal Charges by Charles M. Bowman of a League With the Liquor Interests to Defeat the Scott Act Through the Agency of Inspector Snider Receive an Unequivocal Denial.

TORONTO, April 29.—The dying days of the session of the Legislature were marked yesterday by an acrimonious debate arising out of Charles M. Bowman's formal charges against Provincial Secretary Hanna and the demand for a royal commission to investigate the conditions surrounding Inspector Snider's visit to Welland during the Scott Act elections.

At a late hour last night the debate concluded, and on a division the motion for an inquiry was defeated.

The charge which Mr. Bowman preferred against Hon. Mr. Hanna was, in brief, that he and the organized liquor interests through their representatives had agreed that the Government or one of its officials should take steps to procure the defeat of the Scott Act in Peel, Welland, and Huron Counties, and that the visit of License Inspector Snider to Welland just prior to the election was in fulfilment of that compact.

In conclusion it was charged that the Minister had "illegally, wrongly and corruptly intervened, interfered with and influenced voters."

Mr. Bowman declared that the liquor interests had decided that the Scott Act, which was likely to became popular in the province, should be defeated, and accordingly raised $60,000 to defeat it. They supported Government candidates in bye-elections and promised support in the general election. It was agreed with the Government that the act should be defeated jointly, and the statement as to weaknesses prepared by the Government was issued with that intention. It was prepared in a conference of liquor interests with license authorities.

In beginning his brief reply, Hon Mr. Hanna said that this "last act in a splendid drama," although called a discharge of duty by the Opposition, was not so in the minds of the people who had observed affairs of the last eight months, both in and out of the House. Some would term it the "worst example of personal persecution that they had known in the annals of the province." He would speak however to the House and to the province with confidence and show that as far as the charge concerned him the conditions in the province and the constituencies gave them a complete lie.

On the 22nd day of this month the member for North Bruce, under the guidance of his leader, had made a statement and motion, dealing with the same episode. Not a new tittle had been added here, nor a circumstance that was not challenged then. When the matter was disposed of some gentlemen were ashamed of their course and two or these were members of the Opposition.

"While my name did not appear in that statement, it was to me, and at me," declared Mr. Hanna. "I made a complete statement, absolutely true from start to finish, and meant to be full and fair and frank. That statement was accepted by this House, this province, and the press outside of those too tightly bound to ties of party."

"This," he declared, "is the best living example of peanut politics that the province has yet given."

"I am going to say this, that from one end of the province to the other, and without qualification or reservation, and I care not what test may be applied, what I said was absolutely true. (Applause.) Every charge of alliance between the Government and the liquor interests was untrue, and every one imputing wrong doing on his part was untrue. No matter the language used, it was untrue."

Mr. Hanna then reviewed the attacks on his Department and the charges of an alliance with the liquor interests.

"There is no such bargain and never was such bargain, and as to $60,000, I know absolutely nothing, but when they speak with such certainty they will doubtless be accepted as authorities."

Mr. Rowell contended that the Provincial Secretary had failed to meet the motion. His hon. friend had referred to the conditions existing in Huron and Peel, and had suggested that this answered the charges.

The public wanted to know if when Mr. Snider went into the ridings; when he represented that he came from the Department of the Provincial Secretary, when he went there with all the weight and prestige of the Government and sought to influence temperance Conservatives to defeat the Scott Act—did he go there of his own mind or at the request of the chief of the Department of the Provincial Secretary? Upon that question they had had no light, and the only way they could get that light was by the granting of the motion.

Mr. Rowell then quoted a letter which he had received from a prominent Conservative, at one time a Liberal, Mr. Charles Steel, reeve of Port Colborne. In his letter Mr. Steel called for the dismissal of an official who sought to interfere in a local election, and offered to testify at an enquiry.

Messrs. Proudfoot, McGarry, Pattinson, Anderson, Musgrove and Ferguson participated in the debate.

CONTRACT WITH THE C.N.R. IS RATIFIED BY CONSERVATIVE CAUCUS

Two Dissenting Voices Raised Against Resolution to Guarantee Bonds to the Extent of $45,000,000 in Exchange For Large Share in Project and Wide Powers of Control—Comes Up Thursday.

OTTAWA, April 29. — The much discussed Canadian Northern aid proposals which have been the subject of negotiations for some months have been placed before Parliament in the form of a notice of resolution in the votes and proceedings to-day. Premier Borden will move that the Government be authorized to guarantee the bonds of the C. N. R. upon certain terms contained in the resolution.

The contract of the Government with the C. N. R. was submitted to the Conservative caucus and ratified by all but two members—R. B. Bennett (Calgary) and W. F. Nickle (Kingston).

The resolution will probably come up on Thursday. It is in brief:

(1) Provision is made for guaranteeing the bonds to the amount of $45,000,000 which, with the other assets now available, is considered sufficient for the completion of the company's lines as a transcontinental system, which will comprise nearly 10,000 miles of railway.

(2) The company's stock issue at the present time amounts to $145,000,000, of which about $138,000,000 is held by Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, and $7,000,000 by the Government. The total capitalization of $145,000,000 is reduced to $100,000,000, of which the Government receives $33,000,000 in addition to the $7,000,000 already held, or $40,000,000 in all. On the other hand the stock holding of Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, namely $70,000,000 of C. N. R. stock and $68,000,000 in the subsidiary companies, or $138,0000000 in all, has been reduced to $60,000,000, that is to say a total reduction of $78,000,000.

(3) Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, have absolutely released all claims against the C. N. R. and its various subsidiary companies for any services which they have performed during the past eighteen years, or since the inception of the enterprise.

(4) The Government receives security by way of mortgage on the C. N. R. lines in three prairie provinces, comprising about 5,000 miles. This is the most remunerative portion of the company's system.

(5) In case any portion of the 45 millions to be raised by the Government's guarantee should be applied in completing or improving any of the company's subsidiary lines, such company must also execute a mortgage for the protection of the Government for the amount so expended upon such company's property.

(6) The reduction of the stock issue from one hundred and forty-five millions to one hundred millions, has been accomplished by having all the stocks of the various subsidiary railway companies, of the terminal companies, telegraph, express and elevator companies as well as the steamship company, transferred to the C. N. R. so that the Government holding forty millions out of one hundred millions of C. N. R. stock, has a corresponding interest in all these companies. The interests of Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, which owns the townsites, which holds very valuable real estate in the three prairie provinces, has also been pledged to the Government as security.

(7) In order to ensure that the forty-five million dollars to be raised by the Government's guarantee shall be applied to the completion of this transcontinental system, and to no other purpose, the Government has made provision for the most thorough and strict stipulations in the trust deed, so not one dollar of the moneys so raised can be appropriated or diverted to any other purpose.

(8) As the company, outside of the amounts owed to contractors which are very large at the present time, owes about fourteen million dollars of temporary loans, raised by the pledging of securities which have not been sold and which hitherto have not been saleable at reasonable figure, and as the company has also a floating indebtedness of between ten and eleven millions of dollars, the Government have stipulated that Mackenzie and Mann, Limited, shall give absolutely satisfactory security that both the temporary loan and the floating indebtedness shall be paid off by them without recourse in any way to the moneys which are to be raised by the guaranteed securities for the completion of the road.

(9) Provision is made that all traffic arising on the C. N. R. system shall be transported over Canadian lines, and if for export shall be conveyed to Canadian ports. In this respect the Government has exacted a strict covenant which admits of no evasion.

(10) Provision has also been made for interchange of traffic between the C. N. R. system and the I. C. R.

(11) The provision is made for inspection by the Government officials of books, reports and other records of the C. N. R. and its subsidiaries at any time.

(12) Provision is also made for the appointment by the Government of a director upon the board of the C. N. R. and each of its subsidiary companies.

(13) It is provided that all the lines comprising the C. N. R. system shall be subject to the legislative jurisdiction of the Parliament.

(14) In the event of any default by C. N. R. or any of its subsidiary companies in meeting the interest or principal due upon any securities issued by such companies, the Government may dismiss the directors of all such companies and appoint others who will have power to transfer the road to any company formed for the purpose, and thus obviate long foreclosure proceedings.

(15) The government agrees that for three years after the opening of the through line, the Government, if requested by the company, will pay the interest on the forty-five millions guaranteed, but the interest so paid must be repaid with interest from time to time.

OUR PEAT DEPOSITS.

Canada Has Large Supplies of Old World Fuel.

The peat resources of Ontario have often been the subject of considerable investigation, and speculations, monetary and otherwise, have been made by various parties in the hope that there might be found in the swamps that dot the country here and there some solution for the fuel problem throughout the winter months.

The possibilities that are apparently available have led many to experiment in their endeavor to put the fuel on the market. Some of these have been on a more extensive scale than others, but the outcome in several of these cases was a loss to the would-be promoters of rather large sums.

The production of peat in Canada from 1900 to 1912 amounted to 6,723 tons, valued at $20,786. The amounts varied greatly in different years, for instance, in 1900, 400 tons were produced, in 1913, 1,100 tons; in 1909, 60 tons; in 1911, 1,463 tons, and in 1912, 700 tons.

Some years ago Mr. Alex. Dobson, of Beaverton, conducted a series of experiments with a contrivance of his own invention and succeeded in obtaining some excellent results in working a small bog on his property. Some of the output was used by Mr. T. W. Gibson, Deputy Minister of Mines, who used the fuel for a winter in the kitchen range and found that it was clear and gave a splendid fire. The experiments, it is understood, were not continued for any length of time.

Within the past few years the Dominion Department of Mines have investigated 14 peat bogs in Ontario. These are: Mer Blew, in Russell county, Alfred in Prescott, Welland in Welland, Newington in Stormont, Perth in Lanark, Victoria Road in Victoria, Brunner in Perth, Komoka in Middlesex, Brockville in Leeds, Rondeau in Kent, Holland in Simcoe and York, and Coney Island, Crosier, and Fort Frances in the Rainy River district.

These bogs vary in size from the Victoria Road of 67 acres with 53,659 tons of fuel, to that at Holland with 14,641 acres and 8,218,931 tons with 25 per cent. moisture.

Experiments have been carried on in some of the fields, particularly that at Alfred, which was purchased some years ago by the Dominion Government. At this place, however, after the expenditure of a considerable amount of money, Dr. Haanel, who was conducting the experiments, reported that nothing further could be gained, and that the methods could not make it a commercial possibility. As an outcome of this, the bog and equipment were sold by the Government to a Mr. Shuttleworth, of London, England, who intended to carry out some other method, than that of sun-drying, which the department had used.

Other attempts have been made at Farnham, Ont., recently, to develop the manufacture of briquettes.

In the course of a debate on this question in the House of Commons recently, it was pointed out that in Russia the development of the peat industry had been so successful that they were enabled to sell against coal and wood, and have put the whole industry on a good commercial basis.

On the part of the Government it was announced that, while they were giving continued experiments, they were prepared to test any method which seemed to have any possibilities.

So far in Canada it has not been found possible to place on the market any large amount of the material. In Europe, particularly in Sweden, new methods have been devised by which the bogs there are being developed to an ever-increasing extent.

A NEW MOVE BY CHURCHILL

UNOFFICIAL PROPOSAL TO CARSON AROUSES INTEREST IN LONDON

LONDON, April 29. — Much interest has been created by a new offer to Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, made by Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the course of a speech in the House of Commons last night. The Minister invited Sir Edward Carson to make an attempt to compromise the Home Rule question on the federal basis.

Mr. Churchill is reported to have spoken entirely for himself and without the authority of the Cabinet. Many of the Liberals are indignant at him for taking the course he did, contending that it will only be interpreted as a sign of weakness on the part of the Government. John Redmond, in an interview, said he did not understand there was anything new in Mr. Churchill's offer, but that if anything came of it he was ready to exert himself to placate the Ulstermen and reach an honorable settlement of the question.

The view of the Unionist leaders here is that Mr. Churchill's offer must have been debated in a Cabinet Council held earlier in the day. They believe it entirely changes the situation and improves the prospect of an agreement being reached. Andrew Bonar Law, the Opposition leader in the House of Commons, is said to be ready to renew negotiations with Premier Asquith if the Government will take the initiative.

EVANTUREL

HE WILL STAND AS INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE FOR PRESCOTT

VANKLEEK HILL, Ont., April 29.—F. A. Senecal, secretary of the Prescott County Liberal Association, was yesterday chosen as Liberal candidate for the Legislature in succession to Gustave Evanturel, who recently resigned his seat in the House as the result of charges preferred by G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P. for Grenville. The officers of the association yesterday refused to allow Mr. Evanturel's name to go on the ballot for nomination as candidate, and this precipitated a warm row, Evanturel's adherents refusing for a time to allow Mr. Senecal to address the convention. Two other names were put in nomination, but they withdrew in favor of Mr. Senecal.

Gustave Evanturel, in a fighting speech, declared he would contest the riding as an independent candidate.

Thirty-eight polling subdivisions in the riding, out of 40, were represented at the convention, 150 delegates being in attendance.

Students at Alma Ladies' College Show Pluck

ST. THOMAS, Ont., April 29. — A young student at Alma Ladies' College here was awakened by a noise about two o'clock yesterday morning, and quietly investigating discovered a man in the corridor. The other girls were aroused, and while some stood guard at the windows and exits from the corridor, others flew to arouse the principal, his son, and the janitor. These three arrived and took the man, who was still surrounded by the determined girls, into custody. He pretended to be intoxicated or dopey. He had climbed a fire escape to the second storey.

REGULARS HAD REVENGE AGAINST THE YANNIGANS

Knock the Ball to All Parts of the Lot and Scored Seventeen Runs

O'Hearne, Freeman and G. Miller Are Let Out by Blount

Special to the Review.

Youngstown, April 29.—Excellent weather featured a good day's training of the Peterboro team here yesterday, and they are hoping that the warm weather will remain to help along the sore arms which have marred some of the work since the team reported. The morning practice included batting, fielding and base-running, while a double-header made up the afternoon bill.

A trifle peeved over their defeat at the hands of the Yannigans on Monday, the Regulars fell on them yesterday with revenge in their eye and made it 17-0 in nine innings. Martin, a young southpaw from Buffalo, was on the mound for the Regulars, and worked well, although fast fielding brought him out of several bad corners. Jimmie Gorman, the first baseman from Atlantic City (Tri-State) replaced Freeman at first and was all that could be desired. He is a six footer and weighs in the neighborhood of 170. He has had several years' experience and will have little trouble in holding the job.

George Miller filled Price's place at the short field as the latter is out of the game with a displaced ligament in his arm. He interviewed Bonesetter Reese and the old "Doc" advised him to rest up for a few days. Terril, who also has a bad arm, did the slab work for the Yannigans, but the Regulars were going strong and batted his offerings all over the lot. Manager Blount looked after the centre garden and had a very busy session. The snappy little manager is full of "pep" and has it on the rest of the fielders by a big margin.

The second game of the double header was with a High School team, and the Petes shut them out 4-0 in six innings. Tracey and Sterling did the pitching and were invincible. Kelly worked behind the bat, Gorman, first; Schrage, second; King, short; and Byrne, third; Fox, right; Blount, centre; and Swartz left. The infield were going exceedingly fast. Schrage still keeping up his good work. He is stepping into the ball every time he comes to the bat, and is giving King, Byrne and Price a hard run for a place. Blount had three hits out of four times up.

More Blue Envelopes.

The can rattled again last night, O'Hearne, Freeman and George Miller receiving their blue envelope. Miller was very fast, but lacked experience, while Freeman and O'Hearne were both average first basemen, but the inability to hit and the good work of Gorman caused Manager Blount to let them out. Flanagan will be very likely held for a week or so, but it is improbable that he can beat Gorman out.

There are a few more men with the team who will be released by the end of the week. Terrill, the pitcher, will not be able to hold his job, and either Gaffney or Swartz will have to land some other berth.

BASEBALLITIS

McAvoy, last year with Berlin in Fitzgerald's circut, has been let out to Baltimore by the Athletics.

The Federals have put a crimp in Jack Dunn's support. There is talk of him transferring his franchise to Washington, but Griffiths says "nothing doing."

A belated recognition by Buffalo fans of the need of a nickname for their Federal League club is now the only bar to referring to the newcomers as a "major" league, complete in all particulars. All the other clubs have appendixes as follows:—

St. Louis—Terriers.
Baltimore—Terrapins.
Kansas City—Packers.
Chicago—Chifeds.
Indianapolis—Hoosiers.
Brooklyn—Brookfeds.
Pittsburg—Stogies.

According to reports, there is a possibility of the Kansas City Federal team going to Toronto if a park can be secured. If they do, the International and Canuck teams will be given a jar as did the Orioles. The trouble in Toronto is that business men lose half a day going to the island to see a game, whereas if a park were near the city, and they could shoot down at three-thirty in their auto, they'd undoubtedly patronize such a place. The Feds. are very sweet on the Queen City, so Fitz and Ed. Barrow best keep their shut eye open.

THE TURF

Owing to the late spring the local horses have not had an opportunity of having a workout on the track but with fine weather for the rest of the week it is expected that a start will be made next Thursday. The presence of several dark horses has caused considerable discussion among local horsemen so the trial heats are looked forward to with great interest.

CHAMPIONSHIP HOPES

The dopesters around the circuit are spilling considerable ink endeavoring to find out which team will have the best array of twirlers when the 1914 curtain is rung up. Somehow or other they all speak with reverence of the Petes' slab artists, and perhaps a little slant at the averages wouldn't be out of place. The averages for the White Caps twirling department last year were:

| | Games | P.C. |
|---|---|---|
| Sterling | 36 | .548 |
| Tracey | 37 | .536 |
| Cresswell | 16 | .500 |
| Belting | 25 | .611 |

Schettler pitcher 12 games in the O. and P. League which went on the rocks.

The St. Thomas club will get away in royal fashion on May 6, Duke of Connaught and Princess Patricia will visit the railroad city, and the management of the club has asked President Fitzgerald's permission to open on that date. The president will agree if Shaughnessy, whose club opposes the Saints, agrees.

The Canadian League has President Barrow, of the International, and Jay Jay McCaffery, as well as President Fitzgerald, for its elevation to Class B.

Heck, of the Cockneys, topped the league with an average of .800 for 31 games.

Wilkinson, of the Saints, had the sweet average of .375, but only worked in 9 games.

Stan. Cresswell, the local lad, did well with .500 for 16 games.

Hamilton's flingers failed to show any real stuff so far as the averages are concerned, but Dolan, Donohue, Dougherty, Dwyer, Padgett and Yates are all showing form this year.

They could have named the Hamilton club "The Home Rulers." There is Donohue, Dougherty, two Dolans, Dwyer, Gilhooley, Fisher and others yet to be heard from.

Lefty Rogers was the most useful player in the league last year. In 91 games as a pitcher and outfielder he hit .336 and fielded .967. His pitching average for 25 games was .750.

There are ten Class B organizations now. Southern Association, Western League, Connecticut League, Texas League, Eastern Association, New York State, North-western League, Tri-State League, Illinois-Iowa-Indiana League, and the Canadian are all classified as B organizations.

Ottawa and London have not signed a player in the last week who "signed just before McGraw's agent arrived." The scribes in those places must be suffering from writer's cramp.

SCHOOL BOYS' BALL LEAGUE

All the Public Schools Will be Represented in League.

A meeting of the principals and vice-pricipals of the public schools of the city was held in the Central School last evening for the purpose or organizing the Baseball League for the boys of the public schools of the city. Mr. H. Yemey, the retiring president, occupied the chair.

The election of officers of the league for ensuing year resulted as follows:

Hon. President—Mr. V. Eastwood.
Hon. Vice-President—Mr. E. G. Patterson.
President—Mr. M. Clark, King Edward School.
Vice-President—Mr. F. Voaden, Queen Mary School.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. L. J. Colling, South Central School.

There is a keen interest shown by the boys in the League, and the citizens should encourage the boys by being present at the games and helping financially. Each school has entered a team in the League, and there will be considerable rivalry for the shield.

A schedule of the games will appear in a few days.

TALK OF CITY LEAGUE

The meeting on Thursday (to-morrow) evening in the Y.M.C.A., which has been called for all interested in the formation of a Mercantile or City Baseball League for the coming season. There is talk of having a City League, but several of the teams which formed the Mercantile League last year want to remain Mercantile, so a lively discussion will very likely be the order. A big attendance is requested.

A Huge Kitchen.

It is believed that the largest kitchen in the world is that of the Bon Marche, in Paris. It provides food for all the employes of the house, 4,000 in number. The smallest kettle holds 75 quarts, the largest 375 quarts. There are fifty frying pans, each of which is capable of holding 300 cutlets at a time or frying 220 pounds of potatoes. When there are omelets for breakfast 7,800 eggs are used. The coffee machines make 750 quarts of coffee daily. There are sixty cooks and 100 kitchen boys employed.

Sense of Direction.

The apparently marvelous way in which Indians, Eskimos and other primitive people make their way through forests, snow covered areas or other regions which have little to indicate direction to white newcomers has led to a widespread belief that they possess a mysterious sixth sense of direction. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the arctic traveler, who has lived much with Eskimos, is very skeptical about the existence of any superiority of sense of direction among primitive peoples of any kind and gives strong evidence from personal experience that Eskimos have no such superiority. The ability of Indians and others to find their way he attributes solely to their familiarity with the country through which they are traveling. They note many things that they have seen before and that have no significance to the stranger in their land. White men can and do acquire the same ability to find their way when they have learned to know a country. When the land is equally strange to the white man and the Indian or Eskimo, the white man, because of his better developed reasoning power, is more likely to have a correct idea of direction than the Eskimo.—Indianapolis News.

Thought He Had Something.

"He made every dollar of his fortune honestly."

"Is that so? I thought he was richer man that."—Detroit Free Press.

Comparisons.

Dear, when we dance together you
Seem but a sylph and I a pig.
Your little shoe is number two;
Mine—well, its big!

And when I hold your hand in mine
Your little fingers lightly fall.
My glove, I think, is number nine;
Yours—well, it's small!

So tiny you from boot to glove,
So mighty I, who dare not speak,
For what I earn per year, my love,
You spend per week!
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Feast of Dolls.

The feast of the dolls is the quaintest of all the little Japanese girls' festivals. In the storehouse, where are kept all the family treasures, there are boxes filled with dolls which have come down from the grandmothers and great-grandmothers. Each new bride takes her dolls when she goes to her father-in-law's house, and she keeps the feast each year till her eldest daughter is old enough to take it up.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. J. E. Emmerson is spending a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. S. A. Clarke, of Hamilton.

The Church Woman's Association of St. John's, will hold a Social Evening, Friday, May 1, in the Sunday school at 8 o'clock. Everyone connected with the church, choir or Bible classes are heartily invited to attend, and enjoy the evening. Games and refreshments. No admission.

Mr. J. J. Thompson, Physical Director of the Y. M. C. A., left last evening for Maine.

Mr. C. R. Meserve, new general secretary for the local Y. M. C. A., is expected here to-morrow to assume his duties.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fox, of Buffalo, formerly of Lindsay, passed through the city yesterday enroute to Lindsay, where they will visit for a few weeks.

Mr. C. G. Graham received a copy of the Daily Herald, of Grand Forks, N.D., to-day, in which a report of the Elks' Minstrel show staged by Mr. Holly Shepard was chronicled. Mr. Shepard's presentation in that city was a grand success, and his many local acquaintances will be pleased to know that he has met similar receptions all through the middle west.

Reports from St. Joseph's Hospital this afternoon state that Mr. G. N. Graham, who is ill with pneumonia, is in a very precarious condition.

The many friends of Mr. Roy Dixon will be pleased to learn of his success in passing his examinations in 1st year science at Queen's University. Mr. H. F. Hill, another local boy, was also successful in obtaining his second year.

Messrs. Frederick Nicola, Frank Blachford, Roland Roberts and Frank C. Smith, the string quartette of Toronto, also Mr. R. M. Reid, soloist, who are to take part in "Judas Maccabaeus" to-night at the Grand Opera House, are guests at the White House.

Mr. J. Wildman, of Bradford, Eng., is a guest at the Oriental.

Mr. M. A. Heard, of Regina, is among the visitors in the city.

Mr. E. A. Foley, of Toronto, is in the city on business.

Messrs. H. Hill and D. Carlyle, are in Kingston attending the Spring Convocation of Queen's University this afternoon.

"C" COMPANY DANCE

Selection, "Songs of Ireland," Band.
Cornet Solo, "Silver Threads," Bandmaster.
Band Song, Lift up your head.
Selection "Songs of Praise," Band.
Bible Reading.

Refreshments terminated a most pleasant evening.

Police Court.

"You are going, going fast," said Magistrate Dumble to Howard Innis this morning, when the youth appeared before him on the charge of being drunk, and was assessed $2.

Pay Your Taxes.

Tax Collector Green is out with his farewell notice for the collecting of taxes before the 1st of May. This applies to taxes for 1913, and not to the present year, as understood by numerous parties.

Small screws, tacks, nails and brads should be kept in a dry glass can, and they'll always be in plain sight when wanted.

WOMAN'S WORK

Contributed by the Executive of the Women's Council

Wherever woman has gone, in every walk of life, she has improved the conditions, purified the atmosphere and elevated the morals.

There is no occupation she has not bettered, at the same time there is no step forward that woman has ever taken which has not made her a better woman, a better companion, a better wife and a better mother.

Woman's entrance into the industrial world really began when the first typewriter came out in 1876.

The typewriter seemed to have opened a new door for women.

Woman Doctor Needed.

Mrs. H. P. Plumtre, in addressing the Women's Auxiliary of St. George's Church, Toronto, said: "A woman doctor is the greatest need of the Canadian branch of Anglican missions."

Milk Served Daily in Public Schools.

1,349 quarts of fresh milk are given each month free of charge to children in the public schools of Oshkosh, Wis.

A Free Dinner.

The local council of New Glasgow gave a dinner to 94 poor children on New Year's Day, which was followed by a Christmas tree. Each child was provided with a new article of warm clothing, instead of a toy.

Want Women on Police Force in St. John, N.B.

The appointment of women police officers on the St. John force is the object of a campaign planned by the women's council at their last meeting.

On the street of an Ontario city, a policewoman found a tiny boy walking along all alone. He had made his escape from the orphan asylum, an institution conducted by women. "Where are you going?" said the police woman. "I'm goin'," said the little boy with determination, "where there is some men."

Recreation.

Cleanly conducted Canadian sports should be greatly encouraged and not left to private enterprise, but conducted by churches, and federated associations or institutions. The old English ideal of "playing the game" rather than of winning should be emphasized. Careful oversight and management of places of amusement such as roller rinks, commercialised dance halls, and public parks, where promiscuous introductions give an opportunity to a certain type of women (and men) will do much to prevent the consequent dangers. Adequate supervision and good lighting is imperative in public parks—otherwise they become simply a menace.

One of the first duties of a city is to provide for the recreation of its citizens. This is done by providing (1) supervised playgrounds for the children on school grounds or elsewhere; (2) Recreation centres for all the people. A city should provide playgrounds, skating and hockey rinks, tennis courts, ball grounds, golf links, concerts, motion pictures, club rooms for winter evenings, etc.

Toronto and other cities do this, spending millions of dollars. Most crime is committed during leisure hours. One of the best tests of character is how one spends one's leisure hours. Yet often a city offers no training but allows its citizens to be exploited by commercialized entertainment, providing no substitute. Play is as necessary as education or work. Recreation centres build up community spirit and pride in the city, and are potent in making good citizens of strangers, for they promote wholesome development. Since to cultivate and develope the play spirit is a profession in itself, it is necessary to secure someone who has himself been thoroughly trained. Not to do this is to foolishly court failure and the loss of public support.

The promotion and development of the play spirit devolves upon the Churches, the Board of Education, and the City itself.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Supervised Playgrounds.

Editor of The Review—

Sir.—Many of your readers have noted with pleasure the efforts being put forth to provide the children of this city with supervised playgrounds and bathing places.

The suggestion of having bathing places at Inverlea Park and at Crescent Street commends itself to all. The chief difficulty will be to secure good supervisors who will be able to teach the children to swim. The establishment of these bathing places should prove a great boon to both the boys and the girls of Peterborough.

The report of the discussion regarding the playgrounds was not so satisfactory. From the report, one would think that those taking part in the discussion confused athletic grounds with supervised playgrounds.

The supervised playground movement is quite distinct from providing athletic grounds for the youth of the city.

The larger boys who play baseball and the girls who play tennis can afford to go to the outskirts of the city where these games may be indulged in.

The supervised playground supplies an entirely different want. It is more of a combination of a gymnasium and a park than an athletic field.

The playground may be large or small but it must be a place where a mother may safely send her little children knowing that they will be carefully looked after and both amused and instructed.

A good supervisor is the most important consideration, and in all small cities the supervisor is a woman.

The hours during which the grounds are open are usually from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

No ground can be well equipped for less than $200. This equipment comprises swings, sand piles, sand pits for jumping, ropes for playing horse, hoops, teeter-boards, etc. Each ground must have some shady spots and be provided with a lavatory.

Last summer Brockville, a place half the size of Peterborough, established a supervised playground. The equipment cost them $227.00; the supervision cost $167.00. It was open during July and August and the daily attendance was 280.

The success of the undertaking depends almost entirely upon the supervisor. Children do not know how to amuse themselves but they soon learn under a skilful leader. When they get tired of play, the supervisor tells them stories and interests them in a number of ways.

The supervised play-ground is a real boon to the children who cannot leave the city during the summer months. It improves their health and physique and under a skilful supervisor develops a healthful mind and character.

Toronto, London, Hamilton, Belleville and other Ontario cities have established these playgrounds.

It may be of interest to know that Montreal and one or two other cities secured supervisors from Peterborough last summer.

A Well-Wisher.

OBITUARY

THE LATE JOHN TAYLOR.

An old resident of this locality passed away to-day (April 29th) at 500 George Street, in the person of Mr. John Taylor at the age of 62 years. The late Mr. Taylor had been sick for a long time, over two years, and during his last illness the family moved to Peterborough. The deceased was born in Otonabee near Mather's Corners, and was a successful farmer. He was a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters, who will have charge of the funeral ceremonies, the officiating clergymen being the Rev. Robt. Pogue and the Rev. Mr. Goodwill of Keene. The deceased was a member of the Keene Presbyterian Church, and leaves to mourn his loss, besides his wife, two sons and three daughters, Fred H., Bounty, Sask., Roy, Heeley Falls, Mrs. John Douglass, Millgrove, Sarah, of Abernethy, Sask., and Elsie at home. He is also survived by two brothers, J. H., Peterboro, James of Buffalo, and a half-brother, Robert Knox of Toronto, and one sister, Mrs. John Rae.

The funeral in charge of the C.O.O.F., will take place to-morrow, Thursday, from his late residence, where a service will be held at one o'clock, thence at 1.30 to Keene Cemetery. The pall bearers will be Howard Smithson, Thos. Graystock, Erastus Wood, John Dickson, Wm. Rae and Robert Adamson.

OFFICERS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL

The annual meeting of the St. James' Sunday School took place last night, at which several reports were read showing the great advance made by that department of the church during the past year. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Supt.—Mr. A. E. Prest.
Assistants—Messrs. J. O. Fife and Wm. McLaren.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. J. O. Fife.
Librarians—Messrs. E. Eakins and L. Wilson.
Supt. of Primary Department—Miss M. Collins.
Supt. of Home Department—Mrs. J. M. Welbourn.
Supt. of Temperance Department—Mr. J. Moss.

To remove coffee stains, stretch the napkin or tablecloth over the mouth of a pitcher and pour boiling water through the cloth.

If you drop grease on the kitchen floor sprinkle soda on it quickly and then pour boiling water. The spots will come out easily.

LUMBERMEN GLAD FARMERS ARE MAD

Men of the Woods Need Showers to Get Out the Logs

While the majority of the citizens assumed a grouch as soon as they caught a glimpse of the weather this morning, there were a few who received it joyously and were jubilant. All spring the usual anxiety has been felt around the lumbering firms' offices as to the chances of getting their drives down and the officials felt peeved every time someone remarked that the water in the river was low or the probs. for the morrow prohpesied fine and warm. The river is some three feet below its usual height, and unless the water rises the lumbermen are going to experience a great deal of trouble. The rain today will help a trifle, but it needs about three days of steady downpour to rectify matters.

The farmers are more or less disappointed with the rain, as they are particularly desirous of getting on the land, but if it grows real warm after the showers they will be satisfied. One farmer remarked to a Review man this morning that a good rain like this opens up the ground and a warm wind following it can dry things up sufficiently to start tilling the soil in a very short time.

HOGS WITHOUT TAILS COME NEXT

Packers Will Sell the Tail and Backbone Separate

Meat dealers of this city will in the near future buy their pork minus the tail and a small piece of the backbone meat, as the Chicago packers, who control practically all the trade of the continent, have decided to sell the tail and backbone separate from the hog. Such is the word received here to-day. It is hardly likely that consumers will buy this latest style of "eats," so it may be taken for granted that the tails will be used for canned meats.

Mr. W. McCracken, of the Gordon-Davies company, in discussing the latest move on the part of the packers, stated it had not taken effect here as far as he could learn.

"At present we get everything but the squeal, but conditions are changing so rapidly that the tailless hog will no doubt become universal. A few years ago we could hardly give liver away. To-day we can hardly secure enough to meet the demand and we get five cents a pound for it. In Toronto it is worth ten and twelve cents," said Mr. McCracken.

The Assassins.

The Assassins were a religious and military order who came into existence during the eleventh century in Persia and who devoted themselves to the destruction after stealthy approach of all who opposed the Moslem faith in any way. The crusaders met with a branch of these desperate zealots in Syria, and many of the warriors of the cross were slain relentlessly and with mysterious suddenness in consequence. The Tartars exterminated the Persian Assassins in 1256, and fourteen years later the Syrian band of murderers was wiped out by an Egyptian ruler. But the name they bore remains as a designation of dread.

Old Time Newspapers.

The earliest English newspaper, Nathaniel Butter's Weekly News, had several predecessors abroad. The first of these in point of time was the Ordinarij Avisa, the publication of which began at Strassburg in 1608, fourteen years before the appearance of Nathaniel Butter's venture. In 1620 Abraham Verhoeven founded the Nieuws Thijdingen at Antwerp, and this continued to appear weekly for 227 years. The oldest existing newspaper is apparently the Swedish Official Gazette, which dates back to 1644.—London Opinion.

BARRIES LTD. WILL HAVE NEW AND MODERN HOME

Store and Factory, South of Customs House to be Erected at Cost of $45.000—Growth of Business Makes This Demand

Having received permission from the Works Committee to utilize a portion of the street sidewalk for elevator purposes, and to extend the basement to the sidewalk, Barries Ltd. will commence building operations on a $45,000 store and factory building on the property on George Street directly south of the Customs House. Announcement of the firm's plans which have been held up pending the action of the Works Committee, were made this morning by Mr. Thomas Barrie. The new structure will be one of the most elaborate in the city, and will be modern in every particular.

Speaking of the new home of Barries Ltd., Mr. Barrie stated that increased business had demanded a change. At present the company is using the old Baptist church for manufacturing purposes, but as soon as the new building is erected all work will be carried on there. At present the firm employs about 50 hands, and the owners expect to increase the staff when the change is made to the new building.

Four Storey Structure.

The plans for the building, which were drawn up by Bond and Scott, of Toronto, call for a four storey, with basement, steel and concrete structure. The front of the building will be elaborately finished with fancy tile and possibly Roman stone. The building will be equipped with a passenger elevator, which will be situated directly inside of the large front doors. It will be heated by a central heating plant of the most modern type. The top storey will be used for manufacturing purposes, while the lower floor and basement will be used for the firm's retail and wholesale trade. The remainder of the building will be devoted to office space. No doubt the offices will be rented rapidly, as the facilities will be very convenient. The Barrie Building will be the only office building in the city with an elevator service.

The erection of the building will impove street conditions in the section to a great extent, as it will have a frontage of 53 feet and a depth of about 100 feet. That business returns and future growth of the city warrant the enterprise displayed by the firm is certain, as Mr. Barrie has great faith in the future growth of the city.

Speaking of an article in a local the other evening concerning trade conditions, Mr. Barrie said, "The furriers are not in accord with the statement that business has been disastrous. Barrie Ltd., with its branches in Saskatoon, Edmonton and Regina, while not receiving the business it would had conditions been normal, had not felt the shrinkage and had received more than it's share of the trade. We are now ready to go ahead and expend considerable money in improvements. The new building will be up to the minute. It will offer advantages for window display and show room purposes which should prove welcome to the firm's many patrons. Particular attention has been paid in the plans to any details which will convenience the public. The building will be fireproof, the architects having considered that feature from every angle, while the ventilating system will be perfect. The lighting facilities will be perfect as far as time and money in the arrangement can provide."

Tenders at Once.

Mr. Barrie does not know as yet just how long it will take to erect the building, but tenders will be asked for at once, and the contractors will be urged to complete the work as soon as possible.

The erection of the building will provide work for many of Peterborough's unemployed, and it is more than likely that the contractors will be urged to employ Peterborough skilled and unskilled labor as far as it is possible.

DENNISTOUN AVE. RESIDENTS MAY CELEBRATE

Long Delayed Improvements To Avenue Likely to Be Undertaken.

THE SEWER FOREMAN

J. H. Taylor's Complaint Will Be Considered by Board of Works

More tree questions. Last evening the Board of Works was waited upon by County Clerk Ed. Elliott, who asked permission to cut down four trees on his property on Manning Avenue. The trees were crowding on each other and dying out, therefore he asked the permission of the Board to better the conditions.

On the motion of Ald. Johnston and the Mayor, the City Engineer will deal with the matter.

A communication from the Board of Health regarding the construction of a sewer on Bethune Street was read. Moved by the Mayor, seconded by Ald. Stratton, that the sewer be granted. Carried.

Sewer Foreman.

The City Engineer's report that he had appointed Ed. Wade as Sewer Foreman was received.

"Who was foreman last year?" asked Ald. Stratton.

On being informed that Mr. Neary had been foreman last year, he enquired why not this year also. He was informed by the Board that Mr. Neary was still on the staff.

W. A. Hunter, Park Street, wrote the Board that he had been wrongly assessed for his property on that street.

"Something is radically wrong in our city. Numerous complaints are received that people are assessed for too much land," was the theory advanced by the Mayor.

"Are not notices sent out?" asked Ald. Johnston.

"They don't read them," remarked the chairman.

"That is their fault, then," smiled Ald. Anderson.

"You can't make a man pay for what he doesn't get," remarked the Mayor.

Ald. Johnston moved, seconded by Ald. Green, that the matter be taken up by the Engineer and City Solicitor. The motion was carried.

The exhaust steam pipe at the McDonald's Mill formed a short discussion. The Board were of the opinion that it was a detriment to have the steam go by the way of the sewer and dangerous to have it escape across the street as at present. The Street Railway Co. have complained that the view is obstructed. On motion of the Mayor and Ald. Saunders, the City Engineer and Chairman will confer with the City Solicitor as to what steps to take.

Action will be taken to stop the scavengers from using the sewers in an improper manner.

City Engineer Parsons was also asked to report on the cost of removal of the two standpipes, one on Denistoun Avenue and the other on George Street.

Rejoice! Rejoice!

The residents of Denistoun Avenue may hold a celebration this year, for according to the conversation of the Board last evening, repairs will be made to Denistoun Avenue immediately.

A communication was received asking for the Board's endorsement in regard to C. H. Rogers buying two water frontage lots, land 146 and 147 in East City, for the purpose of erecting a building and also to construct a wharf.

The Board held no objections in the matter, and the approval of the Board to the request was granted, on the motion of Ald. Greene and Stratton.

An amendment, on the motion of Ald. Anderson and Greene, was passed, by which Mr. Rogers must have the wharf securely chained for safety.

The claim of J. H. Taylor, of Dublin Street, regarding a sewer was left with the City Engineer to report, on the motion of Ald. Johnston and the Mayor.

A bunch of invitations to numerous affairs throughout the province and other conventions was passed up for further consideration.

Improvement Needed.

Evidently the conditions on the road on Aylmer Street must be pretty bad when Ald. Johnston describes them as being awful, and remarks Hully Gee, when are you going to fix this part of the street.

He was promised that the road would be fixed as soon as possible.

FEARS ENTERTAINED FOR COAL SCHOONER JAMIESON

May Have Gone Down During Fierce Gale Tuesday Night

HAS NOT REPORTED

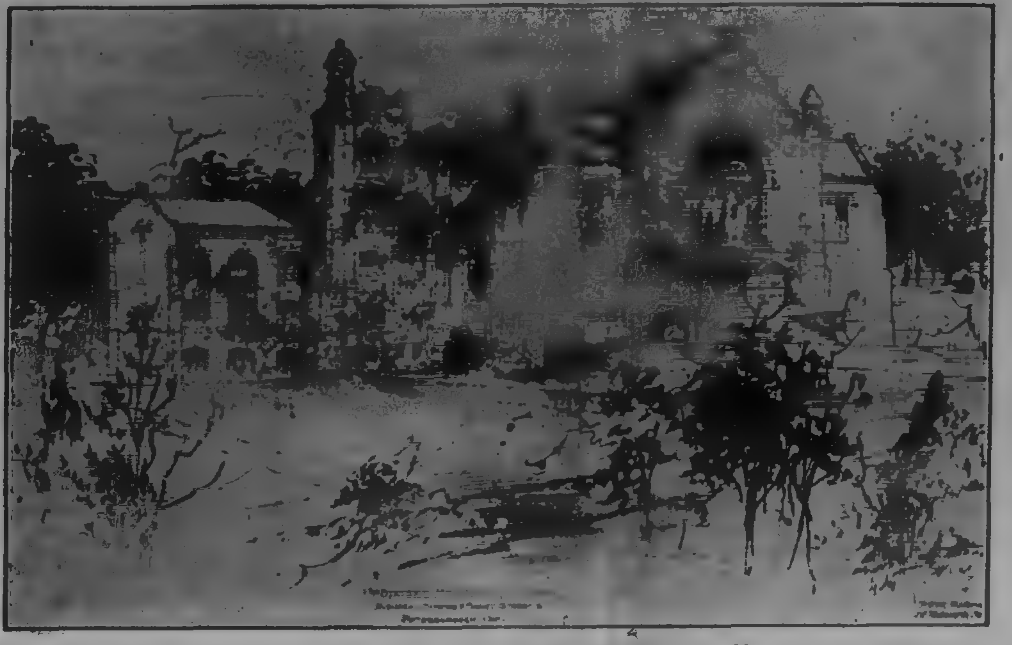
Canadian Press Despatch.

Kingston, April 30. — The coal schooner Jamieson, owned by Captain McCullough, Napanee, which cleared from Oswego, Tuesday afternoon, with coal for Napanee, has not arrived, and is not reported at any shelter port, and it is feared she went down Tuesday night in a fierce gale which blew all night. There were seven persons aboard, including Captain Jamieson and wife; William Hearns and wife, David Hearns and a negro named Johnson, all of Napanee. The schooner Keewatin, while sheltering in Collins Bay last night was rammed by the schooner Julia Merril, losing her jibboom and bowsprit, and she sprung a leak, but with the aid of pumps got into port safely.

The tug Umbria, crossing from Cape Vincent during the night ran ashore at Carleton Island. The crew are all safe.

THE NEW CHARLOTTE STREET METHODIST CHURCH



The new Church to be erected for the Charlotte Street Methodists will have a seating accommodation for nine hundred people. It will be of Trent Valley stone and will cost upwards of $60,000. Burke, Horwood and White, of Toronto, are the architects, with Mr. Burke supplying the plans. It is interesting to note that Mr. Burke worked on the plans of the George Street Methodist Church.

It is not expected that the church will be ready for use this year.

FAVORABLE OUTLOOK IN BUILDING

SOME FIGURES AND FACTS WHICH SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

MANY DWELLINGS

A glance at the building permits issued from the city hall this month shows that building conditions have improved wonderfully over February and March. The total for this month, which is $95,315, although about $20,000 less than the total for the corresponding period of last year, is very encouraging. In April of last year several permits covering the erection of large buildings were issued, while this month the largest work undertaken in the building line called for an expenditure of $7,000. The fact that the Barries Ltd. will erect a $45,000 building will send May off to a grand start, and it should easily surpass the corresponding period of 1913. The work carried on this month has been confined chiefly to the construction of new dwellings.

Builders throughout the city expect conditions to improve steadily now, and although they are not predicting any great boom claim that work for many men will be provided in the building line.

The permits issued during the past week follow:

W. C. Barry, dwelling, Sherbrooke Street, $2,000.

F. B. Johnston, dwelling, Frederick Avenue, $2,600.

Chas. H. Huffman, dwelling, King Street, $2,500.

John Crane, dwelling, Weller St., $4,000.

Chas. Rishor, alterations, Simcoe Street, $75.

Reta Reid, apartment house, Murray Street, $5,000.

Anthony Taylor, dwelling, Murray Street, $3,850.

The following table gives the comparison of the four months of this year and those of 1913:

| | 1913 | 1914 |
|---|---|---|
| January .. .. | $5,400 | $28,500 |
| February .. .. | 7,500 | 300 |
| March .. .. .. | 2,320 | 5,665 |
| April .. .. .. | 116,536 | 95,315 |

TIT FOR TAT

Board of Works Has Healthy Account Against Water Commissioners

In accordance with a neatly typed account submitted last evening to the Board of Works by the Engineering department, the Water Commissioners are due for a shock.

This arose over the Water Commissioners sending an account to the Board of Works for a bill of about $75.

The Works bill submitted last evening is to the extent of $215.00.

Ald. Johnston remarked that they should send them the bill.

"Ask for a check," said the Mayor.

Ald. Anderson moved, seconded by Ald. Stratton, that an account be sent to the Water Commissioners. The motion was carried.

Members of the Board of Works have been more or less nettled at the action of the Water Commissioners in sending in accounts, and the Board is determined to charge up every legitimate item to the Water Commissioners.

A DARNED SHAME.

"To-day is the last day we can sell them," is the cry of the small corner grocer to-day, and also a number of the barber shop proprietors, in connection with the $40 license for cigarettes.

"It's a darned shame," remarked one to a reporter.

Chief Thompson, however, remarked to the Review that it was one of the best things that had happened for some time.

WHY LICENSE COMMISSIONERS ASKED RULING

On the Application for Hotel License in East City

It may be of interest to the public generally to learn just what prompted the Board of Liquor License Commissioners to send to the License Department at Toronto for a ruling in the petition presented by Geo. Lipsett, who applied for a license for his hotel in East City.

The petition first signed did not include the certificate as demanded by the Act. The signatures were there, but there was no description as to the location of the petitioners. Neither were the signatures sworn to. Later the wording of the certificate and the names of the petitioners were typed on paper separate from the original petition, and without definition as to location.

This made three documents. Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., solicitor for the Commissioners, gave a ruling to the effect that the petition was not legal. The three sections of the Act, relating to an application for a hotel license are as follows:

Section 4 of the Act says: In the case of an application for a tavern or shop license by a person who is not at the time of making such application a licensee under this Act, or in the application for such license for or transfer thereof, to premises which are not then licensed, the petition must be accompanied by a certificate signed by a majority of the electors entitled to vote at the elections for the Legislative Assembly in the polling sub-division in which the premises sought to be licensed are situated, and the said majority must be at least one-third of the said electors who are at the time of such application residents within the said polling sub-division.

As regards the certificate, Section E of the Act set forth "Such certificate shall be in accordance to the form given in Schedule A hereto or to the like effects in respect to the fitness of the applicant to have a license on the premises in which it is proposed to carry on the business and the desirability on the grounds of public convenience of having a license granted therefor.

The form of certificate follows:

To the Board of License Commissioners of the License District of West Peterborough: We, the undersigned electors of Polling subdivision No.....of the City, wherein are situated the premises in respect of which........is applying for a tavern license for the ensuing license year, do hereby certify that ........., the applicant for the said license, is a fit and proper person to be licensed to serve liquor and to keep hotel, and that the premises on which the said......proposes to carry on business for which he seeks a license are in our opinion suitable therefor and that the same are situated in a place where the carrying on of the said business will not be an annoyance to the public generally.

And we have hereby appended our names and the distance approximately at which we respectively reside or own property from said premises for which the license is sought.

THIS CASE HAS SOME FINE POINTS

Considerable interest is being evinced in the police court case of Thompson vs. Fisher, which comes before the Magistrate to-morrow. In all probability, the Chief will try to have the conviction, if he gets one, established as a precedent for further cases. Fisher, the defendant, is charged with a breach of the transient and traders by-law.

Most of us even can't do our duty without making a fuss about it.

THE BRAVE SCOTT AT THE SOUTH POLE

Commander Evans Will Tell The Story in This City

Commander Evans, second in command of the famous Scott expedition, will lecture in this city on May 13th, when he will himself tell the thrilling story of "Scott's Discovery of the South Pole," illustrated by remarkable stereopticon pictures by H. G. Ponting and Dr. Wilson of the lost party. The story is the same as would have been told by Scott had he lived.

This is no doubt one of the most important lectures ever backed by the local men interested, and everything has been completed for the lecture. In all probability an official welcome of the city to the hero of the South Pole will be one of the features.

TOBACCONISTS DON'T LIKE THE $40 LICENSE FEE

Some Have Secured Their License at $15.

The action of the City Fathers in placing the cost of a license, allowing the sale of cigarettes, at $40.00 has been met with divided feeling among the local tobacconists. They fought it before and had it reduced to $15.00 but the efforts of their petition and deputation have been fruitless for the council's former decision was reversed and the original by-law adopted.

One tobacco dealer informed a Review scribe today that the average man in his trade must realize $300 from the sale of cigarettes before he can make $40. The business accruing from the sale of that style of smokes per month is about $100. This will leave the tobacconist selling cigarettes for three months without any profit in order to sell them lawfully for the year. The up-town tobacconist does not figure much on the increase in his business with the corner grocer frozen out, and it is doubtful if there is one of them selling $40 worth of cigarettes a year. They are generally handled merely as an accommodation.

Mr. Louis Yeotes claimed that the license assisted him a little as he thought his retail trade would increase with the smaller dealers out. He sells considerably by wholesale and handles perhaps more than any other dealer in the city. His wholesale business will be affected, of course when the business is confined exclusively to the business section of the city as it will when the by-law comes into effect. Mr. Yeotes is agitating a license on tobacco in every form which he thinks is the only correct manner of governing its sale.

Some of the parties engaged in the sale of cigarettes have taken out their licenses for $15 and were all supposed to have the document by May 1st but since the amendment was defeated an extension in time will very likely be given.

SIX BODIES FROM MINE

WERE HUDDLED TOGETHER AND BURNED BEYOND RECOGNITION

Canadian Press Despatch

Eccles, W. Va., April 30.—Rescue parties penetrated to the bottom of the shaft of No. Five mine this morning, and found six bodies huddled together burned beyond recognition. Further on in the galleries, more bodies were recovered, and hoisted to the surface. Inspectors believe it is possible that some imprisoned miners may yet be found alive.

UP GOES THE PRICE IF BREAD MUST BE WRAPPED

Bakers Give Their Opinion Regarding Recommendations of Board of Health

At a recent meeting of the Board of Health a set of regulations was drawn up governing bakeshops, and a copy sent to the various proprietors. These regulations will come up in the form of a recommendation to the City Council, and may form a by-law, but it might be well to take a glimpse at the question from the standpoint of a baker.

The first regulation states as follows: "Employees must wear clean white overalls, smocks and caps." The clean part of the clause meets with the approval of all, as does the cap, but the advisability of wearing a smock is questioned. A smock is a very loose garment and when a man is handling bread, or in fact working at any hard task, he cannot be adorned in a kimona. The men at present wear a shirt waist, with short sleeves, and the bottom tucked beneath the bands of their overalls. It would be impossible to force the men to forsake their usual attire and wear a smock. A Review reporter in speaking of this clause to Mr. Harry Stock, was informed that his men come to work in their usual clothes, but changed everything and put on clothes which are worn exclusively in the bakeshop.

The Use of Screens.

The clause dealing with fitting of windows and doors with screens and the third calling for lavatories to be property located, are invariably carried out, while the fourth, reading, "the premises and utensils to be kept in a perfectly clean condition," will not be hard to enforce as at present the bakers of this city are a class of conscientious men.

"Premises to be whitewashed or painted at least twice a year," is the fifth rule and the bakers are not in sympathy with its idea. A man with an extensive building, such as Hooper's, Lush's or Stock's, would necessitate considerable uncalled for expenditures if this rule were to be abided with, hence their objection. To make a set of laws is a very easy task, but to have them observed and their suggestions materialize is a horse of a different color.

Bread Must Be Wrapped.

The last clause, namely, "Bread must be wrapped before put into the delivery wagon," is the clause that arouses the ire of the bread producers. The idea is thought to be a benefit to the general public, but is it? The average housewife has her mind set on purchasing one style of loaf, and it is hard to find two ladies in the same block who request that the same kind of bread be left at their door. One wants a light crust, another a shade darker, another a square loaf, and another a sandwich loaf, but if the bread is to be wrapped, it will be done by machinery and sealed, thus the purchaser will have no choice. The machines will wrap only loaves of uniform size, and the mesdame's choice as to style of loaf will also be forced into a forgotten fad.

If this set of laws is forced upon the bakers, what will it mean? Up with the cost of living. At present a small loaf can be purchased for 5 cents, or 22 loaves for a dollar (cash.) The selling of a loaf for less than 5 cents is not practised anywhere, but in this city, and has gained a name of "the cheap bread city" for Peterboro.

Extra expenditure by the bakers to satisfy the ideas of a few, will blot out the colloquial title and furthermore will have the public paying a little more for their bread. Every bread man the Review scribe has spoken to on this subject threatens to increase the price, so it must be more than a "bluff." It is possible to purchase wrapped bread if desired under the present circumstances for a little more money, then why not allow the public to judge for themselves? If a few want dainties, let them pay for it, but "let well enough alone," they say.

AMENDMENT TO ACT HELPS THE SEWERAGE SCHEME

City Can Enter Adjoining Municipality When Provincial Board of Health Gives Approval

The sewerage disposal scheme of the city has been very materially assisted by an amendment to the Public Health Act, passed at the present session of the Legislature.

The city proposed to have the disposal plant on the east side of the Otonabee, and plans have been prepared to that effect.

With the amendment to the Act, there can be no prevetative action taken by an adjoining municipality, so long as the Provincial Board of Health approves, and as the city or any other municipality for that matter, is largely in the hands of the Provincial Board, in regard to important undertakings affecting the public health, the position of the city is made much more satisfactory.

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., has given much of his time, in the interests of this amendment, and the City Council and citizens generally will be glad to learn that a difficulty which threatened serious consequences has beeu practically overcome.

3.a. Section 94 of the Public Health Act is amended by adding thereto the following subsections:

(7) The sewerage system or sewage disposal plant of an urban municipality may, with the approval of the Provincial Board, be continued into, or through, or be situated in an adjoining township municipality, but before approving of any such work the Provincial Board shall give notice to the clerk of the township and shall hear and consider any objections which the council of the township or the residents therein may make to the location of the works.

(8) When the approval of the Provincial Board has been obtained, the corporation of the urban municipality may enter upon, take and use such lands in the township as may be necessary, and for that purpose shall have and may exercise the same powers within the township as it has within its own municipality, and paragraph 56 of section 399 of the Municipal Act and clauses a and b following the said paragraph shall not apply.

NO RESTRICTIONS ON PARCEL POST

Service is Complete and Has Won Popularity.

GOOD BUSINESS HERE.

Aditional Fee for Delivery Has Been Abolished.

Postmaster Edgar has received a circular from the Post Office Department at Ottawa pointing out that from the numerous inquiries received from the public on the subject of Parcel Post it would seem desirable to emphasize the fact that all restrictions as regards weight and delivery have been removed.

Parcel Post packets may now be mailed up to the limit of weight of eleven pounds. It has been the intention to limit the weight of Parcel Post packets to six pounds during the organization period, but as the organization was quickly completed, heavier parcels have now been handled for some time, it having been determined to give the public the full benefit. Parcel Post packets may now therefore be mailed up to the limit stated.

Fee is Withdrawn.

The additional fee of five cents charged at first on parcels mailed for delivery in places where the letter carrier is in operation has been abolished and this additional fee is not now charged.

Fully 125 parcels per day are going through the local Post Office. The rural population are also making exceptionally good use of the new system which has proved to be one of the greatest assets to the department.

It is our pocketbooks that make hypocrites of most of us.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1914

THIS CITY IS TO SEND A DELEGATE.

PETERBOROUGH is to have a representative at the International Conference on City Planning to be held in Toronto next month. At the last Council meeting the matter was turned over to the Board of Works and they will see that a delegate goes from this city. A great deal of data in regard to municipal problems ought to be presented at this conference judging from the number of papers to be presented by well known authorities. Those dealing with transit problems will be of interest to every city of fair size.

The transit problems of the present day have been made difficult by short-sighted city-planning in the past. How frequently do we see towns whose central, business streets are narrow and congested, while the outlying, residential sections have roadways that are broad and spacious! How universal in our larger cities is the mechanical rule-of-thumb layout of streets in checker-board array, disregarding topography and natural routes of travel! The people of a generation ago can hardly be blamed for not foreseeing the tremendous development of electric traction and automobile traffic that has taken place in the last quarter of a century, but we of today are very stupid to go on planning our new cities on the model of the old. The building of sky-scrapers is adding to the congestion in the centres of our cities and multiplying our traffic problems in the same ratio that it increases the population on a given area.

In connection with transit facilities, civic foresight must take heed of the franchises, contracts, and vested rights which public utility companies may be suffered to acquire. A franchise may offer a monopoly, but this monopoly should be carefully controlled. Only too seldom are public rights properly safe-guarded when granting privileges to large companies. The cities are not alone to blame. For example, legislatures may confer charters upon railway companies giving them the right to locate their lines where they please and perhaps to destroy the most carefully considered city plan because they are not amenable to municipal control. A similar observation applies to telephone and telegraph companies. The whole question of the granting of franchises and of the protection of public interests in relation thereto is a question that urgently requires the thoughtful attention of our public men.

LIBERAL PARTY NOT PROGRESSIVE.

MR. A. K. CAMERON speaking before the Reform Club in Montreal, claimed that the Liberals during their tenure of office, had been gradually getting further and further away from the people whom they were supposed to represent, and that after 1896 they had lost many old friends because of their failure to implement some pre-election promises. Mr. Cameron also claimed that the Liberal party had not been making progress since 1911, and that the outlook for the immediate future was not very encouraging. The effect of the Liberal member's words was profound, if for no other reason than the great truth of what he said. He was followed by the Honourable Sidney Fisher, who rather than admit that the Liberal party had become inefficient and fallen from its high estate, put forth the idea that the election of 1911, resulting in the overthrow of the Liberal administration, was due to what he called a temporary mental aberration. Mr. Cameron proposed that a convention be held to discuss and formulate a platform for the Liberal party, a proposal which shows the real state of disunion and dissatisfaction that prevails in the Liberal party at the present time.

THE GRAND TRUNK PROBLEM.

THE COMPLEXITY OF the Grand Trunk problem is seen in the large number of visits of the president to Ottawa and in his many conferences with the government. By the terms of the original charter the Grand Trunk Pacific will have running rights over the Government section for the first seven years for nothing, so that no payment on account of rental would be due until 1919. Before that time it is anticipated that the system running through a new and undeveloped section, known to be rich in mineral and agricultural and forest wealth, would have made considerable profits before the first payment would be due on account of rental. "Working expenditure," is all that the company is called upon to pay for the first seven years; for the next forty-three years the company is to pay the government for the use of the eastern section three per cent. upon the cost of construction of the eastern division—precisely the point which they will probably ask to have modified in view of revelations in connection with the building of the government section.

It is on account of this that Mr. Chamberlain, the president of the Grand Trunk, has been to Ottawa so frequently of late, consulting with the Premier in respect of a situation which is radically different to what it was when the original charter was signed. This is a matter which has been kept out of the public view; but it is most important, as it affects the future of the system.

Another point of importance is the clause which states that the company shall lease the Government section for the first fifty years; at the expiration of that period, the company is to have the privilege of an extension of the lease for another fifty years, in the event that the Government determines not to operate the road itself, but should it do so the company shall be entitled for a further period of fifty years to such running powers and rights as may be necessary to continuity of operations between the said western division and other portions of the company's system, and the Grand Trunk Railway System, on such terms as may be agreed upon.

The original agreement seems to deal with great cycles of time, while indifferent to the present and the practical; but under the terms of it there could be, and doubtless would be, infinite embarrassment. The company might not be able to pay the interest; the Government might have to take over the road; the taking over the road might embarrass the Grand Trunk proper, if connections and communications were not maintained by the government officials—thus necessitating loss and disruption—the two things which the connection of the Grand Trunk with the Grand Trunk Pacific were intended to avoid. "Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay," and better an agreement which dealt with the concrete present than one which projects into the ambiguous future. That is the opinion of railway men who foresee much trouble and embarrassment and also the necessity for complete modification of the original terms when the system gets down to brass tacks—modifications which will take a shorter grip on time, and deal with the immediate present.

THE REAL REASON.

MR. BURNHAM'S PROPOSITION to consider the desirability of adopting dirigible balloons as in Germany for the transportation of freight served two purposes, according to Hansard. One was the proposition itself. The other was to resume and prolong a discussion likely to end at the wrong time. Mr. Burnham also stated that the West did not want, after all, the Georgian Bay Canal. This statement provoked controversy which Mr. Oliver ended by confirming Mr. Burnham's statement. The net result of the debate then was that a difficult proposition for the Government has been solved by the Opposition If the G. B. Canal is not wanted by the West who does want it?

FREIGHT BY AIRSHIPS.

WHILE THE TWO PARTIES at Ottawa and large deputations out of Ottawa are squabbling over the question whether the government shall build the Georgian Bay Ship Canal or merely enlarge the ones they have got, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.A., M.P., solved the difficulty in about three minutes. Of course his solution will please neither deputation but it is one to which they cannot seriously object and the government is relieved for the time being of a large expenditure. In short, Mr. Burnham proposes to do away with canals or rather to supplement them with a balloon system of freighters.

Mr. Burnham stated to the House that he knew of a company that would soon lay before the Government a practical scheme for a system of dirigible balloons, operated in connection with aeroplanes or hydroplanes to carry freight between Winnipeg and Quebec. Dirigibles were now built, he said, that carried heavy loads, and, with a very small fraction of the cost of the Georgian Bay canal, a system of dirigibles could be provided that would be far more serviceable. They could sail against a 60 mile gale and were not tied up eight months of the year as the canal would be. These dirigible balloons were being used for the purposes of war but should not be left entirely for that. Mr. Burnham asked that the Government would seriously consider the proposition when it was laid before them.

With the continued experimentation and progress in the science of air navigation such a scheme has more of solid worth in it than at first appears. When one remembers what has been accomplished in air navigation for war purposes and that hydroplanes are used for sport races in California surely the necessities of commerce could be well served by the same means that are utilized with much success in war and sport.

WHAT IS ALL THIS clean-up talk about in Montreal? We thought they voted against a clean-up there recently.

What a Comma Did.

Pittsburg Dispatch.

At a dinner in London a flowery speaker gave a toast: "Woman! Without her, man is a brute." Either a cynical or a stupid compositor changed a comma and made it read: "Woman, without her man, is a brute."

The Fox Ranch Gamble.

Brockville Times.

The death of whole litters of fox ranches is now reported, and has caused a decided alarm in fox-breeding circles in Canada. The loss is estimated at $300,000. The incident goes far to confirm the oft-expressed opinion of the Brockville Times that black fox breeding was a hazardous gamble owing to the impossibility of breeding animals of this sort in captivity with permanent success. Trying to get expensive pelts in this easy fashion has but two results; either they cannot be bred in numbers large enough to make big profits, or else they will be bred in such great quantities that the price will be cut down. So far the fox-breeders have made easy money by selling brood and stud foxes to new breeders; there has been no great amount of money made by selling the hides of the animals bred in captivity.

The Kaiser and the Marseillaise.

London Opinion.

The long expected visit of the Kaiser to the French President was nearly marred by an accident and a slight piece of tactlessness on the part of the President's valet. On the first evening it appears that the Kaiser's brushes had failed through some mistaken misunderstanding to arrive in time. Brushes which had been presented to the President himself by the Service League of France were sent to His Majesty. To the horror of everyone within 40 yards of the room, no sooner had the Kaiser lifted them out of the box than the epic notes of the "Marseillaise" thundered forth from the backs of the brushes, which contained small music boxes. The valet who had taken them in had forgotten to turn on the silencer! The Kaiser, it is said, immediately dropped the brushes and went pale blue, his moustache wagging furiously. It was only after a long explanation in several languages that he was induced to believe that the incident was not a specially-designed and manoeuvred affront.

FAKES

By Walt Mason

There are so many fakes a mortal's bosom aches, and he to grief gives tongue, so often is he stung! He buys a box of pills to cure his grievous ills, the which they fail to do, and he is sad and blue, when comes the good old doc, and says they're made of chalk. He takes his roll and goes to buy a suit of clothes; then says the merchant wight, "These duds are strictly right! Of value they are full, and every thread is wool!" And then the poor galoot takes home the all wool suit, and when it's worn a week it has become a shriek. The trouser legs are shrunk, the coat and vest are punk, and all the cotton shows throughout the all wool clothes. Most everything he buys, from pickles down to pies, from juniper to jam, from hominy to ham, from caramel to cake, is but a dizzy fake. The ketchup's made of squash, the clothing will not wash, the hair dye's on the blink, and makes his whiskers pink, the horse he bought to drive imagines it's alive, but it's been dead three years—and so he sheds his tears, and sounds his bitter wail, which is of no avail. And when at last he dies he finds, to his surprise, his box, which should be oak, is pine—another joke!

Birthdays of Note

THURSDAY, APRIL THIRTIETH

THIS is the seventy-fourth birthday of WILLIAM WAINWRIGHT, the veteran vice-president of the Grand Trunk Railway System and the sole surviving link between the present and the old management. Mr. Wainwright was born in Manchester, England, and after seeing service in the old country came to Canada as a senior clerk in the chief accountant's office of the Grand Trunk in 1862. Beginning thus he rose steadily to his present rank in the Company's service. A man of sterling worth and great popularity, he was practically the only high official of the road who remained after the Hays' reorganization—a striking tribute to his personality. Despite his years he is still active and continues to bring his famous diplomatic powers to bear on negotiations affecting the system. He remains to-day the only man who has a complete knowledge of the history of the Grand Trunk from its early days.

May Have Fallen Overboard.

TORONTO, April 30. — "Thomas Preece, third-class passenger, S. S. Canada, reported missing, supposed overboard, inform wife, 86 Nairn avenue, Toronto."

This was the news of a probable tragedy in mid-ocean, conveyed by cable to Mr. H. B. Thorley, steamship agent, by the White Star Dominion Line officials at Liverpool, and received later by the Rev. P. Bryce, pastor of Earlscourt Central Methodist Church. Mr. Bryce immediately communicated with Mrs. Preece at the downtown factory where she was working, with the result that she visited him at the church, where he read her the contents of the cable.

Three Years For 17-Year-Old.

TORONTO, April 30.—After pleading guilty to charges of breaking into 182 Spadina avenue and the premises of George Lawrence on Wolesley street, William Redsell, only 17 years of age, was sentenced to three years in the Penitentiary by Magistrate Denison in the police court yesterday morning.

Isaac Levine and Samuel Stein, both 12 years of age, who were arrested with him, were remanded for a week in the shelter in the juvenile court yesterday morning.

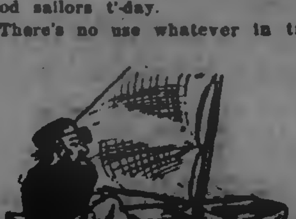
ON SAILIN'

SAILIN' is fine sport; ever try it? I know quite a lot o' people who made fine sailors till rough weather broke—and then; well, they sorter seemed to lose their interest in the fun. Others ag'in stuck it out, grinned and bore it, so's to speak. They reckoned the game was wuth the rough-an'tumble, the drenchin' and the sea-sickness. They're all of 'em good sailors t'-day.

There's no use whatever in tryin' to be a good sailor if you're jest a fair-weather one, not a bit. You've gotter make up your mind to stand most any kind o' treatment the big water sees fit t' hand ye.



If you set tight and take your medicine like a man you are goin' to win out. Sailin' is like everythin' else, includin' life. It takes grit to make a success of it.

COWARDICE COURT
BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

Without another word or so much as a glance at Lady Bazelhurst, Penelope Drake went swiftly from the room. The big hall clock struck the half hour after 11. Some one—a woman—was laughing in the billiard room below. The click of the balls came to her ears like the snapping of angry teeth. She did not hesitate. It was not in her nature. The room in which she had found so much delight was now loathsome to her. With nervous fingers she threw the small things she most cherished into a bag—her purse, her jewels, her little treasures. Somehow it seemed to her as if she were hurrying to catch a night train, that was all. With her own strong young arms she dragged the two huge trunks from the closet. Half an hour later they were full and locked. Then she looked about with a dry, mirthless smile.

"I wonder where I am to go," she murmured, half aloud. A momentary feeling of indecision attacked her. The click of the balls had ceased, the clock had struck 12. It was dark and still, and the wind was crying in the trees.

• • • • • • •

"She won't go," Lady Bazelhurst was saying to herself as she sat, narrow eyed and hateful, in her window looking out into the night. "Life is too easy here." The light from the porch lanterns cast a feeble glow out beyond the porte cochere and down the drive. As she stared across the circle the figure of a woman suddenly cut a diametric line through it and lost itself in the wall of blackness that formed the circumference. Lady Evelyn started and stared unbelievingly into the darkness, striving to penetrate it with her gaze. "It was she—Penelope," she cried, coming to her feet. "She's really gone—she meant it."

For many minutes she peered out into the night, expecting to see the shadow returning. A touch of anxious hope possessing her, she left the window and hurried down the corridor to Penelope's room. What she found there was most convincing. It was not a trick of the lanterns. The shadow had been real. It must be confessed that the peevish heart of Lady Bazelhurst beat rather rapidly as she hastened back to the window to peer anxiously out into the somber park with its hooting owls and chattering night bugs. The mournful yelp of a distant dog floated across the black valley. The watcher shuddered as she recalled stories of panthers that had infested the great hills. A small feeling of shame and regret began to develop with annoying insistence.

An hour dragged itself by before she arose petulantly, half terrified, half annoyed in spite of herself. Her husband still was sitting in the big chair, his face in his hands. His small, dejected figure appealed to her pity for the first time in the two years of their association. She realized what her temper had compelled her to say to him and to his sister. She saw the insults that at least one of them had come to resent.

"I hope that foolish girl will come back," she found herself saying, with a troubled look from the window. "Where can the poor thing go? What will become of her? What will every one say when this becomes known?" she cried, with fresh selfishness. "I—I should not have let her go like this."

Even as she reproached herself a light broke in upon her understanding; a thought whirled into her brain, and a moment later a shrill, angry, hysterical laugh came from her lips.

"She knew where she could go! How simple I am. Shaw will welcome her gladly. She's with him by this time—his doors have opened to her. The little wretch! And I've been trying so hard to pity her." She laughed again so shrilly that his lordship stirred and then looked up at her stupefied, uncertain.

"Hullo!" he grunted. "What time is it?"

"Oh, you're awake, are you?" scornfully.

"Certainly. Have I been dozing? What's there to laugh at, my dear?" he mumbled, arising very unsteadily. "Where's Pen?"

"She's gone. She's left the house," she said, recurring dread and anxiety in her voice. A glance at the darkness outside brought back the growing shudders.

"What—what d'ye mean?" demanded he, bracing up with a splendid effort.

"She's left the house, that's all. We quarreled. I don't know where she's gone. Yes, I do know. She's gone to Shaw's for the night. She's with him. I saw her going," she cried, striving between fear and anger.

"You're—you've turned her out?" gasped Lord Bazelhurst numbly. "In the night? Good Lord! Why—why did you let her go?" He turned and rushed toward the door, tears springing to his eyes. He was sobering now and the tears were wrenched from his hurt pride. "How long ago?"

"An hour or more. She went of her own accord. You'll find her at Shaw's," said her ladyship harshly. She hated to admit that she was to blame. But as her husband left the room, banging the door after him, she caught her breath several times in a futile effort to stay the sobs and then broke down and cried, a very much abused young woman. She hated everybody and everything.

CHAPTER VI.

In Which Dan Cupid Trespasses.

LADY BAZELHURST was right. Penelope was making her way through the blackest of nights toward the house of Randolph Shaw. In deciding upon this step, after long deliberation, she had said to herself: "Randolph Shaw is the only real man I've seen since coming to the mountains. I can trust him to help me tonight."

It was fully three miles to Shaw's place, most of the way over the narrow valley road. She knew she would encounter but few tortuous places. The last half mile, however, was steep, rugged and unfamiliar to her. She had ventured no nearer to his home than Renwood's deserted cottage, lying above and to the south of the road, almost at the base of the long hill on whose side Shaw had built his big home. To climb that hill was no easy task in daylight; at midnight, with the stars obscured by clouds and treetops, there was something perilously uncertain in the prospect.

Only the knowledge that patience and courage eventually would bring her to the end made the journey possible. Time would lead her to the haven; care would make the road a friend; a stout heart was her best ally. Strength of limb and strength of purpose she had, in use and in reserve. No power could have made her turn back willingly. Her anxious eyes were set ahead in the blackness. Her runaway feet were eager in obedience to her will.

"Why couldn't I have put it off until morning?" she was saying to herself as she passed down the graveled drive and advanced to meet the wall of trees that frowned blackly in her face. "What will he think? What will he say? Oh, he'll think I'm such a silly, romantic fool! No, he won't. He'll understand. He'll help me on to Plattsburg tomorrow. But will he think I've done this for effect? Won't he think I'm actually throwing myself at his head? No, I can't turn back. I'd rather die than go back to that house. It won't matter what he thinks. I'll be away from all of it tomorrow. I'll be out of his life, and I won't care what he thinks. England! Goodness! What's that?" She had turned a bend in the drive, and just ahead there was a light. A sigh of relief followed the question. It came from the lantern which hung to a stake in the road where the new stone gate posts were being built by workmen from town. Bazelhurst Villa was a quarter of a mile, through the park, behind her; the forest was ahead.

At the gate she stopped between the half finished stone posts and looked ahead with the first shiver of dismay. Her limbs seemed ready to collapse. The flush of anger and excitement left her face. A white, desolate look came in its stead. Her eyes grew wide, and she blinked her lashes with an awed uncertainty that boded ill for the stability of her adventure. An owl hooted in mournful cadence close by, and she felt her hair was going straight on end. The tense fingers of one hand gripped the handle of the traveling bag, while the other went spasmodically to her heart.

"Oh!" she gasped, moving over quickly to the stake on which the lantern hung. The wind was rushing through the treetops with increased fervor, the air was cool and wet with the signs of rain, a swirl of dust flew up into her face, the swish of leaves sounded like the splashing of water in the air. Holding her heart for minutes, she at last regained some of the lost composure. A hysterical laugh fell from her lips. "What a goose! It was an owl, and I've heard hundreds of them up here. Still, they do sound different outside of one's own room. It's going to rain. What wretched luck! Dear me, I can't stand here all night! How black it is ahead there! O-o-o-h! Really, now, it does seem a bit terrifying. If I only had a lantern it wouldn't be so"—Her gaze fell upon the laborers' lantern that clattered aimlessly, uselessly, against the stake. An instant later she had jerked it from its fastenings with a cry of joy. "I'll send it back when they go for my trunks. What luck!"

REMARKABLE CASE of Mrs. HAM

Declares Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her Life and Sanity.

Shamrock, Mo.—"I feel it my duty to tell the public the condition of my health before using your medicine. I had falling, inflammation and congestion, female weakness, pains in both sides, backaches and bearing down pains, was short of memory, nervous, impatient, passed sleepless nights, and had neither strength nor energy. There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body. I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again. I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if your medicines had not saved me. But now I can work all day, sleep well at night, eat anything I want, have no hot flashes or weak, nervous spells. All pains, aches, fears and dreads are gone, my house, children and husband are no longer neglected, as I am almost entirely free of the bad symptoms I had before taking your remedies, and all is pleasure and happiness in my home."—Mrs. JOSIE HAM, R. ## THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xv, 11-24. Memory Verses, 17-19—Golden Text, Luke xv, 18—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

In this third part of the parable which is spoken of in verse three as "this parable," including the three stories of the lost sheep, the lost coin and the lost son, we have beautifully set forth the heart of God the Father, as no one but the Son of God could tell it out, for "no man knoweth the Son but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him" (Matt. xi, 27). We are told in many places of the love of the Father, as in John iii, 16; I John iv, 8, 16; and of the love of the Son, as in Gal. ii, 20; Eph. v, 25. The love of the Spirit is mentioned in Rom. xv, 30. The love of God and His unwillingness that any should perish are two of the great foundation truths of all Scripture, and are perhaps nowhere more simply told than in this threefold parable. Man's helplessness, his deadness and his selfishness and enmity to God are also here set forth.

It may be difficult to see quite clearly whom the elder brother represents, but we would not need to seek far or long to find some really saved people who act a good deal like the elder brother when sinners who have wandered very far away are welcomed home.

I have read a discourse upon this chapter by a great Bible student in which he thinks that both the elder brother and the ninety-nine just persons represent the angels who never sinned. There seem to me to be many difficulties in this interpretation. We are quite safe in dwelling upon the love of God in seeking and welcoming home the lost ones, and we shall understand many things better when the intelligence symbolized by the many eyes of the cherubim shall be ours.

How many seem to think that they have a right to demand of God a portion of this world's goods and to do as they please with it! Such self will is the essence of sin and shows the heart of man toward God, and yet God often permits it. Every sinner is in the far country, far away from God, without God and without hope, living unto himself, his life all dark and void and nothing glorifying to God in it (Gen. i, 2; Dan. v, 23). The ungodly are compared to dogs and swine by our Lord Himself and also by the Spirit through Peter (Matt. vii, 6; II Pet. ii, 22). The comparison would not be at all flattering to some respectable sinners, but the Bible never says nice things about the enemies of God. There are many ways of wasting one's substance, and when we read that he had spent all we think of the sick woman who spent all that she had upon physicians and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse (Mark v, 26).

It was a good thing for this lost son that he became so desperately in want that he would fain have eaten swine's food, and it was a good thing for him that no man gave unto him. Possibly some "down and out" people might come to themselves sooner if no one helped them to be comparatively comfortable in their low down estate.

It is a great thing when one is led to see himself in his true light before God, when his heart cry is, "God be merciful to me, a sinner." It is a good experience for a saved sinner when he is led to say as Job did, "I abhor myself" (Job xlii, 6). Whatever leads us to see more of God and His goodness is a helpful experience. It was good for this man when he began to think about his father and the abundance there which he might be enjoying. It was well when he determined to return to his father, confess his sin and ask to be given a servant's place, but it was better when he actually arose and came to his father.

See the father's heart in verse 20, "When he was yet a great way off his father saw him and had compassion and ran and fell on his neck and kissed him." No upbraiding, not a word of faultfinding, just a loving welcome home and a kiss of reconciliation. Do we know God as such a Father, and are we ready to tell lost ones of such a welcome awaiting them if they will turn with true penitence to Him? The son said part only of what he had intended to say, but was not allowed to finish it. Instead of the servant's place it is the best robe, a ring on his hand, shoes on his feet and a feast of welcome, because the lost one had come home. If we really believed that there was such a reception awaiting penitent sinners, how could we help urging them to come home?

It is said that they began to be merry—salvation is only the beginning of joy that knows no end. Consider the elder brother as representing one who has from his youth known the way of life, a child of godly parents and truly saved, having at some time not definitely known to himself accepted the Lord Jesus. He never fell into bad habits, but was always known as a good sample of a consistent Christian, though by no means a happy one. He did not know his father as he might have done and had no use for returning prodigals. Did you never see such a one in the glass or elsewhere?

MILLBROOK NEWS

Rev. Mr. Johnston Gives Lecture on Home Rule.

MILLBROOK, April 29.—The town hall was fairly well filled Monday night last when Rev. Wm. Johnston discussed in a very able manner the question of Home Rule for Ireland. Rev. C. R. Spencer occupied the chair and introduced the speaker in a few appropriate remarks. He had been in close touch with Mr. Johnston as a member of the Ministerial Association for a year. The lecturer took up the question in a broad spirit, and after an introduction of the Home Rule measure of Hon. W. E. Gladstone gave four reasons why Ireland should not have home rule. He held the audience intensely interested for an hour and a half and not many left, but felt that Ireland would be better without it.

The joint choir rendered appropriate selections. A mixed quartette of young folks rendered a comic and Miss Thorndyke "I'll take the next boat back to Ireland," in good style.

A vote of thanks was tendered those taking part, and the meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

Calling the Bluff.

The following exchange of courtesy was recently chronicled in a German paper's advertisements:

"The gentleman who found a brown purse containing a sum of money in the Blumenstrasse is requested to forward it to the address of the loser, as he is recognized."

A couple of days later appeared the response, which, although courteous, had an elusive air, to say the least:

"The recognized gentleman who picked up a brown purse in the Blumenstrasse requests the loser to call at his house at a convenient day."—Everybody's.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

HENRY FORD WARS ON BAD HOUSING

Henry Ford has declared war against tenements and squalid rooming houses and no employe of the Ford Motor company will be permitted to live in them.

In a notice just sent to all the Detroit employes, Mr. Ford says the company expects each recipient of its profit-sharing plan to use his or her share in the profits for the good of themselves and their families and to "make more comfortable your home and living conditions."

Married and single men who do not live up to the modern standard of American every-day living are to be eliminated from the Ford organization. Married men who keep boarders in their home will lose their places. So will single men who reside in rooming houses such as have been found in Highland Park, where they sleep in shifts.

"These men of many nations must be taught American ways, the English language, the right to live," Mr. Ford said to-day. "Married men should keep their households for themselves and their immediate families. They should not sacrifice family rights, pleasure and comfort by filling their homes with roomers and boarders.

"Single men are expected to live under conditions that make for good manhood and good citizenship. It would not do for them to waste their share of the profits. Once they live correctly, breathe the real, fresh air of freedom, see that health and strength are fully conserved, we can make them good citizens."

"We now have forty-five investigators who are interviewing each employe. Every detail of their living is inquired into. They found one man, his wife, and three children living in four rooms, and there were five ducks in the bathtub—live ducks, too. He couldn't understand why he wasn't considered clean and a share in the profits had been denied him."

Next Monday an innovation at the Ford plant, an English-teaching school will be opened. The first class will comprise 200 students of eleven nationalities.—Chicago Tribune.

RAILWAY SERVICE THAT SATISFIES

Railway men, like workers in other spheres, are gratified when they find that their efforts to attend to the comfort of the travelling public are appreciated.

Mr. E. J. Chamberlin, President of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways, received the other day an interesting letter of commendation from an official, prominent in one of our industrial corporations.

The letter said:—

"On Tuesday, April 7th, 1914, the President of this company and myself took your train, No. 14, from Chicago to Toronto, occupying the drawing room in car No. 2, and it gives us a great deal of pleasure to say that the equipment, dining car service, and the manner in which this equipment was handled on curves, at stations and when dropping or picking up cars at different junction points, was most excellent.

"We have but recently returned from an extensive trip to the Pacific Coast, and have also been east several times within a short period, and do not know of any trip that we have made where the run was more thoroughly enjoyed than the trip above mentioned. Your conductors, trainmen and porters were all exceedingly courteous, and the dinner we had in your dining car between Chicago and Durand was most excellently prepared and served in splendid manner."

WHOLE MEXICAN AFFAIR MAY NOW BE CLEARED UP; CARRANZA ENTERS IN

Note From Rebel Leader Approving of Negotiations Leads to Hope That Scope of Peace Conference May Be Widened to Include Internal Dissensions.

WASHINGTON, April 30. — The scope of mediation plans for the settlement of the Mexican crisis was suddenly broadened last night so as to include the entire range of Mexican affairs — not alone the critical issue between the United States and the Huerta regime, but also the conflict between the elements of northern and southern Mexico, which have rent the republic for many months.

This signal enlargement of the mediation program followed the receipt, late in the day, of a formal acceptance by Gen. Carranza, chief of the Constitutional forces, of the principle of mediation as proposed by the ambassador from Brazil and the Ministers from Argentina and Chili.

Earlier in the day the mediators made another decisive move in asking the United States and Gen. Huerta to agree to an armistice by which all aggressive military movements would be suspended pending the outcome of the negotiations. The mediators confidently expect both sides to accept the armistice proposal. A separate proposal for an armistice as between Huerta and Carranza will also be made, and with its acceptance all the warring elements throughout Mexico, as well as the American forces, would maintain a military status quo.

The American Government in its formal reply to the armistice proposal will expressly stipulate that an untoward act toward Americans will be regarded as an infraction of the armistice.

Manzanillo Bombarded?

MEXICO CITY, April 30. — The port of Manzanillo, on the Pacific coast, was bombarded yesterday by an American warship, according to a telegram received yesterday by Gen. Blanquet, Mexican Minister of War, from Gen. Jose Maria Mier.

The telegram says the wharves and adjoining buildings were destroyed by shell fire.

Landing at Salina Cruz.

MEXICO CITY, April 30.—A despatch from Oaxaca says American marines landed at Salina Cruz yesterday after the American commander had threatened to open fire on the port in case the Mexican officials offered resistance.

DOWNEY ON TRIAL

Young Man Charged With Conspiracy in Insurance Case

ST. CATHARINES, April 30.—Charged with conspiring with H. L. Pearce of Toronto to defraud Dr. Currie of Merritton out of a sum of money, Leslie Downey was granted a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Campbell yesterday. The case was adjourned until to-day.

Dr. Currie testified that he subscribed for shares in the Colonial Life Insurance Co. of Canada, which Downey said had already applied for a charter and had appointed a prominent Toronto doctor chief examiner.

On the strength of these statements, and in view of the fact that he himself was to be appointed local medical examiner for the company, Dr. Currie claimed that he signed an application for twenty shares and paid the premium of $300 by check.

William Vale, deputy superintendent of insurance in the Attorney-General's Department at Toronto, testified that he had never had any application for a charter from the Colonial Insurance Co. A prospectus was filed on Feb. 20, 1913. Complaints had been received from all over the country about the company.

VILLA MAKES HAY

Rebel General Pushing His Campaign With Great Success

LONDON, April 30. — The relief caused in Mexico City by the proffered mediation of the South American republics was only transitory, according to a despatch dated April 28 from the Mexican capital to The Daily Telegraph. The correspondent adds that after having believed it had to face war with the United States the Mexican Government again finds itself confronted by revolution under more unfavorable circumstances. It fears that mediation has come too late to affect the internal struggle, and that it will only prove to be a vain attempt to settle by pacific means a situation which is apparently approaching a violent solution.

Francisco Villa, according to the correspondent, has united under his command the most important nucleus of the combatant forces, and appears to have resumed hostilities with greater vehemence and success.

MINERS GIVING UP THEIR ARMS

Era of Peace Dawning in Colorado Mine Districts

DENVER, Col., April 30.—Under a truce agreement, which stopped the fighting at Walsenberg yesterday afternoon, approximately 650 strikers to-day are surrendering arms to militia officers appointed by Col. Verdeckberg. The strikers were not taken into custody, but will be subject to prosecution in the courts for the killing of Major P. P. Lester of the hospital corps.

Violence in the strike zones of Colorado came to an end shortly after midnight when a downpour of rain drove to cover striking miners who near Walsenburg, the only point in Colorado where actual violence obtained, and yesterday dawned with the prospect of indefinite peace between the warring industrial factions. Federal troops from Cheyenne, Wyo., arrived in Canon City, and troops from Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, were expected to reach Trinidad last night.

The situation in the northern district became quiet Tuesday when the strikers ran out of ammunition.

Seven More Strike Victims.

FORBES, Col., April 30. — Seven men lie dead in the Forbes camp of the Rocky Mountain Fuel Co.

Most of the mine buildings are in ashes. Nine defenders are missing, but are believed to have reached the Majestic mine. Three strikers are thought to have been killed in the latest outbreak in the Colorado labor war.

STEAMER'S LOSS FELT AS CERTAIN

Benjamin Noble Thought to Have Foundered in Very Deep Water.

DULUTH, Minn., April 30.—That the steamer Benjamin Noble, her crew of 20 or more, and a large cargo of railroad iron, were swallowed up in the turbulent waters of storm-swept Lake Superior Tuesday night, was made almost certain yesterday when the life-saving crew picked up wreckage from the steamer off Minnesota Point, Duluth. All efforts to find the hulk of the steamer have proved fruitless.

The general belief is that she missed the Duluth entrance and struck the point and foundered in very deep water. In addition to the high seas Tuesday night, there was a heavy mist and snow, and the Duluth entry light was out.

Up to last evening no bodies had come ashore. Reports by excited people who lined Park Point that bodies had been found yesterday afternoon proved incorrect.

While the Noble was trying to make the harbor, the south light on the Duluth entry pier went out. No blame is attached by marine men to Capt. Prior, who has charge of the lighthouse here, or to members of his crew. If the fault lies anywhere, vessel men say, it is with the antiquated equipment of the lighthouse department. The lighthouse has no electrical service and when a storm of such proportions as that of Tuesday and Wednesday night comes up, there is no way for the lighthouse men to get back and forth to attend to the lights.

The list of dead or missing includes: Capt. John E. Iseshardt, aged 31, Milwaukee; First Mate Geo. R. Longlary, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Chief Engineer A. C. Coger, Port Clinton, Ohio; Steward John Coleman, Oswego, N.Y.; Assistant Steward Thomas Proud, Oswego; Fireman Otto Guntch, Toledo, O.; Fireman Wm. Goulett, Toledo.

FREE POTATOES

Liberal Members Hoped to Have U.S. Embargo Lifted

OTTAWA, April 30. — The House spent the day in committee of ways and means upon the tariff resolution presented by the Finance Minister at the close of his budget speech. Practically the entire sitting was taken up with the resolution presented Tuesday by Mr. Loggie (Northumberland, N.B.), providing that potatoes from the United States should be admitted free of duty when the governor-in-council was satisfied that the present United States embargo upon Canadian potatoes had been removed. The debate was practically confined to Liberal members from New Brunswick and Conservative members from Ontario.

Mr. Carvell (Carleton, N.B.) in support of the resolution said the effect of the Underwood law reduction to 10 per cent. had been to greatly stimulate the export of potatoes from New Brunswick. Unfortunately the embargo now excluded Canadian potatoes from the United States.

Mr. Lake (Muskoka) asked if the embargo was justifiable. He thought it was the same old story, namely, that whenever Canadian imports commenced to come in the United States by some trick shut them out.

Mr. Best (Dufferin) spoke from the standpoint of the Ontario farmer, urging more protection instead of less.

Dr. Edwards (Frontenac) also spoke for the Ontario farmer. He did not believe that the New Brunswick farmer would be well advised to tear down the tariff wall. He would find there was little demand in the United States for his potatoes.

Hon. Mr. White briefly indicated that the Government would not consider removing the duty on potatoes. He could not see why the United States Government should remove the embargo to secure the Canadian market, if Mr. Carvell was right in his contention that the United States did not produce enough potatoes to feed her own people.

The resolution was defeated.

SUFFERED AGONY WITH NEURALGIA

Nothing Helped Her Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

CAMPBELLVILLE, ONT., May 5th, 1913.

"I cannot speak too highly of "Fruit-a-tives". For over thirty years, I have suffered from Chronic Neuralgia and Constipation, experiencing untold agony. The Neuralgia settled in my lungs and I took bottle after bottle of medicine without relief. The doctor told me I would not get better but "Fruit-a-tives" proved that the doctor was wrong, by giving me quick relief and finally and completely curing me.

I would not have my present health if it was not for "Fruit-a-tives" and I am glad of the opportunity of giving you this letter about such a splendid remedy as "Fruit-a-tives", for the guidance of other women who may be similarly affected"

MRS. NATHAN DUNN.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine made from fruit juices and is particularly suited to women because of its mild action and pleasant taste.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

ASIATICS BARRED

New Interpretation of Regulation is Sweeping In Its Effect

VANCOUVER, April 30.—Asiatics of all races will be barred from entry into Canada under a new interpretation, or order-in-council, No. 897, details of which were made public yesterday to representatives of trans-Pacific lines by Malcolm R. J. Reid, superintendent of immigration. The new interpretation has made the order-in-council applicable to Chinese, Japanese and Hindus, and will become effective on May 31.

It will be remembered that entry of laborers, skilled and unskilled artisans into British Columbia was prohibited for a period of six months. At the expiration of this time the order was extended for another six months, or until Sept. 30. This order keeps out all labor under the bead named, both white and yellow, but there was some misapprehension as to how it would affect Chinese who were prepared to pay the head tax of $500.

The possession of $500 for the head tax will avail them not at all, and the bars will be rigidly enforced against Chinese, Japanese and Hindus, as against white labor.

BIG PRINTING STRIKE SETTLED

Was a Bitterly Fought Contest For Ten Years

Akron, Ohio, April 30.—The most stubbornly contested struggle ever waged by the allied printing trades came to an end when the Superior Printing Company (formerly known as Werner's) signed an agreement with the locals in this city affiliated to the International Typographical Union, the International Pressmen and Assistants, and the Brotherhood of Bookbinders. The eight-hour day will be recognized, and the company agrees to pay the union scale and time and one-half for overtime. Apprentice regulations are agreed to and the company pledges itself to observe other conditions. In many departments union men have already been placed in charge. The management further agrees that all union men employed must remain in good standing in their organization, and no objections will be made if persons now employed join the organization of their craft. The strike started over ten years ago, and during its progress bitter feeling was developed. The Werners, under whose management the strike began, are no longer connected with the institution, and the differences have practically wrecked the business of one of the finest printing plants in the country, because of opposition to the allied crafts, who stood together during all this time. The unionists agree with the new management that both sides should forget and work in harmony to the end that the plant, now on a union basis, may regain its lost prestige.

TAKING TELEGRAPH LINE ACROSS THE CONTINENT

Mr. A. Bruce Smith, manager of Telegraphs on the Grand Trunk System, has returned to Montreal after witnessing the driving of the last spike on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and travelling on the first through train to Prince Rupert. Interviewed to-day, he told of another interesting ceremony that took place at Nechako Crossing, where the steel met. This was the linking of the wires.

"At exactly the same mile post that marked the last spike ceremony the telegraph wires met a few days later," he said, "and one of the finest pieces of timber available was utilized as the last pole. It was brilliantly painted and we hoisted at its head a big Union Jack which we left waving in the breeze to mark the spot. The telegraph system is now complete between Port Arthur and Prince Rupert, but there is at present only a commercial service as far west of Prince George. Commercial messages will be accepted in a few weeks' time right through to the Pacific Coast, but we did not want to open up before we could give the public a really first-class service. Wires are now strung along 2,200 miles of main line, exclusive of branch lines, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Nearly six thousand miles of copper wire have been erected.

"In addition to the telegraph service the Grand Trunk Pacific is making rapid headway with the installation of the Selective Telephone Train Despatch System, the last word in apparatus of the kind.

"I was greatly impressed," concluded Mr. Smith, "with the wonderful richness and fertility of the land in the Nechako, Fraser and Bulkley Valleys, through which this most modern of transcontinental railways runs. Settlement has hitherto been on a small scale owing to the fact that supplies and staples of all kinds had to be brought in by pack train or occasional steamer, but the longwaited railway connection now places these lands within reach of all.

Many Italians Are Employed on Railroad Work.

INDIAN RIVER.—April 29.—Dr. D. Munro, of Warsaw, was in the village today. He was driving his new car.

Mr. William Dickson, Westwood, made an official call here yesterday. An air of quietness prevades in the village now.

An extra construction gang under Mr. Daly is at work on the C.P.R. tracks here laying steel. There are fifty-two Italians in the gang and they make something of a stir in the village.

We are sorry to lose Mr. F. Gribble, C.P.R. operator here, as he has been transferred elsewhere.

APPLICATION OF BARRIE'S LTD. RECOMMENDED BY BOARD OF WORKS CONVENIENCES FOR THE NEW STORE

Elevator, Prism Glass and Use of Space Under the Sidewalk

The application from Barries Ltd., for an elevator, prism glass and excavation under the sidewalk on George Street south of the Customs House, in connection with the construction of the new store, was granted by the Board of Works last evening. City Engineer Persons in reporting upon the matter recommended the prism glass and elevator, the latter owing to the fact that they had established a precedent by granting the Turnbull building application, but strenuously objected to the excavation under the sidewalk.

Mr. Thos. Barrie outlined the following as the application: "As Barries Ltd. are about to erect a four storey building for business in this city, and the architects' plans will provide for prism glass windows and a goods elevator in front of its location, and the company is willing to construct and maintain such windows and elevator at its own expense, and the city to be idemnified against any damages occuring by reason thereof, I lay before you on behalf of the company a request for permission to construct in the sidewalk in front of the company's property, which is a piece of land fifty-three feet in length, prism windows for lighting the basement, to cover space in front of the building to a distance of four feet and to construct a goods elevator five or six feet square at the outside dege of sidewalk at a point in front of the building to be agreed upon by the city, and also to excavate under the sidewalk and use space along the whole fifty-three feet and eight feet from the edge of the company's lot for basement purposes. It is the intention of the company to construct stores and shops in front of the basement, and eight feet would be necessary."

The Company asked for immediate action, as they were ready to excavate right away.

The Engineer's Report.

The chairman remarked he would like to hear the report of the Engineer before discussing the matter. The Engineer's report was read and recommended everything except the excavated part. In a few remarks later he stated he had been against the Turnbull application, but they had turned down his recommendation. They had established a precedent by granting the first application. The council evidently saw fit to establish this precedent.

Ald. Stratton—If we stop it now, before it goes any further, it will be much better.

Chairman Duncan conteded that they could not make fish of one and flesh of others. He was sorry that they had ever passed the application for the Turnbull building. It was, however, impossible for Mr. Barrie to get a right of way to his property.

"Let us establish a precedent now," said Ald. Stratton. Continuin, he remarked, "if we are going to give it to Mr. Barrie, give it to everybody."

Ald. Johnson stated he could not see much harm, if the affair was properly constructed, and provisions made so that the city would be well protected, and will not be responsible for any accidents.

They must also have the right of way in any future time, when the conduits were constructed. Mr. Barrie was bettering conditions and every assistance should be granted him.

Mr. Barrie announced that they would be perfectly willing to arrange for the conduits and any revenue which might be collected by the city. The point was settled by the Board declaring that the agreement would be the same as with the Turnbull people.

Mr. Barrie—We are not asking for financial assistance. We are not asking for a bonus. We are constructing a factory to centralize business right in the city. I think the least the city can do is to grant our application.

Of course the entire excavation and other affairs would be under the Engineer's supervision contended the Mayor.

"We would make a similar agreement with Mr. Barrie as the Turnbull one. Mr. Barrie, I believe, is quite willing to pay rental. The precedent has been established, and I myself voted against it," he stated. "I would like to hear the opinion of the members," remarked the Chairman, and he also expressed himself that he was sorry they had not turned the other matter down.

Ald. Johnston - I'll be jiggered, but I would rather see an elevator than boxes piled all over the street. The elevator can be properly constructed and with the city idemnified, will prove O.K. He caused startled glances to appear when he further remarked that he was greatly in favor of the entire sidewalk being hollow, as any time they wanted to lay their conduits, everything would be in readiness.

Ald. Anderson asked if it was the opinion of the Board if the sidewalk would be safe.

"Why, yes," responded Mr. Barrie.

"If properly constructed," advanced the City Engineer.

The question of how long each day the elevator would be in operation was then brought up and the matter will be the same as the Turnbull Company, that of 11 o'clock in the morning.

"What do you think of it?" Ald. Greene asked the Chairman.

"It's hard to say anything about it," remarked Ald. Green. "If we are going to get sorry, now is the time to get sorry."

Ald. McIntyre said he would rather see it referred back to the Engineer.

Ald. Anderson said the greatest question in his mind regarding the matter was that of safety.

"We shouldn't discriminate now," said Ald. Johnston.

Ald. Stratton in strong emphatic terms stated that they should not allow these openings in the streets for elevators. They were acting hastily.

Chairman Duncan settled the matter by calling for a vote, as Ald. Stratton had moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre that the city allow no more openings of this kind.

Ald. Johnston's motion, seconded by Mayor Buller that the application be granted, was carried.

Ald. Stratton and Ald. McIntrye both voted for the amendment, while the application was voted for by the Mayor, Ald. Saunders, Ald. Johnston, Ald. Anderson and Greene.

Mr. Barrie was then instructed to furnish the City Engineer with all necessary details regarding the matter.

LEGISLATURE'S WORK ENDS WITH THE REDISTRIBUTION MEASURE

TO PROROGUE ON FRIDAY

Mr. Rowell Makes a Last Effort to Explain That He Was Not in the Employ of the Federal or Provincial Government in the Oka Indian and Soo Cases—Mr. McDonald Fights Hard for Riding.

TORONTO, April 30.—The Ontario Legislature faces prorogation on Friday. The last item of the year's business was swept from the boards yesterday when the redistribution bill finally passed third reading after three hours of vigorous opposition from the Liberal members.

William McDonald (Centre Bruce), whose constituency is no more, made a determined effort to change the clause affecting the riding but his two amendments, one that the boundaries be left as before and the other that certain townships be changed about, were defeated.

Messrs. Proudfoot and Sam Clarke attacked once more the double seating plan in force in Toronto and claimed an unfair treatment of the minority.

The constituency of Monck disappears entirely.

In the last minute of the session a Government bill to license employment agencies and require them to show security went through without opposition.

An echo of the debate of Tuesday over the Snider affair, in which G. Howard Ferguson accused Mr. Rowell of having done professional work for the Federal Government was heard yesterday when the Liberal leader made a formal statement to the House.

Mr. Rowell said that he had been retained by the Oka Indians and the missionary society alone, and produced letters telling of the arrangement. Everything had been done at any rate before he became a candidate for the Legislature. He was not employed by the Ottawa House.

Mr. Ferguson retorted that this was the sheerest quibbling and deception for it was well known that the Indians were wards of the Government and that his fee had been paid for Government service.

This was followed by a charge by Thomas McGarry (Renfrew) that he coud prove that Mr. Rowell was the paid agent of the former Ontario Government, and had engineered the Soo industries' deal, including the Lake Superior Steel Corporation loan. The records would show that he received $50,000 and over for that work.

Mr. Rowell stated that his firm had acted in an advisory capacity to defend the interests of the province in this matter, and that his fees had come from the corporation.

The Renfrew member asked if Mr. Rowell still drew money from the corporation, and was told that until two or three months ago such had been the case.

"I did not say that I was not retained by the old Government, but I do say that my fee was paid by the corporation," stated Mr. Rowell.

After several sharp passages the discussion terminated.

When the statute law amendment act was in committee, Hon. I. B. Lucas introduced a clause implementing the resolution of the Hydro-electric municipalities permitting the payment of a sum annually up to $15,000 to the members of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. Mr. Lucas explained that whatever portion of this money went to Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, would be in addition to the salary of $6,000 voted by the Legislature, and the act of indemnity passed a year ago would apply in this case as well. As Col. Hendrie and Mr. W. K. McNaught had both declined to accept any remuneration for their services on the commission no clause indemnifying them from the provision of the Legislative Assembly act was included.

The law respecting moving picture shows was amended to include theatres as well. This was done to prevent children under the age of fifteen years attending shows unless accompanied by an adult member of the family.

McMULLEN SUSPENDED

TORONTO, April 30.—York County Constable James E. McMullen has been suspended until further order by his Honor Judge Winchester. The suspension, which comes into effect immediately, is not made on the ground that criminal proceedings are pending against McMullen in the Police Court, but the senior county judge has taken action under the Private Detectives' Act.

This act provides that no person shall engage in the business of a private detective without having first obtained a license from the Treasurer of the province.

Three Big Guns Destroyed.

NEW YORK, April 30.—A London cable says: The British ordinance department has had a series of mishaps in the big gun and shell tests at Shoeburyness. The last, which has just occurred, due to a defective shell, and which has been kept secret, is the third within the last six months. Since each gun costs $100,000, the loss of three is a serious matter to the Exchequer.

One Standard of Morality.

LONDON, April 30. — The Lower House of Convocation of Canterbury Tuesday discussed the attitude of the Church of England towards divorce.

The Bishop of Southampton moved a resolution expressing the opinion that there should be one standard of morality for men and women and equality of treatment by the law.

The present state of the law, the bishop said, was barbarous in its treatment of women. The resolution was carried.

To Wear Crepe and Stand In Front of Office Is Against Law.

NEW YORK, April 30.—At a Socialist meeting Tuesday night it was agreed that "mourners" should gather in front of the Standard Oil building at 26 Broadway, as a protest against the sacrifice of lives in Colorado.

Yesterday morning Upton Sinclair, author of "The Jungle," his wife and three other women were arrested on the sidewalk there.

Mrs. Sinclair was later released. The other women said they were Mrs. Elisabeth Freeman, an English suffragette, who has once been in jail with Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst; Mrs. Margaret Remington Charler and Mrs. Donie Lictner.

"I wasn't doing a thing but walking up and down in the street with a piece of crepe on my arm," said Sinclair.

TORONTO, April 30. — According to a statement made in the Jury Assize Court at the City Hall yesterday, Pollman Evans had his passage booked to come back from France to stand his trial here along with his co-directors of the Union Life Insurance Co. on a charge of conspiracy to defraud.

"Mr. Pollman Evans, by cablegram, has intimated to me that he will be here at the next sittings of the court," said his counsel, W. E. Raney, K.C. "If the crown is ready to proceed at the present session, he could perhaps be here for that."

Buffalo Aground.

SAULT STE. # ULSTER LEADER WILL ENDEAVOR TO MEET CHURCHILL'S TERMS

Day of Momentuous Debate at Westminster Ends With Defeat of Chamberlain's Motion for an Inquiry Into Carragh Camp Affair, But Outlook is Brighter for Conferences Between Parties.

LONDON, April 30. — A compromise on the question of Home Rule for Ireland seemed yesterday nearer than ever before. There existed a strong belief in Parliamentary circles that the conferences between the leaders of the two great parties which had been unsuccessful in reaching any agreement last autumn would shortly be resumed.

The House of Commons discussed the Ulster crisis again yesterday, when it wound up the two days' debate on Austen Chamberlain's motion for a judicial inquiry into the Government's "plot" to crush the Ulster Covenanters. The motion, which was virtually a vote of censure on the Cabinet, was eventually rejected by a party vote of 344 against 264, a Government majority of 80.

An atmosphere of great solemnity and restraint overhung the House throughout the debate. The growing belief that civil war in Ireland is a reality which cannot be escaped if the Home Rule bill becomes law as it at present stands seems to have influenced members on both sides of the House as it has the newspapers supporting both parties. During the past week the press of both opinions has become more conciliatory in tone than it has been at any previous stage of the discussion.

Sir Edward Carson, whose leadership of the Ulster rebellion makes him the dominating figure on the Opposition side of the House, yesterday accepted the overtures made Tuesday by Winston Spencer Churchill First Lord of the Admiralty, who had invited Sir Edward Carson to make an attempt to compromise the Home Rule question on a federal basis. Sir Edward reiterated his detestation of Home Rule and repeated his offer, that if Ulster were excluded from the bill "until this Parliament shall determine otherwise," instead of the six years' period which Premier Asquith had offered, he would submit the proposal to the people of Ulster.

Sir Edward in his reply to Mr. Churchill's invitation declared all he wanted for Ulster was such terms as would conserve the dignity of the Ulster men and their civil and religious freedom. He concluded that in case the Home Rule bill passed it would be his earnest prayer that the government of the south and west of Ireland would prove so successful that it might be to Ulster's interest to join and form a united Ireland.

Premier Asquith concluded the debate with an eloquent speech, which contained the statement that his offer of the temporary exclusion of Ulster Counties from the operation of the Home Rule bill for a period of six years remained open. He said he considered Sir Edward Carson's statement a most important one, and he recognized and reciprocated its spirit. A settlement, he declared, could not be successfully negotiated by bargaining across the floor of the House of Commons, and the questions at issue could not be settled behind the backs of the men of Ulster or of the rest of Ireland.

Arthur J. Balfour, former Unionist Premier, in a moving peroration to his speech, justified Ulster in making civil war. He said his public life had been devoted to the cause of the union between Great Britain and Ireland, and concluded:

"If, in order to avoid the incalculable horrors of civil war, we must set up a separate Parliament in Dublin, I shall think it marks the failure of my whole life's work."

THE SWEET RESTORER.

Strange Sleeping Habits of Animals and Birds.

The majority of mankind sleep lying upon the right or left side of the body, and with the knees drawn up toward the chin. Certain African tribes, however, lie upon the back, with the back of the neck resting on a bar or wood supported on two short pillars.

The elephant apparently invariably, and the horse commonly, sleep standing. This is really astonishing. Apart from the apparent difficulty of maintaining the balance of the body during these long periods of unconsciousness, one would have supposed that a recumbent posture, in the case of both these animals, was imperative. Cattle and their kin commonly sleep lying down, and during many hours of the day they lie down, as when chewing the cud.

More curious still, bats and other creatures invariably sleep hanging head downwards, suspended by their hind feet. The same strange habit is common to the little hanging parrots of India and the Malayan region. In this they differ from all other birds which invariably sleep with the head turned tail-ward over the back and the beak thrust in among the feathers between the wing and the body—not under the wing, as is commonly believed. This strange habit is followed even by the penguins, wherein the feathers are so short as to fail completely to cover even the beak. Owls are perhaps, the only exception to the rule. And, by the way, the only other animals which thus turn the head backward after this fashion during sleep are certain peculiar tortoises known as "side-necked tortoises."

Long legged birds, like storks and gulls, sleep while resting only on one leg. Ducks generally sleep on open water. And to avoid drifting shorewards, and therefore into the danger zone, they keep constantly paddling with one foot, so that the body is always circling round the chosen sleeping area. The sloths sleep suspended by their feet, and the head tucked in between the fore-legs. The no less remarkable African pottos, or slowlemurs, assume a similar pose, but they attach themselves to a vertical, instead of a horizontal, bough, so that the body rests with the head upward. No animal, save man, sleeps upon its back.

As a rule, darkness induces sleep. With many animals, however, the reverse is the case—as with the bats and owls. This reversal of the usual order has been brought about by the nature of the feeding habits.

The question where sleep begins is by no means easily answered. One is inclined to draw the line at the insects. But since all living things, plants as well as animals, display periodical states of quiescence, perhaps we shall be near the truth in regarding sleep as universal among living things. In the case of plants, it is enforced by darkness, save in the case of many bacteria and fungi, which, like evil deeds, grow under the cover of darkness.

Siberia's Only University.

Tomsk, the agricultural centre of Siberia, boasts of the only university in that country. It was opened 26 years ago, and is so well endowed that tuition fees amount to only $50 a year. At the university hospital may be obtained the only Pasteur treatment for mad-dog bite that is available in Siberia. As the disease is rife, this is no small blessing to the settlers. A great institute of technology and school of mines, too, is to be found at Tomsk. It has an enrollment of 1,700 students, many of them from the far away region of the Caucasus, in southern Russia. American engineering text books are largely used in the institute.

A KING AS AN ACTOR.

He Didn't Intend It, but the Moving Picture Man Caught Him.

While King Christian of Denmark was crushing with the queen and their two sons in his yacht Rita off Aarhus, Jutland, the party were startled by the sound of shots and shrieks for help. The king immediately gave orders to sail in the direction of the sounds.

They found several boats manned with crews of the most desperate looking type engaged in a regular battle.

The king was making arrangements for speedy intervention when he saw through his binoculars another boat, a little away from the others, with a man at the stern calmly turning the handle of a cinema camera. The sight of that unruffled figure made the king smile, and he ordered the yacht to be "taken out of action."

At that moment, however, fate took a hand in the game. The actress who took the part of the heroine jumped overboard to escape from the villain, but halfway to the shore she became exhausted and would have drowned if the king had not detected a genuine ring in her cries of distress. A boat from the royal yacht was manned and came to the rescue of the actress.

The silent man at the camera stuck to his post and thus gained the distinction for his firm of having a king among its actors.

How They Menage.

"I'd like to know how you and your wife get along so well together."

"I'll tell you. Whenever ma decides that one of the children needs punishing I don't interfere, and when I decide to correct one of the youngsters she does the same for me."—Detroit Free Press.

Opened by Mistake.

Absentmindedly the young woman yawned.

"Pardon me," she said. "I didn't mean to do that."

"I see," responded Mr. Lingerlong—"opened by mistake."—Chicago Tribune.

Small Temptations.

As swarms of noxious insects are less easily mastered than raging beasts, so is the victory over small temptations greater than that over heavy trials.

Luck comes to them who help themselves and know how to wait.—Max O'Rell.

Sufficient Grounds For a Divorce.

"Man never knows what untold agony woman suffers," exclaimed chatty Mrs. Gabb.

"The only untold agony a woman suffers is when she wears tight shoes to be stylish," replied Mr. Gabb.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Reflection.

"Not everything in this world is appropriate."

"What makes you think of that?"

"The fact is that navy widows do not wear sea weeds.—Baltimore American.

Mayor On His Dignity.

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 30.—Mayor Baxter told Rev. Dr. Eber Crummy, president of the Lord's Day Alliance for British Columbia, in a letter yesterday that he would not reply to any communication from nor receive any delegation, including Rev. C. H. Huestis, secretary of the Alliance for British Columbia and Alberta. His action was the result of a letter from Mr. Huestis demanding a more definite reply as to the enforcement of the Lord's Day Act than the "vague and childish" statement that the law would be reasonably enforced.

FEDERALS ARE MAKING THEIR PRESENCE FELT

Already the Tide is Turning Against Internationals at Baltimore and Buffalo

In his pre-season message to the fans President Edward Barrow of the International League predicted the most prosperous season for his organisation. That prediction was made in the face of Federal League raids on his clubs and invasion by the Gilmore interests of his circuit. The league leader was evidently born an optimist but at this stage he no doubt realizes that it takes more than optimism to give successful battle to the Feds. President Barrow was among those who regarded the Federal project as a certain failure; regarded most of the Fed moguls' statements as talk. Evidently there was some money behind the talk and also some sense of determination. Organised baseball adopted the attitude of the proverbial "swelled head" gentleman. So far the battle if it may be called one has not brought forth any great strategic powers which Ban Johnson and President Tener were rated as having. Perhaps Mr. Gilmore knows as much about winning a war as the exalted rulers of the big tent. At any rate if he does not know John Ward does and there is not much that he does not know about baseball both from a business and playing standpoint. It looks like the man behind and probably he is with Tinker as [illegible] lieutenant.

* * *

The presence of the Federals is becoming a serious matter especially in the International League. Baltimore has felt the opposition very [illegible] and already Jack Dunn is considering the advisability of transferring his team to some other centre. It looks as though Dunn's days are numbered in the oyster city. Such action as a transfer of the franchise would be a sweeping victory for the Gilmore circuit.

* * *

Buffalo is sure to feel the presence of the Feds and the International League club is almost sure to prove a loser as the fans who never were very strong for the Bison international management are sure to support the Federals. The majority of the newspapers are lined up behind the Feds also and it looks like crimp number two for the Barrow circuit. With Jersey City a loser with or without opposition, Montreal a poor ball town, Providence very doubtful, Buffalo almost sure to be outdrawn by the Feds and Baltimore on the verge of quitting cold, President Barrow evidently realizes that pre-season predictions do not always hit the nail on the bean.

* * *

The fans around the International circuit will sympathize with Dunn if he has to bear the entire loss which he is and will face as a result of the Fed invasion of Baltimore. He has proven himself an able leader both on the field and in the dealing with matters concerning the welfare of organized baseball. It was Jack Dunn who urged upon the National Commission to remove the draft. President Johnson practically defeated the motion and he probably realizes now that had Dunn's advice been taken the clubs would have been better fortified to fight the Feds. However Ban was looked upon as the last man in baseball genius, executively speaking. Evidently there are others. He waged war against baseball when it was thought to be strong enough to repulse any invasion. He won but he had more support in the matter of players than the Feds had. The Feds threw their hat in the ring when baseball was organized to such an extent that every league was in the combine. So far they have the edge and the victory which looks inevitable will be all the more creditable because the opposing forces were regarded as unbeatable.

The National Commission by ruling that major league clubs will have to return the purchase money for players sold to the minor leagues if the players fail to report will not prove so beneficial as expected. Instead of working for the good of the minors it will in all probability make matters worse. The majors are very backward in allowing players to go to the minors now and it is safe to say they will not let them go if the onus for the players reporting is placed on them. It seems as though the National Commission has further blocked the minors' chances of strengthening up. And they call it organized baseball.

BASEBALLITIS

Frank Chance, who has his Yankees going in fairly good style, celebrated the sixteenth anniversary of his debut to big league ball yesterday. The Peerless Leader broke in as a catcher for the Chicago Cubs.

The Hamilton Club has purchased Sheckard, an outfielder from the Allentown club of the Tri-State league. Last year in 112 games he clouted the pill for an average of .260 and fielded for a percentage of .985. In 1912 he hit .312.

The Cockneys lost a 13 innings contest to the Washington, Ohio club. Steiger allowed only two hits but was beaten out 2-1.

Honeck, the kid shortstop of the Brants, has existed for eighteen summers.

Ottawa and the Toledo club of the South Michigan League, battled to an eleven innings tie. The score was 5-5.

Tommy Hess, a former big leaguer and also on the roster of the Hamilton club in 1911, is managing the Pine Cove amateurs in the Bay Shore league, composed of teams on the outskirts of Hamilton.

Carlstrom, formerly of the Boston Red Sox, has been released to Buffalo. He celebrated the change by playing sensational ball at the initial sack.

The Jersey City Club has commenced actions against the Buffalo Feds. to recover damages for the signing of Joe Agler and Walter Blair by the Feds.

Andy Kyle, who played with the London team in 1911, and was drafted by the Columbus Club of the American Association, is after a berth in the outfield of one of the Canadian League clubs. From Columbus Kyle went to Cincinnati and played good ball for several games. Failure to keep himself in condition eventually sent him back, and he is still slipping. He is a Toronto lad, and played pro- hockey in the Maritime League last winter.

LACROSSE

The first lacrosse sticks arrived in the city to-day, when 18 of the senior type were delivered to the President, Mr. E. Dillon. It is expected that many more will be here before the end of the week. A meeting has been called of the executive of the club to-morrow evening in the Examiner office, while the first practice is called for Saturday afternoon at Central Park. Geo. Mein and several old lacrosse players will be out to assist in coaching the beginners along. Every young man in the city is extended an invitation to be out.

BALL MEETING TO-NIGHT.

Fans are reminded of the meeting in the Y.M.C.A. to-night in connection with the formation of a Mercantile or City League. Election of officers for the season will form part of the business.

TWIRLERS ARE LETTING OUT

NO CHARITY PEGS HURLED IN THE PETES' CAMP THESE DAYS.

REAL HARD WORK

YOUNGSTOWN PULLING FOR BLOUNT TO WIN OPENER AGAINST ERIE

(Special to The Review.)

Youngstown, April 30. — Yesterday morning occasioned a very speedy practice by the Peterboro team, and the way their infield tore around opened the eyes of a few of the railbirds. The warm weather has caused a couple of hundred fans to flock down to Wright's Feld and see the squad work out. They all pull for Blount's team to clean up the Canuck League this coming season, and are particularly anxious of having them slip one over Erie at the opener a week from to-day. By the speed of the infield yesterday morning and the class of the batteries, there appears to be nothing to it but the Petes. Blount is laying emphasis on team work by the men covering the bags, and has perhaps given them a little more time than the rest of the squad. Jimmie Gorman is going well at first, while Schrage, Price, King and Byrne are fighting for the other three berths. Schrage subbed for Price while he was out with his arm and showed great ability. He may land a job and some of the boys are hoping he will, as he's working hard for it.

The following composed the opposing crews after lunch:

Yannigans — Flanagan, 1b.; Schrage, 2b.; Fox, s.s.; Rockford, 3b.; Conway, r.f.; Blount, c.f.; Chaney, l.f.; Schettler, p.; Cresswell, p.; Miller, c.

Regulars—Gorman, 1b.; King, 2b.; Price, s.s.; Byrne, 3b.; Ryberg, r.f.; Swartz, c.f.; Gaffney, l.f.; Belting, p.; Sterling, p.; Kelly, c.

After 11 innings of real fast ball, during which the pitchers on Blount's advice let out, the regulars won 4-2. The work of the twirlers was very satisfying, and displayed a great variety. The Regulars secured four safeties while the Yannigans were compelled to go with one less.

Belting and Schettler opposed each other for first six innings, and then Sterling and Cresswell went in with score 3-2 for Regulars. In the last five innings Sterling was invincible, while the Regs. secured one tally off Cresswell's deliveries.

The big port sider is expected to be one of the big guns in the league this season. He is showing great speed and a variety of hooks. He has also moderated his wind-up, also works much better to first base.

Chaney, a young pitcher with Youngstown last year covered the left garden for the Yans and intends working out regularly with the Petes. Of his class little is known, although the Feds. are reported as making him an offer.

Games have been arranged for Saturday and Sunday with a couple of fast semi-pro. teams, and should be a big drawing card.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

When you have to bear it perhaps the hardest part is to grin.

Take care of your health and your disposition will take care of you.

Between a half baked optimist and a kiln dried cynic is a hard choice.

He is truly the prize idiot who keeps still in his humble little place and expects promotion and looks for reward.

CHAMPIONSHIP HOPES

The Toronto Canadian League Club has failed to land a manager. Knotty Lee is directing the breaking in operations but no one ever accused Knotty of being a manager. There is some talk of the Kansas City franchise in the Federal League being transferred to Toronto. If the Feds can secure grounds they will make the change. Such a move would prove a serious blow to the Canadian League. Followers of the Toronto club of the International League claim there is not a chance as grounds are not available. Providing the Feds. do secure grounds the Toronto Canadian League Club will be a loser as the fans will not journey over to the island if they have the same chance of seeing a game on the city side.

It is interesting to know that the Canadian League magnates have decided not to go the limit allowed by Class "B" rating and none of the teams will spend $2,500 per month for players. Such action will certainly protect the smaller towns and the fans will also receive a better class of ball. Brantford, Peterboro, St. Thomas and possibly Erie could not have stood for a salary list of $2,500 per month without facing financial loss.

Another week and the players will receive a free ride around the cities in which the flag will fall, be congratulated by the various mayors who'll tell them what a noble calling baseball is and so on. After that day it will be a case of "show us" with the fans who till that time will have to build their hopes of a winner on the brilliant outbursts of the various news writers and the usual sure thing con from the managers, who may be here this year and away next, or possibly before then.

Hams Have Improved.

The circuit looks stronger however because of new life, new clubs and new managers all of whom have proven their worth and the other highly touted. Hamilton is sure to show improvement over the past. The change of ownership has renewed interest and injected confidence among the fans who breathed a sigh of satisfaction when Mr. Lee decided to quit. At London the team should be as strong if not stronger than last year. If it is as strong and the other clubs measure up to the same calibre the fans will have no cause to kick. Ottawa will be in the thick of it all the time although the infield does not look any stronger than last year. Erie with the cream of last year's Leafs and the new blood which Managar Smith has landed will also be battling all the time. St. Thomas under Midge Craven possesses a great hurling staff and a fairly strong infield.

Petes Look Good.

Peterboro should prove a team to beat as Manager Blount had a very good pitching corps wished on him and Schlettler the new addition is shaping up in great style. Cresswell should do better than last year as the experience is sure to benefit him. The receiving corps will be new to fans. From Mully Miller, Jack Kelley and Ryberg Manager Blount should secure two high-class catchers. Kelley was Schlettler's battery mate at Youngstown last year. Gorman with the Atlantic City Club of the Tri-State League last year has the initial sack position cinched while King or Schrage will play second with the former having the brighter chance. Price is almost certain to start at short while "Bobby" Bryne will look after the difficult corner. Besides himself Manager Blount has Gaffney, Swarts and Conway to choose an outfield from.

Better Team at Dykeville.

Rube Deneau has gathered a bunch of dark horses from which to choose a team to represent Brantford and judging from reports from the Telephone city and past performances of Rube's pastimers Dykeville should make it interesting. McCaffery is sure to make every effort to place a winner in Toronto and judging by the International League recruits which he has sent to the Canadian League Club the team will be a classy one. It is rumored that Knotty Lee will pilot the club. Everyone hopes for the better.

The coming season looks like a successful one from the viewpoint of a fan who cares only for the class of ball and not the bank account of the moguls. The teams all look good and the race should be air tight. Yet you never can tell what will happen in baseball.

SOLDIERS' RATIONS.

Tommy Atkins Is the Best Fed—Italians the Worst.

Of all European soldiers, the British "Tommy Atkins" is the best fed. The Continental soldier never gets a meal to be compared to the hot joint, vegetables, pudding, cheese and beer enjoyed by the subjects of King George.

In France the soldier gets a cup of black coffee on rising. He has to work on an empty stomach till noon, when he gets a pound of bread (his day's allowance), and hashed mutton or beef, with potatoes. His drink is water, unless he has money to buy wine. At 5 o'clock he has a second meal, consisting of boiled beef and bread. He gets nothing more till morning coffee on the following day.

The German soldier fares even worse. Coffee at 5 a.m., stewed meat, potatoes and bread at noon and a plate of soup at night are considered to be enough for Hans. As a matter of fact, many soldiers receive either money or food from their parents, as the rations are clearly inadequate.

The Swedish soldier is not badly fed. He has a good breakfast consisting of coffee, bread and butter, pickled fish and potatoes. He dines at 2 o'clock, and is entitled to a plate of soup, vegetables, roast meat or bacon. Supper at 8, which consists of a plate of soup, finishes the day.

The Austrian soldier fares no better than his German comrade, except when he is on active service. Then he has two solid meals a day instead of one.

The Italian soldier is about the worst fed of all. In time of peace he is practically a vegetarian. He gets meat regularly when he is fighting, otherwise macaroni and similar foods constitute his "ordinary."

The Russian is not much better off as regards food, but may drink either beer or tea. He has two meals a day; dinner, composed of gruel or cabbage soup, and a piece of beef or fish. For supper he only gets a plate of beet soup.

The birth rate in England is said to be falling off. The hand that rocks the cradle is out trying to rule the world in another way.

BRANTFORD-BELL.

St. John's Church was the scene of a very quiet wedding last evening, when Miss Muriel Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Bell of Bethune Street, was united in bonds of holy matrimony, to Mr. H. Brantford of this city, by the Rev. Canon Davidson. The young couple were unattended, and married in the presence of immediate friends only. They will reside in the city.

SHEARER-BENNETT.

The marriage of Miss Blanche Bennet of Rockcroft, to Mr. Matthew Wallace Shearer of Lakehurst, was solemnised last evening by Rev. Jas. Rollins, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at St. Andrew's Manse. The couple were unattended, and after a short honeymoon will take up their residence at Hall's Bridge.

To-morrow evening, "C." company, 57th Batt., Peterboro Rangers, will hold one of their famous dances, which is expected to eclipse all precedents.

A short but excellent concert will precede the dance, to be followed by refreshments.

The dance programme is as follows, Pte. F. Wainwright acting as M. C.

Grand March and Paul Jones, Two Step, Barn Dance, Waltz Tag, Two Step, Lancers, Veleta, Boston Two Step, Waltz, Two Step, Barn Dance, Waltz. Extras: Two Step, Waltz.

To-morrow afternoon the children who assisted in the production of Queen Zephra will be the guests of the Conservatory Orchestra. The evening will be devoted to the entertainment of the adult members of the caste, when music and dancing will be the feature.

Lt. E. Worth of No. 7 Company of the 57th Regiment, entertained last evening in the Armouries, at a banquet catered by Mr. Hooper's capable staff. Speeches were made by Capt. Higgins, Lt. Ackerman, Lt. Worth and Sergt. Bevan, who is severing his connection with the company to take up land in Northern Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. Barron, of Toronto, are guests at the Oriental.

Mr. J. W. Carter, of Ottawa, is among the guests registered at the Oriental.

Mr. C. W. Baker, of Montreal, is in the city.

Dr. Kirkwood, whose office has been located at 467 Water Street, has removed to 190 Brock Street.

Dr. Torrington is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Gowan, Brock Street, during his stay in Peterborough. Mrs. Gowan, a graduate of Toronto College of Music, and for some years a member of Dr. Torrington's Festival Chorus and the Metropolitan Chôir, has, since coming to Peterborough, taken a practical interest in the progress of good music.

The condition of George N. Graham who is suffering from pneumonia, is somewhat improved to-day, and it is thought the critical stage has been passed.

Mrs. Edmund Wand, Burnham Street, will not receive to-morrow nor again this season.

The many friends of Mr. F. R. Turner will be pleased to learn of his success in passing his second year examinations in Science at Queen's University.

The At Home held last night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum afforded one of the most enjoyable evenings spent in the Lyceum this season. Cards, refreshments and dancing formed the evening's entertainment, the winners at the former being Mr. E. J. Gough and Miss M. Allen. Miss M. McDonald, pianist, rendered delightful music for the dancing.

Mr. C. D. Clairmont, of Marmora, has accepted a position as clerk at the Montgomery House.

Miss McGiverin has returned from Toronto where she has been purchasing summer millinery novelties.

Mr. E. W. Langford was successful in securing his second year at Queen's.

CHORAL SOCIETY SING JUDAS MACCABAEUS WITH SPLENDID EFFECT

The presentation of the Oratorio, "Judas Maccabaeus" by St. George's Choral Society was given a very cordial reception at the Grand Opera House last night, and fresh laurels were won by conductor and chorus.

It was just another evidence of what can be accomplished by joint effort and the members of the Society are to be commended for the hard and faithful work which made possible the presentation of the work in Peterboro. They are also to be congratulated on their success, which if judged alone from the standpoint of recognition expressed by the audience is success of marked degree; but their success goes further because the Society is increasing in strength and ability, and an impression must be made in the development of music in this city.

The audience, while not as large as should have been the case, was representative, sympathetic and appreciative, and when difficult interpretations were made by principal or chorus, the applause was general and unstinted, and on several occasions demanded an encore.

The principals were very popular. Particularly in the duet, "O Lovely Peace," Miss Olive Casey, Toronto, and Miss Dorothy Allan, soloist at St. Paul's Church, delighted the audience as it was one of the gems of the evening.

Mr. Albert Downing, of Toronto, gave a most effective rendition of "Sound An Alarm," and was forced to repeat. Likewise Mr. Frank Oldfield, also of Toronto, was heard with extreme delight. The visiting artists and Miss Allan did their work well, and were accorded a liberal share of the applause.

The Conservatory of Music Orchestra did splendid work in assisting the chorus, there being some very clever interpretations, as the occasion demanded. With an orchestra less proficient, success such as was attained could not have been won, as the spirit of the work, which is so necessary, would not have been so eloquently expressed. Mr. Gliddon conducted the orchestra in the opening selection from Verdi.

Mr. R. J. Devey very gallantly gave way to the veteran in Oratorio work, Dr. Torrington, who conducted the final chorus.

Dr. Torrington also made some very happy remarks. He expressed his pleasure, at the performance of the chorus and the Conservatory orchestra.. "No one knew, he said, "how hard it was to produce such a work, and when the conductor wasn't hard at work with rehearsals, he was dreaming of it." He urged that those who interested themselves in this line, be not passed by without some sort of reward. Mr. Devey was doing a good work, and in years to come the citizens would take pride in the society.

A word of praise is due the officers of the society in their efforts to promote the welfare of the organization and develop oratorio work in this city. The officers are:

Mr. Chas. Coleman, President; Mr. W. Stocker, Vice-President; Mr. Robert Dickson, Treasurer; Mr. Frank Roberts, Librarian; Mr. R. J. Devey, Musical Director; Mr. G. Chandler, Asst. Musical Director; Mr. G. Allen, Mr. J. Howland, Mr. T. Pitchford.

DAWSON BROS. OPEN NEW BRANCH STORE

Will Occupy New Premises at Corner of George and London Streets.

Dawson Bros., the well known grocery firm of Park and McDonnel Streets, will open a new fruit store and ice cream parlor in the new remodelled premises at the corner of George and London Streets on Saturday, May 2nd. They have secured the exclusive agency for Toronto City Dairy ice cream in Peterboro, and the public are invited to attend a free demonstration when they will dispose of ten gallons or more of City Dairy Ice Cream on Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. for sample purposes.

OMEMEE, Ont., April 29.—The Rev. J. F. Chapman, B.A., has accepted an invitation to the Methodist Church, Cannington. This is the third minister to leave Omemee this year.

Nothing jolts an egotist so successfully as being ignored.

THE CARE OF AUTO TIRES

HOW AUTO OWNERS CAN NOW GET DOUBLE WEAR OUT OF THEIR TIRES

AT SMALL OUTLAY.

As every auto owner knows, the principle item in the cost of the upkeep of a motor car is not the gasoline or even the engine repairs, both of the above being insignificant when compared with the expense due to the necessity of constantly having to purchase new tires partly due to ordinary wear and tear and partly due to accidents, such as running over sharp objects or striking loose round stones in the road, the latter cause a break where the tire bends sharply injuring one or more of the inner layers of canvas, this leaves no impression at the time on the tread, but the tire is weakened at that particular spot and eventually a blow out is the result.

As a rule the owner either throws the tire away or takes it to a local garage and has a patch stuck on the inside which after a few days is forced by the air pressure of the inner tube against the weak spot in the cover until a sharp crease is formed and another blow out is the result, and until quite recently the only other alternative was to ship the tire to the manufacturer and wait for days and sometimes weeks for its return.

These unsatisfactory conditions have at last been changed, and the work of rebuilding a new section in an old tire is now being done in the city by a local man.

Mr. H. T. Millard has installed in his well-known and up-to-date repair shop, 225 Hunter Street, a large steam vulcaniser of the very latest type, which will cure a fifteen-inch section perfectly in one heat in all sizes of bicycle, motor cycle or automobile tires and at the same time repair from four to six automobile tubes.

This work, as Mr. Millard explained to our representative, will mean a great saving to auto owners as tires otherwise almost as good as new are often discarded on account of a cut or blow out which could be satisfactorily repaired by the new process at an expense of from five to ten per cent. of the cost of a new tire.

In order to be able to properly do this work it was found necessary to secure space by leasing the adjoining store.

Agencies have been secured for all the leading makes of auto tires and all sizes of the famous Simplex puncture proof inner tube are carried in stock.

The Harley-Davidson Motor Cycle Co., of Milwaukee, have shown their confidence in this enterprising firm by placing with them the sole agency for their machines, which are thoroughly up-to-date and have many new and exclusive features not found in other makes and anyone intending the purchase a motor cycle this season should first see The Harley-Davidson now on exhibition at Millard's store.

NEW THEATRE TO BE KNOWN AS THE EMPIRE

The new moving picture and vaudeville theatre being erected by Dr. R. L. Robinson at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte Street has been given its name "Empire." The work on the theatre is being rapidly pushed forward but the date of completion is as yet unknown. The inability to procure material held the work up considerably but from now on it is expected that practically no delays will be experienced. The fittings of the new theatre are thoroughly uptodate.

LAID AT REST

The funeral of the late Mrs. John Bickell who passed away suddenly on Monday afternoon took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, Wolseley street, to the Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. R. Pogue officiated.

WOLVES PLENTIFUL.

Grim Hunters of the Woods Have Increased In North.

Concurrently with the great increase in the number of deer is an alarming increase in the number of wolves in certain localities in the northern woods.

Hitherto, in spite of much that has been written respecting the rapacity of these pests in the winter time, it has been considered safe to lie down and sleep whenever the night might overtake one in the hunting season.

But a couple of young fellows up in the Laurentians who wanted to shirk a long walk to camp and thought it right enough to take a sleep beside a well-defined deer path, have been taught that it is not invariably safe to do so, says The Family Herald and Weekly Star.

It was a dark, windy, though warm, night, and the hunters had not considered it exactly prudent to start a fire. They were awakened by the onset of at least three great wolves, which seized one by the leg, the other by a shoulder with a cruel grip which brought the blood. Their shouts and struggles apparently gave a sudden shock to the brutes, whose attack relaxed sufficiently to enable them to shake themselves free.

The cooler one of the two was able, fortunately, to secure his rifle, and this he fired from his hip in the direction of their assailants. From the fact that what looked like a spot or two of blood was discovered on a flat rock near by next morning, the young men judged that the hasty shot reached one of the wolves. But at the time they were amazed at the stillness which succeeded the report. Not a rustle or snap of twig could they distinguish, and yet when a near-by white birch tree was touched with a match and a great shaft of fire quickly shot up the trunk, beautifully illuminating the scene, there was not the least sign of any living thing.

How it happened that the wolves snapped at the sleeping pair without first worrying them to death is a question old woodsmen cannot get an answer to.

As a general thing, the wolf is a regular coward in this part of the world, and is not easily seen by men. He is rather the sneaking, way-laying thief, keeping well in hiding, than the bold hunter openly running down his prey. But growing bolder as their numbers increase, it is not at all unusual this season for the animals to allow their presence to be known even in broad daylight.

Last fall a farmer heard his cattle making an unusual noise in the bush, and, hastening towards them, found them standing in a circle with a pair of calves in the centre, and their heads directed outwards and bellowing loudly for help. A few yards away four wolves sat demurely upon their haunches, facing them, and waiting until they should become tired of hostilities, and allow the calves to fall victims to their greed.

Not far away from this clearing, up on the northern edge of civilization, lives a settler who, while smoking at his door one Sunday, saw a deer and two fawns burst out of the bush and spring across his fields to the barn, and through the open door of his stable, where the cows were tied. Five wolves followed until the man gave a loud shout, when they slunk back into the woods as fast as their legs could carry them. The brutes have been heard by the settler several times since then, and the doe and her twin progeny were at last accounts still sharing the hospitality of the barn.

No doubt the winter has been hard upon the deer, with so numerous a lot of blood-thirsty hunters about. But very few of the wolves have been killed, their skulking habits making it almost impossible to hunt them openly, and their cunning keeping them immune from poison or trappers.

She Is a Suffragist.

Mrs. Nellie McClung, the Canadian authoress, has been in the thick of the suffrage fight in Winnipeg in the last few weeks. She was leader of a deputation of women who presented an address to the Premier of Manitoba recently. In the course of her speech Mrs. McClung said:

"We help to bear the burdens of citizenship now—we pay the price—we obey the laws—we help to build the Empire; all this we do side by side with men, with the electors—we go farther than they, we pay the lifetax on existence, we know the value of human life as no man can ever know it; and yet we, with our knowledge of life, and what it costs, are debarred the making of the laws under which we and our children must live."

Hugh Flood, Found Himself in Embarassing Position, but he Heard Good News—Attorneys Informed Him He Was Richer by $1000

To realize that a relative has not forgotten you in her will is good news at any time, but when Hugh Flood received the news that his half sister, the late Mrs. McManus of this city, had remembered him to the extent of $1,000, the words must have sounded like music of the classiest variety. Mr. Flood, who was formerly employed at the Canadian General Electric plant here, was confined to a cell in the Calgary police station when attorneys informed him that Mrs. McManus had bequeathed $1,000 to him. Flood, who left this city some time ago to seek his fortune in the west, was fined for driving a vehicle which he had charge of, on the wrong side of the street. That act constituted a breach of the traffic regulations of the city.

The dispatch from the western city stated that Flood had fallen heir to an estate valued at $60,000, but that was too good to be true, according to Miss Teresa Flood, a saleslady at the R. Hall and Son store on George Street, who is a niece of Hugh Flood. Miss Flood resides at 208 Perry Street.

"Yes, I have an uncle in Calgary, but, dear me, he is not heir to $60,000. It's too good to be true," said Miss Flood when spoken to by a Review reporter.

Miss Flood explained that her uncle was to receive $1,000 in a year.

Flood would not have to wait that long before his fine was paid, because any honest lawyer will cough up a few bones so long as the client has good security, which in the case of Flood is a fact.

NEW SECRETARY FROM KINGSTON

C. R. Meserne Is Here to Take Up New Duties

General Secretary C. R. Meserve, of the Y. M. C. A., accompanied by his family, arrived in the city last evening, and will assume his new position in a few days.

Mr. Meserve comes here highly recommended and with considerable experience, and the Board are more than pleased with having obtained such a capable energetic official.

On Saturday evening the new official will be tendered a reception by the Leaders, while a formal reception will be held by the Board later for Physical Director Carson, of Winnipeg, and the new General Secretary.

Mr. Meserve is accompanied by Mrs. Meserve and family of three sons.

NOTICE OF APPEAL SERVED ON BEHALF OF R. SULLIVAN

The Magistrate's decision in the pool room case in which Raymond Sullivan was fined $100 will be tested before Judge Huycke. This morning Mr. Widdifield, of the firm of Gordon and Widdifield, served notice of appeal on Police Chief Thompson. Sullivan was convicted on the ground that while he was in charge of Joe's pool room hepermitted a pill pool game to be played thereby placing himself in the role of the manager of a gambling game, on which charge he was tried.

THE FIRE RECORD FOR THE MONTH

Eight fires amounting to $1,025 is the record of the city for the past month. During the month of April, 1913, twenty-four fires cost the city only $1,210. The total loss this year up to date is only $1,170. Damage to the extent of $2,100 has occurred just outside the city limits.

MAGISTRATE RULES THAT BOOK AGENT MUST GET LICENSE

Will Cost L. A. Fisher One Hundred Dollars

HE MAY APPEAL

The adjourned charge against L. A. Fisher, the book agent who was in police court a few days ago charged with soliciting orders for books without a license, came before the magistrate again this morning, when His Worship ruled that Fisher would have to take out a transient trader's license at a cost of $100.

Mr. Fisher decided to take out the license, but may enter an appeal.

STRENGTHEN THE ALARM SYSTEM

Changes Would Mean an Outlay of But $45.

UNDERWRITERS' REPORT

Pulmotor Demonstration to be Given Here in Near Future

Practically the main issue of last evening's meeting of the Fire, Light and Water Committee was the committee adopting the report in regard to the trying out of the A. 1. Telegraph fire alarm system for approval, on the motion of Ald. Dobbin and Saunders.

The report of the new system by the Engineering Department of the Bell Telephone Company in part is as follows:

The matter had been referred to the Engineering Department, and after going over the matter carefully and thoroughly, the Engineer reports that it would be impractical to increase the voltage on the Bell Telephone system, 48 being the maximum they care to handle, as they have found through experience a higher voltage is dangerous to the system. They submit two schemes to improve the operating of the fire alarm system. They can be operated with the present voltage battery of 48.

The first is change iron circuits to No. 12 copper wire. This will greatly reduce the resistance of the live wire, which at present amounts to 650 ohms for iron wire, whereas the copper wire reduced would make this resistance 125 ohms. The change would mean an outlay of fully $900 for copper wire.

The second suggestion offered is that the city instal 1. A. telegraph alarm system, at an approximate cost of $45.

The latter system was adopted on approval by the members.

The report favored the latter as being more economical. The Chief stated that 48 volts were sufficient for the desired results. He had not experimented much with the approved system, but always heard it to be a popular one. He would recommend to the committee that they instal one on approval.

Some Suggestions.

The report of the Underwriters' Association was received and read to the committee. It recommended a strength of 22 men at the present station, and three sub-stations distributed in the north, south and east.

The Fire Chief also asked that provision be made for the laying of fire alarm wire in conduits where the streets were paved. That matter would be carefully watched, was the stand taken by the members.

Chairman Green will report on the recommendation of the Fire Department in regard to a hydrant at the corner of Langton and Water Streets.

The placing of seven other hydrants as per the appropriation will also be looked into when the Council make their annual trip of inspection around the city.

New Uniforms.

Tenders will also be asked for the clothing of the Fire Department, consisting of seventeen suits, with extra trousers and Chief's uniform. Tenders must be in by the 15th of next month.

Pulmotor Demonstration.

Chief Howard reported that he had communicated with a Company at Toronto regarding a demonstration of the new pulmotor which is to be purchased. A demonstration will be held as soon as the company sends a representative here.

City Clerk Armstrong was instructed to write the different manufacturers regarding prices for some five hundred feet of fire hose on motion of Ald. Dobbin and Saunders.

NEW BECKER TRIAL.

New York, May 1.—The second trial of former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker for the murder of Herman Rosenthal will begin next week.

Less Relief Demands.

These are slack days for City Relief Officer Miller as far as actual relief is concerned. There are fewer demands each day, and the number is gradually growing less as the numerous breadwinners obtain work.

Transactions for the Month of April Make Total of $117,981

Turnover of Property to Dominion Government the Largest Deal

Existing conditions although not as favorable as they were this time last year, have not seemed to have a depressing effect on the real estate market and the transfers registered in the Registry Office for April surpass those of last year. Last year there were sixty-eight transfers which included small turn-overs, and April of this year closed with seventy-eight transfers. Although some of the transactions involved minor sums, the deals as a rule were fairly large. The total for the month exclusive of the turn-overs in which only premiums of $1 were registered, totalled $117,981, which is a very good showing. The largest deal was the sale of the property owned by the Peter Hamilton Company to the Dominion Government for a consideration of $18,000.

THEIR WORK IN KINGSTON APPRECIATED

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Meserve Were Remembered by Friends

At its monthly meeting on Wednesday evening, the Y. M. C. A. cabinet tendered a farewell to C. N. Meserve, the retiring general secretary, who left with his wife and family for his new post at the Peterboro Association on Thursday. An address expressive of regret at his severing his Kingston connection, where he and Mrs. Meserve have cultivated many friendships, and of hope for his future success, was read by F. L. Newman. James Rutherford, the secretary, tendered the gift of a valuable gold locket, suitably engraved, on behalf of his asociates on the young men's cabinet and a number of friends. A bouquet of carnations was given for Mrs. Meserve as a token of the appreciation of the cabinet members of her interest in their organization since she came to Kingston.

Mr. Meserve, in replying, stated that the cabinet had given backbone to his work at the local "Y," —Kingston Whig.

At the annual meeting of the Princess Street Methodist Sunday School, Mrs. Meserve was presented with a beautiful silver tray. Mrs. Meserve had charge of the Junior Department.

LABOR TROUBLES ARE ABSENT IN NEW YORK CITY

Many Parades, Demonstrations and Mass Meetings for May Day

ARMY OF UNEMPLOYED

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York, May 1.—May Day in New York City was signallised by an unusual number of parades and demonstrations by Socialists and Socialist Trade Unions, with mass meetings in parks, where the eight-hour day and better working conditions were demanded.

Labor leaders express the opinion that conditions were never better than to-day. They say there are no labor troubles of importance, and the large army of unemployed has within the past few weeks been reduced to a minimum.

HAVELOCK GROWING.

Havelock's total assessment for 1914 is the largest in the history of the village, amounting in all to $506,952. It is made up of $431,345 real estate, $61,895 income, and $13,712 business assessment.

SPRINGVILLE INDUCTION

REV. GEO. I. CRAW ASSUMES CHARGE OF SPRINGVILLE AND LAKEVALE

BRINGS ABOUT UNION

SERMON IS PREACHED BY THE REV. ROBT. POGUE

With the induction yesterday at Springville of Rev. George I. Craw, formerly of Thornton, the two congregations of Springville and Lakevale come together to worship under one minister, after a separation of nearly forty years.

Until about two years ago Springville was united with Bethany, and as the distance between the two is twelve miles, it made the long drive and three services a heavy day for the minister. Now the distance is just six miles, and most of the families live close to their respective churches.

At the induction yesterday, Rev. Robt. Pogue, who has been interim Moderator, conducted divine worship and preached the sermon. The Rev. H. Brown, of Warsaw, put the prescribed questions to the newly elected minister, and then by prayer inducted him into the pastoral charge of Springville and Lakevale. Rev. H. J. Keith then addressed the newly elected minister in suitable terms, and Rev. Wm. Johnston gave the address to the people.

Reception Held.

At the close of the induction service, a reception was held for the new minister and his wife, when a number of addresses were given by the Ministers of Presbytery, and the neighboring Methodist ministers, the Rev. Mr. Butler and the Rev. Mr. Wickett. The choir rendered two musical selections, and Mr. John Marsh, the son of the former pastor, Dr. Marsh, sang a solo, which was enjoyed by all present. Addresses of welcome were given by six men representing different departments of the work of the church. The Rev. Mr. Craw then came forward, and in a few well chosen words expressed his thanks to all present who had extended words of welcome to himself and Mrs. Craw.

Refreshments were served at the close to all present. The people of the united charge are to be congratulated in the very happy settlement which has taken place; and on the man they have chosen as their minister. In Mrs. Craw the manse at Springville has a lady who will worthily fill the place of Mrs. Marsh, who for so many years made herself the centre of many church activities in connection with the Springville congregation. Mrs. Craw, by her sweet manner, has already captured the hearts of the people.

MR. C. N. MESERVE.
The new General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

C.N.R. SITUATION

To the Editor of The Review:

Sir,—With reference to the report in your paper let me say that I have never seen so many inexcusable falsehoods in the newspapers as during this last few days. The one consolation in it is that several ministers and about 30 of the rank and file are dragged in in a wild attempt to make out that the Government is in the wrong regarding the C. N. R. To-day no less than nine members rose in the House and complained of the newspapers. The other day Mr. Borden called their conduct "deliberate mendacity." We have fought the C. N. R. to a finish and have put it where it belongs. The Government has compelled it to present the country with forty per cent. of the entire capital. Yet not one dollar of our money goes to it. This last part is what we insisted on. The gift of stock I personally regard as asking too much. The right of foreclosure and governmental application of the proceeds of the guarantee ought to be ample protection and we must do something. In future no individuals should be allowed to run Canada into a hole. It is not likely to occur again. But the moral is, "Do not believe all that all the newspapers say." The Globe gives me a front page notice to-day that is simply outrageous.

J. H. BURNHAM.

Trout Fishing.

The trout fishing season opened today. The muskrat season closed yesterday.

PACIFIC LINER COMES TO GRIEF

Siberia is Ashore Six Miles From Formosa Mainland

HAS EIGHTY PASSENGERS

Relief Steamer Has Been Sent To Her Aid

Canadian Press Despatch.

Tokio, May 1.—A Japanese warship reports from off the island of Formosa that the Pacific Mail Steamer Siberia, plying between San Francisco and Oriental ports, met disaster this morning, no particulars of which had been learned. She sent out repeated signals for assistance, which finally became indistinct. The steamer Kanto Maru has been sent out to make a search. The Siberia carried eighty saloon passengers, including Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison, wife of Governor Harrison, of the Philippines.

Tokio (later).—The steamer Siberia is ashore off the south east coast of Formosa, six miles from the mainland.

IMMENSE HALL FOR CONGRESS OF SALVATIONISTS

Will Have Seating Accommodation for Five Thousand Persons.

The current number of Band and Songster published at London has a large cut of the Peterboro Temple Band and some interesting facts relative to the band, which were no doubt read with interest by the old folks at home. A description is also given of the Great Salvation Hall which will accommodate the Congress.

It will seat 5,000 persons, being 170 feet in length and 130 feet in width. The hall will be lighted during the day by means of immense skylights which will also serve for ventilating purposes. At night, electricity will be used.

Canvas will be provided as an outside covering to the roof to prevent the noise of falling rain in the event of a heavy storm.

According to arrangement the hall is to be erected and demolished within the period of the letting and this fact will provide an object lesson concerning the speed and the precision with which British workmen can accomplish a difficult and heavy task.

PRESENTATION TO MR. AND MRS. FRANK WISE

Employees at Cemetery Remember Them on Their Silver Wedding Day

Mr. F. Wise, superintendent for the Little Lake Cemetery Co., said it looked like a strike, but the object of the men under him at the Little Lake Cemetery, when they called at his home yesterday at noon was to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Wise, who were that day celebrating their silver wedding.

It was a very pleasant surprise as the following address was read and a silver nut bowl presented:

To Mr. and Mrs. Wise:

In asking your acceptance of this token of our regard, we, the undersigned, heartily congratulate you both on the occasion of your silver wedding, and hope you will both live to share many happy years together, and celebrate your Golden Wedding in due time.

(Signed) Edwin Wise, F. H. Downton, R. R. Ford, D. Hayward, Wm. Godfrey, Fred Mockett, W. Hogan, Bentley Walker, Frederick Hockey, Stanley Godfrey, Wm. Barry, A. A. Craig.

STR. JAMIESON REACHES PORT

Took Shelter From Gale at Remote Point.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Napanee, May 1.—The schooner Wm. Jamieson, which left Oswego with a cargo of coal Tuesday for this port, arrived this morning after being given up as lost in Tuesday night's gale. She was in shelter at Timber Island and South Bay, which is remote from telegraph or telephone office.

WAS OLDEST AERONAUT.

Paris, May 1.—Wilfrid De Fonvielle, the oldest aeronaut in the world, died yesterday at the age of 90. As early as 1854 he began experimenting with balloons and made some remarkable ascents. During the siege of Paris he crossed the Prussian lines in a balloon.

A Stinger.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, MAY 1, 1914

WHEN ROYALTY COMES TO PETERBORO.

THE LETTER of Alderman Dobbin in The Review the other day was pertinent to a matter the council and citizens of this city must soon consider. Mr. Dobbin gave interesting details of the visit of his late Majesty King Edward VII. to this city. Proposals and discussions ought to evolve a satisfactory plan for celebrating this event in a becoming manner. For this reason, that it be done becomingly, we do not think that the plan followed half a century ago is the best one.

Great piles of lumber, river men with pike poles, red shirts and evergreens were representative of the Peterborough of 1860, when every town of a thousand inhabitants or more, sported a saw-mill or two. All over this province, can be seen in the old towns and cities grassy mounds marking the site of mill dams like the resting place of a giant of old. Occasionally a few old timbers, a crumbling wall of masonry, or the willow fringed bed of an old millrace now dry, remain to mark the place where once the whirr and buzz of saw and planer were tuneful of the lumber trade. Those days are long ago gone by. Far to the north of us we have to go to see the stalwart riverjacks tackle a jam, search out the key piece and leap to safety. It is many a long day since the editor "ran the logs" and it would be a sight indeed to behold a company of river men come into Peterborough and paint up the city. From the point of view of history, and especially of transitions through which this city has passed, some very interesting and attractive plans for celebrating the royal visit could be made. There ought to be some connection with by-gone days either by pageant or arch as the wisdom of the authorities may decide. So far as that goes Mr. Dobbin's proposal is good and should be followed or enlarged.

But there is another point that should not be forgotten, that is the present important factors that make Peterborough a city. In the first place there is electrical energy here that turns the wheels of factory and street car, making possible industries that did not exist in the days of saw-dust piles and lumber yards. Then there are the railroads, entirely different things with their great mogul engines, their four-tenths grades and ninety pound rails from the first lines, running by noisy dummy engines over quakey wooden tressels and coughing frantically on heavy grades. The railroad facilities of Peterborough, the construction of good macadam roads into the city are new features in its growth. The use of automobiles, of telephone and telegraph, the building of the Lift Locks, largest in the world, have all tended to supplement the regime of a new form of industrial life in striking contrast to the old days. The Peterborough of today should receive the emphasis of the forthcoming celebration, just as the Peterborough of other days was emphasised in its own time. The appeal to past associations might be made in a becoming manner by way of contrast, but the Peterborough of 1914 is what should be made impressive. One thing that should be guarded against is a cut and dried, rule of thumb, flag and bunting address. The royal visitor will likely get a surfeit of that kind of reception. If Peterborough makes an honest effort to do something original, to present a celebration different from the other cities of the province it will have earned an unique distinction—a distinction that will be remembered for its appropriateness just as Mr. Dobbin has recalled a former reception of royalty that was indicative of its own day and generation.

ROWELL WHITEWASHED.

A LITTLE WHILE AGO, it will be remembered that the Liberal opposition in Ontario and the Liberal press were very out spoken in denouncing the re-inacting of the clause in the bill of indemnity, by which Mr. G. Howard Ferguson was allowed to retain his seat having held a retainer under the Dominion Government. Mr. N. W. Rowell, leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, took a prominent part in denouncing what he called the white washing of Mr. Ferguson. He used all the powers at his command to vilify the present Conservative Government for passing a clause that was the work of a former Liberal Administration.

During the closing hours of the debate the other day, it transpired that while Mr. Rowell was denouncing Mr. Ferguson, he himself had accepted pay for legal services tendered the Dominion Government while a member of the Legislature and the leader of the Liberal party. Mr. Rowell tried to avoid the responsibility on the technical ground that he represented the Oka Indians and not the Dominion Government, but he knew quite well that the Oka Indians are wards of the Dominion Government. He tendered his services and was paid by the Dominion Government. He held his retainer by sanction of the Dominion Government. Mr. Rowell is in exactly the same position as Mr. Howard Ferguson was, even though he quibbles over a word. If Mr. Rowell is consistent with his attack on Mr. Ferguson, he will forthwith resign his seat in the Legislature. No one expects Mr. Rowell to do so. Inconsistent on other questions, one could not expect him to sacrifice himself for the sake of consistency.

Mr. Ferguson proved in the Assembly that Mr. Rowell had received his instructions from Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Superintendent of Indian Affairs. He also stated that Mr. Rowell had received his retainer in the case because it had been represented at Ottawa that the Methodists would not be satisfied unless he got it, and so he was recommended and the agreement made to pay him. Mr. Ferguson quoted items of the Opposition Leader's legal charges for services rendered since he became a member of the House. One evoking considerable derisive applause was a charge of $10.00 for "attending Mission Board, and receiving instructions to press the appeal." Mr. Rowell declared that "office commission or employment in the Government of Canada" did not cover his case, and yet he was legal adviser to wards of the Government of Canada. Mr. Rowell has made an excellent exhibition of himself as an inconsistent and insincere member of the Ontario House. He was not elected to that position to cover up his own tracks, nor to condemn in another what he condoned in himself, yet that is precisely what he has done.

PECK'S GOOD WORK IN LEGISLATURE.

CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH can congratulate themselves on the quiet but effective work done by their representative in the Ontario Legislature, Mr. E. A. Peck. The amendment to the Public Health Act, which was published in The Review yesterday, clears away the obstacle to the sewage disposal plant met with by this city, when they took measures to provide such a plant. The objection in the case of this city arose from the rights or privileges of another municipality. Under the newly amended act, another municipality cannot prevent the erection of a sewage disposal plant when the plans have been approved by the Provincial Board of Health. Any objection that may be raised to the building of a plant of this kind, must be an objection against the ruling of the Provincial Board of Health, for now, that body shoulders the responsibility, when it has approved of the plans of the municipality. In the case of Peterborough the municipal council has no responsibility beyond following out the approved plans. There can be no hitches over technical difficulties or quibbling over location. The responsibility for having proper plans rests with the Provincial Board of Health, which, being a body free from local interests and connections, ought to be able to give a fair and impartial decision in deciding proper plans for plants of this nature.

THE WAY WE BUILD RAILROADS.

PEOPLE HAVE sometimes wondered how Mackenzie and Mann could get so rich in so short a time. This wonderment changes to insinuations of dishonesty or political graft. As a matter of fact it is a simple matter of bookkeeping. A certain length of railway will cost half a million but contractors need a dollar or two profit so they tender at $800,000, and with land one million is appropriated. Each of the parties is the same person, so there is a fairly respectable profit sticking to the owners.

Before the Canadian Northern is finished it will have cost $400,000,000. Of this amount about two-thirds have been met out of cash donations from the Dominion and Provincial governments, or from funds which these governments have guaranteed. The system has been costly in construction and for this particular reason that the contractors were in several large instances the proprietors and promoters themselves—that is to say, the contracting parties to whom Mackenzie and Mann let contracts were Mackenzie and Mann themselves. That is a practice which usage condones; but it is bound to be costly to somebody. It was practised to some extent in the building of the transcontinental—that is to say, the Grand Trunk Pacific Development Company, which was another name for the original board of directors of the Grand Trunk Pacific, undertook several contracts and would have undertaken many more, were it not that the political contractors at Ottawa were given a first "peek" at the figures of the engineers, which was enough for their purpose. They tendered at the "right" prices and knocked the nose of the Grand Trunk Pacific Development Company out of joint; but that method of opening your own tender and giving yourself the contract, though it may, to a purist, seem to ignore the Ten Commandments, has the sanction of usage, and usage is sometimes more authoritative than law.

EDITORIAL NOTES

MR. CARVELL, M.P., (Lib.), in arguing for the removal of the potato duty admitted that the farmers of Maine (U.S.) had grown rich raising potatoes and that they feared European competition.

THE FOLLOWING RESOLUTION on the Parliamentary Order Paper excites general interest. It marks one more effort to provide some method of connecting the failure of modern administrations in this regard:—

By Mr. Burnham—That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should be empowered to restrict immigration, acquire land, expend money and generally to take such measures as will provide work and wages for the unemployed, to the end that recurring periods of unemployment and undeserved destitution may cease, and that the true function of Government be further realized.

Protection is Necessary.

La Patrie.

To produce a general reduction of duties because we are passing through a period of crisis would undoubtedly be the means of making the situation worse. Any lowering of the duties compatible with the maintenance of a revenue necessary to carry on the business of the country, would be imperceptible in its effects upon the cost of living. But the unfavorable economic conditions which are reflected in a slackening of industrial development, would be accentuated if the protection which we have given to industry in the hours of their prosperity were to be ruthlessly cut away at a time when it is most needed. While we desire to see our foreign trade expand, we must not lose sight of the fact that the domestic market is always the best; and an hour of crisis is not the time in which to subject it to foreign competition.

EATING TOO MUCH

By Walt Mason

I have the measles and the croup, the shingles and the mumps; my teeth have long been in the soup, aches playing round their stumps; oh, I have bunions on my jaws, I have to use a crutch, and Doc. he says it's all because I'm eating too blamed much. I have the foot and mouth disease, of which the sawbones talk, and I've a pair of housemaids' knees, and likewise chickenpox. All native ailments I have got, and ailments French and Dutch, and Doc, he says—he makes me hot!—I'm eating too derned much. And that's the way that Science goes, in these dad-blistered days; there is no pity for your woes, for any howl you raise. When you are bent beneath disease, the doctor prods your frame, and springs again the same old wheeze: "My friend, you are to blame! You eat too much, you sleep too long, you don't take exercise; you never can be well and strong till you reform," he cries. Why can't he dope away our ills, since we have got the price? Why can't he cure us with his pills, and cut out good advice?

Birthdays of Note

FRIDAY, MAY FIRST

His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, was born sixty-four years ago to-day at Buckingham Palace, London, he being the third son of the late Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort. His life has been devoted largely to military affairs and diplomatic missions. A man inspired with a strong sense of duty, he has been most punctilious in the observances of all the rules and forms of office. At the same time he has been genial and unaffected. These characteristics are well illustrated by a story that is told of him. Not long before he came to Canada, he met a young English squire, who had gained some distinction in the South African War and had been awarded a valued medal. It was at a ball and the Duke, who had known the young soldier before, took occasion to chide him for not wearing his medal. "You should not leave it off," said he, "I expect you to wear it." Some time later on, the two were brought together again at some function. The soldier was again without his medal but luckily had it in his pocket. He hurriedly got behind a friendly door and pinned it on his dress tunic. At length when the Duke met him, the great officer drew him aside. "Dear B——," he said, "when a man has won an honor he ought to know how to wear it." And with deft fingers he undid the fastening and placed the medal in a proper position on the left breast. It was a delicate little incident and showed the Duke in a most likeable aspect.

Also born to-day:—

Morley Donaldson, General Manager, G.T.P., Winnipeg, 1851.

Hon. P. A. Landry, Judge of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, born Dorchester, N.B., 1846.

T. H. Race, editor and proprietor, Mitchell Recorder, born in Durham, England, 1848.

COWARDICE COURT
BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

without a second's hesitation she started off briskly into the woodland road, striding along with the splendid swing of the healthy Englishwoman who has not been trained to dawdle. Her walking skirt gave free play to her limbs. She was far past the well known "line in the road" before she paused to take a full breath and to recapitulate. Her heart beat faster, and the sudden glow in her cheek was not from the exercise. Somehow, out there alone in the world, the most amazing feeling of tenderness sped on ahead to Randolph Shaw. She tried to put it from her, but it grew and grew. Then she blushed deep within herself, and her eyes grew sweet with the memory of those stolen, reprehensible hours along the frontier. Something within her breast cried out for those shining, gone by moments, something seemed to close down on her throat, something flooded her eyes with a softness that rolled up from her entire being. Their line! Their insurmountable barrier! An absurd yet ineffable longing to fall down and kiss that line came over her with compelling force.

She Started Off Briskly Into the Woodland Road.

Her head grew light with the thought of those moments when their horses stood with muzzles together as if kissing by proxy—the flush grew deeper, though her blood went cold and she trembled.

A pitiful confusion seized her, an inexplicable timidity crept into her heart, replacing the bold assurance that had been recklessly carrying her on to him. It was as though some one had whispered the truth into her ear and she was beginning to believe.

From that moment her courage began to fail. The glow from her lantern was a menace instead of a help. A sweet timorousness enveloped her and something tingled—she knew not what.

Spattering raindrops whizzed in her face, ominous forerunners from the inky sky. The wind was whistling with shrill glee in the treetops and the treetops tried to flee before it. A mile and a half lay between her and the big cottage on the hillside—the most arduous part of the journey by far. She walked and ran as though pursued, scudding over the road with a swiftness that would have amazed another, but which seemed the essence of slowness to her. Thoughts of robbers, tramps and wild beasts assailed her with intermittent terrors, but all served to diminish the feeling of shyness that had been interfering with her determination.

Past Renwood's cottage she sped, shuddering as she recognized the stone steps and path that ran up the hillside to the haunted house. Ghosts, witches and hobgoblins fell into the procession of pursuers, cheered on by the shrieking wind that grew more noisome as her feet carried her higher up the mountain. Now she was on new ground. She had never before explored so far as this. The hill was steep and the road had black abysses out beyond its edges.

She was breathless, half dead from fatigue and terror, when at last her feet stumbled up the broad steps leading to his porch. Trembling, she sank into the rustic bench that stood against the wall. The lantern clattered to her feet, and the bag with her jewels, her letter of credit and her curling irons slid to the floor behind the bench. Here was his home! What cared she for the storm?

Even as she lay there gasping for breath, her eyes on the shadowy moon that was breaking its way through the clouds, three men raced from the stables at Bazelhurst Villa, bent on finding the mad young person who had fled the place. Scarcely knowing what direction he took, Lord Bazelhurst led the way, followed by the duke and the count, all of them supplied with carriage lamps, which at any other time would have been sickening in their obtrusiveness. Except for Lady Evelyn the rest of the house slept the sleep of ease.

Gradually Penelope recovered from the effects of the mad race up the hill. The sputtering flame in the lantern called her into action. Clutching it from the floor of the porch, she softly began a tour of inspection, first looking at her watch to find that it was the unholy hour of 2. Had some one yelled "Boo!" she would have swooned, so tense was every nerve. Now that she was here, what was she to do? Her heart came to her mouth, her hand shook, but not with fear; a nervous smile tried to wreak disaster to the concern in her eyes.

The house was dark and still. No one was stirring. The porch was littered with rugs and cushions, while on a small table near the end stood a decanter, a siphon and two glasses. Two? He had said he was alone except for the housekeeper and the servants. A visitor, then. This was not what she had expected. Her heart sank. It would be hard to face the master of the house, but—a stranger! Cigarette stubs met her bewildered, troubled gaze—many of them. Deduction was easy out there in the lonely night. It was easy to see that Shaw and his companion sat up so late that the servants had gone to bed.

Distractedly she looked about for means of shelter on the porch until daylight could abet her in the flight to the village beyond. The storm was sure to come at no far distant time. She knew and feared the violence of the mountain rains.

"By all that's holy," came in a man's voice, low toned and uncertain, "it isn't a dream, after all!"

She turned like a flash, with a startled exclamation and an instinctive movement as if to shield herself from unbidden gaze. Her lips parted, and her heart pounded like a hammer. Standing in the doorway was Randolph Shaw, his figure looming up like a monstrous, wavering genie in the uncertain light from the shaking lantern. His right hand was to his brow, and his eyes were wide with incredulous joy. She noticed that the left sleeve of his dinner jacket hung limp and that the arm was in a white sling beneath.

"Is it really you?" he cried, his hand going instinctively to his watch pocket as if doubting that it was night instead of morning.

"I've—I've run away from them!" she stammered. "It's 2 o'clock. Don't look. Oh, I'm so sorry now! Why did I"—

"You ran away?" he exclaimed, coming toward her. "Oh, it can't be a dream! You are there, aren't you?" She was a pitiable object as she stood there, powerless to retreat, shaking like a leaf. He took her by the shoulder. "Yes, it is you. Good Lord, what does it mean? What has happened? How did you come here? Are you alone?"

"Utterly, miserably alone! Oh, Mr. Shaw!" she cried despairingly. "You will understand, won't you?"

"Never! Never as long as I live. It is beyond comprehension. The wonderful part of it all is that I was sitting there dreaming of you—yes, I was. I heard some one out here, investigated and found you—you, of all people in the world. And I was dreaming that I held you in my arms. Yes, I was. I was dreaming it"—

"Mr. Shaw! You shouldn't"—

"And I awoke to find you—not in my arms, not in Bazelhurst Villa, but here—here on my porch."

"Like a thief in the night," she murmured. "What do you think of me?"

"Shall I tell you—really?" he cried. The light in his eyes drove her back a step or two, panic in her heart.

"N—no, no—not now!" she gasped, but a great wave of exaltation swept through her being. He turned and walked away, too dazed to speak. Without knowing it, she followed with hesitating steps. At the edge of the porch he paused and looked into the darkness.

"By Jove, I must be dreaming," she heard him mutter.

"No, you are not," she declared desperately. "I am here. I ask your protection for the night. I am going away—to England—tomorrow. I couldn't stay there—I just couldn't. I'm sorry I came here—I'm"—

"Thank heaven, you did come," he exclaimed, turning to her joyously. "You are like a fairy—the fairy princess come true. It's unbelievable! But—but what was it you said about England?" he concluded, suddenly sober.

"I am go-going home. There's no place else. I can't live with her," she said, a bit tremulously.

"To England—at once? Your father—will be"—

"My father? I have no father. Oh!" with a sudden start. Her eyes met his in a helpless stare. "I never thought. My home was at Bazelhurst castle—their home. I can't go there. Good heavens, what am I to do?"

To be Continued.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION

A TROUSERED SUIT IS THE LATEST.

Here is the newest thing in mannish suits, one that gives all possible freedom in walking and in dancing, that is now likely to be indulged in any time of the day. Instead of a petticoat, there is a bifurcated garment quite like a man's trousers, fastened to a petticoat top of black satin. While there are the masculine crease and cuff to show through the slash in the outer skirt, yet in ordinary movement it will appear only a filling in of the opening. The flare to the lower part of the mannish jacket is the hall mark of the latest mode.

Seventeenth Century Napkins.

About 1650 Pierre David published the "Maistre d'Hostel," "which teaches how to wait on the table properly and how to fold all kinds of table napkins in all kinds of shapes." The shapes were "square, twisted, folded in bands and in the forms of a double and twisted shell, single shell, double melon, single melon, cock, hen and chickens, two chickens, pigeon in a basket, partridge, pheasant, two capons in a pie, hare, two rabbits, sucking pig, dog with collar, pike, carp, turbot, miter turkey, tortoise and the Lorraine cross."

Single Tax Colony In Trouble.

MOBILE, Ala., May 1.—A bill was filed here yesterday in Chancery Court, asking dissolution of the Fairhope Colony in Baldwin County, the principal experiment of the single tax in the United States.

Alexander J. Melville, a member and lessee of the corporation, is plaintiff.

The bill alleges that the corporation has failed "because the single tax theory never can be carried out in any jurisdiction where laws deny the essentials of the theory."

It also is charged that the moneys of the company are being expended for the benefit of only a portion of the tenants and members.

American Officer Slays Himself.

LONDON, May 1.—A man about 60 years of age, who described himself as Major Henry C. Fitzgerald, an American, and believed to have been formerly paymaster on the staff of Gen. Merritt in the Philippines, was found shot in the Charing Cross Hotel yesterday. He died from his wound after he had been conveyed to a hospital.

The police authorities are of the opinion that the man committed suicide.

Saved From the Gallows.

CHATHAM, May 1.—Frank Smith, colored, who was sentenced to be hanged on May 8 for the murder of James Conyers, will not hang. The sentence has been commuted to life imprisonment. Conyers was stabbed during a quarrel and died several days later when complications set in. Smith has no friends here.

Seek General Strike.

PEORIA, Ill., May 1.—The Illinois District Convention of United Mine Workers of America, yesterday adopted a resolution, asking the international organization to request the American Federation of Labor to call a general strike throughout the United States in protest against the Colorado labor troubles.

OLD PAP PINKHAM

Assures the President He's Equal to Emergencies.

DIPLOMACY SAVES HIM.

Neither Desperate Men Nor Desperate Women Swerve the Best Postmaster on Earth From His Duty, and He Looks For His Reward.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

MY Dear Mr. President—As disquieting rumors have reached you regarding certain happenings in Jericho let me give you the straight of them.

No one has been killed.

Our hospital is not full of injured victims.

The doors of the postoffice have not been beaten in.

I have not had my skull fractured and am not lying at the point of death.

The governor has not been asked to call out the militia.

No one has missed a hen from his coop.

Not a cow has lost her tail.

The newspapers have indulged in columns of sensation, but there has hardly been a grain of truth in it.

There was very little interest here in the income tax, as Jericho hasn't a citizen with an income of over $2,000 a year. No criticisms whatever were heard until after a tin peddler visited the town. He had hardly moved on when Squire Shouts asked to have a private word with me.

POST
TH SHOP

"EVERY MAN TOOK A PLUG."

"Pap," he said, "do you know about this income tax?"

I admitted I did.

"My income is about $400 a year."

"Then you don't pay a cent."

"But I have just bought a ticket in a lottery. If it hits the capital prize will I have to pay anything?"

"Certainly. They will soak it to you."

"Then the rebellion starts within an hour, and blood shall flow like water!"

Half an hour later, as I was opening a case of plug tobacco, I heard the mob coming. It was headed by the deacon and numbered twenty-eight desperate men.

When I heard the menacing murmur of that mob, did I fly and leave my charge?

Not much, Mr. President!

I walked forth bearing that newly opened case of plug and said:

"Gentlemen, I was about to send for you. Please have one on me!"

Every man in that crowd loved his plug.

Every man took a plug.

Every man grinned and shook hands.

Two days later Mrs. Ebenezer Schernerhorn, president of the Jericho suffragettes, entered the postoffice.

"Look here, pap," she began; "we've had that tariff bill?"

"We have."

"And the income tax bill?"

"We have."

"And the currency bill?"

"We have."

"But, sir, have we had the suffrage bill?"

"That's to come," I replied.

"So is Christmas, a hundred years ahead! Pap Pinkham, when is Mr. Wilson coming out flat footed for a suffrage bill?"

"Next week, mebbe," I says.

"Pap, I want you to telegraph to him right off, this minute, asking him what he is going to do about it."

"He may be off skating or sliding down hill. I'd better write him."

She went away shaking her fist, and I realized that trouble would follow. It came in about half an hour. Same murmurs from a mob bent upon bloodshed, same menacing tramp of many feet, then a halt.

"Old Pap Pinkham, come out to your doom!"

Did your postmaster at Jericho shake and tremble and hide under his counters, Mr. President? Did he make for the garret and the roof? Did he telephone the sheriff?

Not so as you would notice it!

With an open five pound box of his finest candy in either hand he boldly walked to the door.

I had met the enemy, and she was mine!

And that's the kind of a postmaster I am, sir, and may I ask if Uncle Sam is going to financially requite me for the plugs and the candy?

Antiquity of Spectacles.

The ordinary magnifying spectacles with convex lenses came into use some time near the end of the thirteenth century. Their invention is generally attributed to two Italians, Armati and Spina. As a matter of fact at this time old people in Germany were wearing glasses. According to G. H. Oliver, writing in the British Medical Journal, the first use of concave lenses was of much later date, probably not until the middle of the sixteenth century. It appears that at first the doctors were down on glasses because they interfered with the sale of lotions for weak eyes. Their first mention by a doctor is credited to Bernard Gordon, professor in Montpellier, who informed the world that they were unnecessary, thanks to his wonderful lotions. In these early days their use was limited for many reasons. They were clumsy and ill shaped, making the wearer conspicuous and subjecting him to ridicule oftentimes of far from gentle type. And above all they were very expensive. For example, Dr. Oliver says, "At the end of the sixteenth century the price per pair, expressed in terms of present day value, was from $50 to $100."

Ginseng In China.

Much of the American ginseng sent to China brings small prices because it shows cultivation, being smooth, round and light in color. What is wanted is the wild looking root. The central theory of the use of ginseng decoction is that it combines in itself the virtues of nature—wind, water, woods, the elements and wild nature generally; hence the gnarled, twisted wild root is the ideal, and any domesticated or cultivated variety is merely a substitute. This substitute ought to be as near like the wild as possible. If the root grows in the shape of or seems to bear some resemblance, even by severe stretch of the imagination, to some animal it has increased virtue in the trade. For this and similar reasons it is necessary that the small head of the root joined to the rest of the root by a small neck shall remain a part of the product. Breaking off such little heads reduces the value of the root in the Chinese market by fully half, as a rule.—Chicago News.

CANOE CLUB MIGHT BE ORGANIZED

Although looked upon by local people as a minor industry, the manufacturing of canoes has won more popularity and prominence for this city than any other industry or feature, including the celebrated Lift Lock. Tourists to Europe or Australia are continually hearing of the Peterboro canoe, the Indians on the reserves in Northern Ontario consider Peterboro the Mecca of Eastern Ontario because of the canoe and the prospectors on the Fraser and other mountain rivers swear by "good old Peterboro." In fact in some places the name of the city applies to almost any canoe. When a resident of this city at any summer resort makes known the fact that he comes from Peterboro, he is very seldom asked anything about the Lift Lock, on the contrary he is led invariably to a canoe. Outsiders imagine that a man from here is like a man from Venice, that is, "heavy on the boating." A person from Peterboro is always expected to be an expert canoist, but it is rather surprising to find four out of every five who know as much about that art as a Montana rancher.

Perhaps it is because canoeing was never encouraged, and if this be the case then its time something be done. The Otonabee affords as fine water facilities as any inland town could desire, and some of the citizens avail themselves of the excellent opportunity and spend no small amount of time enjoying scenery such as the weary man sees in his troubled dreams. Boat liveries do a fair business and it is pleasing to find such fine service, but why is it so few people own a canoe? There are some 2,500 canoes turned out of this city annually and it is safe to say that 25 of them are not purchased locally. In fact last year there were about fifteen obtained by citizens.

Is it because of the absence of a Canoe Club? By a canoe club one does not necessarily mean a club of two hundred members, who go in for all branches of athletics, on the contrary, a Peterboro Canoe Club, made up of the owners of canoes, could stage an odd regatta on local waters, and perhaps encourage a little boat racing. A good live club of this nature would be a drawing card to people who have a slight inclination toward the water sports, and with the name of Peterboro canoes spread all over the world, very little effort on their part would put a Peterboro Canoe Club before the public in box car letters.

A CASE WHERE THE CAT TAKES THE STEAK

Troubles of a Victim of the Feline Colony.

"Talk about a dog catcher, but we want a cat catcher around our section of the city, "was the frowning answer of a local citizen yesterday when asked by a Review scribe if there was anything startling around his way.

He then described in vivid terms the thievery and roguery perpetrated by the cats in his neighborhood. Why, from his story, the operations of the felines are likely to end in their destruction by terrible means. This particular citizen tells how he took home a beautiful steak, leaving it in the kitchen for a few minutes. On returning he saw a large striped cat making its escape through the kitchen window, dragging the remainder of the meat with it.

"Unless something is done to these starving, wild feline creatures, I am going to murder them in cold blood by purchasing a weapon and start an embroglio like the one in Mexico," he concluded.

NORDICA SAID TO BE DYING

Doctors Give Up All Hope for Her Recovery.

Batavia, Java, May 1.—Madame Lillian Nordica, who arrived here quite ill nearly a month ago, has had a relapse and is sinking. The doctors give up all hope of her recovery. She had engaged passage from Genoa, where her husband, George W. Young of New York, had expected to meet her.

Madame Nordica became ill with pneumonia after a shipwreck off the Australian coast.

Madame Nordica (Lillian Norton) was born at Farmington, Maine, in 1856 and received her musical education in Boston and Italy. In 1873 she was engaged for a concert tour of Europe and sang at the Crystal Palace in London. In more recent years she sang a great deal in Wagnerian opera, and had the distinction of appearing in Bayreuth in 1894. She has also been a distinguished member of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York for many seasons, her voice being a pure soprano of exceptional range and great power. She has been three times married, her first husband, an Englishman, being killed in a balloon accident. Her second husband was a Hungarian singer. In 1909 she was married in London to Mr. Young.

DR. BRUCE SMITH AND CIGARETTES

Opines That Moral Reformers Are Beginning at Wrong End.

Ottawa, May 1.—That cigarette smoking among the young is the result of heredity and environment was the gist of the evidence given yesterday by Dr. Bruce Smith, of Toronto, before the special parliamentary committee considering that problem.

The inspector of Ontario prisons gave it as his opinion that most moral reformers are beginning at the wrong end when they merely ask for more laws wherewith to punish the cigarette victim. Said he: "You have to go farther back than that. The 'keep-off-the-grass' policy never stops any evil."

Dr. Smith is opposed to any further prohibitory law. Boys who cannot buy cigarettes would steal tissue paper to make their own. It is the combustion of the tissue paper and the tobacco together which makes the cigarette more harmful than pipe or cigar. Tobacco generally does not, he added, do as much harm to adults as tea drinking does to the women of Canada. The doctor also maintained that while some girls might smoke for a prank, the practice did not prevail to anything like the extent which some alarmists declare.

A child's welfare bureau, under federal control, with branches in every big centre, was Dr. Smith's recommendation as a means to educate children away from the cigarette and other evils.

He put little stock in the nitrate of silver cure for smokers, his view being that "if a person smokes cigarettes to excess you ought to treat his brain and not his throat."

"PREACHER" DOES NOT ACT LIKE PARSON

Strange Man Said to Be Calling at Different Homes.

A man representing himself as a preacher of the Gospel, but presenting no such credentials of religious organizations, is said to have made a tour of some parts of the outlying districts recently. He asks to be admitted to the house and evidently would like to give spiritual advice to the members. One lady was not impressed by his appearance. She refused him admittance and shut the door in his face. He remained in the district for fully half an hour.

What the man's intentions are is hard to say, but, from his actions, and the report of him it is highly improbable that he is what he represents himself to be.

HAVELOCK REAL ESTATE

Activity in real estate still continues in Havelock, Mr. P. Kane of Peterboro, has sold his lot south of the "Creamery site" on Concession Street to Mr. Thos. Stillman for $20.00. Mr. Stillman has also purchased the "Cremery" site, consisting of five lots, from Mr. C. A. Ghent, for $120, and it is rumored, will re-establish a creamery on the property. Mr. Ghent has negotiated the sale of the house on Mathison Street belonging to Miss A. Barrett of Toronto, and occupied by Mr. J. Leeworthy, to Mr. S. C. Cross, for $1250.—Havelock Standard.

FLITTING DAY AS MAY DRAWS NEAR

That May as a moving month is fast supplanting April is amply evidenced by the amount of work the Peterborough Cartage Co. and carters are doing. Each year the number of transfers of families from one home to another is becoming greater during the month of May. April 1st is soon due to lose its title as "flitting day."

One carter reports that he has more work than he can handle. He has been moving not less than one or two families each day. While this is not on the face of it a large number, yet when the total is reached it assumes considerable proportions.

Owing greatly to the unsettled weather which prevailed recently during the middle of the month, the first part of April movements have commenced all over again, and a large number of leases now date from May 1st, which shows that the latter month is becoming a popular moving month.

Mayor Calls Out Police.

WINDSOR, May 1. — Mayor Clay called out Chief Willis and practically the whole police force, and had further work stopped on the construction of a Ferry avenue loop line by the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Street Railway Co, which is the Canadian end of the D. U. R. About 50 laborers were ordered to quit work, which they did.

As legal proceedings are pending against the street railway company by private parties who are opposing the Ferry avenue loop, and also because no permit had been granted by the Ontario Railway Board or a public vote taken, Mayor Clay felt justified in stopping the construction.

Generally speaking, charity is more of a fad than an obsession.

WHERE PROMISES ARE MADE GOOD

Every detail of our workshop, including the mechanical equipment, is planned to make it a model of accuracy and convenience, which from your standpoint means satisfaction and prompt service in the manufacture of new glasses or repairs on old ones.

Whether we originally made your glasses or not, we can immediately duplicate a broken lens, no matter how complicated. If you meet with a misfortune of this kind, simply telephone us and if we haven't your prescription on file, we will send for the broken glasses, and when you call a little later, you will find them waiting for you.

We have all Mr. Browett's Prescriptions, covering the entire time he was in business in this city.

HUERTA MAY NOT CONSENT TO NEGOTIATIONS WITH CARRANZA

Neither May Carranza be Willing to Enter Mediation Involving Huerta—War Preparations Go On But Truce Between U.S. and Huerta is Observed Strictly—European Powers Are Favorable.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Restrained, but none the less steady preparation for any military eventualities that may become necessary, and the quiet but definite progress of the mediation program being worked out behind closed doors—these were the two outstanding features of the Mexican situation here yesterday.

The three mediation envoys of Argentine, Brazil and Chili continued their private sittings through the day and evening. Their first move for an armistice was succeeded by the practical suspension of hostilities or a truce between the forces of the United States and the Huerta regime, although there were still ominous sounds of conflict between the Huerta and Carranza forces.

Secretary Bryan formally notified the South American envoys that the American Government took it for granted that there would be no hostilities during the mediation proceedings, and has intended no further acts of aggression while the conferences were being held. But the attitude of Huerta and Carranza on the cessation of hostilities was still unknown last night. While there has been no period set within which the negotiations must be concluded, Secretary Bryan said yesterday he believed they would move forward "as rapidly as possible."

While the envoys were not yet ready to make announcement, several interesting phases of what has come up during the discussion were learned from authoritative sources. It appears that while the attitude of Gen. Huerta was definite in accepting intermediation as between the United States and the Huerta Government, it has not yet been made clear that his acceptance will apply also to intermediation which includes Carranza. It is expected this question will be cleared up by inquiries now under way so that it may be definitely established that Huerta not only accepts intermediation with the United States, but also with Carranza.

Another outgrowth of the discussion was an intimation that both the Huerta and Carranza elements would send representatives directly with the mediators and that Francisco De La Barra, now at Paris, as ambassador for the Huerta authorities, would probably be designated to act for Huerta. It was known that the mediators themselves had made no move to secure a personal representative for either party. But there was reason to believe De La Barra's coming was being considered at Mexico City and that a representative of Carranza, who is on his way here, may be authorized to act in that direct capacity.

Funston's Force.

VERA CRUZ, May 1. — The task of guarding the City of Vera Cruz and its environs was taken over from the navy yestery by Brig.-Gen. Frederick Funston and the Fifth Infantry Brigade of the United States army.

While martial law still continues in force, the actual municipal government is being conducted by R. J. Kerr, the American civil governor, who has enlisted the aid of Mexican officials to act under his superintendence and in accordance with Mexican laws.

After a morning enlivened by the marching to and fro of large bodies of American soldiers, sailors and marines, the city resumed its normal and somewhat sleepy life, made gay in the evening by outdoor dinner parties at the numerous cafes and restaurants, accompanied by music and sometimes by dancing.

Gen. Huerta last night accepted the proposal that there be no further hostilities between the United States and Mexico, pending the efforts of the envoys to bring about an amicable settlement of difficulties between the countries.

Constitutionalists Fire on Ship.

WASHINGTON, May 1. — Rear Admiral Mayo at Tampico, reported to the Navy Department last night that the Ward Line Steamer Antilla, flying the Cuban flag, was fired upon and held up in the river there Wednesday by Constitutionalists, but later steamed into port under cover of fire on the rebels from the Mexican federal gunboat Vera Cruz.

Mr. Taft's Double.

So much like Ex-president W. H. Taft is Mr. J. C. Judd, of Ottawa, that after the Canadian Club luncheon recently Sir William Mackenzie met Mr. Judd in the rotunda of the Chateau Laurier and mistaking him for Mr. Taft offered congratulations on delivering such a splendid address. When Sir William was notified of his mistake by Mr. Judd he declared that he had never seen two men look so much alike.

Later Mr. Taft and Mr. Judd met, and the former agreed that Mr. Judd was his double.—Ottawa Free Press.

MILITANTS AT WEDDING.

Woman Endeavors To Add New Question to the Service.

LONDON, May 1. — Suffragettes caused a disturbance at the fashionable wedding in St. James Church, Piccadilly, yesterday of Noel Buxton, M.P., and Lucy Pelham Burn. Many society people and political friends of the couple were present. Whilst the clergyman was reading the service, a well-dressed woman shouted, "Mr. Noel Buxton, will you promise to treat this woman you are about to marry properly and insist that she has a vote?" Almost simultaneously a man interrupted the service and both were promptly removed from the church by other members of the congregation.

Threw Bundle at King.

CAMBRIDGE, May 1. — A suffragette broke through the police lines here yesterday while the automobile of King George was passing through the streets, and hurled a bundle of suffragette literature at his Majesty. She missed the King, but struck the chauffeur of his car. The woman was immediately arrested.

China's Postal System.

The Chinese are great letter writers, and something over 350,000,000 of letters were carried by the Chinese posts last year. It is the most extensive and the cheapest postal system in the world. The Chinese post will carry a letter to any part of China for about a cent and a half, whether it is sent by rail or horse or foot courier.

'WARE BOGUS TENS

Bank of Commerce Counterfeits Reported From Hamilton

TORONTO, May 1. — Counterfeit $10 notes of the Canadian Bank of Commerce of the issue at present in use are in circulation in Hamilton. The counterfeits, which have so far been seen, are numbered 452,477 in red over black, whereas the genuine notes now issued by the bank are numbered in blue. The colors used are also much deeper in tint than those of the genuine notes, especially the yellow and red on the face. On the back there are two or three flaws in the design, apparently made by blots which appear on the word "bank," where it occurs at the foot of the note. The counterfeits are countersigned by H. O'Reilly.

REBELS ARE MOBILIZING

CONCENTRATED ATTACK IS TO BE MADE ON TAMPICO

EL PASO, Texas, May 1.—While Gen. Carranza has not replied officially to the proposition of the South American mediators for a federal-rebel armistice, his answer is said by officials here to be plainly forecast in orders promulgated yesterday for a concentrated attack on Tampico.

The federal gunboats and the land defences of Tampico has proved too big a task for the troops of Gens. Caballero and Gonzales, and orders were issued yesterday for the mobilization of 12,000 troops from the States of Coahuila, Tamaulipas and Nievo Leon. It is reported also that Gen. Villa will lead the attack.

Rafael E. Musquiz, a son-in-law of Gen. Carranza, and a leader of the junta here, is among authorities for the declaration that the armistice in Northern Mexico is impossible.

It was rumored in connection with the proposal that acceptance of the proposition would have to carry with it some form of recognition of the belligerency of the rebels, but Gen. Carranza is said to have commented that he did not care to attain it in that way, as it was bound to come in due time with the complete victory of his forces.

Gen. Villa was at Parral yesterday. It is learned that his recent trip to Juarez and his present journey are on business matters connected with raising revenue. The United States is said to have become very rigid in its demands for the protection of all foreign interests in Mexico, thereby embarrassing the process of raising funds by war taxes and confiscation.

Jewels of London's Lord Mayor.

The gold chain and jeweled insignia of the lord mayor of London are among the most wonderful ornaments in the world, being composed of pure gold and adorned with an enormous number of diamonds. Their value has been estimated at not less than £120.000. Every lord mayor, before he is elected, is called upon to enter into a bond for their safe custody during his term of office, and before he resigns the insignia at the close of his mayoralty they are most carefully examined by special jewelers in order to see that during the year's wear its diamonds have not been loosened in their holdings and that his successor may wear them without anxiety. No wonder that when the lord mayor is wearing all the insignia of his proud position he is a special object of attention by a special police guard.—London Saturday Journal.

Thunder.

When clouds are driven past one another by wind currents electricity of a frictional kind is produced. Lightning is caused by the passing of the electricity between the two clouds or from a cloud to the earth. As it travels it expands and drives the air in front of it. When the lightning has passed the air that was driven away returns with a rush, and it is this rush which causes the noise of thunder. — Pearson's Weekly.

OPPOSITION CAUCUS DECIDES TO CONTEST THE C.N.R. BILL

INSURGENCY IS DENIED

Resolutions Will Probably Be Introduced Formally on Tuesday and Thorough Explanation of Clauses Given

OTTAWA, May 1.—The forthcoming legislation respecting the Canadian Northern continues to be the sole topic of conversation on Parliament Hill. The Liberal Senators and members held a caucus yesterday morning, at the conclusion of which a statement was given out to the effect that the Opposition would fight the proposals of the Government to the bitter end.

At yesterday's sitting of the House seven Conservative members, Messrs. Fisher (Brant), Armstrong (North York), Smith (S. Ontario), Walker (Northumberland), Sutherland (Oxford), Best (Dufferin), and Rhodes (Cumberland), severally arose as a matter of privilege and denounced as unwarranted the insinuations in some Toronto newspapers to the effect that they were lukewarm in their support of the Government and might be reckoned among the insurgents. They all declared that they would most heartily support the Canadian Northern legislation.

The formal resolutions, which cover some fifteen pages, appeared on the order paper yesterday as a notice of motion, but the Prime Minister was not in his seat when the same were called.

It is quite likely, however, that by agreement, the House will be moved into committee of the whole on Tuesday next to consider the resolutions, and a considerable time may be spent in the committee stage before the resolutions are reported and the bill introduced.

The resolutions, which embody the contract between the Government and the Canadian Northern, are more or less technical and will have to be carefully explained before the House will become seized of their meaning and import, except in a general way.

The House spent another day on the tariff resolutions, the Liberals putting up a determined opposition to the increase of duty upon dressed stone. Mr. Pardee (West Lambton) said the new tariff would be prohibitory and in this position was supported by Hon. Frank Oliver, who claimed that the consumer would be injured without benefitting the stonecutters. Finance Minister White, however, replied that the quarrymen, stonecutters and stone contractors were unanimous in demanding a higher duty and the item passed.

The evening sitting was taken up with the iron and steel schedules. Some of the Liberal members objected to the duty on wire rods, claiming that the smaller manufacturers of nails would be at the mercy of the big concerns at Sydney and the Soo.

Col. John A. Currie (N. Simcoe) said that the Government was pledged to prevent this, and he believed that the United States steel corporations' entry into the Canadian field would reduce the prices of all iron and and steel production.

Hon. Mr. White intimated that when the increased duties upon structural iron were made effective by order-in-council that a readjustment of the iron and steel duties would be necessary.

The House in committee of ways and means passed all the tariff resolutions laid on the table at the conclusion of the budget speech, but the bill to amend the Customs Act was not introduced, as the Finance Minister explained that some minor modifications would be made.

THE HEIGHT OF TREES.

A Hundred Feet Is All That Is Usually Attained In Britain.

A tree 100 feet high, accurately measured, is not as tall as it looks. There are not many trees in the gardens of England that exceed 100 feet, notwithstanding the records of reputedly much higher trees than this. We have been told that the highest tree in Kew Gardens, carefully measured with a tape, was 103 feet and that the tallest pine, a Corsican near the entrance, is 86 feet, says The Field.

There are some fine specimens of Atlas and Lebanon cedars in these gardens, but not one of them is 70 feet high. A larch that had been drawn up by surrounding beeches and was looked upon as a giant, was blown down in 1902 and it proved to be 110 feet long. Beech, among the tallest of our trees, rarely reaches 100 feet, though Dr. Henry measured one in Kilkenny in 1904 which was 117 feet. The famous deciduous cypress, Taxodium distichum, in Syon Park, Brentford, is, according to Mr. Elwes, 110 feet high, the tallest of its kind in Europe.

The same authority gives 105 feet as the height of the tallest horse chestnut he had seen, though there are others estimated to be even higher than this. The tallest walnut is from 80 feet to 85 feet, and the tallest black walnut, at Marble Hill, Twickenham, was 98 feet high when measured by Dr. Henry in 1905. Oaks have been measured up to 130 feet, but they are quite exceptional, 100 feet being above the average for our tallest oaks.

The height of trees is influenced by the company they grow in. For example, a larch growing in the open would most likely fail to reach 100 feet in height, whereas larches growing close together or pressed upward by other trees have been known to exceed 130 feet in this country. The California giant trees of the Wellingtonia owe their great height to the same influence. Not even in that country would this tree have grown to 300 feet or more if it had not been forced to grow upward because it could not grow outward.

According to Mr. Elwes, one of the tallest Wellingtonias in England is at Fonthill Abbey, which in 1908 measured "certainly over 100 feet and probably 105 feet high." This is at least 10 feet higher than the tallest at Strathfieldsaye. It is next to impossible to ascertain the correct height of a tree by any other means than that of careful measurement; there are, we know, ingenious contrivances for doing it otherwise, but they are not reliable. Of course the approximate height may be near enough and yet be a long way out.

LONDON EASIER

Settlement of Ulster Question Seems Nearer Now.

LONDON, May 1.—Conviction that a settlement of the Irish situation was near was expressed on every side here to-day. Political and club circles breathed a sigh of relief. That civil war had been near was undoubted; that it would have been confined to Ireland was held impossible. What its consequences would have been none could foretell.

There were important changes in leadership freely forecasted yesterday. It was said that Mr. Bonar Law, a Canadian, would soon retire as Unionist leader in favor of Mr. Austen Chamberlain, whose utterances on the Ulster question recently have shown him less acrid and eminently level-headed. Mr. Redmond, it was said, was in danger of losing his head. Nationalist rank and file resent his concessions in order to help toward a settlement. A possible successor was not named. The London Times yesterday expressed the view of the vast majority, when it says that settlement was never so near. Drilling of troops in Ulster, and to some extent in the south of Ireland, continued, in preparation for any eventualities.

A few questions over Ulster were addressed to Premier Asquith in the afternoon from the Opposition benches.

The questioners added little, however, to the stock information. The air of the Commons was like the weather outside—gone considerably cooler in the past 24 hours.

As to measures dealing with gun-running, the Premier stated that measures had already been taken "which we hope will prove effective to prevent the recurrence of such incidents."

CABARETS GO ON

Judge Warmly Denounces The Commissioners for Their Action.

MONTREAL, May 1. — The fact that the judgment of the License Commission revoking the licenses of four restaurants where cabaret shows were held was published in the newspapers here before the cases were finally decided upon, figures as a reason that has caused Judge Charbonneau to quash the decision of the commissioners. The restaurants affected are the Regal, Parisian, Arbours and the Arlington, all of which have been denounced in the pulpits in the city.

His lordship commented rather bitterly on members of the bench who allowed themselves to be influenced by the public opinion of the moment and averred that such public opinion should play no part in influencing the decisions of a court of law.

HABIT NOT WIDESPREAD

NUMBER OF GIRL CIGARETTE SMOKERS SAID TO BE OVERSTATED

OTTAWA, May 1.—That the habit of cigarette smoking among young girls does not prevail to the degree that some people appear to believe, was the view expressed by Dr. R. Bruce Smith before the Broder anti-cigarette committee yesterday. He thought that any smoking was done more for a lark than as a regular habit. Dr. Smith was opposed to further prohibitory laws, giving his opinion that most moral reformers started at the wrong end when they asked for more laws wherewith to punish the cigarette victim. Boys who could not buy cigarettes would steal tissue paper and make their own. As for tobacco smoking amongst adults, he thought it no more harm than tea drinking amongst women.

As a suggestion to meet the growth of the habit, Dr. Smith recommended the establishment of a child's welfare bureau under federal control, with branches in every big centre. He did not favor the use of nitrate of sugar as a cure for smoking.

Animals Disappearing.

Students of natural history have been declaring for a long time that the advance of civilization is threatening all animals with extinction, but lately this subject is arousing more than ordinary interest.

It is claimed that one more big war is needed to sound the practical death knell of the horse in England. The South African hostilities cost nearly 300,000 horses. For of all that were sent only a few hundreds came back, half that number being killed and the rest retained in South Africa in connection with the development of the country. Since that time there has been an alarming shortage in horses for the army.

Then, too, it is claimed, the pig is rapidly becoming extinct. For, with the growth of large towns and the facilities for keeping the animals under recognized regulations becoming less and less, the race of swine is being slowly wiped out.

Again, the advance of civilization is having a tendency to do away with fish. The powerful steam trawlers recently introduced, which are capable of capturing hundreds of thousands of fish in one catch, are robbing the sea of fish about twenty times as fast as they can breed.

Each year the seals in the Antarctic decrease thousands in numbers through indiscriminate killing.

PROBABLE TEAM FOR OPENER NEXT WEEK AGAINST ERIE

(Special to The Review).

Youngstown, May 1.—First base, Gorman; Second base, King; Shortstop, Price; Third base, Byrne; Left field, Swartz; Centre field, Blount; Right field, Fox; Catchers, Miller, Kelly and Ryberg; Pitchers, Sterling, Schettler, Tracey, Belting and Cresswell.

Although not given out officially the above will in all probability compose the Peterboro Canadian League team when they clash in the opener next Thursday with Erie. The cold weather of yesterday caused Manager Blount to call off the practice and the whole afternoon was given to signals and doping out inside ball. The little leader is heavy on the inside stuff and this assisted by the Petes' speed should make them a strong contendant for the rag.

The official line-up has not been given out, but the above players have looked good all along, and the conviction that they would be on the payroll was strengthened yesterday when Manager Blount shut the rest of the aspirants out of the signal practice.

The axe fell once again, this time Pitcher Terrill was given a ride. Sid was very popular with the boys, and they were sorry to see him go, but he had no chance to buck against the superb Peterboro hurling crew. He is young and prospects of becoming a good man, although he was handicapped with a sore arm all spring. He will very likely hook up with some semi-pro. team.

CHAMPIONSHIP HOPES

The teams in the Canadian League are receiving their final prep. for the commencement of the struggle. All the managers want to break fast and get the drop on the other clubs. None of the clubs have been blessed with good weather for training purposes, and this week has not produced the warm weather expected with the coming of the May flowers. Cold weather has prevailed in almost every training camp, and although the teams have been able to play games the majority of those have been played under chilly weather conditions and in some instances under almost wintry blasts. It is that sort of weather which puts a kink into the salary whip and it does not tend to help the other departments of a team as a ball player likes the good warm weather both for training and championship games. Few of the twirlers have extended themselves because of the unfavorable weather conditions, and it is doubtful whether they would be able to, if called upon. Therefore some swatfests may be looked for unless real warm weather comes along at once. The manager who gets his team going good at the barrier and has the luck of breaking with him, will probably set a merry clip for the first few weeks, but from dope and performances, the race looks like a tidy one after the players get their bearings.

John McGraw is not only struggling to win a fourth consecutive championship, but he is also battling in an effort to whip his Giants into shape for another reason. McGraw was criticised by numerous managers and such players as Cobb and Eddie Collins for promoting the world's tour. He is endeavoring to show the critics that the trip did not injure the players. So far the globe trot has not injured any of the men who took it in, as Larry Doyle, who started off the season of 1913, is walloping the Spalding output in mid-season style, while Fred Merkle is fielding in a sensational manner. Sam Crawford, another globe circler, is whaling the hide off the pill.

The feeling that Knotty Lee will manage the Toronto Canadian League Club is growing each day. Suppose such an accident does come to pass and Knotty leads the Beavers to victory, or if not to a better position than that occupied by the Hamilton Club? It would prove one question, and that is, that Jay Jay McCaffery's bank roll is mightier than the brain.

Back to the land is the slogan in Toronto. For that reason President Norris, of the Toronto Canadian League Club is negotiating for grounds on the mainland, and his Beavers will likely play their home games at the Motordrome.

Rube Deneau has signed LeCroix, an experienced backstop who has figured in the South Michigan and Western Leagues. He will report to the Brants at once.

Jennings has Ty. Cobb, Crawford and company going in great style. With Hall pitching, the Detroit crew beat Chicago yesterday. Hall allowed only one hit.

Ottawa has signed George Nill, formerly with the Washington and Cleveland clubs. He will be used either at the middle or difficult sack. An Ottawa dispatch states that Ottawa was unable to secure Nill before because the salary he demanded was too high, but the Class "B" rating granted the League enabled the club to sign him. He hit .248 with Seattle last year.

Schneider, who was taken south with the Toronto Internationals, and later turned over to the Canadian League club, has failed to report, and it is feared he has jumped. He is a New York boy, and it is rumored he has decided to remain at home instead of coming to Canada. He played sensational ball during the training trip.

Frank Chance is laid up with a cold, and Roger Peckinpaugh is leading the Yankees. The lanky shortstop led his warriors to victory the first time out.

MERCANTILE BALL AGAIN

ANOTHER MEETING TO DECIDE THE NUMBER OF TEAMS

GOOD OFFICERS

The meeting in the Y. M. C. A. last night to organise a City or Mercantile Baseball League found representatives from the following teams on hand: De Laval, Printers, Drafting Room, Bankers, and the Auburn Woollen Mills. The G. C. E. Machine Shop sent word to the effect that they would enter a team and the Brinton Carpet Co. phoned for the same purpose. The first discussion was whether the league would be Mercantile or City, and it was finally decided that it would be the former.

The following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Mr. W. Nelson.
President—Mr. C. Paton.
Vice-President—Mr. J. Murphy.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Wm. English.

Executive to be composed of the above officers and one representative from each team.

Considerable time was spent in endeavoring to decide whether four, six or eight teams should be admitted, but the meeting deemed it advisable to let the matter stand over till the next meeting to be held on Tuesday night, and at which only the one representative of each team and the officers will be allowed to vote. Everyone interested, however, is invited to be present and express his views. At this meeting the constitution will be gone over and any necessary amendments made while the committee who were appointed to look for suitable playing grounds will give their report.

SPORTING COMMENT

Up in Hamilton the club owners have invited the clergy to attend the opener. Bobby Robinson, in the Spec., says he opines that it will take a long time to make fans out of some of the clergy he knows. This is the first intimation Bobby has given that he ever attended church.

Such fights as the one staged by Freddie Welsh and Leach Cross in Frisco the other evening will not popularize the sport. Tangoes and hugs are all right in their place, but when a sport pays to see a boxing contest he expects to get his money's worth.

Dyment's Moss Fox pulled up lame yesterday, and has been declared out of the plate. The only chance Giddings has of losing is to have Bee Hive do the same stunt.

A glimpse into the past—Old Folks Templin, Dad Stewart, Jo Jo Keenan and Knotty Lee.

Followers of the prize ring are beginning to take some stock in Frank Moran, the Pittsburg Irishman who is going to make an effort to win back the heavyweight title for the white race. Reports from Gay Paree are that Johnson is not in the shape he used to be. Everyone hopes Moran will succeed, but he'll know he has been in a fight before he does. It will be youth against age, and the old saying tells us that youth must be served. In this case it looks as though Johnson has been served, this is liquidly. He is said to have developed a thirst longer than that possessed by Rain in the Face, the eminent Indian consumer. At times he is said to be as dry as a sponge at the equator.

ONE THOUSAND GUINEAS FOR PRINCESS DORRIE

Juvenile Financial Genius.

"Johnnie," said a prominent mine operator to his youngest the other day, "I'll give you a dollar if you'll dig up the front yard for your sister's new garden." "All right," said Johnnie thoughtfully. "But I shall have to ask for 25 per cent of the contract price in advance. Not as an evidence of good faith, but for working capital." "But—what do you mean?" "Well, you see, I guess I'll bury the quarter somewhere and tell all the boys in the neighborhood that a pirate hid some treasure round there. When they strike that quarter they'll make the dirt fly. I can tell you. In that way I can clean up about 75 per cent. In fact, I"— "Well, what?" "In fact, I don't know but what I can also arrange so as to find that quarter myself. I'll work it just like that salted mine you were telling mamma about unloading on the street last night." And the father wept tears of joy.—Pall Mall Gazette.

FINE POINTS IN DECIDING PLAYS ON THE DIAMOND

One fine distinction with which professional ball players and fans are fairly familiar, but which puzzles a lot of beginners, has to do with the effect of juggling the ball in making a catch or a throw either of a throw or a swatted fly.

Take the case of a runner sprinting to first base after a fair hit. The play is close. The thrown ball reaches the first baseman's hands an instant ahead of the runner, but it bounds a few inches out of the baseman's hands. He recovers and holds it before the ball touches the ground, but in the meantime the runner crosses the base. That runner is safe. When there is a force play being made at second, third or home, and the runner does not have to be touched, the same rule holds true.

Take another case where a runner who is not forced tries for a base. The ball beats him, and he is touched before reaching safety, but the force of the touch or some other reason causes the baseman to juggle the ball. He recovers and holds it before it touches the ground. That runner is out.

Rules Cover Both Cases.

For this fine distinction there is authority in the rules themselves. In section 5 of rule 56, which applies to the play at first base, there is no getting away from the fact that the ball must be "securely" held before the runner touches the base. Section 9 of the same rule, which applies to plays in which the runner has to be touched, has nothing to say about holding the ball "securely" before the runner is touched. The only proviso is that the ball must be held after the man is tagged, and even then, if the runner palpably knocks the ball out of his opponent's hands, he is out just the same. Of course, if a baseman juggles the catch and fails to tag a runner until that runner hits the base he is not out.

There is an arbitrary ruling when an outfielder juggles a fly ball and a runner tries to advance after the catch. In such cases the umpire releases the runner from the base he is holding the instant the ball strikes the fielder's hands or mitt. It is not necessary for the catch to be securely made before the runner can leave his base on a fly out.

Justice o fRuling Apparent.

The justice of the ruling is apparent, for if every runner who tried to go home from third on an outfield fly had to wait until he was sure the ball was securely held, an extremely valuable instant would be lost. Aside from the justice of it, this interpretation is necessary, because the experienced fielder becomes an expert in handling the ball that he can judge an ordinary fly catch, and so trap a lot of runners into leaving their bases before he actually holds the ball. If it were necessary to wait until the thing was securely held there would be many runners called out for leaving bases too soon. Some of the experts of the earlier days became so skilled in this feat that they could juggle even a long fly ball and run in toward the infield at the same time, thereby holding the runner on his base until the fielder was too close for him to advance at all. That was ruled out.

While some of the playing rules require careful study, because every word in them is fraught with meaning, other rules are so loosely worded as to be practically obsolete. They are observed only in their intent and not to the letter. An illustration is the rule requiring a runner to return to his base after a foul which is not caught. The majority of the runners do so, but a considerable minority merely go back within a few feet of the base and let it go at that. Nor do they get called down for it. Of course, if the pitcher attempts to catch these runners off their base they will retouch them. When a ball is pitched to the batsmen before a runner retouches a base the out cannot be claimed thereafter.

Coaching Laws Not Observed.

The coaching rule is practically disregarded in the major leagues. It restricts the coacher to conversation directed at the base-runners only, but how often you hear a coacher start a running fire of comment before there is any base-runner to talk to. There is another rule which is so obsolete it is an absolute joke. It is numbered 65 and it reads as follows: "Under no circumstances shall a captain or player dispute the accuracy of the umpire's judgment or decision on a play." If we had a case note for every time we have seen that rule broken in the last twenty-odd years we could endow a university for the dissemination of baseball instruction in every city of organized baseball and still have enough left to tell the wolf to go around to the place where parcels are delivered.

There is another standing joke in the rule code. When a player or manager is ordered off the field by an umpire it is specifically stated that he shall go direct to the clubhouse and remain there until the game is over or else leave the ground altogether. The penalty for failure to do one or the other is forfeiture of the game. In spite of that the manager who is ousted from the playing field immediately hastens to the dressing room, gets into citizen's clothes, and hurries into the grandstand, where he takes a seat as near his team's bench as possible, in full view of the umpire and directs the game from there almost as easily as from the bench itself.

Ground rules are prolific of disputes outside the professional ranks. These rules must be specifically agreed upon before the game starts and the rival captains and umpires must thoroughly understand just how a ground rule will be enforced. Conditions which make such rules desirable vary at different parks and playgrounds, consequently one set of ground rules will not fit all cases satisfactorily. We are asked frequently to decide disputes in which "ground rules where one base on an overflow of first, third, or home, if you can make it." There can be no such ground rule. When a ground rule prevents a runner advancing more than one base, it also protects the runner from being put out before reaching that base. "Overthrow" is a bad word to use, because an "underthrow" or wide throw must be included.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

FOX-HEFFERNAN.

(From The Buffalo Evening Times)

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was solemnised Tuesday morning, April 21st, at St. Joseph's Cathedral, Buffalo, when Miss Anna M. Heffernan, youngest daughter of Mr. Lawrence Heffernan, of Acme, Alberta, Canada, was united in marriage to Mr. James C. Fox, of Buffalo, N.Y.

Preceding the ceremony, which took place at 9 o'clock, a musical programme was given by the choir, announcing the entrance of the bridal party.

Rev. Father Britt officiated with nuptial high mass, while the choir sang the usual music of the mass.

The bride was beautifully gowned in French embroidered net over white silk. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and sweet peas, tied with white chiffon ribbon in which were caught tiny rosebuds and sweet peas. Her hat was white lace with large plume.

Miss Rose M. Fox, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid, wore white silk, with tunic of shadow lace and pearls. She also wore a white hat and carried a sheaf of pink roses and white sweet peas, tide with pink chiffon ribbon. Mr. Joseph Fox, also of Buffalo, assisted the groom. The altar was handsomely adorned with Easter lilies, lilacs, tulips and palms.

The ceremony was followed by a breakfast at the bride's new home, the table being centred with white roses. After a two weeks' visit at the groom's former home, Lindsay, Ont., the couple will be at home at the Lincoln apartments, Buffalo, N.Y.

Both the bride and groom are well known locally, and their many friends will unite in extending the young couple their best wishes.

The regular meeting of the 57th chapter Daughters of the Empire was held in the rooms at the Armouries Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Clegg, Regent, presided. After the routine business had been completed, two delegates were appointed to attend the meeting of the I.O.D.E. at Toronto, May 6, 7 and 8. The delegates are Mrs. Clegg and Mrs. Mills. Several other members will attend.

The usual social hour was enjoyed, during which Master Alexis Spellman of Hastings, contributed a 'cello solo, with Mrs. Gliddon playing the piano accompaniment.

Mr. George N .Graham continues to show improvement, and the physicians in attendance are very pleased with his condition to-day.

Mrs. Jolliffe, widow of the late Rev. Jolliffe, is in the city visiting her sister, Mrs. A. E. Dixon, George Street, north.

Mrs. S. Pentland, Stewart Street, has returned from Preston Springs, and is much improved in health.

Mrs. (Dr.) Neal's father, Mr. John Raycroft, died in Toronto on Thursday. Dr. Neal is in Toronto today. The body will be taken to Highgate, Ont., for interment.

Mr. D. C. Kerr, of Ottawa, is a guest in the city.

Mr. A. E. Bottum, of Bobcaygeon, is among the guests at the Oriental to-day.

The larger girls of the Mission Band of Mark Street Methodist Church will give a talent tea in the basement of the church to-morrow afternoon from 3.30 to 6 o'clock.

PIANO WAREROOMS OPENED TO-DAY

The new piano warerooms of Mr. George Leader and Sons were opened to the public to-day.

The new premises have been remodelled for the requirements of a modern piano wareroom, and the various models of the Gerhard Heinzmann and Dominion pianos are now ready for the inspection of the public.

THE CUSTOMS RETURNS.

VINCENT ASTOR WEDS MISS HELEN HUNTINGTON

Photographers Were Held Back By Guards at All Entrances

BRIDE HAS FORTUNE

Staatsburg, N.Y., May 1.—William Vincent Astor, son of the late Colonel John Jacob Astor, and Miss Helen Dinsmore Huntington, whom he has known since childhood, were married here yesterday in the big oak-paneled library of Hopeland House, home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Huntington. Less than fifty persons witnessed the ceremony. Plans had been made for an elaborate church wedding, but Mr. Astor's recent illness, which threatened pneumonia, interfered. Eighteen hundred wedding announcements were sent out after the ceremony, but the small company present had been invited by informal notes.

A fine rain was falling when the guests arrived at the 400-acre Huntington estate. Guards had been posted at the entrance, and only those whose credential were unquestioned were admitted. Even reporters and photographers were barred.

Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, mother of the bridegroom, was among the wedding guests. The young widow of Colonel Astor, although invited, was not present.

Floral Decoration.

Green foliage and spring flowers hung everywhere throughout the rooms of Hopeland House. Buried in blossoms was the marble mantelpiece in the library, before which the couple stood. Miss Huntington entered the room on the arm of her father. At her throat gleamed a gorgeous necklace of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. Her bridal gown was of white tulle, with a train of white satin. Her lace veil had been worn by her grandmother, Mrs. Dinsmore, and by her mother before her.

Hermann Oelrichs, of New York, was best man. Miss Alice Huntington, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and the little Misses Muriel Astor and Margaret Dows were flower girls, garbed in corn-colored chiffon and dotted net, with blue sashes. Small flowers wreathed their hats, and each carried an old-fashioned bouquet. Mrs. Robert Huntington, the bride's mother, wore blue taffeta and chiffon. A screened orchestra of twenty pieces played the Lohengrin Wedding March, and Rev. Charles H. Duncan, rector of St. Margaret's Church, Staatsburg, read the Episcopal marriage service.

The Young Couple.

Vincent Astor is 23 years old; the bride is 20. She is tall and blonde. He, too, is tall. Both are lovers of the out-of-doors, and if his health permits they probably in a month's time will take an extended honeymoon voyage on his yacht, the Noma.

Robt. Huntington is a multi-millionaire, and the young bride is said to have a private fortune exceeding a million.

The Huntington family declined to give out any list of description of the presents.

REWARD.

POWDERY SCAB OF POTATOES

Information Can Be Secured From Department of Agriculture

POWDERY SCAB OF POTATOES.

Some time ago it was found that there existed in the eastern provinces of Canada, viz.: Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec, a disease of the potato tuber known as Corky or better, Powdery Scab, which had probably been present, at least in some localities, for a number of years, but not distinguished from the disease known as Common Scab.

While this disease, under Canadian conditions, has so far only in one instance given indications of being more destructive than Common Scab, it is nevertheless a very undesirable malady to have permanently established in potato growing land. As a result of the discovery of Powdery Scab, the United States' authorities, through fear of introducing the disease, have enacted that potatoes shall not enter the United States except under a rigorous system of certification, which includes a certificate to the effect that the potatoes were raised in an area in which neither Potato Canker nor Powdery Scab exists. If the export with the United States is to be regained in face of the existing regulations, the methods directed towards the eradication of the disease must be followed intelligently and in a thorough spirit of co-operation.

In order to familiarize the farmers of Canada with this disease, Mr. J. W. Eastham, Chief Assistant Botanist of the Central Experimental Farm, has prepared a comprehensive circular entitled Powdery Scab of Potatoes, which is Farmers' Circular No. 5 of the Division of Botany, and is available to all who make application for it to the Publication Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The nature, symptoms and preventive methods are fully outlined and the following summary of recommendations for control of Powdery Scab are given:

1. Use only "seed" from a crop free from the disease.
2. Disinfect such "seed" to destroy any stray disease germs.
3. Use land known to be free from the disease. In most areas this will have to be land not previously planted to potatoes.
4. Do not plant potatoes again in land which has shown the disease. If possible seed such land down to grass.
5. Isolate the crop from any field showing the disease, and take all possible precautions to avoid the spores from this crop scattered where they infect other potatoes.
6. Pay special attention to the cleaning, and, if necessary, disinfection of implements which may carry the disease.

Former Liberal Whip Only Committed "Errors of Judgment."

LONDON, May 1.—The committee of the House of Lords appointed to investigate Lord Murray's dealings in American Marconi shares, yesterday issued it report, which finds that he committed "errors of judgment." There was, however, nothing in his conduct "which reflects upon his personal honor."

The committee recommends "there should henceforth be an inflexible rule to preclude those who hold any public office from entering upon any speculative transactions in stocks or shares under any circumstances whatever."

Lord Murray, when he was chief Liberal Whip in the House of Commons, was said to have invested some of the funds of the Liberal party in Marconi shares.

Mind Affected by Starvation.

HAMILTON, May 1. — The City Hall authorities were startled yesterday by the action of one John Fraser, who was attempting to climb up the stone wall of the municipal stone pile to get into the private office of Mayor Allan. It is declared that he is one of the thousands of men who have been walking the streets all winter in search of work, and that his mind was affected through starvation.

IN ROMANTIC CHAMBLY; OLD FRENCH FORT HAS SEEN HISTORY IN THE MAKING

Ancient Citadel That Overlooks Chambly Basin, Twenty Miles From Montreal, Was Built in 1665 When La Salle Started on His Explorations.

In one of the letters that Jacques Cartier wrote home in 1535 he referred to the Valley of Chambly as the most beautiful, fertile and romantic that anyone could wish to see. He referred to the Isle of Orleans as the Isle of Bacchus, owing to the luxuriant growth of grapes there.

If Chambly was romantic in 1535, what must it be to-day, with three hundred and seventy-nine years of a nation's rise and dominance huddling on its back? says Margaret Bell in The Toronto Globe.

What stories it could tell of tempestuous times when the French flag flew over Canada, and all France suffered under the sway of Catherine of Navarre? Stories of the meeting of Cartier with the Iroquois and the opening of the great trade in furs. And of a later day, when Champlain, with his new allies, the Algonquins, was obliged to carry his boat above the rapids of Chambly Basin before proceeding to the lake which later was to bear his name. Tempestuous times indeed! But the waters of Chambly Basin laved the shores just the same as they do today. Only there were no private piers built from private gardens fragrant with rose and lilac bushes. Rather were there darts whissing about and arrowheads of flint. Today the motorist, blase in prosperity, is obliged to stpp and ask: What means the crumbling stone fort which stands up from the Basin some twenty odd miles from Montreal? The Tri-color and the Union Jack fly side by side, and the fort gives evidence of the days when the same two flags were not so friendly.

Evidence of warfare and strife, of bloodshed and tortuous times. For the stones which once made the fort worthy of the name are beginning to fall away and leave great gaps. Fort Chambly was built round about 1665, when La Salle undertook to explore the Ohio and Illinois rivers. Many things happened during the two years he was away on his trip of exploration. Many things which caused him to explain on his return that "that was the unhappiest spot in Canada." Chambly, from its very situation, was bound to play a trump or two in the making of history. From the time when painted hands of savages stole along the Richelieu, and the French, bent on conquest, received the same savage tribes for allies; from the days when Burgoyne led his valiant English troops against the citizens of New England — from those turbulant times until to-day, when tourists invade the luxuriant Valley of Chambly, the quiet-looking village has been adding round after round to complete the cycle of history.

Chambly was only one of a line of forts built from Sorel to Lake Champlain for points of defence. They were called the key to Canada from the New England side, for the route of the New Englanders was from the Hudson to Lake George by way of portage. From George to Lake Champlain, from there to the Richelieu, and on to Sorel.

Although these forts had no part in the actual war—actual fighting might be more exact—still it was through them that the fighting could take place. They were the troop despatchers, the larders of supplies for the troops, the general lookouts across the great field of battle.

At the time of Vaudreuil, the great blunderer; Bigot, the chief of the corrupt, and Montcalm, the gentleman and soldier, Chambly writhed at the war raging all around. When the great Montcalm and the great Wolfe, conquered and conqueror, gave up their lives after seven minutes' actual warfare, Chambly, the hallowed spot which now stands pensive and tranquil, had had its share in the horror of defeat. Then it was that it came under the sway of a new power.

On June 1, 1777, the head of that new power in Canada personally paid a visit to the troops stationed there. Sir Guy Carleton's name still remains on a bit of parchment in the old fort. A new power usually introduces reforms.

Four years after that June Chambly was rebuilt and made stronger. An eminent engineer and soldier came over with ten thousand Hessian troops. These brave Hessians knew they might never return to their homes, for they were sailing into a revolution. They never did return. And they did not die victorious. Their brave leader, Riedesel, was obliged to surrender at the battle of Saratoga.

More warfare. New leaders. Lord Durham inspected the fort, found new recruits and added more supplies. The Americans were wily, and bethought themselves how they could gain greater knowledge of Canadian locations. They invited the French to join them against the English. But the French, always loyal, treated the invitation as an insult. This probably more than anything else welded the friendship of the French people. The war of 1812 needs no comment. But English and French were ready to fight together against the foe which had crept in from the south. Crept in by the waterway route, of which Chambly was one of the forts.

The Papineau rebellion of 1837, the year the beloved Victoria came to the throne, and the Fenian raids, twenty-nine years later, caused activity in the fort. But the peaceful years of later times have made the fort the rendezvous for tourists, historians, and everyone interested in the new country called Canada.

CONSTRUCTING A POTATO PLANTER

The accompanying illustration shows a simple home-made instrument that farmers, when planting potatoes, will find very convenient. The following description gives particulars, showing how the planter may be made and operated.

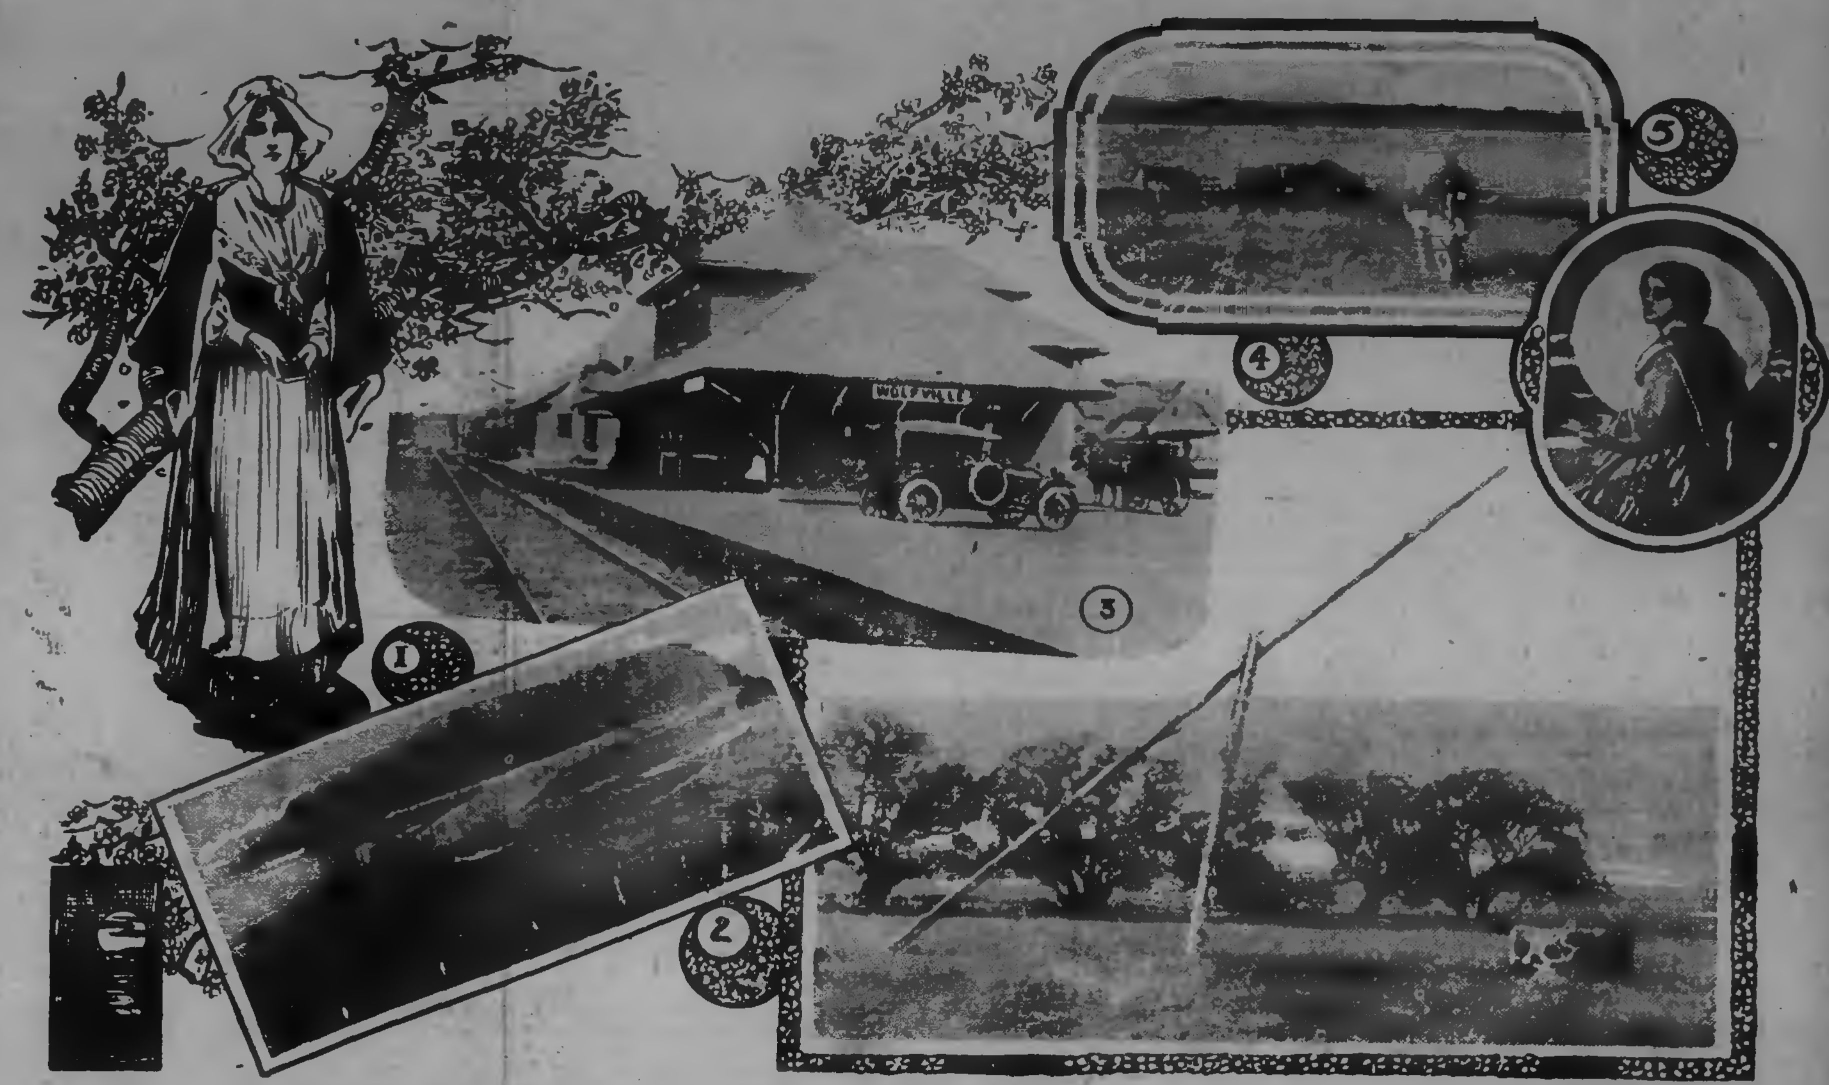
The main frame is 3 ft. 6 in., by 5 ft., and made of hardwood planks 2 in. thick by 10 in. wide, bolted together at the corners. The spouts are made of heavy gas pipe, 14 in. long and 3½ in. in diameter, tapered at the point like a cultivator tooth, so that they will not drag the sod or manure. The upper end of the tooth has a thread on it and is screwed into a piece of hardwood scantling 6 in. by 6 in. and 28 in. long, bolted firmly to the frame. The balance of the spout attached to the hopper is made of heavy zinc and is wider at the top for convenience in dropping in the potatoes. The spouts are placed 3 ft. apart and the wheels are centered 18 in. from them, so that the one wheel comes back into its own mark, thus making all the rows the same distance apart. Should it be desired to have the rows closer together, the machine can be made on the same principle to suit any distance.

The wheels are the kind used on the old fashioned walking cultivators, with levers for raising and lowering. The ratchets on the levers should be small and close together, so that they can be moved up or down any distance. Gang-plough wheels with ratchets on the sides may also be used by elevating the frame to suit.

The wheels should be so placed that the machine will balance when two boys are sitting on the back. The boxes, holding one bushel of cut potatoes, are shaped like a mason's hod and held firmly in place in front at the top end of the spouts. The distance apart for dropping the cut potatoes is regulated by blocks, bolted on the spokes, which come in contact with a piece of light steel spring, which makes a noise so that the boys know when to drop the sets into the spout. A seat may be arranged directly behind the spouts for the comfort of those dropping the potatoes.

As soon as the potatoes are planted it is advisable to harrow the land so that any that are not deep enough may be covered. It is also advisable to harrow several times before the potatoes come up, the last harrowing to be just when the sprouts are appearing. The harrowing will kill weeds, and keep the crust broken to form a mulch to conserve moisture and warm the soil. In this way growth is encouraged and much time is saved in weeding of the potatoes after they are up.

THE LAND OF EVANGELINE—THE HOME OF THE LOST CAUSE



1. "Away to the Westward, Blomidon Rose."
2. Evangeline's Well at Grand Pre.
3. Wolfeville Station.
4. Heifer Grazing on the Dykes.
5. A Modern Conception of Evangeline.

What bonnie Scotland's plains and hills, lakes and fells, battlefields and shrines were, and are yet, to England's myriad hosts of nature lovers and tourists, such, for three quarters of a century, has been "the Land of Evangeline," in Nova Scotia, to tens of thousands of tourists from the United States and to many from other foreign countries.

In summer, made golden with sunshine and magical with the loveliest beauties of Nature, and "one hundred miles of apple blossoms," the land of Evangeline at all times teems with the most absorbing historic romance. Small as its area is, no section of any other country relatively contains so much of the magical, mystical beauty of Nature or so much romance of legend, tradition, heroism, faith and love.

The Land of Evangeline is suffused with the imaginative beauty which the fancy weaves around moss-grown fortresses and ancient indecipherable tombstones: with the pathetic, wistful appeal to the heart which is awakened by relics that recall—

"For-off, old, unhappy things,
And battles long ago."

Like the Green Isle of Erin, the Land of Evangeline is "the home of the lost cause," and the scene of a real love romance which for self-sacrifice, heroism and devotion, as told in Longellow's poem, ranks amongst the greatest love stories in world-literature, and is accounted the most tragical and moving of them all.

The magic of earth, the romance of pioneer life in "the forest primeval," of massacre, of warfare, of heroism, of self-sacrifice and devotion, and the poetry of the tragical love of a winsome Acadian maiden—these have transmitted the Land of Evangeline into a centre of compelling interest to nature-lovers, students of history, archaeology and literature, and to holiday-seekers and tourists in general. Also, in particular they have made a perennial shrine of the quaint village of Grand Pre, which was the home of Evangeline, and its picturesque relics and environs, Evangeline's well, the site of the forge of Basil, the blacksmith, the house of Father Felician, the old willows (a group still standing), the site where stood the house in which "Boy Blue" was wedded on the night Coylon de Villiers massacred the British in the village of Melancon, 1747, the Basin of Minas and blue-crested Blomidon, standing stark, sheer and silent, like a mighty sentinel of this real land of romance.

The pleasant meadow and village of Grand Pre, the town of Wolfville, which is the railway centre from American tourists visiting the home of Evangeline and its environs, the Annapolis Valley, with its "one hundred miles of apple blossoms," the towns of Annapolis Royal and Digby, both picturesque and romantic, and the sequestered French Acadian settlement of Clare where the ancient Norman customs and manners of dress still obtain and the maidens of to-day "by the fire repeat Evangeline's story." All these places are genuine shrines of thousands of tourists from the United States, and the annual influx to this Land of Enchantment is increasing year by year. Indeed so altogether lovely to the vision is the natural beauty of the Land of Evangeline, and so enchanting to the imagination and the sentiments of love and pathos are the relics of the birthplace of the beautiful, broken-hearted Acadian maiden that Grand Pre, its immediate environs, and the rest of the historic sections and sites of the land have caused the country to be called "the Mecca of the American Tourist." With an unconscious American enterprise, thousands of United States tourists, while travelling in other foreign countries have spread the gospel of the opalescent beauty and winning romance of the Land of Evangeline. So that European tourists, who visit Canada, are also increasingly making Grand Pre and the Annapolis Valley—"the orchard of the Empire"—their holiday Mecca.

In fact the Land of Evangeline has equalled Niagara Falls as a centre of scenic interest in Eastern Canada. This is only inevitable, for while the thunderous falls and wild-rushing tumultuous Niagara River provide grandeur and awaken the emotion of sublimity, the Land of Evangeline possesses the persuasive beauty which gives the spectator ever-changing moments of exquisite sensation, and the golden romance which swells in the heart and imagination like the imperishable memory of a happy dream of unearthly existence.

The illustations in this article show, in part, the natural beauty about Grand Pre, the home of Evangeline, and suggest the poetry of sentiment which the sight of the remaining relics and which the imagination may awaken in the heart. In the ancient Acadian days, Grand Pre itself was a straggling settlement. It began at what is now Grand Pre railway station, which is three miles east of Wolfville, an educational and summer resort centre on the line of the Dominion Atlantic. The village of Grand Pre lay in a fertile meadow. The original landscape remains practically unchanged. The older portions of the ancient dykes which reclaimed the salt marshes from the sea can still be seen. A visitor can still look upon the breeze-ruffled waters of the Basin of Minas, and perhaps, watch white-winged skiffs glide over them with the grace of a gull in the air. He can still behold Cape Blomidon looming in the distance, dark, high-crested and silent, if the day is bright; foreboding or ominous if the day is clouded.

In one part of the meadow stand, what remains of the willows planted there by the original Acadians. Also to be seen is the well which some are pleased, through poetic sentiment, to name "Evangeline's Well," but which, more likely, was the source of the general water supply for the village. Only the reputed sites of the forge of Basil the blacksmith, and of Father Felician, are shown to the tourist. But he will be shown the real site of the village of Melancon, where the French under de Villiers, massacred a body of New England troops in the dead of winter, nine years before the expulsion of the Acadians. Portions of the church of St. Charles, including the foundations of the chimney and the fireplace built by the soldiers who were quartered in the church during the expulsion, were recently discovered. The lovely Evangeline herself, of course, and her pretty docile "bell-heifer," have long, long ago turned to dust. For her sad story and her tragic search for her lover, one must turn to Longfellow's celebrated poem. See that he therein relates of her habitat and vicissitudes and of the golden land which her love and its own natural beauty, as described by the poet, have made famous, are borne out by real tradition, and by the landscape and relics as they are to-day. The Land of Evangeline is by itself a little world of wondrous enchantment.

CURIOUS ARTICLES.

Where Strange Odds and Ends of Commerce Are Made.

The pre-eminence of Birmingham in the manufacture of guns, jewelry, pens, and bedsteads is known all over the world, but a number of small articles are also produced there, some of which are of a very curious character, says a contributor to The London Times.

It is not generally known that Birmingham is the principal source of the world's supply of jew's harps. For sixty years the industry has been carried on by members of the Troman family. The Jew's harps are still made in a little home smithy strongly reminiscent of its Black Country origin. Great Britain is no longer the best market, for enormous quantities are exported especially to half-civilized countries. The Zulu musician, for example, has taken very kindly to the Jew's harp. He needs an especially large size to suit his capacious mouth.

Another survival is the trade of gold beating, which is one of the oldest in the city. The work is done entirely by hand, and the customary sign is the picture of a gilded arm bearing a hammer poised for the blow. The leaf is hammered out in small home workshops from twenty-four carat gold but is first sent to the rolling mills, whence it is returned in long ribbons one-thousandth part of an inch in thickness. Then it is ready for the beater.

He cuts the ribbon into small one-and-one-quarter inch squares, that weigh about six grains each. He places the thin square in the centre of a vegetable parchment pad, which consists of one hundred sheets on top, and the same number beneath. This he beats with a fourteen-pound hammer, and when the gold is considerable reduced in thickness, he places it between leaves of goldbeater's skin, prepared from a thin but tough membrane found in the large intestine of an ox. Eight hundred pieces of the hammered leaf are arranged over another, between leaves of the skin. Then the whole is placed between parchment bands, and beaten for two hours with a seven-pound hammer. The eight hundred pieces are next cut up into thirty-two hundred pieces, and again beaten. When the work is done, the leaf is one fifty-thousandth part of an inch in thickness, and almost as light as air.

It is an odd custom, to preserve the leaf for sale purposes in old Bibles and Testaments, and great numbers of these sacred books are used for this purpose. There are not many goldbeaters left now in Birmingham, but a generation ago there were many factories, the largest of which employed three hundred hands.

Erskine's Retort.

Lord Mansfield received a hard setting down from Thomas Erskine. The latter was arguing a case before the House of Lords — a Scottish appeal relating to a trust estate. In the course of his argument he had frequent occasion to use the word "curator," always pronouncing it in the manner approved in the Scottish Courts—that is, with the accent on the first syllable.

This grated upon the ears of Lord Mansfield, who, through a Scotsman by birth, had taken pains to become Anglicized. At last he broke out:—

"Mr. Erskine, we are in the habit in this country of saying 'cura-tor,' following the analogy of the Latin, in which, as you are doubtless aware, the penultimate syllable is long."

"I thank your lordship very much," returned Erskine. "We are weak enough in Scotland to think that in pronouncing the word 'cu-ra-tor' we are following the analogy of the English language; but I need scarcely say that I bow with pleasure to the opinion of so learned a sena-tor and so great an ora-tor as your lordship."

HOG SENSE

ON account of his stubbornness and mischief-lovin' ways nobody has a great deal of love for a pig, I take it. Fer wantin' his own way and gettin' it he has a spiled child beaten to a stand-still. Nuthin' short of a machine-gun will keep a razor-back from tryin' a hole in the fence er a red-haired Jersey from rootin' up the entire tater-patch, but you can't get round the fact that a pig shows mighty sound sense in some ways.

Never see a sick pig very often, do ye? Well, here's the reason. He keeps well by rootin', in other words by keepin' close to mother earth; keeps healthy by keepin' dirty, but its clean dirt. When it comes to takin' a good spring tonic I reckon there ain,t nothin' kin beat a leetle rootin' round in fresh, wholesome earth. If it's good fer pigs it oughter be good fer us; what ye think?

SCIONS OF OLD AZTECS.

Remnants of a Civilization That Was Old When Cortes Found Mexico.

Quaint, inoffensive figures are the Aztec Indians, descendants of a race so ancient that the mind of man runneth not back to the story of their origin. When Cortes entered the great land of Mexico and took over its wealth in the name of Spain in 1519, the civilization of the Aztecs was even then hoary with age.

These non-combatants in the present struggles in Mexico are doubtless descendants of the Aztecs, but with such admixtures of Indian blood as to make them degenerate half-breeds.

Even at that, the Aztecs are not the oldest race on the contine. Their supremacy in Mexico is supposed to date from about 1200. Before their advent, stretching back into the twilight of time was the reign of their gifted predecessors, the Toltecs. These were people of high culture. They were distinguished as architects. The sun was rising on the seventh century, probably, when they attained the form of a nation.

What we know about the arts, the Toltecs knew before us. They built monuments that endure even to this day. They knew how to fuse metals, how to polish stone, make earthenware, weave fabrics. They had a highly developed language and knew astronomy. They had a calendar of 18 months of 20 days each, adding five days to make up the 365 and adding 12½ days at the end of 52 years, which, it has been calculated, brought them within a small fraction of the actual solar time. They had religion, a judicial system and appear to have been a peaceful and prosperous people.

Whence they came and what their origin, no one knows and there is little left on which to base a surmise. All we know is that they lived and had a cultured civilization at a time when English speaking peoples were emerging from barbarism. And then they moved on!

It was doubtless the coming of the Aztecs that forced out the Toltecs. Archaeologists surmise from ruins in Central America that with the arrival of the Aztecs the cultured Toltecs moved south, since they appear to have left in their train a line of noble temples and other structures. How old these structures are may be surmised from the fact that when Cortes arrived he wondered at the tree-grown ruins.

To the Aztecs the Toltecs bequeathed their civilization. "Bequeathed" is a euphemism. Probably the Aztecs, descending from the north "took" the cities of their predecessors.

The Aztecs believed in one supreme invisible creator, the ruler of the universe, Taotl, a belief that may have been inherited from the Toltecs. There were a couple of hundred inferior divinities besides. To the numerous priestly class was intrusted the education of the young and civilization was kept at a high standard for many centuries.

It was to such a country as this that Cortes and the first white men came. Montezuma was on the throne in 1519, when a hieroglyphic message reached him that white men were approaching.

And then the Spanish rule! Centuries of suppression, centuries of oppression and exploitation, centuries of internal disorder! And in the meantime the descendants of the noble race of Aztecs, with the admixtures of Spanish and Indian blood, have formed a nation, rude, indolent, ignorant, incapable of self-government, rather worse on the whole than the natives of Mexico in the year 700 A.D. Such a people are easily fomented into uprising, vengeful and bloodthirsty, the very material from which revolutions are forg

ARIZONA KICKLETS

As the Town's Pooh Bah the Editor Warns Gunmen

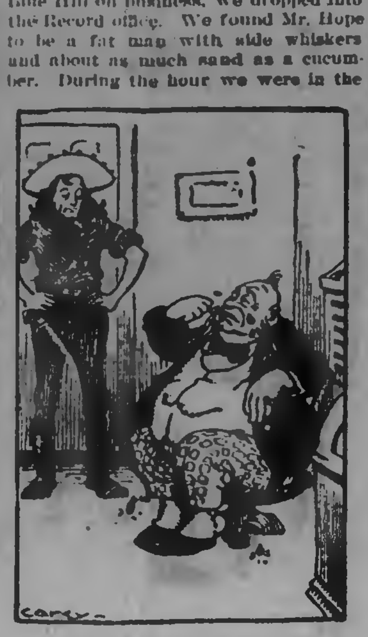
By M. QUAD

MAJOR BANKS has been in the habit of coming into the postoffice several times a day and firing a pistol through the general delivery window to attract the attention of the clerk who serves the public. If he persists in his course we shall esteem it our duty and privilege to return the fire and lay him up for a few weeks. If he wants to shoot at us while on the street we have no objections; but, as the regular appointed postmaster, sitting in our private room in the postoffice, we demand respectful consideration from the public.

This town is lighted at night by six kerosene lamps, and old Jim Hewson and his crowd get together regularly every evening and shoot the lamps into the middle of next day. This has been going on for about four weeks to the annoyance of citizens and financial damage of the town treasury. His honor the mayor (who is ourself) gives public notice that from and after this evening he and the city council will be abroad after lamp light, and any one found popping at the public lamps had better look out for a pop in return.

While we were returning from Jackson's Bend last Saturday afternoon we fell in with a stranger at No Man's creek, who seemed to be out hunting jack rabbits. We had given him a few valuable hints on how best to hunt the long eared jack when he suddenly held us up for $23, a silver watch and both our guns. He had a big revolver looking us straight in the left eye before we had any idea that the circus had come to town, and under the circumstances we thought it best to shell out. He was a peremptory sort of a critter, but courteous withal, and he gave us his word that nothing but dire necessity would have induced him to rob a newspaper man. We tried to get him to open a game of poker with us, knowing that we could win everything back on a couple of hands, but he was in a hurry and soon went his way. The sheriff went out with a posse and beat up the country, but the traveler was not to be found.

Two months ago Mr. John Hope came here and established the Blue Hill Record. We suspected what sort of a man he was from the looks of his paper and the care he took not to tread on anybody's corns, but we did not have the pleasure of meeting him until last Thursday. Then, being in Blue Hill on business, we dropped into the Record office. We found Mr. Hope to be a fat man with side whiskers and about as much sand as a cucumber. During the hour we were in the office a man came in and slapped his jaws, two men came in and booted him around the shop, and the fourth took him by the side whiskers and shook a dollar out of his clothes to get drunk on. When we asked Mr. Hope why he didn't shoot he sat down and cried like a baby. He may possibly bring out two more issues of his paper, but his going is only a question of days.



"AND CRIED LIKE A BABY."

Mr. John Hopkins, the well known and highly esteemed banker at Pine Hill, arrived in town Wednesday morning on a visit to his aged mother. He had scarcely clasped her to his manly breast and taken a drink at the White Dog saloon, when sixteen citizens of the Hill appeared and demanded an interview with him. It seems he had left Pine Hill without saying anything to anybody, and had only placed $600 on the counter for his cashier to do business with for the day. As soon as this was ascertained the people became excited and held a mass meeting, and the result was that sixteen delegates were sent to overhaul Mr. Hopkins. He could have explained matters to their satisfaction, no doubt, but they were so earnest about it that he decided to return with them and make a public speech.

SPRING COATS.

Interesting Predictions by a Fashion Authority.

"The shortening of the coat length is noticeable," says the Dry Goods Economist. "The new coats average not shorter than thirty-six inches. For later use it is expected that many will be considerably shorter than this. Fancy silk coats coming just below the waist line are being shown by many of the larger coat houses.

"The flare coat is still causing considerable thought to manufacturers and to retailers. While those who study styles hold that the flare coat is the big new idea of the season, they realize that many women will, as usual, be slow in accepting such a complete change in style and that more conservative garments will have to be brought out to meet the general demand.

"The coat that is cut on similar lines to the English garment worn by some of the smartly dressed men in New York is being shown in many of the lines. This new woman's garment is made of black and white check or of mannish worsted and is so tailored as to carry out the idea of a man's overcoat as closely as possible. Some manufacturers have already done a large business on these coats.

"In some cases this coat has a considerable flare at the bottom, while in others it is of a modified character."

Two Are Canadians.

Lady Mount Royal and Strathcona, as the daughter of the late Lord Strathcona, will be styled by virtue of the second creation under which she succeeds, is the seventeenth peeress of the United Kingdom in her own right in addition to three lady holders of Scottish titles. Strangely enough, two of the seventeen imperial peeresses are of Canadian origin. The other is Lady Macdonald of Earnscliffe, one of the oldest members of the group. Lady Macdonald is the holder of the only new creation since the death of Viscountess Hambledon. She is the widow of Sir John Macdonald.

Sponges as Drugs.

Sponges are classed by Canadian customs authorities with drugs, dyes, chemicals, and patent medicines. The total value, however, of this class of imports in Quebec is given as $29,158 for 1911 and $10,895 for 1912.

When the Consul Won.

The Montreal consul of a Central American republic has never been seen in public without a silk hat of uncertain vintage. In the last Dominion election he won a hat from a Liberal friend, and the latter, determined that the consul should sport a more seemly specimen of headgear, left instructions at a leading store that the winner was to be fitted out with the best hat in stock. ### A Work of Supererogation.

Johnson had just recovered from one of the periodical sprees to which he was addicted. During the sobering off process he met the village good samaritan, who had often helped him over the rough places in his almost worthless life. Shamefaced and in a repentant mood, he confessed:

"Well, Miss Polly, I certainly have been making a fool of myself again I found I didn't have to make many alterations to complete the job."

The Nature Lover.

Few adult persons can see nature. Most persons do not see the sun; at least, they have a very superficial seeing. The sun illuminates only the eye of the man, but shines into the eye and heart of the child. The lover of nature is he whose inward and outward senses are still truly adjusted to each other, who has retained the spirit of infancy even into the era of manhood.—Emerson.

Evasive.

"Would you love me just as much if I were a poor girl?"

"Every bit as much," he said, congratulating himself that she didn't ask him if he would still want to marry her.

Ambiguous.

Dobbler—I don't know whether that critic meant to praise or blame my work.

Cutter—What did he say?

Dobbler—Well, I had a picture of "The Dead Sea," and he said it was full of life.

Did Not Believe In Banks.

Gold and notes to the value of $65,000 were found in the house of an elderly maiden lady who died the other day in an unpretentious dwelling in the east end of Glasgow.

The old lady had lived on a very simple plan. She was friendly with her neighbors, but never gave an indication that she was any wealthier than others in the same neighborhood, who were all of the working class.

Some of the money was found in an old-fashioned purse, but there was no miserly effort at hiding the money, which was scattered about in different parts of the house. She had often declared that she did not believe in banks.

ON THE FRONTIER.

Far West Missionary Tells of Life In Undeveloped Canada.

Mr. J. M. McCormick, the head of the little army of missionaries working under the Navvy Mission in Canada, is at present in London.

"The whole manhood of Canada is being made out there on the frontiers," he says, "away from anyone who sees or anyone who cares, except, maybe, a wife or a mother or a sweetheart away in the home-land, waiting for the man pushing the steel road out on to the prairie and laying up the capital that will set him up in his farm and bring his folk out to him across the Atlantic."

In England the navvy is "the bloke what lives rough so as other people can live smooth." In Canada he is the man that faces death and disease and mutilation every day to build the lines that pay the investor's dividends. And Mr. McCormick has come home for just a little share of those dividends—say, $50,000—to send out another dozen missionaries and a few hospitals and a score or so of libraries and schools and meeting halls to the men who have left civilization behind them at the rail-head.

"Not that these men are the scum of humanity," he warns you. "Don't get thinking that. They're magnificent men, the men who are going to be the backbone of Canada. These men don't stay navvies. They work there till they can save capital to stock the 160 acres that the Government gives free to men who show proof that they can work them."

In camp the sky-pilot with his fiddle or gramophone ("canned music" in camp parlance) is no unwelcome visitor, provided he can pull off his coat and show his grit by taking his turn at navvy's work. Religion, like everything else, has no frills in the West. You get back to the elemental things—sin, and God, and prayer.

"What about drink?" Mr. McCormick was asked, as he spoke of the odds the missionary had to face.

"Drink is absolutely prohibited," he replied. "That doesn't mean that it doesn't come in. I have seen it come in in coffins, in dynamite kegs, sewn up inside of dead pigs, and hidden in casks of butter.

"I remember a crate of eggs arriving once. Every egg had been blown hollow and filled with whisky and sealed up. Those eggs sold at a dollar apiece.

"One man I knew had a pair of hollow steel corsets made, and wore them under a big coat. They were divided into two compartments, and he sold port wine out of one side and whisky out of the other. The liquor went in through a little hole at his neck and come out of a tap through a waistcoat button hole."

It is a great work, in truth, among the men who "live rough," and—as Mr. McCormick did not tell The Daily News' reporter—it takes great men to do it.—London Daily News.

A Pointed Clew.

The audience was rather tardy in gathering, and the lecturer and the chairman of the meeting were conversing comfortably on the platform about one thing and another.

"Well," remarked the speaker, "I am to have an intellectual audience. That was a schoolmaster who just took his place in the third row on the aisle."

"How do you know that?" inquired the chairman.

"Didn't you see him try his hand on the seat of the chair before he sat down?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Water Everywhere.

The man of whom the temperance advocate despaired was visibly exasperated.

"Even right alongside the bar," he said, "a gentleman cannot escape annoyance. Yesterday there was a fellow stood at my left elbow and drank a lemonade, and today it was a sailor had the place next to me.—New York Post.

Peterborough,

Dear Sir:—

RE-POLICY NO. 4240188

I beg to acknowledge receipt of the cheque of the Fidelity and Casualty Company, of New York, for the sum of $5,000.00, being the amount of my claim for double liability under my policy in this Company arising out of the accident which resulted in the loss of the sight of my left eye. I wish you would be kind enough to convey to the Company my thanks and warm appreciation for the prompt and entirely satisfactory manner in which my claim under my policy has been settled in full.

It may be of interest for you to know that when I first took this accident policy in your Company, it was due solely to the very friendly and cordial relationship that has always existed between your agent, Mr. George E. Elliott and myself, but when I received the Company's cheque this morning through your office I was deeply impressed with the fact that I in common with the vast majority of people never before realized how prudent and important it is to carry an accident policy in a company that settles so promptly.

SPECIAL CORNER FOR AFTER DINNER READERS

A SECRET

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

I was the oldest child in a family of five, I being a girl, the rest boys. Our parents were in comfortable circumstances, and, so far as I knew, there was no skeleton in the closet to trouble any one of us.

The day I was eighteen on leaving the house to do some shopping I was accosted by a woman.

"I have been watching for you to leave your home for two or three days," she said. "Please come with me to a lawyer's office in the matter of a legacy."

I went with her to the office where she worked and was ushered into the room of one of the partners. He was a pleasant looking man and quieted what misgivings I had. He asked me to wait while he sent for a person who wished to see me, and I was detained some time, at the end of which an elderly woman came in. She looked at me curiously for a few moments, then began to speak to me.

"I have a communication to make to you which will probably both trouble and please you. You are not the child of your supposed father and mother."

I caught at the arm of the chair in which I was sitting, but presently, mastering my feelings, nodded to the woman to proceed. "Mrs. Worthington, your supposed mother, when first married had trouble with her husband. He left her, and she, thinking that the birth of a child might heal the breach and bring him back, applied at a foundling asylum for a newborn babe. A child had been left at my door, and I had taken steps to have it received at the home at which Mrs. Worthington applied. The result was that she took the baby that had been left at my door. You are that child."

Again I showed signs of collapse, but my impatience to hear more kept me up.

"Several years after this occurred a lady called at my home and told me that she was the mother of the foundling whom she had left at my door. She gave me no information about the matter except that she was the daughter of well to do parents, but had married against their wishes, and her father had for a time disowned her. In reply to her inquiries as to what had become of you I told her of your situation as the supposed oldest daughter of persons of respectability and that if you were claimed it might part a husband and wife, the former not knowing of the deception that had been practiced upon him.

"She left me without telling me what she would do. Two years ago Mr. Harwood, the gentleman who is with us, sent for me and told me that you had received in trust for you property valued at $100,000, which was to be yours when you came of age. He had been charged to see that you were informed of your bequest without any of the Worthington family knowing anything about it. He desired me to keep track of you and when you came to be eighteen years old to take steps that you should be informed of all these facts. Your real mother deposited in this office all the information about you to enable you to claim the property."

She ceased to speak, and both she and the lawyer for awhile left me to recover from the shock I had received. They conversed together, but I had no idea what they were talking about, so absorbed was I in the information I had received about myself. I was greatly distressed. I loved my supposed father and mother, my brothers and sisters, just the same as if I were of the same blood. I now had a secret that only my supposed mother had. But she did not know that I had it. What should I do?

I was permitted to digest the matter so far as I could within a brief period, when Mr. Harwood said to me kindly:

"It is not necessary that you should come now to a decision as to what your future course is to be. I would advise you to think the matter over before action."

"I have decided just what to do. I shall keep this secret to myself."

The lawyer looked somewhat disturbed at this and said that it would be difficult to inherit my property without my identity becoming known. I told him that I would resign the property. I wouldn't have it on any account, since its possession would bring trouble on the family of which I was a member.

I left the office, but did not return home for some time. I telephoned that I would visit a friend with whom I was very intimate. When I met the members of the family again I was prepared to live with them and my secret. It did not make any change in my feelings or my bearing toward my supposed mother, and she never knew that I possessed knowledge that I was not her daughter. From time to time I was asked by the lawyer to whom my property had been left in trust if I would take a receipt for it. I always replied in the negative. When I was married my resolution weakened, but I did not yield. When Mr. and Mrs. Worthington were both dead and only two of the children remained, I, having a family of my own, received my legacy. But it was supposed that it came to me through my husband. At the time I received it I had lived more than twelve years without drawing any of the income which had accumulated, and the property itself had considerably increased in value.

THE OLD TIME "YE."

It Was Simply an Abbreviation and Was Always Pronounced "The."

How does it happen that in copying and reading ancient manuscripts we call the character our ancestors meant for "the" by the ridiculous "ye?"

They said "the" just as we do, and the only apparent reason for mistaking the character is that two centuries ago the letter "h" was usually written with a tail below the line and with a raised top, which made it look like our "y." Then the word was so frequently used that it was contracted, just as the word "and" was then treated and continues to be treated to this day by many of us.

When I was a boy, more than eighty years ago, the alphabets in our school books always ended with the "short and." We called it "ampersand" and considered it a fine snapper when we rattled off the alphabet. Sometimes when sufficiently cultured we gave it the full title "and-per-se-and."

Now, it is likely that our "&" will become obsolete, just as "ye" has become. Then our descendants of the next century or two will be puzzled perhaps, but I do not think they will be so foolish as to say "ampersand" when reading our manuscripts and coming to the little quirk we meant for "and." Do let us drop saying "ye."—Dial.

Not an Octet.

Cyril Maude, the English comedian, was talking about class distinctions.

"They are less marked with you than with us," he said. "Here you all talk alike—the shopgirl's accent differs in no wise from that of a Stuyvesant or a Roosevelt. But with us the lower classes talk a disgraceful jargon.

"The 'h' especially. The lower classes can never master that 'h.' In my youth I once heard a stage manager rehearsing 'Faust.' He had sprung from the people, poor chap, and he conducted the rehearsal like this:

"'Old your 'ands on your 'ips, 'old up your 'eads and look 'aughty. You're not on 'Ampstead 'Eath, now—you're in 'Ades. Now, 'asten off 'urriedly, with a look of 'ate.'

"'But, sir,' said I, 'there's only six of us.'"—Washington Star.

The Practical Side of Music.

He was a lover of music who had just been to hear Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," and he was expatiating upon its beauties to an unresponsive friend whom he observed to yawn. The music lover was hurt. "Look here, John," he protested, "don't you think that music is of some practical benefit in life?"

"Oh, yes," said the unresponsive one. "Why, judging from the portraits I have seen of eminent musicians, especially pianists, I should say that music is great to keep the hair from falling out."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Not Guilty.

Lawyer—You understand what you are to do in court now, don't you? Client—Yes, I guess so. Lawyer—When the court asks you whether you are guilty of manslaughter or not you say "guilty." Client—But I can't do that, my conscience wouldn't allow it. Lawyer—Why? Client—Because it wasn't a man I killed, it was a woman.—New York Globe.

LIFE ON HOLLAND'S CANALS.

Where Spring Cleaning Is the Rule All the Year Round.

I think one may see barges and canal boats in greater variety at Rotterdam than anywhere else. One curious thing to be noticed as they lie at rest in the canals is the absence of men. A woman is always there, her husband only rarely. The only visible captain is the fussy, shrewish little dog which, suspicious of the whole world, patrols the boat from stem to stern and warns you that it is against the law even to look at his property. I hope his bite is not equal to his bark.

Every barge has its name. English suburban villas have not a greater variety of fantastic names than the canal craft of Holland, nor with all our monopoly of the word "home" does the English suburban villa suggest more compact coziness than one catches gleams of through their cabin windows or down their companions.

Spring cleaning goes on here, as in the Dutch houses, all the year round, and the domiciliary part of the vessels is spotless. Every bulwark has a washing tray that can be fixed or detached in a moment. "It's a fine day, let us kill something," says the Englishman; "Here's an odd moment, let us wash something," says the Dutch vrouw.

In some of the Rotterdam canals the barges are so packed that they lie touching each other, with their burgees flying all in the same direction, as the vanes of St. Sepulchre's in Holborn cannot do. How they ever get disentangled again and proceed on their free way to their distant homes is a mystery. But in the shipping world incredible things can happen at night.—From "A Wanderer In Holland," by E. V. Lucas.

The Chrysanthemum.

It is believed that the first specimen of the chrysanthemum known to have been grown in England—perhaps in Europe—was reared at the Botanic gardens, Chelsea, in 1764, and the flower's rise into popular favor in the nineteenth century was chiefly due to the good work done by the Stoke Newington Chrysanthemum society. This society held its first exhibition of blossoms in 1846, and served not only as a model for all similar associations, but also as a school of chrysanthemum culture for the whole world.—London Graphic.

Too Talented.

"Where is that barber who used to have the end chair?" asked the customer.

"We had to let him go," replied the boss. "He had too much talent."

"Whaddy ya mean—talent?" asked the customer.

"He got so he illustrated his stories with cuts when he was shaving people," explained the boss.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Story of a Lost Diamond.

A lady residing in a suburb of Boston sent her diamond ring to a well known shop there to be cleaned. A day or two later she took a journey of several hours. When she reached her destination she removed her glove, and, lo, the diamond had come out of her ring. A diligent search failed to reveal the lost stone. She waited until her return to her house, and when the diamond could not be found there she went to the jeweler and told her story.

"I am afraid that you loosened the stone when you cleaned it," she concluded. She had little idea that he would agree with her, but to her surprise, after carefully examining the setting, he admitted: "I am afraid we did. I beg that you will select from my unset stones a diamond of about the size and quality of your old one, and I will give you back your ring looking as near as possible as it did when it was new." And he never charged her a cent! Of course he knew who the lady was and that he could trust her to tell a true story.—Kate Upson Clark in Leslie's.

Epidemic Among Rabbits.

The hares, or "snowshoe rabbits" in the Camrose, Alta., district are dying by hundreds of an epidemic which several local doctors and veterinary surgeons have pronounced to be tuberculosis. It has been the custom to offer these rabbits for sale in the markets of the larger towns, but since the early fall of last year they have not been fit for food. The Edmonton Board of Health has already realized this, and has prohibited their sale in the markets of that city.

The fact that rabbits increase and decrease periodically in the Northwest is well known. In his monograph (N. A. Fauna, No. 29), E. W. Nelson, writing in 1909, tells us that the exact nature of the epidemics is unknown. He says: "In the upper Mackenzie river region, during the winter of 1904, E. A. Preble found varying hares extremely numerous, and great numbers were dying from an epidemic.

THE HAPPY HUNTING GROUND

But the Game in Time Grows Scarce There.

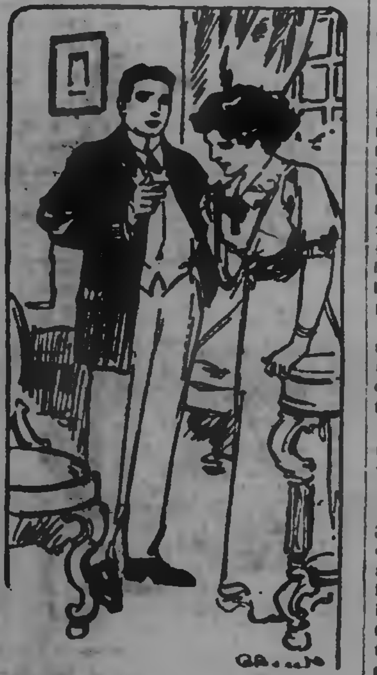
By F. A. MITCHEL.

Miss Leila Rathbone was born a flirt—an unconscious flirt. She didn't know that she was flirting even when she was deliberately drawing some youth into her toils. Nevertheless she was not surprised when she got him there. It did not occur to her that she had anything to do with his being there. All the other fellows got there. Why not he? This commenced when Miss Rathbone was fourteen years old—if not earlier—and lasted till she was double that age. The game was so plentiful that she had no idea that there would ever be a dearth of it.

Miss Rathbone, as I have said, began to bring down youths at a very early age and continued it as long as her heyday lasted, which was about the same duration as that of most girls. She had a comfortable home, and it did not occur to her that there was any reason why she should marry. What did she know of the waning interest in this world's affairs that comes to all who grow old, except in children—children of their own? At twenty she was at the summit of earthly contentment. The woods were as full of game as ever. At twenty-four there was a falling off, not in her attractiveness, but there were not as many men within range. At twenty-eight all the men seemed to have grown backward and were nothing but boys, while on looking in a mirror she saw unmistakable signs of change in herself. The bud had fully opened, and the rose was beginning to pass beyond bloom.



"WHAT A LITTLE FOOL I WAS IN THOSE DAYS!"

Meanwhile the fifteen years that had passed since she had begun to emerge from childhood had brought changes in her surroundings. She was far more alone than she had been. Social affairs, even tennis and golf, had lost much of their charm. Those of her friends who had married had passed from her to their children. They were as glad as ever to meet her, but she realized that their little ones had taken her place in the hearts of their parents. She began to envy her friends the possession of their children. The parents were still young, and their offspring were still children. Miss Rathbone had not reached an age to understand the value of a grown son or daughter to an old person.

When Miss Rathbone was nearing thirty she was still an attractive woman. Having come to realize what she had missed, or believed she had missed, in not having taken steps to build her own nest, she resolved to make hay during the brief season when the sun would still shine. She remembered regretfully the superfluity of game within range during past years and recognized the fact that the woods for her had been pretty well cleaned out. As after civilization has encroached on hunting grounds sportsmen must go farther for game, so did Miss Rathbone come to think that she must seek new fields. Spring was coming on, and she thought of summer resorts. But she knew that the only game to be found at such places are old men and boys. She had discovered that she had passed the age when a college student had ceased to be something for her to look up to.

Travel next suggested itself to her. When a young girl she had been more nearly caught in her own traps while touring in Europe than at any other time. She had found sightseeing in company with young men an admirable field for her flirtations. And as for an ocean voyage, after the wearing off of mal de mer, there seemed to be something about salt water to induce love. Miss Rathbone decided to join the hegira of those sailing for foreign ports the next season.

Miss Rathbone joined a party of her acquaintances who were going to make a three months' tour of Europe. How changed were her circumstances from that Miss Rathbone who had often had difficulty in staving off the importunities of several young men, each of whom was bent on receiving an answer to a proposal! Could it be possible that she was going abroad for the purpose of bringing down some bachelor who, having arrived at middle age, had lost much of that spirit which impels a man to tumble head over heels in love on the slightest provocation? But Miss Rathbone remembered that while the older man is not aggressive he is vulnerable.

During her trip abroad Miss Rathbone met bachelors, but found them confirmed celibates. They seemed to her like wild horses that had never been broken to a bit or a saddle. Their own comfort, their independence, were their gods. As for giving up any of their privileges, they had no such idea whatever. They were like the crow, which, utterly worthless for game, keeps carefully out of the huntsman's range.

During a sojourn at Lake Como Miss Rathbone fell in with a widower, Edwin Dudley, who was not much her senior and whose descent into the Avernus of bachelorhood had been averted by marriage. He had placed his only child, a boy, at school in Geneva and was taking a holiday in northern Italy, where at the time the climate was neither too hot nor too cold.

Mr. Dudley was staying at the same hotel as Miss Rathbone and first saw her one morning at breakfast on the stone balcony against which dashed the waters of the lake. The situation was propitious. Directly opposite rose a high mountain, looming up between the lake and the blue sky. To the right and to the left were cliffs and battlements innumerable, some near at hand, some mellowed by distance, some a velvet green, some brown, some red. Miss Rathbone felt a moiety of that spirit of the beautiful that she had experienced in her younger days. As for Mr. Dudley, he looked at her with manifest interest.

Americans abroad are very like a circle of intimate acquaintances at home, with this difference—at home they are hedged about by innumerable conventionalities; abroad they have much of the bonhomie of the old stagecoach days. Mr. Dudley had no difficulty in securing an introduction to Miss Rathbone, and he had scarcely done so when he invited her to go out on the lake with him in one of those rowboats pulled by lusty Italians the stern seats of which are supplied with cushions and canopies.

During this boat ride Mr. Dudley, perhaps following that disposition of Americans abroad to feel on short acquaintance as if they had known each other for years, developed a familiarity which would be accorded only to an old acquaintance. He rallied the lady on not having mated, declaring that it must certainly have been her own fault and wondering why she should prefer maidenhood to matrimony.

To this she replied evasively, but with becoming modesty, throwing the blame on the men. Mr. Dudley treated this for what it was worth, saying that he did not not doubt if some wizard could by incantation gather together the men she had refused they would prove to be more numerous than fish in the lake on which they were riding. To this Miss Rathbone smilingly demurred and declared that she had never had an offer.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed the gentleman. "Do you suppose that I am stupid enough to believe that a woman of your attractive personality has never received a proposal? I have no doubt that you have received hundreds of them."

"Well, how are you going to prove your assertion? A man refused by a woman will not tell about it."

"There is only one who will do that," said Dudley after some moments of silence. "A man who has once been refused and afterward accepted would be proud of his final success and would not be averse to letting it be known."

"I don't see how that helps the matter so long as I remain as I am."

"Right you are," replied the other. "Nevertheless you may some day yield to one of your old flames. If you marry I shall ask your husband if he was not refused by you before his final acceptance."

"You are quite welcome to do that," replied Miss Rathbone, "but it seems to me rather improbable that you should have the opportunity since the companions of my youth who are living are married."

"So be it, but take care lest I prove my assertion."

In extreme youth the sexes mate, they know not why. In later life they know very well why. They feel the need of companionship and a home. A man cannot make a home without a woman, and an old maid's home is at best cheerless. Mr. Dudley was looking for a wife just as eagerly as Miss Rathbone was looking for a husband. He proposed to her, and she accepted him.

"And now," he said, "I can prove to you that you maligned the men when you said that it was their fault that you had not married. I have found a man who is willing to admit that he has been refused by you."

"Indeed!" said the lady, surprised. "And who may that be?"

"Myself."

Miss Rathbone's eyes opened very wide.

"Don't you remember a scene on the terrace at B. when a boy of twenty told a lass of eighteen that he loved her."

"Are you Ned Dudley?"

"I am."

There was a silence, at the end of which Miss Rathbone said:

"What a little fool I was in those days!"

"A fool to refuse me?"

"Yes; you and a legion of others!"

Aeroplanes in War.

If a European power were to declare war against Britain in all probability the first move of the enemy would be to destroy the works in which ammunition for military purposes was being manufactured. There are only five of these works in the United Kingdom, says "Civil Engineering," and it would not be very difficult to level their chimney-stacks to the ground by dropping explosives on them from aeroplanes, and it would take about three months to rebuild them. When the South African war broke out it was found that the ammunition in reserve was only sufficient to last a few weeks.

Cost of Football.

An expert has calculated that, including the personal expenses connected with the game incurred by the hundreds of thousands of amateurs, and by the wealthy professional clubs, together with the interest paid on shares and the gate money of the millions of spectators, British football costs about seven million pounds annually.

Rector Builds Theatre.

Rev. I. Cyril Walker, rector of Averham, near Newark, Eng., has erected in the rectory grounds a model theatre to accommodate 600 people. The cost was $3,500. He has designed the theatre, painted the scenery, made some of the properties, produced a comic opera, acted as stage manager, and written the words of a topical duet.

Officers Learn Cookery.

An army order was published recently notifying that a class of officers will meet at Aldershot, Eng., for instruction in cookery. The officers will be shown how good, wholesome food is cooked and served, and when they return to their regiments will use their knowledge to improve, where necessary, the feeding of the soldiers.

Dog Which Is Fond of Playing Tennis.

The dog so nimbly jumping with his mouth agape to catch a tennis ball that has been batted to him is a wire haired fox terrier. He lives in England, and when he plays tennis with his young mistress his cup of happiness is full. He is so quick that he rarely fails to catch a ball that is anywhere within his reach, frequently leaping several feet in the air to accomplish his purpose. His mistress is Lady Rosamond Butler, and she dearly loves a game with her dog. The picture was taken just as the dog made a great jump to retrieve the ball, but the picture does not show whether he succeeded or not. At any rate, he made a brave try for it and deserved to get it.

A Handy Straw Man.

In Korea there exists a very odd belief about protecting a person from evil and from the results of committing a crime or misdemeanor.

First of all, when the Korean realizes that he has committed a sin he hunts up a sorcerer who sells various "charms."

The sorcerer makes for the penitent person a life size straw man, concealing therein a number of small coins, and then proceeds by incantations to lure the evil spirits out of the real person's body into that of the straw man. The buyer then takes this straw man home, dresses it in some of his cast off clothes and throws it into the street.

All passersby help to destroy the straw man partly because they believe in helping the penitent man to get rid of the evil spirits and partly because they know that there is money hidden within. It is thought that the angry spirits are thus appeased by the destruction of the proxy sinner.

A Nervous Tree.

In Idaho there exists a species of the acacia tree which is entitled to be classed as one of the wonders of plant life. The tree attains a height of about eight feet. When full grown it closes its leaves together in coils each day at sunset. When the tree has thus settled itself for its night's sleep it will flutter violently if touched, and if you shake the branches it will emit a nauseating odor strong enough to bring on a headache.

In Idaho it is called the "angry tree," and it is said that it was discovered by some men who were making a camp for the night and placed one end of a canvas covering over one of its sensitive branches to use it as a support. Immediately the tree began to jerk its branches sharply. The motion continued with increased nervousness, until at last there came a sickening odor that drove the tired men to a more hospitable camping place.

Hide and Seek.

When we play
The children say:
"You be 'It.' I hate to be!"
But I make Them all take
Places straight in front of me.
"Een—ter—ey, en—ter—ey, cute—er—ey corn,
Apple seed and brier thorn,
Fire, brier, limber lock,
Three geese in a flock.
One flies east;
One flies west;
One flies over the cuckoo's nest.
One, two, three,
Out goes she!"

Then if "she"
Comes to me
I am "It" for this one play.
Then they run—
Oh, what fun!—
While I hide my eyes and say:
"Five, ten, fifteen, twenty,
Twenty-five, thirty, thirty-five, forty,
Forty-five, fifty, fifty-five, sixty,
Sixty-five, seventy, seventy-five, eighty,
Eighty-five, ninety, ninety five, one hundred!
Coming whether your're ready or not!"

Then I go,
Creeping slow,
Seeking, seeking, one and all.
Low and high,
Passing by,
I can hear them softly call:
"Coo—oop! Coo—oop!
Come and find me! F-i-n-d me!"
Then at last
Scurrying past
Runs a girl with laughing face.
Then I fly,
I must try
To get before her to the base,
Strike it hard and as I hit
Shout: "Five, ten! You're 'It!' You're 'It!'"

ON A TROOPSHIP.

Thomas Atkins Is at His Worst When Out On the Briny.

Mr. Atkins is as brave a soldier as ever carried a rifle, but he is no "sailor bold"; and even the lure of foreign service cannot rob the high seas of all their terrors and discomforts.

But at any rate he has this consolation — his voyaging is much more comfortable than it was for his predecessors who crossed the seas in his Majesty's troopships a generation ago.

As they will tell you they were treated like dogs by autocratic naval officers.

To-day Thomas Atkins journeys in a hired transport with civilian officers. He is assured of civil treatment, and he has less unpleasant work, such as swabbing decks to do. Generally he is made comfortable as possible.

A troopship has been described as a "prison with a chance of being drowned"; and certainly the discipline enforced on board is rigid enough for any gaol-bird.

But Tommy is the last to grumble at discipline so long as he is treated as a man; and at any rate, the modern troopships, rough places as they are, are luxurious compared with the accommodation provided in Crimean and Mutiny days.

Naturally when a vessel had to carry two thousand or more passengers, men, women, and children, with the entire equipment of a small town, there is no room to spare.

No ship that sails the seas is so wonderfully equipped for all emergencies and requirements. She carries everything from "a needle to an anchor." There are shops for carpentering and blacksmiths' work, canteens, bakeries, and butchers' shops; stables for horses, pens for sheep, rabbits, and poultry. There are saloons and cabins for the officers and their ladies, with nurseries for their children. In fact, a troopship is, in more senses than one, a town afloat.

As for Tommy, his quarters are very restricted. To each mess is allotted a small space where he eats his meals during the day and slings his hammock at night, unless, as he usual does, he prefers to stretch himself on deck, one in a close-packed row of sleepers.

His food, which is good and plentiful although he often has little appetite for it, ranges from salt pork and duff to boiled beef and soup, or an equivalent in tea, sugar and tobacco.

At 5 a.m. he slings his hammock to the call of the bugle, has a wash, and helps to clear up his section of deck. Breakfast is followed at 10 o'clock by a muster parade for medical inspection; and then the day's work—program of watches, guards, and sentry duties begins. At 12.30 and 4 p.m. come interludes for dinner and tea; roll-call at eight; and an hour later it is "lights out" and rest for another night.

There are, too, special drills to prepare for possible disaster—fire drill, "prepare to abandon ship" and "man overboard"—a round of duties which gives Tommy little time to think of his disordered interior.

But it is by no means all work and no play. There are times when Tommy lights his pipe to the bugle call, "Commence firing," and reluctantly draws his last fragment whiff to "Cease firing."

In the daytime he can amuse himself with deck quoits, cricket, and other games, and he has his "little bit on" the day's run of the ship, with its attendant excitement. He can take his jovial part in a sing-song, or a hand in a game of cards.

Twice daily the cheerful strains of the regimental band set his feet itching for a dance. Then there are entertainments—concerts, private theatricals, and so on, which he enjoys and may take part in, in company with his officers and their wives.

Thus the time passes, not unpleasantly, with enough work to keep him fit and sufficient intervals for play.

The simpler, thinner and fresher summer curtains can be the better.

MODEL D 52

"I'M not only clothed by my D52 Fashion-Craft Suit", a man remarked—"but it dresses me and does it particularly well, I consider!"

This, while we were showing our Spring Models to his business partner.

We, ourselves, are genuinely proud of the set of that shapely D52 coat on his broad shoulders and of the smart, English vest and trousers.

The price took his fancy, too—

Perhaps you, too, would like to see suit D52?

Prices $18. to $35. according to material.

M.H.O. SAYS BOARD IS NOT UNREASONABLE

Local Bakers he Says Have no Cause for Complaint

"We are not asking anything unreasonable, and they certainly have no cause for complaint," said M. H. O. Dr. McPherson to-day in regard to the item which appeared recently regarding the bakers mentioning that the new regulations of the Health Department would result in the increase in the price of bread.

Notices of the changes which have been in the public notice for sometime are being sent out to the bakers.

The M. H. O. further advanced some of the means of baking bread as carried on in the city at present. Some are worse than others. The new steps taken were to eliminate the filthiness that prevails in these places.

"I don't think they will offer much resistance when they look at our demands in a reasonable light," he concluded.

Speaking of the extra cost in the wrapping operation, Dr. McPherson said that he had conversed with a Lindsay baker who uses a wrapping machine and that the cost is one-tenth of a cent per loaf.

"Had we not demanded the wrapping now, the general public would have within the next few years. It is only a matter of time."

FRATERNALLY YOURS

The Marathon Lodge No. 39, of the Knights of Pythias, has received communication from the Grand Lodge inviting them to take part in the Grand Pythian Demonstration to be held in St. Catharines, under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of Ontario on July 1st. It is the intention of the Grand Lodge to have Knights from United States take part.

The Peterboro Lodge of Oddfellows No. 111 will hold their May opening meeting on Thursday, May 14th. Mr. W. Young will speak on "The Rebellion of 1837."

Mr. Jarvis, Head Clerk of the Woodmen of the World, will be present at the next meeting of the local lodge and explain the new rates.

All the members of the Golden Link Lodge No. 81, Daughters of Rebekah, are urgently requested to attend the regular meeting on Tuesday evening. One of the questions to be discussed is the part the lodge will take in Fraternal Day Celebrations.

Mr. J. V. McElderry, of the law firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, will address the Sacred Heart Branch No. 509 of the C. M. B. A., on the Workmen's Compensation Act, in the near future. The exact date and place will be announced later.

Dr. P. J. O'Reilly, son of Mr. Chas. O'Reilly, of Norwood, who has many friends in this vicinity, has been appointed as one of the Hibernian delegates from Michigan, where he now resides, to attend the unveiling of the statue erected in Washington, D.C., in honor of Commodore Jack Barry. Commodore Barry was the first man given that title by General George Washington when the American navy was formed.

A week from to-night another meeting will be held in the S.O.E. Hall for the purpose of making final arrangements for "Fraternal Sunday." Every fraternal lodge in the city is expected to participate in this big function, and it is urgently requested that they have representatives at the meeting.

Other Considerations.

F. C. Allison, George Street, asks The Review to state that while the report was correct, he received other considerations besides the purchase price of $2,920 in a property transaction reported in the list of real estate transfers in yesterday's issue.

HON. J. R. STRATTON, who will on Sunday observe his fifty-seventh birthday, having been born at Millbrook, May 3, 1857. Mr. Stratton is at present receiving treatment by specialists at the General Hospital, Toronto, and citizens of Peterboro will hope to see him fully restored to health.

BUILDING PERMITS

Figures for Peterboro for Past Six Years

The figures concerning building permits issued during the past six years, by a prominent trade journal, show that this city has held its own in comparison with other towns with larger populations. The records show that throughout Ontario the years of 1910 and 1913 were very big years so far as building operations are concerned. The record for this city during the past six years is as follows:

1908—$238,963.
1909—$343,489.
1910—$517,958.
1911—$345,273.
1912—$465,905.
1913—$488,540.

APPLICATIONS TO BE CONSIDERED ON ENGINEER'S REPORT

Several Applications to Build Dwellings With Nine-Inch Wall.

The application of J. M. Roszel regarding the construction of a dwelling with a nine-inch wall in the fire limits was left over for the City Engineer to report on at the Property Committee meeting last evening. This application, along with several others, will be considered.

City Engineer Parsons is at present busy preparing amendments to the by-law. Building by-laws in some cities, according to the information received, are prepared in book form, covering large editions, but the intention of the City Council is to have a by-law that will be short and to the point.

STUDIES IN CANADIAN IMPERIALISM

Colony, Nation or Empire

Written Exclusively for The Review by John Powell Laycock, M.A.

Definition is the first step to successful argument. It is the basis upon which the pyramid of thought must be constructed in order to come to a logical apex or conclusion. In discussing problems of Canadianism and Imperialism, especially, the meaning of the fundamental terms must be grasped, for over every expression there is conflict of interpretation. The cause for this division of opinion is the constitutional evolution of the British Empire, a political unit new to historical experience.

In this work of definition the Oxford dictionary will be our guide. A province is "an administrative division of a country or state," often because "historically, linguistically or dialectically distinct." In the political sense, then, provincialism is "attachment to one's own province, its institutions, interests, etc., before those of the nation or state of which it is a part"; and provincial patriotism is "the desire for the autonomy of the provinces rather than national unity. "The adjective "provincial" in one sense is identified with "colonial." Colony is considered "a body of people who settle in a new locality, forming a community subjected to or connected with the parent state; the community so formed, consisting of the original settlers and their descendants and successors as long as the connection with the parent state is kept up." According to this definition, which carefully distinguishes between the colonialism, involving subjection and that connection, Canada is a colony and bound to remain so even under the most nominal form of union with the mother country. As legally a son becomes not a son by inheritance, so a colony loses its colonialism by separation; but, whether it wills or not, the emancipated child remains the child, the United States, for instance, the "old colonies" of Britain. A nation on the other hand is "an extensive aggregate of persons, so closely associated with each other by common descent, language or history as to form a distinct race or people; usually organised as a separate political state and

NAIAD SOON TO START HER WATCH ON TRENT WATERS

Government Patrol Craft Has Been Overhauled and Given New Coat

The government patrol boat, Naiad, was launched yesterday at McDonald's Point, where it rested over winter, and presents a vastly different appearance than she did when removed from the water last fall. The upper sections have been rebuilt, the interior remodelled and finished with British Columbia cedar. The work which was done by W. J. Hickey was executed in a most capable manner speaking very highly for the efficiency of Mr. Hickey and his staff. The painting was accomplished with the same results by Mr. J. Grose.

The boat was always reckoned as one of the most up-to-date crafts on the Trent waters and any craft that surpasses her this season will be hard to find. The engines are the same as last year while the skiff has also been fitted with power, having had a gasoline engine installed. Both the skiff and boat are painted white and red trimmings.

The well known Captain R. W. Carson will again be in charge while his crew will be composed of Mate Joe Reddick, Engineer A. Brotherstone and Chef. E. Windsor. They will in all probability steam up on Monday and pull out the same afternoon. Their territory lies between Healey Falls and Washago, at the mouth of the Severn River, while they also go to Barrie and to Bradford on the Newmarket Canal.

The word Naiad is derived from the Greek word Naias meaning one of the lower female divinities fabled to preside over some body of fresh water as a lake or river.

Bridges Opened.

The G. T. R. bridges are open-en and the steamer Rainbow was able to come to the city from Rice Lake to Matthews-Blackwell Co. with a scow load of hogs, numbering 250. She returned to the lake in the afternoon with considerable freight. The water is about two feet below the height it was this time last year but it is expected that it will attain its normal point before navigation is in full swing.

Dredging Needed.

A Review scribe spent a few moments at the new wharf and gathered from the conversation of the boatmen that dredging the remains of the old Cobourg railroad across Rice Lake should be done at once. It is reported some time ago that it was the intention of the Department to have this work done previous to the opening of the season and the soundings were taken. There are but three places to pass through Rice Lake, they are at Tick Island, the centre which is buoyed and at the Hiawatha Wharf. The channel in the centre of the lake is very narrow and on a stormy night a boat is in great danger. It is, the boat men claim, one of the worst sections to pass on the whole Trent Canal route.

Steamers Improved.

Repairs and improvements are being made to the steamers which ply on the Trent Valley waters, and in the near future navigation will be active.

BOTHERED GIRLS WAS FINED $8.75

Young Ladies Were Accosted at Hunter Street Bridge

"Instead of offering insult to the young ladies by seizing her, you should stand on your chivalry, instead of seizing her and insulting her," remarked Police Magistrate Dumble this morning in scathing tones to Albert and Wm. Leahy, of Douro. The two brothers were charged with accosting two East City young ladies last evening on the Hunter Street bridge, and William, it was alleged, seized one of them, according to the evidence of Constable Reid to whom the girls applied for protection. The charge against Albert was dismissed, there being no conclusive evidence against him, but William, who remarked that in passing, his hand might have hit the girl, was assessed $8.75, forthwith.

"A few cases like this will teach a number of other similar persons a lesson," remarked His Worship, with a meaning look around the Court.

Mr. Collier will have a number of lantern slides with him to illustrate his remarks.

--- THREE - APOSTLES - OF - PEACE---

Dr. George W. Nasmyth
Norman Angell
Alfred Noyes.

In these stirring days when nation is arming against nation and even blood brothers are arrayed in hostile camps within a few hours' trip of the metropolis of the world, these three men in their several ways are devoting their energies towards the goal of universal peace — Alfred Noyes, through poetry, Norman Angell, through literature, and Dr. Nasmyth, through education. The latter, a Boston man, is President of the "Corda Fratres," a student body which has for its object the promotion of good feeling between nations by uniting the student bodies under one head. Norman Angell, author of "The Great Illusion," and Alfred Noyes, the young English poet, are too well known in Canada to need further mention.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE BILL IS VETOED

Governor Glynn Fears Quacks Would Be Given Free Reign.

Albany, May 2.—In order that quacks might not be given full reign Governor Glynn has vetoed the McClelland bill which would recognize the practice of Christian Science healing.

The bill was so phrased, the Governor said, that it would "open the gates to all kinds of medical pretenders, who would swarm across our borders and pretend to practice medicine upon our citizens."

Governor Glynn added that if the bill was restrictive enough to permit of Christian Science healing only among the believers in that faith, there might not be serious objections to it.

MORAL, KEEP CLEAR OF RAILWAY TRACK

Carelessness of One Man Brought Trouble to Him.

Evident careless driving resulted in an accident at the corner of George and Charlotte Streets yesterday afternoon. A man driving a horse south on George Street tried to use the middle of the street. The wheels caught in the intersecting rails of the street railway, and losing patience, he made a vicious turn to free the outfit. The result was as expected, he was thrown out and the horse in its frightened state jumped, smashing the wheel and would have made good its getaway had not Constable Burnham appeared on the scene.

COLLEGIATE CADETS.

Arrangements are being made for the annual training camp of the local Collegiate Cadet corps. During the past two season the training at Barriefield has made a hit with the boys and they are looking forward to this year being one of the best yet. Instructor C. E. Jamieson as in preceding years will be in charge.

WOMAN DIED FROM SHOCK WHEN TARA VILLAGE BURNED; MERCHANTS ARE SUFFERERS

Canadian Press Despatch.

Chesly, Ont., May 2.—Fire early this morning wiped out a large part of the business portion of the village of Tara, and caused one death. Mrs. A. Miller had been ill for some time, and when the flames approached the house and she had to be carried out, she died from shock caused by the excitement. The loss is estimated at twenty thousand dollars. The sufferers include Tara Hotel; Moncton Livery Barns, with five horses; Alex. Wayne, implement dealer; Charles Stalt, merchant; C. J. Madill, drugs; Bell Telephone, central; C. R. Toby, general merchant; Public Library; McDonald, tailor.

A bucket brigade was the only fire fighting resource, and was helpless The ruins were still mouldering at noon.

FOUND HIMSELF IN WRONG STALL

Acquaintance of Lady Nicotine Hadn't Heard About It.

A thin, delicate looking chap, whose fingers bore the nicotine stain of the cigarette fiend, and whose general appearance gave the impression that he had not been friendly with the dining room for some time, meandered into the Oriental Hotel this morning and leaned on the counter surrounding the clerk. Nervously he played a silent symphony on the counter with his fingers. The clerk, after the usual G. T. R. alertness for which hotel clerks are noted, approached the thin looking individual.

"Yes sir, what can I do for you?" asked the clerk.

"What kind of dopes have you got?" was the reply.

"We have nothing in stock," said the clerk, as he removed his pen from his right ear.

"This is a fine place. No dopes. Who runs this town? The cigar trust."

The clerk explained that owing to the City Council deciding to charge $40 for a license to sell cigarettes, the hotel had decided to place an embargo on the coffin nails until such time as the license matter would be adjusted. "You can get 'em two doors down the street," concluded the clerk.

"Well, it ain't a bad burg, after all," said the cigarette consumer as he meandered towards the door.

RETAILERS MEET MONDAY NIGHT

Merchants' Annual Picnic One Item for Discussion

THURSDAY HALF-HOLIDAY

A general meeting of all the retail merchants of the city is called for Monday night, May the 4th, at 8 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A. Many important questions will be dealt with, such as the Merchants' Annual Picnic, the Thursday half holiday, when to start it, and for how long.

There is an agitation by ball fans to close all stores on May 14th. While the matter has not come before the Association it would be well to be prepared for any emergency should the Mayor proclaim a half-holiday.

The Duke of Connaught's visit to Peterborough will be another subject for discussion, also the appointment of an insurance policy inspector or to inspect all insurance policies to see that the policies are properly drawn and that the companies are financially good, etc.

The business of arranging the place and date of the Annual Picnic and appointing the different committees will be discussed.

An invitation is extended to every retail merchant in the city to be present and bring up any question which may be of interest to the Association.

CERTIFICATES NOT GRANTED

PROPERTY COMMITTEE WANT TO KNOW THE REASON WHY.

PLUMBING INSPECTION.

The report of the Plumbing Inspector, Peter Thompson, submitted to the Property Committee last evening was greeted with approval until Ald. Stratton enquired why the certificates were not granted as per agreement and things began to liven up a bit when each member had his little say.

The matter was finally settled by the Chairman being advised to take the matter up with Inspector Thompson and report at an early date.

In the report which was presented in detail form no mention was made as to when the tests on plumbing were made or that certificates had been granted. For instance it stated that the hotel National had been tested but did not say whether it was satisfactory or not.

Mayor Buller asked if they had changed the salary of the Plumbing Inspector yet.

The Chairman replied that they had not.

Ald. Stratton also impressed the fact upon the Committee that only one item was really marked O.K. He expressed himself that they all should be marked O.K. or not approved of.

Ald. Duncan contended that he would like to see an independent plumber make a test of the last fifteen jobs and the committee would get wise to something. "Why the only time, despite the fact that he stated our by-law was wrong he ever came here to talk and explain matters to us, he was not in fit condition to do so," remarked Ald. Duncan.

Some one introduced the matter of having the plumbers of the city meet the committee and discuss some changes in the by-law but Ald. Stratton was of the opinion that they had a plumbing inspector and it ought to be under his supervision. The others had no right to direct the by-law.

"What do we know about plumbing?" questioned Ald. Duncan.

"Better come to some arrangement," remarked the Mayor.

"He would not do anything for the last chairman, but he may for the new one," said Ald. Duncan.

Ald. Stratton said that if the Chairman was to inform the inspector that the work must be absolutely correct he would probably try to do so, if he was used decently.

Here the telephone rang for the City Clerk and the conversation which evidently looked as if it might possibly terminate in a rather warm argument ceased and Ald. Stratton asked the south ward alderman for a match.

"What are you going to try the smoke test?" he enquired.

"Nothing doing," was the answer.

Mayor Buller then stepped into the breach remarking that the whole affair was "Did they have confidence in their man?"

Ald. Stratton—We should hold Mr. Thompson responsible.

Ald. Saunders agreed with him also.

"Let us get these certificates of approval and if we lose confidence let us take immediate action," continued Ald. Stratton.

Chairman Langford stated that they could no doubt make better arrangements with the inspector.

He enquired what they thought of getting a man from Toronto for a test investigation into recent tests.

The committee thought this too much expense.

"Mr. Thompson says our by-law is not right but he won't tell us where," continued Ald. Duncan.

The matter was then dropped.

BOOK AGENTS WILL HEREAFTER MOLEST US NOT

If Magistrate Dumble's Decision is Upheld in Next Court.

If Magistrate Dumble's opinion that book agents are transient traders and must pay a $100 for a license is correct few of them will visit Peterborough and residents of this city should adopt the "We should worry" attitude. Every city has some sort of a nuisance but there is one which they all claim. The book agent. The man who sells books has a spiel which is the nearest approach to perpetual motion yet discovered. Once he gets you interested, whether you want to be or not, he usually extracts from his victim a portion of the stuff copyrighted by Rockefeller et al. In his profession he is as persistent as an old maid once she sees a ray of hope rising o'er the matrimonial horizon. But the nuisance has not absolutely kissed itself good-bye as there is a chance that his worship's decision will be appealed. Magistrate Dumble is the only Ontario court dignitary who has held that book agents are transient traders. Probably he has a keener sense of feeling for the people of his community than his fellow brothers of the bench.

Taking Out Balast.

The steam shovel is at work in McByrnie's gravel pit between Millbrook and Garden Hill taking out balast for the main line of the Grand Trunk.

ELEVEN CASES ON DIVISION COURT DOCKET

$106 Asked for Alleged Damages to Dwelling House

Eleven cases were down for argument on the division court which opened before Judge Huycke yesterday morning. The action first tried was that of W. A. McIlmoyle v. Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Henderson. It is for the recovery of $108 for alleged damages to a house at the corner of Rubidge and King Streets. It is alleged the defendants left the water running when they vacated the house and also damaged the floors. Mr. Daniel O'Connell acted for the plaintiff and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the defendant.

Among the other actions on the list was that of O'Connell and Corkery v. Evangelist Sarazen for the recovery of $11 for services rendered.

The other cases on the list were as follows:

Mrs. Bertha Pilling v James Hanrahan, $58.
E. J. Ferguson v F. Sherwood, $88.80.
Davis and Lawrence v Dr D. C. King, $31.41.
Roland Denne v G. Walter Green Co., $53.45.
W. J. Kearns v F. H. Breckon, $100.
James Davidson v Jos. and Garfield Crowe, $118.

Sat Until 10 p.m.

The court sat until 10 o'clock last evening when the action of McIlmoyle v. Henderson was concluded, His Honor reserving judgment. The defense put in evidence to show that the house was in poor state of repair when they rented it, and the conditions which existed when they vacated were not caused by them.

An interesting action was that of G. C. Mitchell v David Oliver, Samuel Whatley and John Allen for the recovery of $69.70, representing the value of a cow. The defense claimed the cow was suffering from tubercular trouble and His Honor dismissed the action.

Judgment was entered in full for plaintiff in the action of O'Connell and Corkery v. Evangelist Sarazen for $11 for legal services rendered.

In the action of Mrs. Bertha Pilling v. James Hanrahan for the recovery of $58, a settlement of $20 was agreed on.

Judgment was reserved in the action of Robert Conkey v. Nathan McIlmoyle for the recovery of $30.

His Honor reduced the claim of Davis and Lawrence v. Dr. D. C. King for $31. The defendant counter claimed.

The action of Roland Denne v. G. Walter Greene Co., for $53 goods sold was laid over till the next court.

The action of W. J. Kearns v. F. H. Breckon, will be heard at Toronto as the case is out of the jurisdiction of this court.

A few other minor actions were adjourned until the next court.

THEN HE SAT DOWN

A good joke on a citizen who went one evening to a party at a home recently blessed with a new baby. He met his hostess at the door, and after the usual salutations he asked after the baby's health. The lady who was quite deaf and suffering with the grippe, thought he was asking after her cold and answered that although she usually had one every winter, this was the worst one she ever had: it kept her awake a great deal, and at first confined her to bed. Then noticing that her caller was getting nervous she said she could tell by his looks he was going to have one just like hers, and asked him to go and sit down. George sat down.

MR. BURNHAM AND THE C.N.R.

A NUMBER OF NEWSPAPERS, the Toronto Globe and Telegram among them, have jumped to conclusions regarding Mr. J. H. Burnham's statements in regard to the C.N.R. proposal. It seems they were led askew by the word salvage which seemed to indicate that Mr. Burnham would support only confiscation by the Government. Mr. Burnham amplified the idea in the word salvage, by saying that the majority of the House would oppose "granting the demands of this corporation." As the Conservatives have not granted the demands of Mackenzie and Mann, and have tied them up pretty tightly to making a decent consolidation of the system, Mr. Burnham's position is quite consistent with his statements in the House, and, incidentally shows how closely he guaged the Conservative answer to this difficult problem. The Telegram, unlike the partizan Globe, prints the following, showing how it was mistakened as to Mr. Burnham's position on the question.

> J. H. Burnham, M.P., denied in the House that he quit the Conservative caucus because he was not in support of the Government's C.N.R. proposal.
>
> "This is a mistake. I am in support of the proposition," claimed the member for Peterboro.
>
> The Telegram's misapprehension regarding Mr. Burnham's attitude is due to a misreading of the statement written by that gentleman and printed verbatim in Tuesday's Telegram, and also to a wrong deduction from the departure from the caucus before its termination. What transpired there is, of course, a secret.
>
> It would appear, however, that The Telegram put too much naive confidence in Mr. Burnham's speech on the Budget on April 16, when he said, regarding the Mackenzie-Mann situation: "I think the members of this House are of one mind, that anything that is to be done shall be in the nature of salvage: not of coming to the rescue, however, of the men who launched this scheme, who boasted of it, and who manipulated it in every conceivable way to the detriment of the individual and ultimately of the nation itself. The people will not stand for such attacks, and we are thoroughly convinced that the Government has no intention of granting the demands of this corporation."

Mr. Burnham's position is quite clear and in regard to the proposal has stated. "The right of unopposed foreclosure means speedy judgment if necessary and immediate right of levying on property in form of execution or otherwise. The unencumbered equity in a consolidated C.N.R. has been ascertained to be good and the possession of this, with right of immediate realization on it in case of need, gives the Government apart from all the other safeguards, complete control without responsibility of management. Delays are not always dangerous as we see in this case for no money has been given."

His following digest of the C.N.R. proposal leaves nothing to be desired.

1. The C.N.R. is as yet composed of a large number of unconsolidated undertakings. The whole system ran short of cash and could raise no more without a government guarantee or loan.
2. The Government on being appealed to on the ground of impending failure looked into the matter.
3. It refused to recognize any suggestion but its own and finding that the C.N.R. was worth helping, investigated the whole system by its own officers.
4. The actual need of aid was established.
5. The Government then said to the C.N.R.
   - (a) Consolidate all you have anything to do with.
   - (b) Squeeze out one-third of your common or preferred stock.
   - (c) Put in our control until the guarantee runs out 40 per cent. of that stock and put 15 per cent. additional in neutral hands
   - (d) Cancel all your own or Mackenzie's and Mann's claims.
   - (e) Provide for the immediate payment of your past debts.
   - (f) Raise 45 millions in cash and put it in our hands to check out as the vouchers come in, and complete your system and make it a working concern.
   - (g) Agree that in case of any defeat that you will not oppose our taking over the whole consolidated C.N.R. system, branch lines and all, by foreclosure.
   - (h) If you will thus enable us to guarantee your bona fides and capacity we will guarantee a loan to you of 45 millions of dollars the said guarantee ending in 20 years.
   - (i) Not one cent is given and not one cent should be lost and if nothing had been agreed to by the Government it would ultimately have had to take over a bankrupt concern at a great loss. No Government can sidestep such responsibilities as these. Could you suggest a plan less likely to impair Canadian credit?

THE RAILWAY BILL.

THE ATTITUDE of The Globe and its pampered Grit Opposition at Ottawa to the new Railway Bill is interesting. . This bill is the answer to the Conservative Government of Canada to the C.N.R. problem—a problem which arose out of Liberal mismanagement and reckless loaning of the people's money. When the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme was the issue in Dominion politics Mr. Borden advocated a publicly owned transcontinental. The Liberals opposed that scheme and were returned to power. Now, when the C.N.R. proposition is before the House some are advocating confiscation, which means Government ownership and which is contrary to what was once the policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Under the circumstances the Government has produced an excellent answer to the question. Had the road been confiscated the Government would very likely have been hopelessly involved in an endless round of litigation. The fact that the Mackenzie and Mann interests comprise thirty-one companies, operating, some under Dominion, others under Provincial laws, which are not the same for every province, and that these companies have their securities backed by nearly all the provinces of Canada, leaves room for constitutional questions and legal battles that would take years to settle. To avoid litigation the Government would have to exercise very high arbitrary powers and involve provincial and national credit in a serious crisis at the same time.

The Government has satisfied itself that the C.N.R. is worth the aid granted. It has achieved a practical solution to a difficult problem. The C.N.R. is to be given elbow room to work out its own destiny according to the rules of fair play. Canada is freed of interminable strife and litigation over the business, national and provincial credit is unimpaired, and the C.P.R. is withheld from gobbling up the road by which Mackenzie and Mann demonstrated their great constructive railway capacity, however great the fault we may find with their methods. Borden has said to the magnates of the C.N.R. Here is the assistance; go and consolidate your lines, put them on a workable business basis and if you can't do that I'll have to take charge of your railroads. In the meantime, safeguards have been taken to secure the investment of the funds to be raised in the road itself, to get water squeezed out of the stock, to protect, in case of failure, the guarantee granted. The Conservatives have performed this business-like solution without the expenditure of one dollar from the public treasury—a feat for the accomplishment of which, the Canadian people ought to be justly proud and grateful.

Yet this solution the Liberals have decided to oppose with all the forces in their power. It is to be hoped that a regard for their former policy and the needs of the present situation will cause them to waive partizan practices for the good of Canada.

LAURIER RAN AWAY WITH HIMSELF.

THE LAURIER GOVERNMENT will be remembered in history as the Government which allowed its enthusiasm to run away with its discretion. This country has been over-railroaded The business for the railways is not and will not be for many years equal to the payment of interest on the tremendous, and in many parts unnecessary, expenditure. This means immense loss. The promoters are the only people who make money out of anything, whether it goes up or down. They have done so here. The public will suffer and will learn in course of time to put a bridle on the promoter and upon his parliamentary aider and abbetor. People who elect such representatives deserve what they get

HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN TO PLEAD.

CANADA'S REPRESENTATIVE in the Labrador boundary dispute which is to come before the judicial committee of the Privy Council in June, will be the Honourable Arthur Meighen, Solicitor-General. This will be the first appearance of the new solicitor-general before the Privy Council. The good work already done by Mr. Meighen, as a lawyer and as a member of the Borden Cabinet, should insure a fair and satisfactory settlement of this troublesome question. The problem is one that has been on the gridiron for some years having come suddenly into prominence through the annexation of Ungava to the province of Quebec, and through the growing importance to the Hudson Bay route The original cause of the dispute arose over the granting of fishing licenses by both the Quebec and Newfoundland Governments. These conflicted and hence the dispute as to which government had the power to grant the fishing rights involved.

An Honest Mistake.

Canadian Courier.

Many men make honest mistakes. A prominent business man in Toronto tells of one he made. He got on a street car and asked the conductor for a dollars' worth of tickets, and gave him a bill to change. The conductor gave him a dollar in silver.

"What is this for?" asked the passenger.

"That is your change. You gave me a two-dollar bill."

"You can't put that over, young man, I gave you a five-dollar bill."

Then the dispute began. The business man explained that he knew it was a five-dollar bill, because he had carried it for two or three days, and had no other. The conductor protested that it was a two-dollar bill, and produced just such a bill. Finally, the now wrathy passenger took the conductor's number and promised to report the matter.

That night when he got home, he told his family at the dinner-table how he had been swindled out of three dollars by a rascally conductor, and explained how certain he was under the circumstances. His son listened to the story until it was finished and then he remarked:

"Father, do you remember my going to you yesterday and telling you that I wanted a pair of boots? I told you I had only two dollars and could not get what I wanted for that amount. So you gave me a five-dollar bill and I gave you the two-dollar bill."

The cocksureness faded out of the business man's face, and the next day he visited the complaint office of the street railway and duly made a humble apology to one of the inspectors, asking him to explain to the conductor.

DOUGHNUTS

By Walt Mason

I seek the high class eating joint, when my old stomach gives a wrench, and there the waiters proudly point to bills of fare got up in French. I order this, and order that, in eagerness my face to feed, and oftentimes I break a slat pronouncing words I cannot read. And as I eat the costly greens, prepared by an imported cook, to other times and other scenes with reminiscent eyes I look. My mother never was in France, no foreign jargon did she speak, but how I used to sing and dance when she made doughnuts once a week! Oh, they were crisp and brown and sweet, and they were luscious and sublime, and I could stand around and eat a half a bushel at a time. The doughnuts that our mothers made! They were the goods, they were the stuff; we used to eat them with a spade and simply couldn't get enough. And when I face imported grub, all loaded down with Choctaw names, I sigh and wish I had a tub of doughnuts, made by old time dames. I do not care for fancy frills, but when the doughnut dish appears, I kick my hind feet o'er the thills, and whoop for joy, and wag my ears.

Birthdays of Note

SATURDAY, MAY SECOND

Dr. W. Bell Dawson, superintendent of the Dominion Survey of Tide and Currents and a man whose work has been of immense practical importance, reaches his sixtieth birthday to-day. Dr. Dawson, who is the second son of the late Sir J. W. Dawson, was born in Pictou, N.S., and studied at McGill University, whence he graduated with high honors. He was later admitted to the highest school of engineering in France and led his class there at graduation. From then until he received his present appointment in 1893, he engaged in a long series of engineering undertakings in Canada, principally in connection with railway construction. Under his supervision there are now issued annually those tide tables for the principal harbors of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, which are so invaluable to mariners. For this work Dr. Dawson received the Watt Gold Medal from the Institution of Civil Engineers of London.

Also born to-day:—

Lt.-Col. G. S. Cantlie, general superintendent of car service, C.P.R., Montreal, born in Montreal, 1867.

Dr. J. D. Logan, poet and journalist, Montreal, born Antigonish, N.S., 1869.

SUNDAY, MAY THIRD

Julia Arthur (Mrs. Julia Cheney), one of the greatest actresses Canada has yet produced and who was famous in England and America during the nineties, was born forty-five years ago to-day in Hamilton. She made her professional debut when she was only fourteen years of age and before she was twenty had won the heart of New York. Her fame as a beautiful and talented actress spread to England and after several good offers had been made to her, she agreed to join Irving and Terry in London. Here she had a splendid reception, playing next Miss Terry. She later accompanied Sir Henry to America and then entered on a star engagement on her own account. Her greatest triumph was in "Romeo and Juliet," it being said of her that "she had no rival on the American stage so endowed with the Juliet nature." In 1898 she married and retired from the stage.

Also born to-day:—

His Honor Hector C. Macdonald, judge of Queen's County, P.E.I., born Belfast, P.E.I., 1856.

Col. O. C. C. Pelletier, Canadian regular military forces, born Quebec, 1862.

J. R. Stratton, Peterboro, born Millbrook, 1857.

Optimistic.

Mrs. Jones—Here is an old pair of shoes you may be able to wear.

Ragged Ruggles—Yes, the tongues are gone, the soles are through and the uppers are rotten, but the laces are still good.

COWARDICE COURT

BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

CHAPTER VII.

"They are after me!"

LONG afterward she recalled his exultant exclamation, checked at its outset—recalled it with a perfect sense of understanding. With rare good taste he subdued whatever it was that might have struggled for expression and simply extended his right hand to relieve her of the lantern.

"We never have been enemies, Miss Drake," he said, controlling his voice admirably. "But had we been so up to this very instant I am sure I'd surrender now. I don't know what has happened at the villa. It doesn't matter. You are here to ask my protection and my help. I am at your service, my home is yours, my right hand also. You are tired and wet and—nervous. Won't you come inside? I'll get a light in a jiffy and Mrs. Ulrich, my housekeeper, shall be with you as soon as I can rout her out. Come in, please." She held back doubtfully, a troubled, uncertain look in her eyes.

"I suppose you think I'm perfectly crazy."

"You will understand, won't you?" she asked simply.

"And no questions asked," he said from the doorway. Still she held back, her gaze going involuntarily to the glasses on the table. He interpreted the look of inquiry. "There were two of us. The doctor was here picking out the shot, that's all. He's gone. It's all right. Wait here and I'll get a light." The flame in her lantern suddenly ended its feeble life.

"Dark as Egypt, eh?" he called out from the opposite side of the room.

"Not as dark as the forest, Mr. Shaw."

"Good heavens, what a time you must have had. All alone, were you?"

"Of course. I was not eloping."

"I beg your pardon."

"Where were you sitting when I came up?"

"Here—in the dark. I was waiting for the storm to come and dozed away, I daresay. I love a storm, don't you?"

"Yes, if I'm indoors. Ah!" He had struck a match and was lighting the wick of a lamp beside the huge fireplace.

"I suppose you think I'm perfectly crazy. I'm horrid."

"Not at all. Sit down here on the couch, please. More cheerful, eh? Good Lord, listen to the wind! You got here just in time. Now, if you'll excuse me I'll have Mrs. Ulrich down in a minute. She'll take good care of you. And I'll make you a nice hot drink too. You need it." In the door of the big living room he turned to her, a look of extreme doubt in his eyes. "By Jove, I bet I do wake up. It can't be true." She laughed plaintively and shook her head in humble self abasement. "Don't be lonesome. I'll be back in a minute."

"Don't hurry," she murmured apologetically. Then she settled back limply in the wide couch and inspected the room, his footsteps noisily clattering down the long hallway to the left. She saw, with some misgiving, that it was purely a man's habitation. Shaw doubtless had built and furnished the big cottage without woman as a consideration. The room was large, comfortable, solid. There was not a suggestion of femininity in it—high or low—except the general air of cleanliness. The furniture was rough hewn and built for use, not ornamentation. The walls were hung with English prints, antlers, mementoes of the hunt and the field of sport. The floor was covered with skins and great "carpet rag" rugs. The whole aspect was so distinctly mannish that her heart fluttered ridiculously in its loneliness. Her cogitations were running seriously toward riot when he came hurriedly down the hall and into her presence.

"She'll be down presently. In fact, so will the cook and the housemaid. Gad, Miss Drake, they were so afraid of the storm that all of them piled into Mrs. Ulrich's room. I wonder at your courage in facing the symptoms outdoors. Now I'll fix you a drink. Take off your hat—be comfortable. Cigarette? Good! Here's my sideboard. See? It's a nuisance, this having only one arm in commission; affects my style as a barkeep. Don't stir; I'll be able"—

"Let me help you. I mean, please don't go to so much trouble. Really I want nothing but a place to sleep tonight. This couch will do—honestly. And some one to call me at daybreak, so that I may be on my way." He looked at her and laughed quizzically. "Oh, I'm in earnest, Mr. Shaw. I would not have stopped here if it hadn't been for the storm."

"Come, now, Miss Drake, you spoil the fairy tale. You did intend to come here. It was the only place for you to go, and I'm glad of it. My only regret is that the house isn't filled with chaperons."

"Why?" she demanded with a guilty start.

"Because I could then say to you the things that are in my heart—aye, that are almost bursting from my lips. I—I can't say them now, you know," he said, and she understood his delicacy. For some minutes she sat in silence, watching him as he clumsily mixed the drinks and put the water over the alcohol blaze. Suddenly he turned to her with something like alarm in his voice. "By George, you don't suppose they'll pursue you?"

"Oh, wouldn't that be jolly? It would be like the real story book—the fairy and the ogres and all that. But," dubiously, "I'm sorely afraid they consider me rubbish. Still"—looking up encouragingly—"my brother would try to find me if he—if he knew that I was gone."

To her surprise, he whistled softly and permitted a frown of anxiety to creep over his face. "I hadn't thought of that," he observed reflectively. Then he seemed to throw off the momentary symptoms of uneasiness, adding, with a laugh: "I daresay nothing will happen. The storm would put a stop to all idea of pursuit."

"Let them pursue," she said, a stubborn light in her eyes. "I am my own mistress, Mr. Shaw. They can't take me, willy nilly, as if I were a child, you know."

"That's quite true. You don't understand," he said slowly, his back to her.

"You mean the law? Is it different from ours?"

"Not that. The—er—situation. You see, they might think it a trifle odd if they found you here—with me. Don't you understand?" He turned to her with a very serious expression. She started and sat bolt upright to stare at him comprehensively.

"You mean—it—it isn't quite—er"—

"Regular perhaps," he supplied. "Please keep your seat. I'm not the censor. I'm not even an opinion. Believe me, Miss Drake, my only thought was and is for your good."

"I see. They would believe evil of me if they knew I had come to you," she mused, turning quite cold.

"I know the kind of people your sister-in-law has at her place, Miss Drake. Their sort can see but one motive in anything. You know them, too, I dare say."

"Yes, I know them," she said uneasily. "Good heavens, what a fool I've been!" she added, starting to her feet. "I might have known they'll say all sorts of terrible things. They must not find me here. Mr. Shaw, I'm—I am so ashamed—I wonder what you are thinking of me." Her lip trembled, and there was such a pleading look in her dark eyes that he controlled himself with difficulty. It was only by imposing the severest restraint upon his susceptibilities that he was able to approach her calmly.

"I can't tell you now—not here—what I am thinking. It isn't the place. Maybe—maybe you can read my thought, Penel—Miss Drake. Look up, please. Can't you read—oh, there now—I beg your pardon! You come to me for protection and I—well, don't be too hard on me just yet. I'll find the time and place to tell you." He drew away almost as his hand was ready to clasp hers—all because her sweet eyes met his trustingly—he could have sworn—lovingly.

"Just now I am a poor little reprobate," she sighed ever so miserably. "You are very good. I'll not forget."

"I'll not permit you to forget," he said eagerly.

"Isn't the housekeeper a long time in coming?" she asked quickly. He laughed contentedly.

"We've no reason to worry about her. It's the pursuers from Bazelhurst that should trouble us. Won't you tell me the whole story?" And she told him everything, sitting there beside him with a hot drink in her hand and a growing shame in her heart. It was dawning upon her with alarming force that she was exposing a hitherto unknown incentive. It was not a comfortable awakening. "And you champion me to that extent?" he cried joyously. She nodded bravely and went on.

"So here I am," she said in conclusion. "I really could not have walked to Ridgely tonight, could I?"

"I should say not."

"And there was really nowhere else to come but here?" dubiously.

"See that light over there up the mountain?" he asked, leading her to a window. "Old man Grimes and his wife live up there. They keep a light burning all night to scare Renwood's ghost away. By Jove, the storm will be upon us in a minute. I thought it had blown around us." The roll of thunder came up the valley. "Thank heaven you're safe indoors. Let them pursue if they like. I'll hide you if they come, and the servants are close mouthed."

"I don't like the way you put it, Mr. Shaw."

"Hello, hello—the house!" came a shout from the wind ridden night outside. Two hearts inside stopped beating for a second or two. She caught her breath sharply as she clasped his arm.

"They are after me!" she gasped.

"They must not find you here. Really, Miss Drake, I mean it. They would not understand. Come with me. Go down this hall quickly. It leads to the garden back of the house. There's a gun room at the end of the hall. Go in there, to your right. Here, take this! It's an electric saddle lantern. I'll head these fellows off. They shan't find you. Don't be alarmed."

To be Continued.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION

IN NOCTURNE SATIN.

In this design there is the suggestion of a coat that will answer general utility purposes as an afternoon or an evening wrap, this especial one being developed in nocturne satin in cactus green shade, the edges bound with green velvet. The loose sleeves, the high collar and the yoke effect are in keeping with the present modes. For less elaborate day wear, or for motoring one of the new cotton corduroys or golfine will be very smart.

Tango Forbidden at Capital.

OTTAWA, May 2.—There must be no more "tangoing" in Ottawa hotel cafes, according to the dictum of the Board of License Commissioners, which yesterday served notice on the Russell House that its license is renewed for only three months, and further renewal will depend upon stricter observance of the law and elimination of the tango.

Although the tavern and shop license reduction bylaw have been quashed by the courts the commissioners did some reducing on their own account, four hotels having been ordered to close up by August 1.

MOYES LEAVES CITY.

Inqu'ry Into West Shore Affair Closes Without His Evidence.

TORONTO, May 2. — Despite the insistent demands of the Ontario Railway Board that he appear to clear up certain matters in connection with his enterprise, John W. Moyes has left the city, and the enquiry into the affairs of the Ontario West Shore Railway, of which he was president, ended abruptly yesterday morning without hearing him testify. When the session opened the chairman expected the chief witness to arrive, according to intimations from his counsel, but when half an hour later it was learned that Moyes had gone to Algonquin Park, under doctor's orders, the case was closed. A report based on the evidence taken is now under preparation and within a few days will be issued. This report will determine whether or not the criminal proceedings which the counties have sought will be warrant.d.

William Proudfoot, M.P.P., who was conducting the examination, asked Mr. Moyes' brother if it was correct that Moyes had been working in the garden all week and had left town Thursday evening. The reply was that it was true, but that only Dr. Davidson's orders had caused him to leave. Mr. Moyes had been determined to appear, but had collapsed a week ago while studying papers, said his brother.

"Up to the discovery of the papers we received no assistance from Mr. Moyes," said Chairman McIntyre in closing the inquiry, "nor from any other official except Mr. McEwen. The impression conveyed was that Moyes intended to obstruct and thwart the enquiry. Now a flood of light has been let in by the discovery of the documents. We would have liked Mr. Moyes to attend after they were found, but were unable to get him here."

To Send Bodies Home.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Admiral Badger reported to the Navy Department yesterday that within two or three days he would send the battleship Montana to New York with the bodies of sailors and marines killed at Vera Cruz. The vessel would sail, he said, as soon as it became certain that her services were no longer needed for refugee work. The bodies will be shipped from New York to the homes of relatives.

Seized American Brig.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—An American brig was seized by Mexican Federal officials at Manzanillo, who thought that war had been declared, but was immediately released with apologies on the demand of the Raleigh, according to a report received at the Navy Department yesterday from Admiral Howard in command of the American fleet on the west coast of Mexico.

Chatham House Robbed.

CHATHAM, May 2.—While Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Von Gunten were attending an entertainment Thursday evening their home was entered and a thousand dollars' worth of jewelry stolen. Most of the jewelry was taken from Mrs. Von Gunten's rooms and consisted of diamond rings and necklaces. Some valuable old-fashioned spoons were also taken.

Candidates In Grimsby.

LONDON, May 2.—In the Grimsby bye-election, caused by the death of Sir George Doughty, Alfred Bannister, smack owner, will be the Liberal candidate, and George Tickler, jam manufacturer, Unionist candidate. Both are local men. Nothing has been decided regarding northeast Derbyshire.

Editor Sent To Jail.

HALIFAX, N.S., May 2.—For the first time in 30 years it became necessary yesterday morning for the Legislature of Nova Scotia to assert its power for contempt in defiance of its authority, when by a straight party vote W. R. McCurdy, news editor of The Halifax Herald, was committed to the common jail for 48 hours.

The prisoner's offence was in refusing to tell who delivered to him an anonymous letter signed Ian McLean, which was published in The Evening Mail, which made grave insinuations of corruption against members of the House of Assembly.

Saturnia in Drydock.

MONTREAL, May 2.—The Donaldson liner Saturnia, which struck a rock in the St. Lawrence on her trip from Glasgow, has been put into drydock for repairs, as several of her plates are badly torn. The Saturnia was to have sailed for Glasgow today, but will be delayed for several days.

Canadian Artist's Success.

LONDON, May 2.—Frances Galbraith, daughter of ex-Ald. Galbraith, of Toronto, has had a picture accepted by the Royal Academy.

THE WHITE FROCK

An Important Part of the Little Folks' Summer Wardrobe.

SIMPLE, YET DAINTILY CHIC.

Even Fine Robes May Be Trimmed With Imitation Laces or Fashioned From Embroidered Flouncings—Pin Tucking Is In Favor.

White frocks for the little folks are an important part of the summer wardrobe. Those sold in the shops are often wonderful creations, much of whose beauty depends on the exquisite handwork. The fond mother who has time may duplicate many of these gowns at a moderate cost.

Those who are in search of a specially attractive model will find the little girl's dress illustrated here worth careful study. The garment may be fashioned of lawn, batiste or linen. It is adorned with both lace and embroidery. Valenciennes lace and medallions are used. A dainty blue sash is drawn around the waist. Worn with white socks and button strap slippers, this makes a charming outfit for the little tot.

Use For Embroidered Flouncings.

Nothing is more satisfactory for children's white frocks than machine embroidered flouncings and bandings.

CHILD'S WHITE FROCK.

The double tunic skirt with a low placed sash is a much fancied style. And just a hint about this low placed sash. It is hard to keep such sashes from slipping down on the slender little figure unless the ribbon is run through slashes in the frock, but this fashion is not so much favored now as the handsome sash of ribbon or velvet tied loosely and apparently with carelessness around the figure. Of course there must be something to hold that sash up.

Fine Frocks Are Costly.

When it comes to the exquisitely fine white frock, trimmed with lace and machine embroidery and set together with hand stitchery, one must pay a rather extravagant amount or make the frock at home, and such frocks mothers prefer to make, if need be, buying the cheaper play frocks in quantity in the shops.

White Paris muslin, infinitely fine and sheer and costing $1 a yard, will never "thicken up" in the laundering, but there are many grades of fine white batiste from 25 cents the yard up which are very satisfactory. Indestructible voile, sheer as gossamer, yet sturdy in character because of its beautiful weave and the excellent cotton of its threads, is another favorite.

Imitation Laces Favored.

Hems, wide tucks and pin tucking are put in with hand stitches.

The favored laces are real or imitation Irish crochet, the ideal lace for children, and shadow or filet lace combined with entre deux of val or Normandy lace. Wide vals do not launder satisfactorily enough for children's frocks that must go to the tub every week.

For a gown of the moment simple designs are preferred to elaborate ones. After all, good taste dictates that children's garments should not be overelaborate. For everyday wear serviceable linens are favored. Kate Greenaway and other quaint ideas are utilized by designers in search of inspiration.

RHUBARB CHARLOTTE.

Butter a pie dish, melt a dessertspoonful of sugar over the fire with a little water and pour this in. Now put a layer of bread and butter, then a layer of finely sliced rhubarb, a little more melted sugar, and repeat till dish is full. Beat up an egg and cover the top if sweet is not meant to be turned out. If intended to be turned out mix the egg with a little milk and pour in. Cover the topmost layer with a greased paper to keep it from burning and becoming too crisp. Bake for one hour, turn out, sprinkle with sugar and serve with custard.

DUKE'S BIRTHDAY

Flags Flew on Government Buildings in London.

LONDON, May 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Flags flew on Government buildings yesterday in honor of the Duke of Connaught's birthday (born May 1, 1850). Clarence House, His Royal Highness' town residence, is in the hands of the builders, so it is assumed his home-coming is not to be unduly delayed.

Spent Quietly at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, May 2.—Congratulatory cables from the King and other members of the royal family, and felicitous messages from the Mother Country, Canada and elsewhere were showered upon the Duke of Connaught yesterday. The duke spent the day very quietly at Rideau Hall. It is expected that his plan of returning home in the fall will be carried out.

Aeronauts Sent to Prison.

BERLIN, May 2.—Hans Berliner, the German aeronaut who was made a prisoner at Kirgischansk, Russia, last February, when he came to earth at the end of a balloon trip from Bitterfield, Germany, and the two passengers who accompanied him, have been sentenced by the Russian authorities to six months' solitary confinement.

This news was received in a despatch from Perm, Russia, yesterday. Kirgischansk is in the Ural mountains. The aeronauts landed there after a balloon voyage of 47 hours, in which they made a distance record of 1,863 miles. The Russian authorities took the travelers into custody on suspicion of espionage.

Scotch Settler's Windfall.

EDMONTON, May 2.—Jack Hamber, who until recently was acting as a cook for 250 miners at a coal camp in the Pocohontas district west of Edmonton, at a salary of $70 a month, has been notified by a firm of lawyers that he is heir to a fortune amounting to over $500,000, left him by a long forgotten relative, who died recently in Glasgow. Hamber came out from Scotland a few years ago.

Simple Cure for La Grippe

First Used in Vienna

Unfortunately most of us have had some experience with "Grippe" or influenza. When you feel the first symptoms—don't wait—take a dose of "Kephaldol." A tablet or two will check the cold and the fever and headache will quickly disappear. "Kephaldol" was first used by Dr. Stohr in Vienna and so successful was his prescription that the world's best doctors endorse its use for the cure of Feverish Colds, Influenza and Nervous Affections. "Kephaldol" is harmless and will reduce the temperature without the bad after-effects which follow the use of many drugs. Should you find it difficult to procure locally, send 50c. direct to the manufacturers for a large tube. Address—Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

LIFE THREATENED BY KIDNEY DISEASE

His Health In A Terrible State Until He Took "Fruit-a-tives"

B. A. KELLY, Esq.

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys were not doing their work, and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

"My kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever had".

B. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Kidney remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and the skin as well as the Kidneys and thereby soothes and cures any Kidney soreness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c, or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WILL TRY TO SECURE RECALL OF ALDERMAN

Women Say He Violated Promise to Support Police Woman Appointment.

Calgary, May 2.—Believing that Alderman T. A. P. Frost deliberately violated an alleged promise made to the women of the city that he would favor the appointment of a woman police, various women's organizations of the city have set out to secure the recall of the verbose little alderman.

At a joint meeting of the social service committee and the committee for the suppression of objectionable literature held yesterday afternoon, the women decided that it would be well to circulate petitions to recall Alderman Frost on the ground that he has failed to keep the promises made to the women voters at the time of his election at a woman's meeting when, as a candidate for election, he is alleged to have promised to support the women and said he was in favor of a police woman.

Petitions for the recall of Alderman Frost are already said to have been prepared, and in circulation among the voters of the city, with a large number of signatures already appended.

The council last night reversed itself on the subject of appointing a woman policeman, and approved the recommendation of the commissioners to this effect. Alderman Frost made a speech against the appointment that was as verbose as it proved useless. The principal argument of "Tappy" was useless expenditure to which Alderman Ruttle very succintly retorted that if necessary they could let one of the men go.

SAYS SEPARATE SCHOOL FACTIONS MAY DESTROY R.C. EDUCATION

OTTAWA, May 2.—Rev. Father O'Toole, a local Roman Catholic priest, in a statement yesterday, attacks the leaders of both sides of the local Separate School controversy as demagogues, and declares the interests of Roman Catholic education unsafe in their hands.

He charges Irish Catholics, who, as the result of the conflict with the French, are transferring to Public School support, with putting dollars before religion and censures the French faction for "puerile resistance to the lawfully constituted authority" of the Ontario Education Department.

Father O'Toole declares Catholic education in danger of being destroyed if a more intelligent element does not meet the situation in a conciliatory spirit.

THEY TALKED FROM TRAIN

WIRELESS PHONE IS REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN COMPLETE SUCCESS

NEW YORK, May 2.—While the eastbound Lackawanna Limited, of the Delaware, Lackawanna, and Western Railroad Co., was speeding on a non-stop run over the 53 miles between Scranton and Stroudsburg, Penn., yesterday afternoon, C. V. Logwood, engineer of the DeForest Engineering Co., sat in a little compartment on the train and talked easily with telephone engineer Graf, of the Lackawanna Co., who was sitting in the wireless operators' room in the railroad station at Scranton.

This was the first successful trial of wireless telephoning between a moving train and a fixed station, and everything worked without a single hitch. The DeForest amplifier, an invention of Lee DeForest, was used and made possible amplification of speech fifty times above the normal. The wireless telephony is a development of wireless telegraphy between a moving train and a fixed station, which the Lackawanna perfected and put into practical use several months ago.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, etc.

CHICAGO, May 1.—Estimates that 3,000,000 more acres of wheat would be harvested in the United States this year than ever before, smashed values today for new crop months. May contracts, however, were in strong hands, and scored a net gain. The market as a whole finished weak at a range varying from 5-8c to 3-4c decline to 3-8c advance. Corn, too, closed irregular, 3-8c down to 1-4c up, oats unchanged to 1-4c lower, and provisions with a loss of 2½c to 17½c.

Pupils Forbidden To Rise.

OTTAWA, May 2.—The pupils of St. Joseph's Separate School here have been instructed not to recognize Trustee Dr. Freeland on his next visit. The custom when a trustee visits a school is for the pupils to arise in a body when he enters. Orders have been given them by the teachers to remain seated. Dr. Freeland, though an Irishman, is one of the champions of the French cause and defeated the Irish candidate in the recent St. George Ward bye-election.

Patient Drowns Herself.

GUELPH, May 2. — Agnes Powvis of Hamilton, a patient at the Homewood Sanitarium, drowned herself in the river below the sanitarium at 6.15 yesterday morning. She was seen by a nurse at six and escaped shortly afterwards. Drivers who were getting their teams out across the river saw the unfortunate woman in the water, but were powerless to go to her rescue. The body was recovered.

AS OTHERS SEE THE WHITE WAY IN PETERBORO

Kingston, May 2. — Mr. Edward Hartrick, electrician in the power plant, has returned from Peterboro', where he inspected the installation of the new white way in that city. Mr. Hartrick is highly pleased with the white way, which has been installed on Princess Street, and which will be turned on in the course of about three weeks.

In Peterboro a man standing 90 feet from the main street can read without difficulty a newspaper by the light of the lamps. A person in the third story of the buildings may also read without any other light but the street lights. As good as the Peterboro lights are, however, Kingston's lights will be far superior. They are the latest word in street illumination and will be a credit to the city.

Mr. Hartrick states that Foley and Gleason are paving in Peterboro. The city are laying gas mains and water services, and the contractor is following right behind with the pavement.

GEORGE STREET CHURCH.

There will be Sacrament of the Lord's Supper and reception of members at the George Street Methodist Church at the Sunday morning service. In the evening Rev. Mr. Peever will discuss "The objections that are generally used as arguments against membership in the Church and Christian Life."

The second Sunday of May will be suitably recognised as Mothers' Day at both services.

COMING TO MARKET

The steamers Geneva and Rainbow brought fully 150 people to the market this morning. This is the first market crowd of the season to be brought by water.

SCRIPTURES TEACH A SECOND CHANCE?

Question Will Be Discussed in Royal Theatre by F. G. Hammes, of Haliburton.

The International Bible Students' Association is said to have the public welfare at heart. The Bible lecture course which is being given here under its auspices is greatly appreciated by many, especially those who love the Bible and desire to see its teachings disseminated. Some, it is claimed, are opposing the work, believing that the lecturers are setting forth a second chance, thus encouraging people to be careless in this life. To offset any such erroneous thought and to present in detail the teachings of the Scriptures on this subject, is the purpose of the coming lecture on "Two Salvations, But No Second Chance." A hearty invitation is extended to the public. It is believed that many will want to hear this lecture. As usual admission will be free to all and no collection solicited.

95000 BOXES ON RURAL MAIL ROUTES

Many Post Offices Closed as a Result of Rural Delivery.

Ottawa, May 2.—The number of rural mail delivery routes now in operation is about 2300, and the number of boxes erected on these routes is 95,000.

The number of postoffices closed in Ontario, owing to the establishment of the rural mail delivery branch on April 1, 1812, is 587. During last month alone 46 postoffices were closed in Ontario as a result of rural mail delivery.

WHERE PROMISES ARE MADE GOOD

Every detail of our workshop, including the mechanical equipment, is planned to make it a model of accuracy and convenience, which from your standpoint means satisfaction and prompt service in the manufacture of new glasses or repairs on old ones.

Whether we originally made your glasses or not, we can immediately duplicate a broken lens, no matter how complicated. If you meet with a misfortune of this kind, simply telephone us and if we haven't your prescription on file, we will send for the broken glasses, and when you call a little later, you will find them waiting for you.

We have all Mr. Browett's Prescriptions, covering the entire time he was in business in this city.

"PEBLO" Quality Lenses are what we use in all our work. They are the Best—we use no others.

THE ELECTRIC CITY AS SEEN IN THE MONETARY TIMES

Reference is Made to the Clearing House About to Be Started Here.

The Monetary Times, a trade review and insurance journal of Canada, credits Peterborough with the following:

A bank clearing house will be established in Peterborough, Ontario. Premises are being secured and will be furnished, and the clearing house will commence business in a mouth or two. The following is a list of the banks which have branches at Peterborough, and of the names of the managers in harge:

Canadian Bank of Commerce, Mr. W. H. Dunsford; Dominion Bank, Mr. John Crane; Bank of Montreal, Mr. R. W. Travers; Bank of Nova Scotia, Mr. A. F. Tomlins; Bank of Ottawa, Mr. G. C. Wainwright; Royal Bank of Canada, Mr. V. Eastwood; Bank of Toronto, Mr. P. Campbell; Union Bank of Canada, Mr. C. H. Pennefather; and a south end branch of the Union Bank in charge of Mr. D. C. MacRostie.

All these banks will be members of the clearing house, of which the following officers have been elected: Chairman, Mr. P. Campbell, manager of the Bank of Toronto; Vice-Chairman, Mr. J. Crane, manager of the Dominion Bank; Secretary, Mr. D. D. Brown, accountant in the Bank of Toronto.

From a town of 10,000 some ten or twelve years ago, Peterborough has grown into a city of at least 22,000 population. That includes the population residing immediately outside the boundary lines. Besides the banks, there are also two loan companies in existence. A rich farming country surrounds the city and the farmers are considered well-to-do. As a centre for manufacturers to locate, Peterborough is excellent. The cost of power at the present and in the future will always be reasonable.

Cheap Power Assured.

Inside the city limits, there is being developed some 6,000 horse-power, and along the Trent waters between, say Fenelon Falls and Trenton, there is yet undeveloped at least 50,000 horse-power. The Electric Power Company of Toronto, the holding company of numerous smaller companies along the Trent, controls practically all this power. Peterborough, however, voted in favor of the Hydro-Electric recently, and cheap power is assured for the future, although a great many are not in favor of the Hydro-Electric unless the Commission take over and handle all the power in the district.

There are some large industries in the city, such as the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited, and the Quaker Oats Company, the Canadian branch of that large company which has its head office in Chicago. The Peterborough plant is one of the largest of the company's many plants, and has perhaps one of the biggest outputs. There is also the DeLaval Dairy Supply Company, which has a good plant there with a growing business, and is a branch of one of the wealthiest concerns of its kind in the United States. A new concern which has just established itself in Peterborough is the Henry Hope and Sons, Limited, with a capital of about $150,000. The parent company of this concern is in Birmingham, England. They will manufacture steel window casements and door frames. There is also a branch of the Vermont Marble Company, a notable company of its kind in the United States, with its head office in Proctor, Vt. Other large and well-to-do concerns are the Auburn Woollen Mills Company, Limited; Mathews-Laing Company, Limited; Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company, Limited; Bonner-Worth Manufacturing Company, Limited; manufacturers of worsted yarns; Peterborough Shovel and Tool Company, Limited; Colonial Weaving Company, Limited; J. J. Turner and Sons, manufacturers of tents, awnings, etc., a very well-off concern; B. F. Ackerman and Sons, Company, manufacturers of harness, etc., another well-off concern; Brinton Carpet Company, a concern which does a large business and is controlled by Montreal capitalists; and numerous other small industries.

The total assessment of Peterborough is $11,372,394. The value of dutiable goods imported by the city in 1913 was $468,197.

Three bank clearing houses were established in 1910, one each at Brandon, Lethbridge and Saskatoon. Three, Moose Jaw, Brantford and Fort William, were established in 1911, and two, New Westminster and Medicine Hat, were opened in 1913. Peterborough's will be the first new clearing house to be opened in 1914. There are now twenty-three clearing houses in Canada, twelve of which are in Western Canada and eleven in the east.

EIGHTY-FIRST ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Jas. G. Potter at St. Andrew's Church To-morrow.

The eighty-first anniversary of the founding of Presbyterianism in Peterborough will be observed in St. Andrew's Church with fitting services to-morrow. Rev. James G. Potter, B.A., of McVicar Memorial Church, Montreal, who spent fourteen faithful years in the service of St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough, and made hosts of friends in this city, will be the special preacher. The choir, under the able leadership of Herbert C. Treneer, A.T.C.M., will contribute special music. Doors open at 6.30 o'clock for the evening service.

REV. JAMES G. POTTER.

CHANGES ON C.P.R. LINE THROUGH PETERBOROUGH

Through Freights Will Travel New Lake Shore Line

Another Passenger Train Will Be Added

New System of Transmitting Orders at Norwood Station

Contrary to some anticipations, the inaugurating of a through passenger service on the new Lake Shore Line of the C.P.R. on July 1st, will not jeopardize the local service. A Review scribe interviewed Mr. W. S. Dodds, local C.P.R. agent this morning, and learned that the local freight service would remain the same, while the passenger service will be greatly improved. Citizens and the Board of Trade have been agitating a better morning service from Toronto, and with the opening of the new road their wishes will be gratified. A train, leaving Toronto at nine a.m. which will not stop except at two or three stations will be added to the list. The regular train now arriving at 11.43 will continue and will stop at all stations. The train leaving Toronto at 9 a.m. will enable travellers to get to this city and do their business before noon, and if desirable get away on the Grand Trunk trains. Another good feature will be the possibility of getting the Toronto morning newspapers to this city in good time. The idea of getting the papers down on an early freight has not proved at all satisfactory, as the freight was held up very frequently. At present it is impossible to state whether the railway will be in a position to have a morning passenger train from the north on the Port McNicoll line, although it is urgently sought after by the local merchants and Board of Trade.

The through freights will travel via the new route but such trains are absolutely of no benefit locally. The local freight will be handled in the same manner in which it is cared for under existing conditions.

Station at Havelock.

Following the announcement that the C.P.R. had again cancelled the contract for the new station at Havelock, a deputation consisting of Jas. Thompson, M.L.A., Reeve Kindred and S. S. Joyce, journeyed to Montreal on Thursday last, and were fortunate in securing an interview with General Manager Mactier of the C.P.R. on matters relating to the future of the railroad town generally.

Mr. Mactier told the deputation that the erection of the Havelock station had been postponed until next year owing to the decision of the management to curtail and cut out all expenditures possible all along the line. This action was caused by the decrease in both freight and passenger traffic during the past few months. The management do not expect that the depression will last very long and hope that business will be normal before the end of the summer. There has been no change in the plans of the station, Mr. Mactier said, and it is the intention of the C. P. R. to build the station early next year, and when built will contain offices for the Asst. Supt., despatchers and the necessary staff.

The General Manager also informed the deputation that the Port McNichol business was increasing rapidly, the grain shipments having increased from 5,000,000 bushels in 1912-13, to 9,000,000 in 1913-14, and that Havelock would always be the divisional point.

Transmitting Orders.

Another item of interest in connection with the road is an apparatus at the Norwood depot for giving written orders to passing trains while they are running at a fast rate. Instead of the operator having to stand at the edge of the platform and hand in person the order to the engineer and conductor on passing trains, he now attaches the paper to a hoop and places it in the arm of the new contrivance, from where it is taken by those in charge of the train. Owing to the water tank being at the local depot and the trains stopping for water this idea is not likely to be put in force here.

HEALTH OF CITY DURING APRIL

M.H.O. Dr. McPherson informed The Review to-day that the entire city had been free from contagious diseases during the past month.

"Any typhoid around the city?" he was asked.

"No, the only case we had was when a couple of the construction men were taken down. One of them died. This was what you call an outside case.

C.N.R. WILL RECEIVE MONEY ONLY AS WORK IS CERTIFIED

Opposition Leader Opens His Campaign Against C.N.R. Guarantee Proposals by Demanding Fuller Information—Revision of Details Will Delay Preliminary Debate by Some Days.

OTTAWA, May 2.—The Government is annoyed by the persistent claim in some quarters that the Canadian Northern Railway will have complete control over the money to be raised by the forthcoming issue of Government guaranteed securities. As a matter of fact, the money so to be raised will be deposited with the Receiver-General and paid out for construction work upon progress estimates. The whole matter will be covered by the trust deed, whose terms are to be prescribed by the Government.

While the professed attitude of the Liberal party to the new measure is one of opposition, unprejudiced observers here are wondering to what extent they will carry their objections. It is well known that there is a diversity of opinion among them and only a few are prepared to follow Liberal Whip Pardee, leader of the "die-hards," to the extent of forcing the application of the closure.

The Canadian Northern legislation was twice mentioned in the House yesterday afternoon. First, Mr. Claude Macdonnell (South Toronto) rose to a question of privilege. He said his name had been mentioned with other Conservative members as being opposed to the Canadian Northern deal. The charge, he said, was entirely without foundation, and he desired to say that he would heartily support the proposals of the Government.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier complained that the resolution as now upon the order paper did not correspond with the resolutions printed in the votes and proceedings. In the latter it was represented that certain railway lines, together with their rolling stock and equipment, were pledged to the Government, but these were not included in the list printed in the order paper.

Mr. Borden said in reply that the resolutions first printed were not entirely accurate and he had directed the Solicitor-General to amend the same. He intended, of course, that the formal notice amending the motion should be given, and that course would now be followed.

Sir Wilfrid then asked that certain information be supplied the House before there was any debate on the resolution. He desired to have copies of certain trust agreements mentioned in the contract between the Government and the Canadian Northern and also copies of standing agreements between the railway company and its contractors.

Mr. Borden said that all the possible information would be furnished without delay.

No date was agreed upon as to when the debate should begin, but it is a fair surmise from what occurred in the House yesterday afternoon that the resolutions will not be taken up for several days. Indeed the amended resolutions will have to again appear in the votes and proceedings before they can be transferred to the order paper.

At the opening of the House yesterday afternoon Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, said that the newspapers had misinterpreted his announcement respecting the future readjustment of the iron and steel duties. He had not intended to foreshadow any tariff revision but merely to say that when the duties upon structural iron and steel were increased by order-in-council a year or two hence some consequental changes in other tariff items would necessarily follow.

He further stated that the tariff resolutions reported from the ways and means committee Thursday night embodied all the tariff changes to be made at this session. A bill to amend the Customs Tariff Act of 1907 founded upon those resolutions was then introduced and read a first time.

The House entered into committee of supply on the I. C. R. estimates, and a number of items were passed. Judge Mackenzie (Lib., N. Cape Breton and Victoria) complained at the great congestion of freight at the Strait of Canso. He said that Sir John Macdonald had built a monument to himself in Cape Breton by bridging the Grand Narrows, and he hoped that Dr. Reid, as acting Minister of Railways, would create a similar monument to himself by the construction of a bridge at Canso.

ONTARIO PREMIER IN HIS PLACE AT CLOSING OF THE LEGISLATURE

Ceremony of Prorogation is Given an Interesting Feature by Presence of Leader of Government, Who Shows Most of His Old Vigor—Sir John Gibson Gives Assent to Extensive Legislation.

TORONTO, May 2. — With Sir James Whitney sitting once more in his accustomed place, the Ontario Legislature prorogued yesterday. Nothing took place beyond the usual ceremonies demanded by the occasion and the Premier, beyond shaking hands warmly with his old associates and friends who had come for the closing, took no official share in the proceedings. A touch of his old vigar was manifest in his bearing, but every care was taken that he should not unduly exert himself.

A rumor was current here yesterday afternoon and evening that the Government had settled upon the last week in June for a general election, but neither confirmation nor denial could be secured. One statement was made that Monday, June 29th would be the polling day. It was also suggested that Sir James Whitney would appear at least once upon the platform during the campaign.

Cannon roared forth as usual in the park as the Lieutenant-Governor entered the chamber and mounted the dais of the Speaker. Hon. W. J. Hanna, in his capacity of Provincial Secretary, presented the scroll, and after the vice-regal assent had been given to the bills passed during the session he pronounced the prorogation.

The assemblage was somewhat smaller than usual, the Government members being confined to a baker's dozen or so, who had stayed over the intervening day. The Opposition was represented by Mr. Rowell, who sat in his seat with a red rose in his lapel. Shortly to his left Allan Studholme, the Labor member, who has never neglected such an occasion, sat amid empty chairs.

A small galaxy of fashion added to the color of the sober hued chamber. Lady Gibson and the Misses Gibson sat to the immediate right of the dais, and Sir James was accompanied by Miss Norah Whitney. The Cabinet Ministers, with the exception of Hon. I. B. Lucas, grouped themselves about the Premier.

During the session there have been 140 bills passed, of which 50 were assented to some time ago. There have been 28 night sittings, three of which have been all night, and 46 day sessions.

TROUBLE IN TASMANIA

GOVERNMENT REFUSED TO ALLOW PARLIAMENT TO DISSOLVE

LONDON, May 2. — Recent questions on the notice-paper of the House of Commons indicate the existence of a constitutional crisis in Tasmania.

According to Mr. MacVeagh and Mr. Lynch, the governor, Sir W. Ellison-Macartney, refused to allow the Conservative Government to dissolve Parliament after a vote of censure against them. He later authorized Mr. Earle, the Labor leader, to form a government subject to an immediate dissolution. He therefore refused a dissolution to a Premier without a majority. The governor, it is further suggested, asked Mr. Earle for assurances as to the filling of the law officerships.

Mr. Earle refused to give the assurance asked for. Parliament passed a vote of censure on the Government with only one dissentient and adjourned until June 30, pending an appeal to the King.

DEFICIT IS $132,000.

Dale Bank In Madoc Holds Real Estate of Uncertain Value.

MADOC, May 2. — A notice was posted on the doors of the Dale private bank yesterday saying that the bank has assets which may realise $268,930, less cost of collection and bad debts, indicating a shortage of $132,000. The bank holds property valued at $478,344.57 and real estate of problematical value in the west. On it further interest and principal have to be paid. Its price is $75,970. The shareholders are said to number four, J. C. Dale, sr., president of the bank; Duncan Mackenzie, James A. Caskey, and Duncan MacBeth, who are residents of Madoc and its vicinity. The resources of the individual partners are said to be $50,000.

Judgment Reserved In Downey Case.

ST. CATHARINES, May 2.—After the legal argument had been given yesterday in the preliminary hearing of the charge against Leslie Downey of conspiring with H. L. Pearse and others to defraud Dr. Currey of Merritton of a sum of money, Magistrate Campbell reserved judgment until Tuesday morning.

occupying a definite territory." It is almost universally true that nations, so-called, are either free or were so originally. Murray consequently recognizes independence the chief attribute of nationhood, so much so, that elsewhere he defines nationalism as "a doctrine of national independence." Lastly, empire is considered "an extensive aggregate of subject territories ruled over by a sovereign state." Imperialism is, then, "the principle or spirit of empire; advocacy of what are held to be imperial interests (not only what were deemed such). In recent British politics the principal or policy.. ....of so uniting the different parts of the Empire having separate governments, as to acquire that for certain purposes, such as warlike defence, internal commerce, copyright, and political communication they shall be practically a single state." (The Parenthesis is our own.) The definition of empire clings to the obsolescent idea of subjection; but that of imperialism, in which the word empire is specifically mentioned, rejects it as far as Greater Britain is concerned. For Murray to admit that imperialism is "the spirit of empire" is consequently to acknowledge the existence of a new species of empire, Moreover, in the proposed British Empire how can there be subjection of states to state when they are to form "a single state?"

Make an idea current opinion, and the ordinary individual, without reflection, will assume it as truth. It may be, it may not be. It thus becomes an axiom, until some specially endowed person, in order to become a herald of new thought, disturbs its placid acceptance by the masses. The new idea may be paradoxical, but such is of little account. Everybody is eager to display his intelligence by accepting some one else's revision—and the new truth or error soon sits deep-rooted in current opinion.

Thus someone awoke one morning, rubbed his eyes, and declared that Canada was a nation. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said it was a nation. His lieutenants said it was a nation. John S. Ewart said it was a nation. Others said it was a nation. They had no time to investigate the statement, but felt that it must mean something "big." Their chests expanded immoderately until measurement was out of the question. People then said to other people, "We are a nation, what the word means we do not know, whether it is the best ideal we do not know; but Sir Wilfrid Laurier knows, and his lieutenants know, and John S. Ewart knows, and therefore such must be the case."

Is Canada, strictly speaking, a nation? Or are people reiterating meaningless inanities? Can we correctly call the Dominion a nation when she neither was nor is independent, does not seek independence, when the world considers her the colony of Great Britain? The Dominion to be a nation must possess not merely many but all of the requisite attributions. The fact is that, like other autonomous dominions of the British crown, she is not the typical province, not the old type colony, nor yet a nation—but a new governmental unit possessing characteristics of all three, for which history has no precise precedent, and language no special name.

Another wise man awoke one morning, rubbed his eyes, and declared that the strangest thing about this British Empire was that it did not exist. Straightway people tore the statement from its context, forgot its foundation in the author's conception of what "empire" meant, and asserted they had dug up from the ruins of Jerusalem an unimpeachable proverb of Solomon.

The idea based upon the assumption that the accepted meaning of a word is identical with the literal, and is therefore fixed, unalterable; whereas, in the last analysis, the signification depends upon the passing whim of public opinion. The evolution of the word "empire" has kept pace with the changing character of the British Empire; because sanctioned by the national usage of generations. Law for the sake of clearness may prefer different terms for different classes of British communities, but that does not prevent the empire's legal existence, whether its guiding principle be paternalism or local autonomy.

There is a word upon everybody's lips which has never been properly defined. It is a word which Canadian constitutional controversialists in their concluding remarks will admit the watchword of each other in order to cover the bitterness of the strife. It is that mystical word "Canadianism." Mislead by their conception that the Dominion can possess nationality when not a nation, Liberals perpetually proclaim that "nationality" has been a powerful factor in the past progress of Canada, and then assume that Nationalism and Canadianism are identical. Thus in a recent number of a prominent Canadian magazine a writer of this color reiterated from sentence to sentence, paragraph to paragraph, that "national spirit" has been the keystone to the development of the Dominion, and then coldly analyzed this sentiment as the alliance of "British sentiment and Canadian sentiment," which is the same as saying that it is not "national spirit" at all, but a blend of imperialism and nationalism which which may best be characterized as Canadianism. To speak of these two sentiments as growing together is to admit that what is called "Canadian" is not the entire Canadian communal feeling—for how can the part be the whole? The whole course of elections from 1836 to 1912 reveals censure of the insinuation that Canadian feeling is nationalistic and defines Canadianism as the healthy fusion of the extremes of nationalism and the old imperialism. It is therefore shere nonsense to distinguish the Canadian from "the British point of view" when the second adjective is used in its widest signification.

There may indeed come a time when quixotic public opinion recognises the Liberal and Pseudo-Nationalistic interpretations of "nation," "nationalism," even as the fresh conceptions of "empire," "imperialism" are now acknowledged by the best lexicologists. Such would not in the least disturb the conclusions arrived at. The agitation for the substitution of "nation" for "colony" is the product of supersensitive natures. Whether they win or not can be borne with equanimity and is not likely to disturb the even development of the empire. Let us not waste our time further turning the microscope upon the atomic theories of miniature minds. Words are of secondary importance; the principles at stake are the issue.

Fatal Loan of Bath.

PARIS, May 2.—Because he allowed his friend to make use of his bath, Henri Person, an accountant, yesterday was found guilty of homicide by imprudence. Maurice Lisse, a leather merchant, was found dead in the bath, having been asphyxiated. Examination of the bathroom showed that the ventilation was defective, and the court held that M. Person should not have allowed his friend to use the bath when in such a dangerous condition. The court fined him twenty-five francs, and allowed the widow of Lisse one franc damages.

Cartier Memorial at Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 2.—The Board of Control yesterday morning officially adopted the plan for the George Etienne Cartier memorial, drawn up by the Cartier centenary committee, and voted $21,500 towards completing the improvements, new roads, etc., contemplated by the plan.

The monument to the confederation statesman is to be erected at the foot of Mount Royal, facing Park avenue.

Incubator Plant Burned.

HAMILTON, May 2.—The incubator plant of the Negrella Manufacturing Co., at the corner of Emerald and Shaw streets, was totally destroyed about two o'clock yesterday morning by a fire of undertermined origin. The loss will amount to nearly $20,000.

Overalls and such heavy articles should be dipped in the tub of water, then laid on the washboard, thoroughly soaped and scrubbed with a scrubbing brush.

TROOPS BURNED STRIKERS' WIVES AND CHILDREN, SAY WITNESSES AT INQUEST

Stenographer Says She Heard Order Given by Officer to Fire Women's Refuge—Strikers Hiding Arms.

DENVER, Colo., May 2.—Interest in Colorado's coal strike tragedies was divided yesterday between two dramatic centres—the inquest at Trinidad before the coroner over the bodies of the women and children burned to death in the Ludlow tent colony, and the headquarters of the United States troops in charge of the coal fields.

Witness after witness told the coroner that the state militia deliberately fired the tents where it was known the women and children had taken refuge from the bullets of the machine guns.

Mrs. Pearl Jolly, leader of the women in the Ludlow colony, described dramatically the attack upon the colony and its terrible results. On the witness-stand she was calm, showing not the least trace of excitement. Her story was well connected throughout.

A former stenographer for the military commission which investigated the murders at the beginning of the strike seven months ago testified that he had heard one of the state army officers direct that the tents be burned.

Major Holbrook did not formally demand that the strikers surrender their arms yesterday. William Diamond, head of the Trinidad Union of the United Mine Works, however, informed the major that the arms would not be surrendered.

"The strikers will hide their arms and ammunition to defend themselves in case the Federal troops are taken from the district before the strike is settled," Diamond told the army officer.

Will Quadruple Cavalry.

WASHINGTON, May 2. — Orders to quadruple the force of Federal cavalrymen in the Colorado coal strike regions went from the War Department late last night. The entire 11th Regiment from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., and two troops of the 12th from Fort Robin, Neb., were ordered to proceed to the scene at once. Colonel James Lockett of the 11th is to take supreme command of the situation.

LOCAL FANS WILL BE ON THE JOB TO HELP PETES AT ERIE

Train Arrangements Are Being Made to Accommodate Contingent

The ball players who are going to represent this city in the battle for Canadian League honors will not be strangers in a strange land on the occasion of the opening in Erie next Thursday. At least twenty-five local enthusiasts will be on hand to cheer Curly Blount's men when the umpire rolls out the latest edition in the pill market. Some of the most prominent men in the city have decided to send the local ball tossers off to a good start by taking in the trip and what Peterborough lacks in numbers she will make up in riotous outbursts of the sporting variety on the occasion of the opening of the Canadian League's fourth season. At least twenty-five fans will take part in the jubilations.

Arrangements have been completed with the C.P.R. for a special train from this city to Toronto. The train will leave Toronto in the evening and those who take in the trip will arrive in Erie about the time the milkman makes his appearance and the little bird says "che ap, che ap." Of course bird language is not official and in the case of the local fans it will not be taken for granted or heeded. Several who have arrived home with the milkman feel cheap, cheap, however. But the Peterborough sports are not going to do it on the cheap and will unloosen the strings on their bank rolls till a mere draft would be sufficient to scatter their money in the direction where it can be used for enjoyment and backing up of the confidence which they have in the local nine. The party will leave ~~Erie~~ Thursday evening and arrive here Friday morning.

The Opener Here.

The club directors have not completed all details for the opening here on May 14 but the fans can rest assured it will be elaborate. Secretary Carr stated today that a street parade would announce the debut of the 1914 squad to their home city. Prominent officials will take part in the ceremonies but the club will not be able to announce definitely the exact program until after Monday night when a meeting of the directors will be held.

STERLING OR SCHETTLER FOR OPENING GAME

Flanagan is Let Out and Gorman Signs Contract.

Youngstown, May 2.—The weather here is none too favorable for Blount's proteges, yet they worked in two average practices yesterday. In the morning Pitcher Chaney was on the mound, and Ryberg behind the bat, while the rest of the players improved their batting and base running. After the batting an infield workout was held with Kelly covering the plate, Gorman on first, King second, Price, short, and Byrne third. There is absolutely nothing slow about that quartette, and the ball was kept buzzing around all the time. Kelly possesses a great arm and can throw to the bags like a veteran. It's the flip of a coin between he and Ryberg for second catcher.

In the afternoon the Yannigans succeeded in holding the regulars to a 4-4 score in nine innings. The Regulars were in the lead 4-1 at the opening of the ninth, but the Yans fell on Martin's offerings and secured three tallies. The hits were well divided, Byrne, King and Kelly clouting for extra bases. Belting, Martin and Ryberg worked for the Regulars, while Sterling, Creswell and Miller formed the battery for the Yannigans, and they did nearly all the work, as the rest of the team was made up of pitchers and recruits with the exception of Blount at centre and Schrage at second.

Gorman Signs.

Firstbaseman Flanagan was let out to-day as Jimmie Gorman signed a contract. The former batted well, but fell down on the fielding. The weather has been breaking bad and a few warm days would help a great deal in putting the finishing touches on the team work.

In all probability Bob Sterling or Louie Schettler will pitch the opener against Erie.

Erie, May 2.—A few more days for the grass to grow on Perry field, and the fans will parade behind the Moose band to the diamond for the opening game of the season with Peterboro. With a few more summery days, Manager Smith expects to present to the rooters one of the strongest teams that has represented Erie in years.

All the squad but "Dummy" Taylor has been tried out and with the recent addition of McNeil of the Buffalo Internationals to the receiving department, the Yankees have a team which expects to make a showing to be proud of in the Canadian circuit. With Schaeffer and Wiltze holding up the batting averages, Behan and Smith in shape to handle all the grass-cutters, and Taylor, Osborne, and Dorbeck to carry the brunt of the box work, the Yankees present a well-rounded combination Schaeffer in right, Dawson in center and Harris or Dunn in left field have practically been depicted upon.

Daniels, whose throwing arm has been fixed up by Bonesetter Reese, probably will take turns with McNeil behind the bat, and Brown, Fitzpatrick, Sutton and Stark will finish out the pitching staff. Gygli will hold down the first corner.

The preliminary for the big show on May 7, is the automobile parade, which will form at the Chamber of Commerce behind the band and proceed up State street to Eighteenth, west to Peach street, down to Twelfth and thence to the ball park. City and council have been asked to join in the procession, and invitation to any loyal fan being of course understood.

Curley Blount's Peterboro team has spent the past two weeks in practice at Youngstown, and from the advance notices, much may be expected of them. Pitcher Lew Schettler, one of the star performers in the Inter-State League last season and Catcher Miller are among the mainstays of his team. Catcher Ryburg and Jimmy Gorman, first bageman, obtained from Atlantic City are others. Marty Hogan, who managed the Youngstown Inter-State league team last year has been giving Blount valuable assistance in getting the squad in shape.

SPORTING COMMENT

Many of the American newspapers ar eattempting to discredit the Oxford relay team's victory at Philadelphia last Saturday by pointing out that Taber of the Oxford University team is a Yank. No doubt he is, but how about the Flanagans, Schusinkies, etc., to say nothing of the famous Kohelmainen, who are running under the colors of the Stars and Stripes.

Newspapers are devoting much space and display in an effort to educate the public along the proper lines of pronouncing the name of some Mexican general or other notable greaser. For the benefit of the sport public let it be known that Francis Ouimet, the famous golfer, pronounces himself Wemet. Probably some of the English golfers who Ouimet is now playing will remember The First That We Met.

Rube Deneau is reported to have signed Andy Kyle. It is to be hoped that Kyle has come back or if he did not slip after the finish of the hockey season, that he has not gone away. Brantford papers yelped when Dad Stewart asked for a job. They informed Dad that the Brants were not running an old man's home. It now looks as though the club is running a rest home.

Charlie Good says in the Toronto News that Knotty Lee's Beavers could go further and fare worse in regard to pitchers if Hickey and Sharpe, Toronto amateurs, were signed. He also mentions Hawkins. From Mr. Good's writing we take it that he has never had the pleasure of attending a Canadian League game. Hickey was slammed all over the lot by Canadian League teams in former years of training, while Hawkins could barely hold his own in bush league ball in Peterboro a few years ago. Of Sharpe not so much is known, but the rough edges will have to be taken off Mr. Sharpe before he is good enough, as the Canadian League is not a bush league. Probably Mr. Good bases his comparison on the strength of the Toronto club. If Hickey, Sharpe and Hawkins are fast enough, then the league moguls should get after the Toronto management smartly and make them strengthen up.

The Feds. are going to play exhibition games in Toronto. The Brooklyn and Buffalo teams may play there either against each other or against Toronto amateurs. The Feds.' action looks like a feeler as Toronto has been mentioned as a possible Fed. city.

Chicken was served in a home in the south end the other night. Although it is out of season it was served. The two kiddies were given the wish bone and had the usual pull. After the break the older boy said to his brother:

"What did yuh wish, Jack?"

"Dat de Petes would win de rag," was the reply.

"Ah Gee, I wish I'd won," said the older kid.

"Why?"

"Cause I wished Knotty Lee'd go back to cuttin' hair 'stead of trying to run a ball club," was the reply.

The Toronto club is putting up a great fight to secure Killilea's service. The former Hamilton infielder was awarded to Grand Rapids a month ago, after Toronto had signed him. Evidently McCaffery thinks a lot of Marty, and there are others who have watched his work who hold the same view.

The Toronto Canadian League club leaned on Sheridan, of Niagara University yesterday for 21 hits and 19 runs. Shaeffer and Hitchcock did mound duty for the Beavers, while Trout did the receiving.

Toronto beat Newark 11-4 yesterday, but the victory did not prevent Joe Kelley from getting into an argument with the umps., and he will probably be suspended for his little talk fest.

OLD BOYS WILL HELP THE YOUNG

Lacrosse Players of Old Guard Will Coach Candidates.

If enthusiasm counts lacrosse will boom again in this city. A meeting of the gentlemen interested in the rejuvenation of the game was held last evening, and all were enthusiastic over the prospects for a successful "come back." The meeting was presided over by Edward Dillon, president of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club. The president and his colleagues have been promised support from some of the local stars of a few years ago, and such players as Lew. LeBarr, George Mein, George Robertson, F. C. Weber, and Billy Coster have decided to grab a stick and get back into the game. The former players will work out with the other candidates and if the newcomers show ability and show that they deserve a place on the team in preference to the old boys then the older ones will drop out as they are merely turning out to stimulate interest and coach the candidates. Practices will be held in Central Park Tuesday and Thursday evenings, and Saturday afternoon of next week, and all former players and any desirous of breaking into the game are asked to attend.

WITH THE PETES

CHESTER KING, INFIELDER.

Born at Parkersburg, W. Va., in the year 1885. Height 5 ft. 10 in., weight 165 lbs. Played semi-professional ball around his home town before starting his professional career. With the Fairmount Club of the Pennsylvania and West Virginia League in the year 1910. Fielded .978, hit .317.

In 1911 started with Wheeling in the Central League, but took sick about the middle of the season and rested the balance of the year.

In 1912 with Canton, in the same league, hit .278.

In 1913 with Canton again in the Interstate League until the League disbanded on 15th of July.

Signed to play with Peterboro this spring.

"Chess" has played all the positions in the short field, and his past hitting and fielding records are good. He has shown good form this spring and should easily land a position in the infield. King is an experienced man, reliable, handles the ball very fast, and will be among the leading infielders in the league.

LAWN BOWLING

A meeting of the executive of the Peterboro Lawn Bowling Club is called for Monday evening in the Peterboro Music Store. The executive of the tennis club will be present, and arrangements made for the coming season.

The Millbrook Bowling Club have organized for the season with the following officers:

President—Mr. J. W. Dawson.
Vice-President—Mr. J. C. Kells.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. G. W. Gayles.
The membership fee is $2.00.

Among the features being introduced at the Oriental Hotel is a lawn bowling green at the side for the guests and their friends. Work has already commenced on this and will be ready in season for the bowling.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

BEING a plain, everyday citizen doesn't get your name in the paper, but neither does it keep you awake nights.

A pessimist gets a fit of the blues every time he finds his stock of trouble running low.

The world has its share of trouble, but it is always willing to boost yours.

It is better to tear out than to be thrust out.

Thinking is very hard work, but few people look worried from that cause.

GEE, BUT I GUESS I WILL COME ON BE A SPORT

Anybody can give you advice on how to lose money.

Sometimes you can successfully turn off the gas by a cutting remark.

He is a friend indeed who listens patiently to the history of your appendicitis.

Where there is a will there is apt to be a lot of lawyers.

The Pet Aversion.

Perhaps some one may hold him
A model child to be,
But I would like to fold him
Across my willing knee.
With pride his dad may view him,
His mother may adore,
But, oh, could I get to him—
The boy who lives next door!

You bet there's mischief brewing
When he is on the job,
And something will be doing
To cause old hearts to throb
If he can only gather
A bunch of tin can scrap
And rattle it he'd rather
Do that than take a nap.

For downright double measure
Of meanness unalloyed
This charming household treasure
The palm has long enjoyed.
The foremost foe to quiet
In all the world and Mars,
He'd rather lead a riot
Than sit and watch the stars.

They say the good in danger
Of dying young appear,
But he may be a stranger
To that sort of a fear.
And if the great were noted
For meanness, I opine,
This youngster will be voted
To something pretty fine.

Down to Business.

"When an American heiress marries a duke I presume she promises to love, honor and obey him?"

"That is the usual form."

"There seems to be something lacking."

"What else would you suggest?"

"That she also promise to pay his debts. That would take a great load off the minds of the creditors and would prevent future misunderstandings."

Either Would Do.

"What makes an ideal husband from your standpoint, Ethel?"

"Ideal?"

"Yes."

"Well, youth and plenty of vim."

"Yes."

"Or money and in the swim."

Dyspeptic and Absentminded.

"Are you fond of music?"

"Er—er—I beg your pardon?"

"I just asked if you are fond of music?"

"Fond of—oh, yes; very fond of it. But, don't you know, it never agrees with me."

Solid.

"That fellow will never be jilted."

"Why do you think so?"

"I know it—know who he is in love with?"

"Who is it?"

"Himself."

No Introduction.

The meeting was very informal.
It worried the dignified chap.
She stood in the car. Along came a jar
And landed her square in his lap.

Crowding the Atlantic.

"There is a limit to the size of warship that Great Britain can build."

"Why more so than for us?"

"It isn't likely we would lend it the Pacific ocean to float its navy in, is it?"

Good Proof.

"Does he really love her?"

"Well, he wants to marry her."

"He may just imagine he does."

"And he knows that she is attending cooking school."

A Cinch.

And if to settle his disputes
By law a fellow chooses
The lawyer is the one who wins,
No matter which side loses.

TO SUSPEND HOSTILITIES

GEN. CARRANZA ENTERS INTO ARMISTICE, REPORT SAYS.

WASHINGTON, May 2. — Assurances of peace, with a steady abatement of "war talk" was the dominant feature in the Mexican developments here yesterday. Attention was still centred on the work of the South American mediators, who reported steady progress and the avoidance of any deadlock between the parties.

A despatch last night from Mexico City says: "It is reported here that a tripartite agreement to an armistice was signed here yesterday morning by representatives of the United States, the Federals and the rebels. Joseph Manuel de Oliveira, the Brazilian Minister, confirmed the report, except as to the actual signing of the agreement.

While the gravity and the hopefulness of the situation varied from hour to hour, the envoys of Argentina, Brazil and Chile kept steadily at their work, holding two lengthy sessions at the Argentine Legation.

It was known they were expecting another definite development yesterday, which might lead to a statement later, but its purport was not disclosed. There was reason to believe, however, that it related to the attitude of Carranza, who, having accepted the mediators' good offices, was now desirous of suspending hostilities pending the good offices.

Summing up what the mediators had done up to this time, a well-posted authority said it represented more actually accomplished in a given time than had ever occurred in the history of intermediation.

If your wash boiler springs a leak on wash day, stop the hole temporarily with a piece of bread rolled into a ball and pressed over the leak.

CURTIN—O'NEILL

Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church, Hastings, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, Wednesday, April 22nd, when Miss Margaret C., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. O'Neil, Percy, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Daniel Curtin, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Curtin, Mt. Irwin. Rev. Father Bretherton performed the ceremony.

The bride was becomingly attired in a dress of white satin with black hat and carried white roses. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Nellie, of Toronto, who wore pink silk with black hat and carried pink roses. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Will Curtin, of Mt. Irwin.

The groom's gift to the bride was an amethyst rosary, to the bridesmaid a gold bar pin set with moss stones and to the best man a set of gold cuff links.

The many and costly gifts received by the young copie showed the high esteem in which they were held.

After a very enjoyable evening the young couple left on a short trip to points west, after which they will reside in Peterboro, the bride travelling in a tailor-made suit of blue serge.—Hastings Star.

The young people of Mark Street Methodist Church, entertained the inmates of the Protestant Home last night, about thirty young people being present. The following program was carried out: Instrumental duet, Misses Green and Calder; solo, Mrs. A. McIntyre; instrumental violin solo, Japanese violin, Mr. Eldred; recitation, Miss D. Doupe; instrumental solo, Miss Jean Anderson; vocal solo, Mrs. E. Wand; recitation, Mrs. J. R. Weir; instrumental, Misses Green and Calder; solo, Mr. Eldred.

---

Merriment and a spirit of good comradeship, and not a trace of formality, prevailed at St. John's schoolroom last evening when the Church Woman's Association entertained the congregation, choir and Bible classes. A floral guessing contest took place and prizes were given for the greatest number of correct answers. Slips were given to a number and each asked to contribute what was written on the slip for the general amusement of the others. One lady was asked to draw a flower with crayon, another to remove her own hat, throw it high and catch it. Both feats were skilfully and gracefully accomplished. Musical chairs caused great amusement. Afterwards dainty refreshments were served. The Rector in a few pleasant words thanked all those who so enthusiastically helped make the evening a success.

The National Anthem was heartily sung, and at 10.30 the meeting closed.

C COMPANY DANCE.

The last of the successful series of socials held by "C" Company of the 57th Regiment took place last night in the Armouries. Before the refreshments a delightful program, consisting of the following numbers was rendered:—

Pte. M. Hartshorn, song; Pte. R. Custance, song and dance; Pte. Wellmott, song; Mr. F. Hartshorn, song; Mr. H. Carter, song; Hartshorn Quartette.

Mr. F. W. Wainwright acted as chairman and floor manager. The music for the dancing was rendered by Pte. Howarth, pianist; Pte. Hartshorn, violinist.

FISHING STORIES.

Now for the fish stories. Many of the local exponents of the rod who have been aching for a chance to get busy with the trout, have had their wishes come true at last, the trout season having opened. Readers are asked to bear up patiently against narratives, such as will be pounded into their ears.

NEW BAND GETS GRANT OF $50

Must Earn the Money by Giving Concerts.

The Maple Leaf band will render thirteen open air concerts during the coming summer in return for a grant of $50 voted yesterday by the Finance Committee. The 57th Regimental Band and the Salvationists have been in Victoria Park during former seasons, so the Maple Leaf band may play in some other section of the city. There is some talk of their concerts being rendered at the King Edward Park, which should be a great help to the residents in the southern section of the city.

Claude H. Rogers Not Erecting Pulp Wood Factory Just Yet.

That is was the intention of Mr. Claude H. Rogers, of the Peterborough Canoe Company, to construct a pulp wood factory on the water front site purchased by him in East City has been a popular rumor around the city during the past day or so.

Seen to-day, Mr. Rogers denied this. He further stated he was going to build a wharf. The matter of constructing a factory was not definitely arranged.

OBITUARY

JOHN REYCRAFT.

Ridgetown, May 2.—The funeral took place at Highgate this afternoon of Mr. John Reycraft, a former resident of Ridgetown. He served as Councillor and Reeve of Oxford township for several terms. About fifteen years ago he retired from the farm and settled in Ridgetown, and again became prominent in municipal matters, serving as Councillor and Reeve, also representing Ridgetown as Commissioner under the old country councils act.

Last fall, owing to the failing health of his wife, Mr. Reycraft left here, and they went to Toronto to reside with their daughter, Mrs. W. H. McMackon. Besides his wife, who was Miss E. McLaren of Oxford, he is survived by a family of two sons, L. J. Reycraft, C.P.R. solicitor, of Winnipeg, and Rev. J. F. Reycraft, Methodist minister of Springfield, and six daughters, Mrs. C. N. Scott of Highgate, Mrs. W. H. McMackon, and Mrs. A. D. White, of Toronto, Mrs. Dr. Neale, Peterboro', Mrs. J. E. Forster, Winnipeg, and Mrs. E. H. Mitton of Edmonton.

PUBLIC WELFARE

Women's Council Have Innovation Under Consideration

Dr. Jessie Birnie, Mrs. J. C. Davidson and Mrs. W. H. Hill, forming a delegation from the Local Council of Women, waited upon the Finance Committee yesterday afternoon, and outlined a Public Welfare Exhibition and Baby Contest to be held in September or October. To aid in this they asked for a grant of $100, but the money men could only see their way clear to supply half that amount.

The Public Welfare Exhibition will include a model playground, model market, model water purification system and and an illustrated lecture and exhibits on health matters.

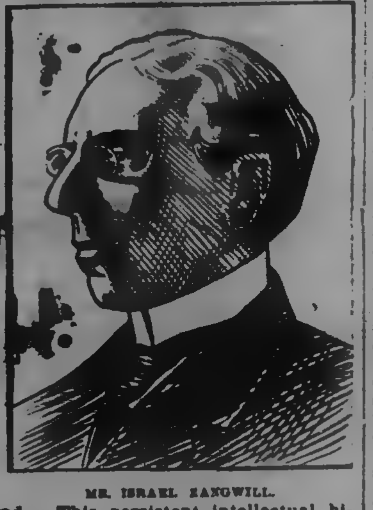
ISRAEL ZANGWILL DREAMS OF ONE GREAT WORLD PEOPLE

Jewish Novelist and Playwright Has Achieved More Respect and Admiration in Britain Than Any Jew Since Disraeli.

It is characteristic of the eternal paradox of the human mind that one of the most distinguished and race-conscious members of the most indestructible of races should be the advocate and panegyrist of race-fusion. Israel Zangwill is a Jew; unmistakable in name, appearance, and genius. He is conscious of the fact, and proud of it. Further, he has become the inspired interpreter of his race to the British peoples. We have read his studies of Jewish life, Children of the Ghetto, the King of Schnorrers, Dreamers of the Ghetto, and the rest; and appreciated their humor and imaginative insight; with the result that our respect and admiration for him is greater than that accorded to any other English-speaking Jew since Benjamin Disraeli. Yet it is not so strange that a Jew should be an internationalist, for the Jews are a race and not a nation, and their most persistent characteristic is the faculty of fusion with all nations without loss of individuality. This assimilative power has conquered time and oppression, and if, as Zangwell claims in his impassioned play, the Melting Pot, the United States of America is the crucible in which the "Fires of God" are welding a cosmopolitan mob into a super-nation, we may well look upon the Jew as the leavening medium of his dream.

Zangwill is a purposeful humorist, a Hebrew G.B.S., spicing the serious intent of his novels and plays with merriment, and loading his sentences with detonators of wit which, exploding as the eye strikes them, startle the reader into ideas whose existence he would not otherwise have imagined. This persistent intellectual hilarity is sometimes disconcerting. In his essays you are dazzled and startled overmuch until you pray that he might find it in his heart to be a little less clever.



MR. ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

Yet the revelation of Hebrew character illuminated by wit and humor is not Zangwill's greatest achievement. His great achievement is the re-statement of the eternal tragedy of Israel in the light of modern experience. He realizes the irony of that age-long drama, and is conscious of the dream-fed valor of a race which has given to the world treasures of the spirit and the imagination, and forged the steel of its own permanence in bondage, migration, and oppression. Israel Zangwill has become the literary ambassador of his race to the English-speaking world.

With all his intense Judaism Zangwill is non-sectarian. His view is catholic, and his keen sense of humor allows him to see the weaknesses as well as the virues of his own people without losing faith. And artist though he is, he has not shrunk from giving time and energy to the practical reform movements of his race and his adopted nation. Zangwill was one of the earliest supporters of the Zionist movement, which had for its object the Jewish settlement of Palestine. But more recently he has come to believe that the Jew may create his Palestine anywhere, and this belief led to the formation of the Jewish Territorial Organization, with Zangwill as president. The organization gives valuable aid to Jewish emigrants from Russia and elsewhere, and it aims also at securing territorial concessions for Jewish colonies from various Governments. Zangwill has also found time to become a whole-hearted and practical supporter of the movement toward's women's suffrage, and he is an ardent advocate of peace among the nations.

Throughout all this work, artistic, administrative, and propagandist, Israel Zangwill keeps steadily before his mind the vision of a new race compact of all races, and a new religion caught from the essential creativeness of all religions. "What is the glory of Rome and Jerusalem where all nations and races come to worship and look back, compared with the glory of America, where all races and nations come to labor and look forward!" These are the words of David Quixano, the central figure of the Melting Pot, and they are Zangwill's words also, spoken with prophetic seriousness and hope. His Judaism, like the more elusive Judaism of Disraeli, seeks to save the world whilst saving its own race. This idea which ends in the dream of a new race, and in the vision of a new religion, both of which shall be universal in scope, must needs leap imaginatively over many hurdles and other stumbling-blocks of custom and habit.

RUBBISH HEAP FINDS

Romance of "Old Masters" Found Among the Refuse.

The recent discovery of a genuine George Morland—a small canvas depicting a sailor taking farewell of his sweetheart—among the stage properties of the Drury Lane Theatre, recalls many romances of art treasures which have been bought for a song and sold for a fortune, and of almost priceless canvases found in the most unexpected places.

About six years ago a picture dealer in the Rue St. Lazare purchased an old canvas from a carpenter for the sum of 20 francs. He had not the slightest notion of the value of the picture, but bought it simply because it happened to fit a frame he possessed. The picture was carelessly put aside and almost forgotten, until an artist one day chanced to see it and after a close inspection declared it to be an art treasure, a variant of one of Raphael's works, the Vatican "Adam and Eve." A few days later the lucky dealer found a very ready purchaser of his canvas for the sum of 40,000 francs, or $8,000.

At a sale in Carnarvonshire some years ago a very ancient and exceedingly dirty picture was knocked down to the highest bidder for a five-pound note. The buyer, being an inquisitive sort of person, decided to have expert advice regarding the value of the picture. So he sent it to Christie, the celebrated dealer, when it was recognized as a genuine Rubens, of the value of at least $35,000.

A romantic story is related of a Vandyck representing Abraham with uplifted sword in the act of striking his son Isaac. For many a long year it had hung neglected in an old Cheshire mansion, until one of the sons of the house was only too glad to exchange it for two diamond bracelets and a breastpin. It had its ups and downs, changing hands several times for a few pounds. Eventually it fell into the hands of a man named Bolton in Manchester. With true Lancashire enterprise and just to give weight to the axiom that what his county thinks to-day England thinks to-morrow, he believed that it was a genuine masterpiece. In which assumption he was right, for examination proved it to be a real Vandyck, worth $25,000.

An amateur of art was one day turning over some sketches in the shop of a second-hand dealer on the boulevards, in Paris, when he came across a study in red chalk which took his fancy, and for which the dealer gladly accepted 50 centimes—about 10 cents. On submitting the sketch to an expert it was at once identified as Raphael's original design for his great picture, "La Disputa del Sacramento," and worth at a very modest estimate, $4,000.

"The Massacre of the Innocents," Raphael's famous picture, which had been lost for centuries, was found in the cottage of an old woman at Como in Italy. The woman was absolutely ignorant of the value of this masterpiece, and would have been glad to take anything that might have been offered. Eventually, acting upon the advice of experts, she agreed to take $40,000 for it.

Would Follow His Example.

After the battle of Prestonpans a witty Scottish farmer amused himself by writing a ballad upon it, which so stung one of the English officers, who had behaved very basely on the occasion, that he sent the poet a challenge to meet him at H. for mortal combat.

The second found the farmer busy with his hayfork and at once delivered the challenge of the redoubtable hero. The good-natured farmer, turning toward him with the agricultural implement, coolly said:

"Gang awa' back to Mester Smith and tell him I hae nae time to come to H. to gie him satisfaction, but that if he likes to come here I'll tak' a look at him, and if I think I can fecht (fight) him I'll fecht him, and if I think I canna fecht him I'll just do as he did—I'll run away."

Substitute Aerated Water.

The enormous number of Brahmins and Mohammedans in India, whose religions strictly prohibit the drinking of alcoholic beverages are finding in aerated water a substitute that violates no religious principles. Among natives of the strictest caste prejudices, who are ordinarily careful not to eat or drink anything that has been prepared by persons of other castes, no objection seems to be raised to aerated waters, which being made by machinery are considered free from contamination.

NEW LINERS ON THE ATLANTIC

This season will see the Atlantic service of the Canadian Pacific augmented by the addition of two new steamers. These two vessels will be of the one class cabin type, which are becoming so popular. Barclay Curle & Company, of Glasgow, secured the contract for the building of the ships some months ago, and the construction is well under way. They are being specially constructed for the Atlantic service and will contain every possible convenience for the comfort of passengers. They will be of the "one class" type, with passenger accommodation for 520 second, and 1,200 third class. These new vessels have been named the "Misanbi" and the "Metagama." Their length will be of 520 feet, greatest breadth 64 feet, while the breadth of the passenger deck will be 41 feet. Each vessel will have a dead weight capacity of 7,950 tons, with an approximate cargo capacity for 6,000 tons. The famous cruiser stern, which is the feature of the new Empress recently placed on the Pacific coast, is being introduced and the new ships will also have six complete steel decks. In order to ensure safety the hulls are to be subdivided by water-tight doors and bulkheads, so as to be capable of floating when three compartments are open. These water-tight bulkheads and doors will be automatically controlled from the bridge. The speed of each vessel will be 15 knots, with a draught of 27.5. As for the interior of the vessels, each second-class state room will be fitted with a wardrobe and chest of drawers, folding lavatory with mirror, and other conveniences. The public rooms will be dining saloon, smoking room, lounge and drawing room. The refrigerating plant will be capable of making 300 lbs. of ice per eight hours. The vessels will be heated and ventilated on the thermo-tank system, changing the air eight times each hour. There will also be a printing plant on board each vessel.

LITTLE MEN.

It Is They Who Have Achieved Fame In History.

Most men who have made history or achieved fame in some manner were small. The great Napoleon, the man who almost overturned the world, was only five feet, one and three-quarters inches tall. His instance is typical; the number of small men with great minds and great tasks to their credit is legion, scattered through the history of man from early Greece.

There are six rulers of six countries in the world who prove by their heights that the little man, or in one case the little woman, has the powerful hand. They are King George V. of England; Nicholas II., Czar of Russia; Yuan Shi Kai, President of China; Victor Immanuel III., King of Italy; Wilhelmina, Queen of the Netherlands, and Alfonso XIII., King of Spain.

All of these rulers are below the medium height, but small as they are physically they are tremendous in their powers. The puny autocrat of all the Russians holds sway over more than 160,000,000 of people, spread over a territory exceeding 8,000,000 square miles. But vast as are his dominions, they are small when compared with those of his cousin, King George, his physical counterpart, whose people number nearly 400,000,000 and whose territory covers more than 11,000,000 square miles, one-fifth of the entire land surface of the globe.

But even King George may not boast of the number of his subjects when the short and "stubby" Yuan, President of China, is about, for the people of China number nearly 440,000,000, more than one-fourth of the world's population, compressed, though they are, in an area of little more than 4,000,000 square miles.

All of the great men of ancient Rome and Greece were of small or moderate stature. Alexander, Agelisaus, Caesar, Solon, Socrates, are but a few of them. Take a glance down Plutarch's Lives and see how often he speaks of his heroes as being of small frame and how rarely he alludes to size in anyone worthy of a high place in history.

Canute, the Dane, who wanted only a few more years of life among the civilizing influences of Christianity to have rendered him the first man and monarch of Europe, was notoriously of small size and slender frame.

Among the great men of ancient times who were small in person there was one who stood out among the very first in point of greatness and who was not only a man of small stature, but who also assumed a name indicating his personal appearance. This man was Saul, of Tarsus, the scholar, preacher and organiser of the church. He was low in stature; his name, Paulus, is taken from the Latin and means little or small.

One great asset of a small man and often the deceiving trait to others as far as his real ability is concerned is his modesty. It is somewhat of a physical impossibility for a small man to think much of himself when larger persons physically are in the same consideration. Hence he often ultimately gets the better of his taller adversary because of his apparent littleness and modesty.

Besides those already mentioned, here are some men famous in the world's history who were below the average in height: Admiral Nelson, Alexander the Great, Balzac, Beethoven, De Quincey, Sir Francis Drake, Goldsmith, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Macaulay, Mendelssohn, Milton, Mozart, Wagner, Dryden, Augustus Caesar, Gibbon, Locke, Keats and even Aristotle. Some of the men just below the average of five feet, six, seven or eight inches were Gladstone, Wellington, Chopin, Dante, Maupassant, Michael Angelo, Poe, Lord Bacon, Browning and Newton.

Speed of Birds.

According to C. A. Mitchell, the English ornithologist, the speed of birds is often greatly overrated. The swift, for instance, has been credited with a speed of 150 miles an hour, and the popular imagination compares the flight of a sparrow hawk with that of a cannon ball! Independent of aid from the wind, Mr. Mitchell thinks forty miles an hour is about the full speed of a good pigeon flying a long distance. The homing pigeon can be relied on under fairly easy conditions to make sixty miles an hour, or considerably more. On a short course a sparrow hawk can outfly a homer, but the sparrow hawk frequently fails to catch smaller birds that form its prey.—London Express.

Fresh Water From the Ocean.

Manama, the principal port of the Bahrein islands, the centre of the pearl fisheries, gets its fresh water from the ocean from springs at the bottom of the sea. These springs well up strongly at a considerable depth, and the entire water supply of the town is obtained from them. The freshwater is procured in two ways—either in a goatskin water bag, which a diver takes down with him and carefully closes before bringing it to the surface, or by letting down long hollow pipes of bamboo weighted at the lower end, through which the water rises uncontaminated to the surface.—London Telegraph.

Cromwell Not Particular.

Sir Philip Warwick left this picture of Oliver Cromwell: "The first time that ever I took notice of him was in the very beginning of the Parliament held in November, 1640, when I vainly thought myself a courtly young gentleman, for we courtiers valued ourselves much upon our good clothes. I came one morning into the house well clad, and perceived a gentleman speaking whom I knew not, very ordinarily apparelled, for it was a plain cloth suit, which seemed to have been made by an ill-country tailor. His linen was plain, and not very clean, and I remember a speck or two of blood upon his little band, which was not much larger than his collar. His hat was without a hat-band."

The Plumage Slaughter.

Some rather startling figures were given by Mr. Hobhouse in submitting the Plumage Bill in the British Commons. In the past year plumage sold in London represented 77,000 egrets and 162,000 kingfishers, to say nothing of other birds. Mr. Hobhouse said that already many species had disappeared. It is proposed to prohibit the importation into the United Kingdom of the plumage of any wild bird, though live birds for food or plumage for scientific purposes are excluded. "A silly and debasing fashion," Mr. Hobhouse called it.

ON WAR

Si Hubbard says that war 'twixt United States and Mexico is goin' to be a good thing fer us farmers 'cause it's going to boost the prices o' hay and oats and other farm products skyward. It's a leetle way war has, that, boostin' things sky high and it's not goin' to get a chance to do it to your uncle Jeb if he kin help it.

Si is an optimistic cuss and kin even see the bright side o' war, but I can't. War's hell all right enough and you can't make anythin' else outin it. Fer me, peace is the thing I most want to see restin' over the world right at this present day. Give me peace and lower prices fer my crops and let the war clouds drift upwards. What you say?

The Oldest Encyclopedia.

The most ancient encyclopedia extant is Pliny's "Natural History," in thirty-seven books and 2,493 chapters, treating of cosmography, astronomy, meteorology, geography, geology, botany, medicine, the arts and pretty nearly every other department of human thought known at the time. Pliny, who died 79 A.D., collected his work in his leisure intervals while he was engaged in public affairs. The work was a very high authority in the middle ages.

Herd at Wainwright.

The Dominion Buffalo Park at Wainwright, Alta., now contains 1,447 buffalo, 45 elk, 60 mule deer and 4 antelopes. There were 243 buffalo calves born in the park during 1913. There are 31 buffalo and 23 moose in the Rocky Mountain Park. In the Elk Island Park there are 81 buffalo and other native animals. The parks branch report that the buffalo are thriving admirably.

Troilite.

Troilite, which is a very common constituent of meteorites, is generally considered to be the simple sulphide of iron, though the exact chemical composition is in doubt. This is usually in the form of nodules, plates or rods, and, decomposing readily during flight, leaves the remaining mass with unique markings

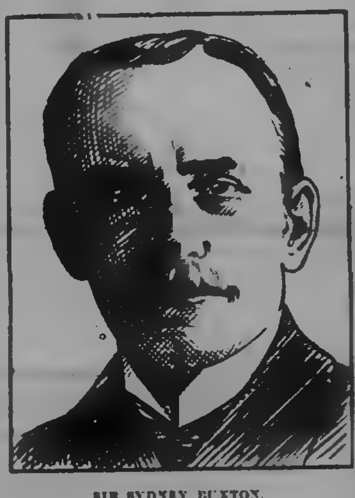
SIR SIDNEY BUXTON IS A HIGHLY TRAINED STATESMAN

He Learned His Politics Under the Elder Gladstone and Has Observed Long Office Hours and Short Holidays Throughout His Official Career.

Lord Gladstone is succeeded in South Africa by one of the "G.O.M.'s" "young men." The out-going Governor-General and Sir Sydney Buxton both learned their politics under Gladstone's eagle-like scrutiny; they both filled a place in his searching bird's-eye view of the rising generation, and were both very conscious of doing so. But if they passed through the same course of discipline, and end with the same appointment, it does not follow that they have arrived at the same results in any of the habits of mind or methods of work that constitute the real man. South Africa, if it is at all observant, will note points of contrast rather than points of similarity between the two chiefs sent out by Mr. Asquith.

Sir Sydney Buxton is one year older than Lord Gladstone; and though he was not, like the other, born in Downing street, nor nurtured among blue books, his office hours have generally been longer and his holidays shorter than those of his predecessor. No man has been so exasperatingly strict about his own time-table; he has exceeded on his own account, all the mental drilling that fell to the share of the "Grand Old Man's" offspring. It is told of the viscount's childish days that when he had toothache and was crying, all that Mr. Gladstone said to him, very genially, was, "Think no more about it, and you may go and have it out to-morrow" — advice that out-Spartaed Sparta.

Sir Sydney Buxton's father showed more practical sympathy for the pains of his fellows, whether they were sons or slaves. It was he who raised his voice for clemency after the mutiny and the Jamaica riots, thus carrying on tradition, established by Sir Sydney's grandfather, Sir T. F. Buxton, who followed Wilberforce as leader of the Anti-Slavery party, and forced the Government into action eighty years ago. The sequel has conformed to the usual rule of divergence. The youth who was told not to think about his toothaches and was chaffed under the name of "Tuppence" at Eton, has grown to be a man of a far more lenient and indulgent character than the youth who was reared in an atmosphere of kindliest sentiment.



SIR SYDNEY BUXTON.

Sympathy and consideration have helped Sir Sydney Buxton to play a successful part on conciliation committees and in the settlement of the many disputes that have come into his official purview; it is owing to these same qualities that his book on "Fair Wages" is a classic. But he is a man who follows a rigorous routine, and expects his subordinates to do likewise. He has never held a position in that vast establishment, the Dilatory Office, which fills the imagination of a public suspicious of all Government departments—a dilatory office is also a castle of indolence in the air somewhere above Westminster.

Although Sir Sydney is fond of writing himself down as "author" when he is asked for his profession, and is justified in doing so by a goodly shelf-full of books, it is as a Parliamentary official of more than twenty-five years' experience that he goes to South Africa. His "Political Questions" and "Political Manual"—works found highly useful to debating societies — have passed through eleven editions and five editions respectively; and his essays on fishing-tackle are considered by some people to exceed in usefulness his treatise on the Fiscal Question. Angling and an occasional day with the gun have been his chief recreations; but, while they have been followed with ardor and a natural talent, they have not sufficed to clear his brain of the working habit.

By lineage and the training of a lifetime, Sir Sydney is typical of the House and his country. With nothing of Celtic or Latin picturesqueness in his composition he leaves it to Mr. Masterman (according to the rather wicked report) to be moved to tears at one of Mr. Lloyd George's speeches; and he is himself the last man in the world to make his hearers weep. All swash-buckling arts he leaves to the new and younger school of politicians; he is schooled in the grey methods of a grey Division. What does South Africa, a place of color and tumult, hold in store? He who called it "the grave of English reputations" is probably long since dead, with a tombstone of his own, and his words may lose their living significance at the approach of a man of constructive ability.

SCIENTIFIC FIGHTING

New War Devices Are Revolutionizing the Military Science.

Most of us are inclined to flatter ourselves that we should be able to beat a foreign Power at sea as easily as we did in days gone by, says London "Ideas." But we must not forget that the old days are dead—dead as Queen Anne, and that the next naval war will not be a mere struggle between armored ships as in Trafalgar Bay—it will be a battle of science.

Someone said a year or so ago that the submarine was the one and only weapon for future naval warfare. The underwater vessel brought into being by scientific brains, has proved rather a bad master instead of a good servant.

It has just been proved that the submarine is at the mercy of the heavier-than-air machine. The pilot of the flying machine can detect the submarine as she creeps below the surface of the sea, and it would be the easiest thing in the world to render that vessel hors de combat once she is sighted. The majority of the battleships of all the big Powers now carry aeroplanes and hydroplanes for scouting and dispatch carrying, and it seems therefore that the day of the submarine is over.

What is the heavier-than-air machine going to do? Will it blow up our war system or will it destroy civilization? The possible consequences of this mode of warfare has been set forth most vividly by H. G. Wells in his novel, "The War in the Air." If the armored aeroplane can show her worth, of what use will be warships and arsenals? What will become of them? Will they be put on the scrap-heap? What will be wanted will be guns which will bring down the ships of the sky—drop them to earth like stones. Several such weapons have already been turned out for the purpose, one, manufactured by the German firm of Krupp, being said to have the power of planting a bullet into an aeroplane traveling at any speed or height.

We have an aeroplane which is capable of dropping a bomb on a battleship or a military camp and dealing out death wholesale, and a gun is ready that is guaranteed to bring the aeroplane to earth like a shot bird. It seems that the various Powers are striving to acquire the most scientific death-dealing appliances the brains of man can conceive, and if it is true that it is only by making engines of war more and more terrible that the preservation of peace is assured, then we might say at once that struggles on land and sea between big Powers must very shortly be shelved in the limbo of things forgotten.

Famine Is Feared.

A famine has broken out owing to the shortage of rain in the United Provinces of India, which, it is feared, will assume serious proportions before the monsoon breaks in June. At a public meeting called at Allahabad to consider the situation, Sir James Meston, the Lieutenant-Governor, stated that the rainfall had been worse than in 1907, the year of the last great Indian famine, that rivers were very low, and that tanks and wells in many of the villages were already dry. The people would lose at least one-half and possibly two-thirds or even more of the spring harvest, while the loss among cattle has been terribly severe. A succession of good years had placed the population in a better position to withstand the results of the drought than in 1907, but money was urgently required to supplement Government relief, which is of necessity limited to providing the bare necessities of life. At the conclusion of the meeting a famine relief fund was opened, with the Lieutenant-Governor as president.

Pumpkin Seeds for Memory.

A case worthy the notice of the Heraldic Office occurred in New Zealand recently. Maoris, as all who know New Zealand well will know, have a remarkable faculty for tracing back their genealogy, and have actually been known to "remember" their ancestors for 28 and 30 generations. To make a mistake in their "whakapapa" (genealogical tree) is to lay themselves open to derision. The story is told of a particular native who appeared before a Native Land Court lately, who had carried out the "tohunga's" injunctions to adopt a diet of pumpkin seeds in order to obtain the requisite knowledge of his genealogy.

THE BOWSER COOK QUITS

And Mr. Bowser Says He'll Hire the Next One

"AND now what's happened?" demanded Mr. Bowser as he came home and found Mrs. Bowser busily arranging the table for dinner.

"Nothing, except that the cook got cranky and left me at noon," she replied.

"You—you mean you got down on her and bounced her out without a moment's warning!" he continued.

"I mean nothing of the kind. She found fault with the range, the kitchen, the washing and everything else and finally said she'd go."

Mr. Bowser sulked and growled while eating the dinner, though it was a better one than usual, and it was not until Mrs. Bowser had cleared the table and was ready to sit down for the evening that he touched upon the subject again by saying:

"I want to talk to you a little, and I hope you will be able to keep your temper while I do so. You have had fifty different cooks in the last year, and the fact that none of them has remained with you over ten days shows that there is something radically wrong somewhere."

"I have had only five cooks in the last year," corrected Mrs. Bowser. "There's the book with their names written down."

Sticks to His Statement.

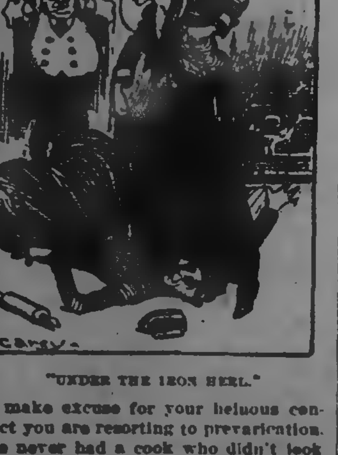
"I said fifty, and I know I'm right," said Mr. Bowser with emphasis—"fifty different cooks, and your treatment of them was so outrageous that none of them could put up with it!"

"Only five, and one fell sick, one had to go home on account of death in the family, and two of the others refused to stay on your account."

"Refused to stay on my account? Woman, explain yourself."

"They said you were too fussy and cranky."

"Never!" shouted Mr. Bowser. "No girl ever said those words. In order to make excuse for your heinous conduct you are resorting to prevarication. We never had a cook who didn't look upon me as a sort of father to her. It has been your fault that they have left. You have met them with an icy glare; you have ground them under the iron heel; you have used them as if they had no souls or feelings. I've watched you, and I've often wondered why some of the poor creatures didn't turn on you with the carving knife!"



"UNDER THE IRON HEEL."

"That's all nonsense!" quietly replied Mrs. Bowser.

"Nonsense is it? Is it nonsense to put your heel on the neck of a girl obliged to work for her living? Is it nonsense for you to nag and bulldoze and threaten and browbeat until a girl doing her best is driven to take her bundle and leave?"

"Perhaps you can do better."

"I know I can."

"Then why don't you experiment?"

Resolves to Do the Hiring Himself.

"I will! Yes, woman, I will show you that by proper treatment and due respect for her feelings a girl can be kept in this house for years instead of days. Why, you don't understand human nature, to begin with. If I were a working girl and you talked to me as I've heard you talk to some of the applicants I'd drown myself before I'd come to you!"

"There's an advertisement for the morning paper," said Mrs. Bowser, "and if you'll stay home for a couple of hours and select a cook I shall be greatly obliged to you."

"I'll do it, and if I don't find one who'll want to stay with us as long as she lives you can set it down that your conduct has given our home a hard name. I know that other families keep girls for years and years, and I'm sure we could if you used them like human beings."

Mr. Bowser had a good deal more to say before bedtime, but Mrs. Bowser let him go on and waited for her revenge. Breakfast had scarcely been dispatched next morning before a girl arrived in answer to the ad. It was left to Mr. Bowser to welcome her, and he met her with a smile and began:

"I am glad to see you. The promptness with which you have answered the ad. speaks well for you. What wages do you want per month?"

"How does it come that you are hiring the help?" asked the girl.

"Because I think I understand them better than my wife does."

"Oh, I see! Then you are to boss the kitchen?"

"In a general way, yes."

"Then I don't want the place! I wouldn't work where I had to take orders from a hen hussy of a man!"

She was gone before Mr. Bowser could get out another word, but while he was wondering what ailed her a second applicant arrived.

Even Soft Words Are Unavailing.

"Is the missus sick and abed?" she queried as she got inside the door.

"Not at all," replied Mr. Bowser. "My wife has had so much trouble with servants that I thought I would do the engaging this time."

"But what do you know about the kitchen and cooking?"

"A good deal, my dear girl, a good deal. You see"—

"I see that it's a house where there would be trouble in no time, and I won't take the place!" said the girl as she backed out.

Mr. Bowser braced up and tried to look bland as No. 3 rang the bell. The girl looked at him with doubt and suspicion and waited to hear what he had to say.

"You see," he began, "my wife and I differ somewhat on this hired help problem. It never seems to occur to her that the girl in the kitchen has a soul."

"But what's a cook's soul to do with the work?" asked the applicant.

"You—you don't exactly understand me. You have a soul, of course. You also have feelings. It must be hard enough for you to have to toil from day to day for $16 per month, but when on top of that the woman of the house is constantly grinding you into the dust your outraged feelings must—must"—

"I don't want the place!" said the girl as she started for the door.

"But, my dear girl"—

"I have never worked in an insane asylum, and I never shall!" she added as she went out.

Mr. Bowser's Courage Ebbs.

There was something wrong with Mr. Bowser's system. He realized it, but he was determined to see it through. No. 4 appeared almost as soon as No. 3 had departed, and after a bland welcome he said:

"Have you ever worked in a family where the woman treated you as if you had no soul?"

"No, sir," she replied promptly.

"If you could find a place where the family would look upon you as a human being, where your feelings would be respected, where there would be no yawning gulf between employer and employee—if you"—

"Who runs the kitchen here?" interrupted the girl as she rose up.

"Well, my wife has been running it, you know, but she has had so much trouble with her girls that I have decided to take hold."

"Then I wouldn't care for the place! Where a man has to turn boss of his own kitchen he'd better do the cooking as well!"

The advertisement brought nine girls in all. In each instance Mr. Bowser set out to tell them that it was a place in which it would be recognized that they had souls and feelings, but in each instance also he was choked off, and the applicants left. Two of the girls threw out hints that he had wheels in his head, a third cook took him for a lecturer, and a fourth said she was sorry for his wife.

When the ninth and last had disappeared Mr. Bowser put on his hat and started for his office without a word to Mrs. Bowser. When he came home to dinner and found a girl in the kitchen he had no remark to make. Mrs. Bowser tried to lead him around to it, but he only glared at her across the table and helped himself to more chicken.

Inseparable.

"Mother," said little Mabel, "do missionaries go to heaven?"

"Why, of course, dear," her mother replied.

"Do cannibals?"

"No, I am afraid they don't."

"But, mother," the little girl insisted, "if a cannibal eats a missionary he'll have to go, won't he?"—New York Post.

What He Noticed.

An inspector, examining a class in grammar, wrote a sentence on the blackboard and asked if any one noticed anything peculiar in it. After a short silence a small boy exclaimed:

"Yes, sir; the bad writing." — St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

In the Spring Most People Need a Tonic Medicine.

One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order is the pimples, unsightly eruptions and eczema that come frequently with the change from winter to spring. These prove that the long indoorlife on winter has had its effect upon the blood, and that a tonic medicine is needed to put it right. Indeed there are few people who do not need a tonic at this season. Bad blood does not merely show itself in disfiguring eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite and a desire to avoid exertion. You cannot cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines—you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their tonic, life-giving, nerve-restoring powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood which drives out impurities, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired ailing men, women and children. If you are out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive dropping spirits, and fill your veins with new, health-giving blood.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HE WHO LAUGHS LAST, ETC.

Showing That We're Not Always as Funny as We Think We Are.

Among the sitting passengers was a young fellow of twenty perhaps. He was with a young woman, who seemed much impressed by his flow of slangy humor. Directly in front of him stood a somewhat carelessly dressed young man. Presently the exuberant one looked up.

"Say," he said to the other young man, "tell th' lady she can have my seat."

The other young man touched the woman's arm and pointed to the polite sitter. But the latter had his gaze fixed on an advertising card and gave no heed. The other young man touched him on the shoulder.

"Why don't you give th' lady th' seat?" he asked.

The smarty looked up in feigned surprise.

"Why should I give her my seat?" he mildly asked. "An' what business is it of yours?"

The other young man hesitated and then turned to the woman.

"He's changed his mind, ma'am," he said, and the woman, her face red, resumed her hold on the nearest strap.

The young woman on the seat let out an explosive giggle, but the young man who was standing made no comment. A little later, however, when the car went round a curve he fell heavily on the cutup, his shoulder colliding sharply with the funny lad's prominent nose and his elbow digging him savagely in the diaphragm. There were tears in the cutup's eyes, and he massaged his battered nose with a gentle hand.

"You done that a-purpose," he spluttered. "I've a good mind to knock your block off."

The other young man bent down until his face was offensively near the face of his victim.

"You're a great little joker," he said, "an', of course, you're only jokin' when you talk about knockin' off me block." He put his face still closer. "I'm somethin' of a joker myself," he said, "an' there are two more curves on th' road."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Religion and Cookery.

A certain minister was greatly disturbed by a number of women in his congregation who persistently gossiped in a loud tone during service. One Sunday morning he executed a plan which he had devised to stop this annoyance. At a given signal the choir stopped abruptly on a certain word in the middle of a hymn. Then one of the gossips, unable to check herself, was heard all over the church to say, "I always fry mine in lard." "As we know," announced the minister, "that she always fries hers in lard, we will proceed with the singing."—Argonaut.

Tango Ways.

"Don't you want to dance the tango?" he asked.

"Indeed I do," said the sweet young thing. "I want to dance it the worst way."

"Oh, well, you'll have to excuse me. There are laws against that, you know."—Yonkers Statesman.

Milady's Mirror

Exercise For the Figure.

Lying flat on your back on the floor is a most excellent thing for your figure. When you want to rest you should never curl up on a sofa with cushions, but you should always lie quite flat, if possible, with your hands above your head. This expands your chest and hollows your back and makes your figure grow into good lines.

It is a splendid thing to lie like this for a few minutes every morning and do deep breathing exercises. Begin with your arms at your sides, holding them straight; bring them up till the tips of the fingers touch. When they are extended above the head you breathe in, and then bring them down again as you breathe out. Each breath should take as much time as you spend in counting four slowly.

If you are inclined to be too stout you can reduce by the following exercise: Lie quite flat on your back with your hands on your sides. Bend your legs up slowly into what is the kneeling position when you are upright and let them slowly go down again.

Then do breathing exercises, trying while you do them to draw in the part of your figure below your waist as much as you can. Then do the leg exercise again, and so on.

These two exercises together are splendid for your digestion and general health. Besides improving your figure they will improve your complexion and make you stronger and more vigorous than you have been for a long time.

Beauty Gloves.

Beauty gloves are useful adjuncts to the toilet, especially in the spring, when delicate skins are likely to chap and roughen. One sort is made of rubber and by simply keeping in the natural oils and moisture of the skin, which would otherwise evaporate and be rubbed off, whiten and soften the skin. Another sort is to wear with a medicated cream. This style is made of kid, in elbow and wrist length, and can be worn while shopping and walking as well as while resting and sleeping.

An old pair of kid gloves, worn at night after an astringent has been applied, will do wonders in keeping the hands small and also in breaking down the fatty tissues.

However, if the bones are large, reducing the flesh will only succeed in making the bones look more prominent and the hands look old and even larger. It would be better to pass the time making them soft and white and in keeping the nails well manicured.

Treating Hangnails.

When a hangnail appears do not pull it out, but use the sharp nail scissors, clipping closely, but never so as to break the skin and bring blood. This should be done before soaking.

For the purpose of softening the nails fill a small bowl with warm water, add a cake of fine, fragrant soap and a teaspoonful of pure glycerin. Stir until a good suds is formed, remove the soap and place the fingers of one hand to soak. This may be done while the other hand is receiving the filing, if one has help. If alone do the filing on both hands first. Soak the fingers of one for ten minutes, wipe and proceed to use the round pointed stick of orange wood, this wood being selected because it is hard and does not splinter readily.

Ear Treatment For Red Nose.

If you go out in the cold wind and get your nose red you can easily tone it down again without putting any powder on it.

When you get home do not go near the fire for a few minutes, but sit down first and rub your ears briskly with your hands. This will help to promote the circulation in your face which has been stopped by the cold and make the blood run away from your nose so that it is left nice and white.

The girl who often has a red nose should rub her ears every morning for a few minutes. She will find that the plan answers splendidly and does a great deal of good.

Fluffy Hair.

You can fluff up greasy hair without taking it down when it has been flattened by your hat. Take a bottle of eau de cologne which has a sprinkler on the cork. Sprinkle the center parting of your hair rather thickly and rub the eau de cologne well in. Make little partings in other places and put eau de cologne on here. Allow about a quarter of an hour in which the spirit may dry; then comb up your hair loosely with a small tooth comb, and you will find that it is greatly improved.

For Gray Hair.

Frequent headaches, mental worry and dandruff all affect the hair, rendering it limp, thin, lifeless and prematurely gray. The following is an excellent treatment for gray hair: Massage the scalp for five minutes daily; then rub in this special hair tonic: Pilocarpine nitrate, ten grains; quinine hydrochloride, one-half dram; oil of rosemary, two drams; glycerin, one ounce; distilled water, five ounces. Should dandruff be present it should be treated first. Take a tonic.

Sanitary doughnut cutters are made of hard wood.

Huge Wireless Station.

When complete the new wireless station at Newcastle, N.B., will flash 150 words a minute across 2,700 miles of sea to the corresponding station at Ballybulon, on the southwest coast of Ireland. There is much discussion now over the question as to whether the wireless will do away with the cables. The commercial speed of the wireless at this station when in use will be in the neighborhood of 150 words a minute. The greatest speed now worked by cables across the Atlantic is 50 words a minute.

The big steel tower at Newcastle is 500 feet high and is surrounded by six auxiliaries. Between these towers is strung a network of 120,000 feet of wire. A large number of trenches have been dug on the grounds and another 140,000 feet of wire has been laid in them to secure the proper ground connection. The total cost has been $175,000.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Shortness of Breath.

When a person begins to complain of habitual shortness of breath it is important to have a physical examination made without delay. One reason is that tuberculosis often begins with no other symptoms than shortness of breath and a slight cough. If these cases are seen and diagnosed very early it is not hard to arrest them. The symptom is, of course, present in such troubles as pneumonia, broncho pneumonia and pleurisy, which attack the organs of breath directly. Violent exercise naturally causes temporary shortness of breath. In the case of healthy people it disappears quickly when the exercise ceases. If it does not do so it is a good plan to have a careful examination in order to find out what is wrong. Young people sometimes persist in a favorite form of exercise after they have begun to notice their shortening breath. In that way they may do themselves lifelong injury.

BETTY'S ANSWER

And the Unhappiness it Caused.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Ben Finney squinted thoughtfully at the lowering sky. Although the grass of the plains was green and lush with many summer rains, the gathering clouds gave promise of more water.

"I'd hate to get these glad rags all dampened up," muttered Ben regretfully as he glanced down at his gala attire.

He made a brave figure, indeed, as he sat on his big black horse. He wore new buckskin breeches—brand new—and snow white Angora chaps, a white silk shirt with a blue silk handkerchief tied about his strong brown throat and a fifteen dollar hat on top of his fair, curly hair.

"All on account of a girl who would not look twice at me if I was all covered with gold lace, like that army fellow that's been staying there," sighed Ben as he pricked the black horse with his silver spurred heels.

The horse bounded down the trail, and Ben Finney, riding like a centaur, turned his thoughts from the impending disaster of rain upon his best clothes and meditated upon his chances of finding Betty Dangerfield at home.

Old man Dangerfield, as he was locally known, was pounding out of the gate when Ben approached the house.

"Another good for nothing cowpuncher!" snorted Dangerfield fiercely as they passed.

Ben laughed lightly. They were all accustomed to Dangerfield's insults when his rheumatism was more wrenching than usual.

But the big hearted cowboys of Rattle county would have risked more than Dangerfield's barks for a smile and a word from lovely Betty, his pretty daughter and keeper of his widowed household.

Betty was sitting in the front porch now, demurely sewing a seam, as a housewife should.

Wah Ching, the Chinese cook, peered from his kitchen window and, glimpsing Ben's glad attire, cackled shrilly:

"Him come, allee samee, velly fine; him go, chop-chop, velly fast, allee samee, velly mad!" he muttered.

In truth, while Ben Finney looked very fine and brave, his heart was fluttering painfully before it made one last drop into his shining boots.

To dream about Betty Dangerfield when he was a dozen miles away was one thing; to look into her changing eyes—now gray, now brown, now green—was another proposition.

He detected mirth and admiration in her first glance at his gallant form. He banished the admiration as fictitious, and he remembered the quickly repressed mirth, and his heart found refuge in the splendid boots.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Finney," dimpled Betty as she came forward with outstretched hand and carefully lowered lashes.

Ben dropped from the saddle and held her hand in his own big brown palm for an instant. Then the delicious second was over, and he was sitting on the steps, one knee clasped in his hands and his eyes devouring her sweet face.

He didn't know what to say. The heart that might have prompted him, having departed from its accustomed place under the pocket of his white silk shirt, was also dumb.

"Father has gone over to River Bend," volunteered Betty after they had discussed the weather.

"I met him," said Ben; then, with sudden inspiration he added, "What do you think he said, Miss Betty?"

"Something awful, I am afraid," laughed Betty. "Daddy's rheumatism is bothering him a lot just now—poor dear! What did he say, Mr. Finney?"

Ben turned brick red, but he kept on doggedly:

"He said, 'There goes another good for nothing cowpuncher!'" explained Ben.

It was Betty's turn to blush, and she did it most becomingly.

"How horrid of daddy! I must apologize for him. I am sure he is very fond of all of his neighbors. You know his rheumatism is very painful"—

"I don't mind that at all," interrupted Ben, "only I wish he could have expressed it a little differently. If instead of saying 'another cowpuncher' he had said, 'There goes that good for nothing cowpuncher!' meaning me alone, that would have suited me down to the ground."

"Why?" asked Betty, amazed.

"Because it would have wiped out all the others, showing there was only one cowpuncher coming here, and—oh well, you understand, Betty, that I'd like to be that one!" In this manner Ben Finney's heart leaped up for a moment's heroic action and prompted his tongue to bold speech.

"Oh, Mr. Finney—Ben—I'm so sorry," began Betty in a panic stricken tone as she started up from her rocking chair, "but"—

Ben's heart went back to his heels. He arose and put out a protesting hand.

"Never mind, Miss Betty. Don't mind me. I've got a nerve to think of you, you know, with that swell army chap around, only—well, forget it, you know. I must be going. I'm afraid it's going to rain. Good afternoon!"

With the words tumbling off his lips, Ben Finney clapped on his broad brimmed hat, leaped into his saddle, plunged his spurs into the satin flanks of the black horse and tore away through the gate and out of the vicinity of the Dangerfield domain.

Betty stared after him with amazed eyes, while behind the open window in the parlor the gold laced form of the young army officer shook with silent laughter.

In the kitchen Wah Ching rattled the supper dishes and grinned cheerfully.

"Him no stay supper? Golly! I see um come, I see um go skedaddle. Tee, hee!"

* * * * * * *

Ben Finney was not in a laughing mood as he dashed wildly across the green ranges in a light rain.

He was not thinking of the sopping brim of his splendid hat, nor of the soaked silk shirt which clung to his broad shoulders and showed every muscle, nor of the drooping plumage of the Angora chaps.

Poor Ben saw nothing save Betty's startled glance at his declaration of love—surprise because he dared to dream of her! He choked with resentment. Out here in the great west they believed him to be a poor cowboy, dependent upon his $30 per month, without an eye to the future, when in fact he was heir to a tidy fortune that had remained untouched in Chicago banks for three years while he reveled in the free life of the plains and earned his own bread.

The storm increased. The rain beat in his face, and he was glad of the wind and the wet as he struggled against it. It was life, he told himself grimly. Only when the sun came out by and by it would be a travesty on his own life, for the sun could not shine for him without Betty Dangerfield.

At last he found himself in a rocky canyon miles away from home and with a bewildering sense that he had suffered a bad dream.

It was still raining and the sides of the canyon were raked with gullies of water pouring down into the narrow creek that disappeared in a smother of foam at the other end of the canyon.

"What shall I do?" asked Ben hoarsely, and there came no answer to the question of what a man must do with his life if he cannot get the woman he loves. All the fervor of life seemed gone without that evanescent hope that some day he might wake up and find that Betty Dangerfield loved him.

He told himself that he had been a fool to cherish hope so long. He ought to have spoken long ago and allowed her to put him out of his misery.

Ben Finney laughed bitterly at the thought.

"Oh, Ben, why do you laugh like that?" asked a timid voice at his elbow.

"I am dreaming," said Ben, turning his head slowly around to find that the voice was not that of a dream girl. It was the voice of Betty Dangerfield herself. She was riding her pony, and the rush of the torrents had drowned the hoof beats.

Her khaki habit was soaking wet, and raindrops clung to the red-gold tendrils of her uncovered hair. The swift ride had brought a roseate flush to her clear skin, and her changing eyes were pools of mysterious shadows.

"Miss Betty!" gasped Ben Finney, staring at her. "Something has happened to your father?"

Betty shook her head.

"Daddy is all right," she said gravely, "but something has happened to me."

Ben whirled about, his hand on his holster.

"Happened to you?" he cried. "Tell me quickly so I can do something."

"I'll tell you," said Betty, with steady eyes gazing into his hurt blue ones. "That is why I followed you here, Ben Finney, because you can help me. Will you?"

"With my life!" promised Ben grimly.

"It's about a man," began Betty, and her dimples deepened as Ben tightened his hand on his gun—"a man of whom I'm fond. Well, I—I love him, Ben." Her eyes fell, and she did not see the agony that came into the handsome face under the dripping sombrero.

"Yes," gritted Ben between his teeth, "you love him—and—tell me the rest."

"He came and asked me to marry him, and then—then"— Betty faltered.

"And then?" thundered Ben.

"He rode away as fast as he could," confessed Betty. "And so I ran after him."

"Well, what did he say?" demanded Ben, who was deathly white.

Betty looked up and saw the agony in his strong face.

"Oh, Ben!" she cried. "What are you going to say?"

Ben stared. "Me? You don't mean me, Betty! Is it me you love?"

"Of course, goose!" sobbed Betty as she slipped from her saddle into his arms.

"But why didn't you tell me, then? You said you were sorry, and I thought"— Betty's little hand stilled the words on his lips.

"I couldn't, dear, because Captain Bently, the army officer, who is thinking of buying some of daddy's horses for the post, was sitting right behind us in the parlor, and I was afraid he would hear."

"Oh!" cried Ben as he held her closer.

Then the sun came out and shone over the rain drenched world like a smile on a tearful face.

"I say," said Ben happily, "that's just the way I thought it wouldn't happen."

And Betty never even asked her lover to explain this cryptic remark. There were so many important things to talk about.

Dubbe's Deduction.

"I have been expecting her for some time," declared Mr. Dubbe, "and there she is."

"There is who?" asked his wife.

"The woman tramp," answered Dubbe. "Anybody could tell that she is a hobo. Observe how she slouches along with her shoulders humped, her figure projecting and her hands thrust into the pockets of some man's discarded overcoat. Yes, and look at her shoes! The heels worn clear off!"

"Silly," giggled Mrs. Dubbe. "She is one of our swellest society girls, in the latest figure, gait and garb."

Hunting In City.

This is the open season in Toronto for catching fur-bearing animals, and the harvest this season is larger than for years past. A large mink caught in Ashbridge's Bay and a muskrat trapped in a rat trap in the Imperial Bank building at Bloor and Dundas streets were the hauls reported the other day. Mr. Frank Smith, Cherry street, who caught the mink, is of the opinion that Toronto is the best spot in the province to catch minks, because he has never been able to get them anywhere else. The muskrat evidently was not used to city life and the wiles of men, because the first thing it did after breaking into the bank was to make for the trap, fortunately avoiding the necessity of the manager breaking the game laws by shooting it.

SIR RICHARD'S DOUBLE.

British Columbia Lawmakers Were Let In by Likeness.

It was in the beautiful and spacious rotunda of the Empress Hotel, Victoria, B.C., which shares with the attractive Parliament Buildings across the way the honor of looking down on the placid waters of the Inner Harbor, that it all happened. There was really no justification for the affair at all, as Sir Richard was out of the city, and his followers ought to have been aware of the fact. But it happened nevertheless.

Two intimate friends of Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, stalwart Conservatives both, entered the rotunda. Seated on a divan some distance away was a figure that brought morning smiles to their faces. Wherever and whenever they saw that head of silver hair, those long striking locks which mark Sir Richard from all other men in the huge province, they conceived a joy in their hearts. This time they were frankly pleased to encounter the Premier.

Stepping across they came before the seated figure, but the record fails to state that they noted no cordial smile of recognition. If they had, it might all have been avoided, for even then it was not too late. Extending their hands, they offered some engaging opening remarks, addressing their new-found companion as Sir Richard.

The silver-haired one shook hands with them, all right, but he said: "I fear you have made a mistake. I am not Sir Richard, at all. I am Alfred Brown, senior member of the candy-manufacturing firm of Brown and Longhurst, London, Eng., and I am in British Columbia to look over the business field."

In the ensuing embarrassment the two intruders apologised and departed, carrying away with them the knowledge, now firmly fixed in their consciousness, that, as for silver hair, facial features, and general build, there was in existence an almost exact duplicate of Sir Richard.

His "Soft" Corner.

Dr. J. T. Gilmour, warden of the Central Prison, Toronto, has an inexhaustible fund of dry humor, for which he is widely known. One of his best stories was told the other day at a gathering of prison wardens and governors.

A lady had been going over a prison, and during the conversation between herself and the warden, remarked that no man was so hardened and vile that a tender and sympathetic chord could not be found in some corner of his heart.

"Oh, yes, there are!" said the warden. "I've got some here."

"Well, you take me to one," replied the lady with a positive air.

The warden conducted the lady along a certain gallery in the prison and halted in front of a cell where a man sat nursing a cat.

"There you are!" exclaimed the lady triumphantly. "Did I not tell you that he had a soft corner in his heart! Look at him nursing that cat! Do you love your pussy?" queried the lady of the prisoner.

"Yes, ma'am," was the reply. "I do."

"And why do you love her?"

"Because she scratched the warden's face last night," came the prompt answer.

Hightly Practical.

"Your business college for young ladies seems to be all right."

"It is all right."

"Do you give the girls a good practical business training?"

"In reply to that question I can only say that 60 per cent of our graduates marry their employers the first year." —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Plains of Argentina.

The roads of the plains of Argentina have deeper dust in summer and deeper mud in winter than those of any other part of the world, consequently the wagons used on them have wheels that are from six to fifteen feet in diameter.

Chilly Text.

A wise man contents himself with doing as much good as his situation allows him to do.—Lord Bolingbroke.

AN ANIMAL IN PAIN.

It Suffers Less Than Man on Account of Its Low Intelligence.

It is a platitude that "pain is as one feels it." But that statement falls a considerable way short of the truth. The measure of pain undoubtedly depends as much upon realization, comparison and constructive memory as upon sensation. In other words, the individual with the most highly developed imagination enjoys and suffers most intensely, though not perhaps most violently. Pain and death are terrible in proportion as one is capable of relating them to experience. To children they are not terrible in this sense, because children have small experience and even smaller powers of imagining relations.

In the case of animals the power of constructing a memory picture and relating the same to present conditions is probably exceedingly low, if not entirely absent. Pain to an animal represents an unpleasant experience begun and ended sharply. It is unrelated. It has no social or moral significance. It is not terrible in the wide sense. An animal lives from moment to moment. At any given moment its happiness is a question in the main of physical comfort. The caged skylark (though it must not be supposed that this is any defense of an objectionable practice) experiences none of the misery of the caged man. It does not know that its liberty is hopelessly lost. It cannot relate its present position to past experience in the way in which a prisoner can and must do. The cage is merely an accidental obstruction which may at any moment disappear. Should the bird stop struggling it does so because struggling is unpleasant, not because it is hopeless.—London Chronicle.

Wonderful Mouse.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed small Willie, "I'm sure there is a great big mouse in my bedroom!"

"Did you see it, dear?" she asked.

"No, I didn't see the mouse," replied Willie, "but I heard it wagging its tail."—Chicago News.

To Share a Confidence Binds.

Confidence always pleases those who receive it. It is a tribute to their merit, a deposit we commit to their trust, a pledge that gives them a claim upon us, a kind of dependence to which we voluntarily submit.—La Rochefoucauld.

Being our own master means that we are at liberty to be the slave of our own follies, caprices and passions.—Schiller.

Old Find Proves Rare.

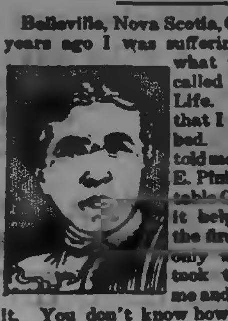
The story of the old documents and books recently discovered in the Grange, the home of the Toronto Art Museum, has awakened the interest of the Ontario Government officials.

Mr. Alexander Fraser, the Provincial Archivist, called to examine them, and declared them to be capable of filling up voids in the history of the province. He also pronounced them most rare indeed, and urgently requested to be allowed to take the old warrant and the "Waste Book," together with the list of law cases in 1825, and place them with the collection in Queen's Park.

The museum officials requested him to make application in writing for the papers, which he did, and the matter will be considered at an early date by the board of governors.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Doucette Tells of her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.



Belleville, Nova Scotia, Can.—"Three years ago I was suffering badly with what the doctors called Change of Life. I was so bad that I had to stay in bed. Some friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first. It is the only medicine I took that did help me and I recommend it. You don't know how thankful and grateful I am. I give you permission to publish what your good medicine has done for me."—Mrs. SIMON DOUCETTE, Belleville, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia, Canada.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Choo, Choo!

"Conductor, can you tell me how that brakeman lost his finger?" asked the inquisitive woman. "He seems to be a very nice fellow. It is a pity he should be crippled."

A ROUND ROBIN

It Proved to Be a Boomerang to Its Signers

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Reforms are seldom accomplished all at once, and when they are they rarely hold good. The citizens of Jimtown found their efforts to dispense with the vigilance committee and establish a regular court of law attended with difficulty. As one of them expressed it: "We was between fire and water. We was burned up if we kept still, and if we jumped we'd be drowned."

Jimtown—now Jamestown—has developed into a beautiful city, with schools and churches innumerable, but in the days when gun law had become unbearable the principal buildings in the town were devoted to gambling houses, in which an apology for liquor was sold at 25 cents a drink. In these places every man was armed, and whenever a dispute arose the only question was which disputant was the quicker on the trigger. This state of affairs attracted desperate characters, and the town was rapidly going from bad to worse. A secret meeting was held among the best citizens, at which twelve men were selected as a vigilance committee to clear the town of roughs. By a vigorous course of lynching and shooting it got rid of all the bad characters except one, but four of the twelve had been eliminated.

The bad character left, Pete Hollister, was not to be intimidated. The only way to get rid of him was to kill him, and the vigilance committee had found that method decimating its own ranks. Four of the remaining vigilantes had been killed, leaving four men who had become tired of the work.

Meanwhile a court had been organized and brought to a state of tolerable efficiency. It was easy enough to convict a person guilty of breaking the law on sufficient evidence, but it was not easy to get the party into court if he would not come willingly. It certainly was not easy to get Pete Hollister there, because he would not go willingly, and any one trying to take him by force was sure to get killed. The four men remaining on the vigilance committee held a meeting to consider means of eliminating the desperado. It was agreed that if Pete could be got out of the way there was only Bill Cundiff remaining, and Bill was not considered a very hard case. It was even thought that he might be converted to a supporter of good order.

In some way Cundiff got wind of the movement to get rid of Hollister, and one day he asked one of the committee how much would be given for the desperado's scalp. The other members were consulted, and each man subscribed $50 for the purpose. Cundiff said that to do the job was worth more than that, but if they would take the responsibility jointly with himself he would consider the proposition. He said he didn't wish to be tried for murder in the newfangled court that had been organized and must have some guaranty. The best guaranty he could have would be an order to do the job signed and sealed by the committee.

After a good deal of deliberation the four men remaining on the committee signed a round robin instructing him to "make away with" Peter Hollister and agreeing to pay him the sum of $200 for the job. At the time the arrangement was made the intended victim had gone to an army post near by to look, as he expressed it, "for scabs among some o' them sojers." Before Cundiff started on his errand of mercy—such it was considered by the citizens of Jimtown—the committee offered to pay him in advance the money that had been subscribed for the job. But Cundiff said he wasn't sure he could "get him" and his conscience wouldn't permit him to take pay for a job he hadn't done.

The committee was much pleased at this, feeling encouraged to hope that after Hollister had been put out of the way Cundiff would make an excellent citizen. An election for mayor had been called, and some were in favor of running Cundiff for the office. The rumor that he might be a candidate reached his ears, and he stated definitely that he proposed to reform and didn't consider any man reformed who had anything to do with politics. This added to the growing confidence that was being built up in the man who was to do for Jimtown what Charlotte Corday did for France.

When Cundiff, covered all over with knives, pistols and Winchester rifles rode out of Jimtown on his errand in behalf of law and order he was given an ovation. There were by this time many respectable women in the place, and they, their husbands and their children turned out to wish the reformed man success. Handkerchiefs were waved to him by the women, while the men fired salutes from their revolvers. Cundiff was seen to draw his shirt sleeve across his eyes, which was considered evidence of those intense emotions that are usually a part of the reformation of a wicked person.

They were destined to meet with a surprise. Not two hours after Cundiff's departure he returned, and riding beside him, still in the flesh, was Pete Hollister. A chill passed over the citizens of Jimtown, most of whom saw the entry from their windows and did not go out to welcome back the man they had sent off with such enthusiasm. Hollister reined up before a small group on the street and said:

"I have business with four prominent citizens of this yere town—Martin Shaw, Nathan Parker, Thomas Warren and George Urner. I would like to confer with 'em and would be obleeged to any citizen to tell 'em that I'll wait for 'em at O'Neill's tavern. Say that it's not a question of shootin', but of law."

After saying this the speaker and his attendant rode on to the tavern, where they dismounted. The gentlemen mentioned—the four members of the vigilance committee who had signed the round robin—were informed of the invitation and after consultation concluded to accept it, having been assured that they were wanted not on a matter of gun practice, but of law.

"Gents," said Hollister, drawing a paper from under his shirt, "I have yere evidence of a conspiracy on your part, with Bill Cundiff, to murder me. Bill, havin' shown signs of reformation lately, instead of committin' the deed, comes to me repentant and with tears in his eyes hands me this yere agreement to pay him $200 for my scalp. He finds me likewise repentant for my many sins and disposed to abandon gun law and leave these yere questions to the courts. Therefore it is my painful duty to sw'ar out a warrant agin you four gents, to be dealt with by the courts in the reg'lar way."

There was a grim silence on the part of the men who in trying to be saviors of Jimtown had walked into a trap and, according to law, would be punished by death or imprisonment by the courts they had taken so much pains to establish.

"Owin' to the tenderness of my heart," the desperado continued, "and the reformation goin' on in my bosom, I don't want to be hard on you. My duty as a reformed citizen is plainly to let the law take its course. But you gents bein' disposed to help us who are tryin' to turn from our wicked ways—Bill Cundiff kin testify to that—and some of you havin' families, I wouldn't mind a pecuniary consideration instead of seein' you suffer. In the fust place, Bill, who was too conscientious to take the price of my blood, should be rewarded for right doin'. Five hundred dollars would be a small sum for so much resistance to temptation. In the second place, if your scheme had worked I would now be sleepin' in the valley, with the long grass wavin' over me and coyotes scratchin' for my bones. All these should be paid for. But, rememberin' that there's no great wealth in the town, I'll make the figures reasonable. Call my share $1,500."

The signers of the round robin asked how long they would have to accept or decline this generous proposition and to raise the money if they accepted it and were given three days, at the end of which time the warrant would be sworn out. Then they retired for consultation.

Advancing civilization brings many problems. Here was a problem with a paradox. A villain was about to use a court of justice as an instrument for the condemnation of men who were working to eradicate crime. What was to be done? After consultation the round robiners sent a message to ask the two reformed men if, on the payment of the sum demanded, they would leave the town, never to return. The reply was that, having reformed, they would prefer to remain and Cundiff had decided to run for mayor.

While the deliberations were going on it happened that a young man who had served an enlistment as an electrician passed through the town on his way to a large mining center that had acquired civilization, where he was to be employed putting in electric lights and different devices made practicable by electricity. Hearing of the dilemma that confronted the citizens of Jimtown and especially the round robiners, he volunteered to show them a method by which they might get rid of the two villains without danger to themselves. They offered to pay him liberally for any device that would bring about that end, but he declined to receive money for such a purpose or to work it himself.

During the three days that the round robiners had been given to come to a decision and raise funds the electrician worked nights, and no one saw what he did. He was engaged in laying wires from an empty cabin to the house of one of the remnants of the vigilance committee, Martin Shaw. When the time was up, after explaining his device to Mr. Shaw, he withdrew from all participation in the scheme.

On the third day after the return of Hollister and Cundiff they were invited to the deserted cabin in which the electrician had been at work to receive the first installment of the ransom that had been levied on the town. The four citizens most interested were in the cabin, at the other end of the wires, where they could see plainly the place to which the rascals had been invited. Citizens were warned to keep away from the cabin and regarded the warning. Hollister and Cundiff went into the cabin prepared for them and found a bottle and two glasses on a table. They poured out a tumbler of liquor each, raised their glasses and were drinking when the floor rose up, they were tossed a hundred feet in the air, and when they came down they had ceased to be terrors to Jimtown. The cabin had been undermined and a charge of dynamite ignited by electricity.

That ended the reign of terror with which Jimtown had been afflicted since its settlement. The courts became effective, schools were opened, and civilization grew rapidly. But few of the citizens who witnessed the explosion by which the last of the gun men were eliminated remain, and they don't care to give the story.

Moving Day In Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 1. — To-day is the annual moving day in Montreal, when it is estimated that fully 100,000 people are changing their residence. This year's flitting is hardly so extensive as those of previous years, but all sorts of rigs are being used at the usual high prices. As usual, there is the long list of minor accidents, owing to the rush of people to get out of the old and into the new residences. Rents once more have been generally increased. One result especially noticeable this year is that more Montrealers are moving across the river and out to the neighboring municipalities.

Little Miss Natuk.
Pretty Eskimo Girl.

According to our standards, the Eskimos as a people have little to recommend them on the score of physical beauty, but the girl here pictured would be pronounced handsome by the most critical. She is a full blooded Eskimo, and her name is Natuk. Little Natuk was born in the far north above the arctic circle, where ice and snow are always to be seen. For some time past she has been a resident of New York city and has learned to like the ways of white people. The recent arctic weather, with its almost constant snowstorms, has been a source of real delight to the little maiden from the frozen regions. She just reveled in the snow and spent most of her time enjoying it. Her photograph was taken while she was at play in the park, and it shows a really sweet and pretty girl. She is of gentle and jolly disposition, and those who know her admire her greatly.

Easter Emblems.

Many of the emblems and observances of the feast of the resurrection are remnants of the spring festival of a pagan period. Eastre or Oestre was the spring goddess of northern Europe, and the rabbit was associated with her. The egg was an emblem of the resurrection in pagan times. With the spread of Christianity the customs and emblems of heathen festivals were often continued where a Christian feast was coincident with them, as where the gayety and license of the Roman saturnalia were grafted upon the Christian Christmas. The rabbit and the egg being thus associated with the spring feast of the resurrection, Teutonic folklore combined them by asserting that the Easter rabbit brought the Easter eggs, just as the stork brought the babies. Many a child's first recollection of the brightly colored eggs is of finding them in a nest of moss out in the garden, with the understanding that the rabbit had brought them. So we give Br'er Rabbit the same standing toward Easter that Santa Claus has toward Christmas—a jolly little myth that adds to our pleasures and gayety without being permitted to obscure the greater and more important observances of a Christian feast.

When Springtime Comes.

Spring is on the way! You can hear her whispering to the brook to break up the ice along the border so that the tender green spike of grass and flower can push through and telling the buds on the treetops and the flowers that nestle on the ground that they may stretch themselves a bit, for she is coming to stay.

The birds have known for a long time of spring's coming, and the woodland rings with their voices. The bluebirds gossip softly as they preen their beautiful feathers, and the goldfinches sing "Perchicoree" as they bound through the air. A solitary robin perches on the warmest branch of a fir tree and rather forlornly calls, "Here, here," but nobody answers him, for his brothers are wiser than he and will stay where it is warm and comfortable for some time yet.

Riddles.

What river is that which runs between two seas? The Thames, which flows between Chelsea and Battersea.

What sort of a young woman would you like to swallow on a cold day? A little milk made (milkmaid) hot.

Why is a coal charity the best of all charities? Because it makes the receivers' grate full (grateful).

Hunting Easter Eggs.

Hunting eggs at Easter is the best of fun,
And when played at our house here's the way it's done:
Papa always hides them after we're in bed
In whatever places come into his head—
Under chairs and tables, corners on the floor,
Back of sofa pillows and behind the door.
Then on Easter morning we begin to look,
Search the rooms to find them, peer in every nook,
Till they're all discovered, when we give it o'er
And sit down together to count up our store.
And if one's unlucky and don't get his share
Mamma makes us give him enough to make it fair.

THE INSTITUTE CORPS.

Ontario Government Keeps Eighteen Lecturers Busy In Rural Districts.

There was a time when men said to their sisters, daughters, and wives: "Your place is in the home"; and when they looked askance at anything like a woman's club, especially in the rural districts. It must have been to overcome some such little prejudice on the start that the members of the Women's Institute chose their beautiful motto: "For Home and Country."

Mr. George A. Putnam, superintendent of institutes in Ontario, states in his 1913 report that the total number of Women's Societies in the province is 750, and membership over 22,000. To keep every member in touch with the most up-to-date information on all vital subjects affecting the home and rural life, eighteen lecturers are sent out at two different seasons of the year to address the various meetings where the ladies foregather. Each is a specialist in her line of work, and their earnest, practical talks on all subjects in which women are interested cannot fail to have a tremendous influence on provincial life.

During the past year instruction was given to 1,667 persons in cooking and food values, home nursing, or sewing. These subjects indicate the very practical nature of the addresses. The list of lecturers includes one medical doctor, several graduate nurses, two or three graduates of Guelph Macdonald Institute, one full-fledged optician, one graduate of the American College of Mechano-Therapy, besides many who have undergone that most efficient of trainings, a long and successful life on the farm. Surely the executive has spared no pains to give the women of Ontario the best brains the country affords.

One is pleased to note how the child comes into his own at the hands of these women who are working in the interest of home and country. More than half the lecturers have subjects dealing with children, while three or four more speak a special word for the growing girl and young woman on the farm. Miss A. M. Hotson makes the child a special study. Mrs. E. B. McTurk, of Lucan, is an inspector of Barnardo girls in Ontario, and has had great success in dealing with difficult cases; while Dr. Annie Backus, along with Mrs. McTurk and many others, is particularly interested in the Medical Inspection of Children in Rural Schools.

Eleven of the speakers give talks on Health and Home Nursing. One wonders how a malignant germ continues to live in the homes of the women who have heard Miss Mary Murdock on "Bacteriology in the Home," or Mrs. Parsons on "Home Nursing," or Miss E. E. Smillie on "Disease Germs." Mrs. F. W. Watts, of Toronto, explains to each of us how to be beautiful, while Miss Ethel Robson, a practical farmer's daughter, gives demonstrations in physical culture.

But if one kind of subject furnishes more practical information to the woman on the farm than all the others, it is that supplied by the ten lecturers who deal with practical farm problems, while seven at least of these influential ladies are distinctly literary in taste.—Mabel Burkholder in Canadian Courier.

Wrote Song as Proposal.

Seated in Victoria Park, in London, Ont., twenty years ago, the late Cy Warman, then developing in the literary world, penned the words of "Sweet Marie," a proposal of marriage to Myrtle Marie Jones, of Kansas City, Kansas, then a student in the Academy of the Sisters of the Sacred Heart in London.

The lines were later set to music, and, when published shortly afterward swept the country. The tune was and still is known throughout Canada and the United States. Something of his ability is evidenced in the last lines of the song:

Not the sunlight in your hair, Sweet Marie,
Not because your face is fair, dear, to see;
But your soul so pure and sweet,
Makes my happiness complete,
Makes me falter at your feet, Sweet Marie.

Some months after penning it Warman and his fiance left London and were married in 1892.

Unchanged.

There is a grave professor in a certain college for young ladies whom one would never suspect of such levity as the indulgence in a joke unless one were to catch the twinkle that sometimes comes into his eyes.

Not long ago he was addressing his class when he suddenly checked himself.

"And in one respect, young ladies," he said, "you are still like the ancient Venus."

"And what respect is that, professor?" one of the class ventured.

"The judgment of Paris means a great deal to you," he gravely explained.—Detroit Free Press.

EXPLAINED.

Upon my word, the skirt she wore
Was slit from hem to waist
And, gaping, showed, I much deplore,
A shapely limb incased

In silken hose, and filmy white,
The while a rounded knee
Peeped in and out, a shameless sight
For all the world to see.

I knew that she was young and fair;
Her glance, I felt, was pert.
On sudden thought I stopped her there
And pointed to that skirt.

In angry tones the thing I scored.
She looked a bit appalled,
Then, "Done it thildin' on a board
Wiv Willie Smif!" she bawled.
—Judge.

Flour For China.

All the flour mills in the West continue to make extensive shipments of flour to Hong Kong and other Oriental points. This indicates the favor in which western Canadian flour is held in these countries. The Medicine Hat mills are shipping considerable quantities to San Francisco and other United States coast points through, having the advantage of a short rail haul over the large milling centres of the United States.

Wireless Baffled By Sun.

In wireless signalling at Newcastle, N.B., it has been found that stations that can reach a ship 1,000 or 2,000 miles at night cannot reach 200 or 300 feet in the daytime. This is supposed to be caused by the electrification of the ether by the sun's rays, which presumably makes it more difficult for the artificially created waves to travel through the ether.

Toronto Passes Half Million.

Toronto is now in the half million class. After adding 30,500 names to its citizenship list during 1913, the city has passed the long-looked-for mark, and will now set out to reach the million. The directory figures are 505,807. The area of the city is 33¾ miles, or 21,647 acres, while it contains 530 miles of streets and lanes, of which 339 miles are paved. An increase of 3,000 in the number of births over 1913 is one of the most notable facts shown in the new directory, while the deaths only increased 600. Toronto is still far ahead of Montreal in postoffice clearings, the increase this year being even more marked than in former periods. The amount of business transacted by the Toronto clearing-house for 1913 is given as $2,181,281,507. This compares favorably with the $1,166,902,436 report of 1908. The custom house collected $20,713,371 in 1913, an increase of $1,405,643.32 over 1912.

Was Pioneer Nun.

The death of Sister M. Purification, which took place at Niagara Falls recently, removes the last of the pioneer band of Loretto Sisters who came from the mother house of the community near Dublin, Ireland, to establish the order in Canada. Sister Purification, whose name in the world was Culahan, became a religious at the early age of 17. She was 84 at the time of her death. Her early wish was to become a missionary and go to India, following in the footsteps of St. Francis Xaviour.

NO LICENSE FOR MAPLE LEAF HOTEL

THE LICENSE DEPARTMENT FINDS APPLICATION IS NOT VALID.

CERTIFICATE OF ELECTORS WAS NOT IN PROPER FORM.

The License Department at Toronto has given a ruling in the matter of the application of Geo. Lipsett for a license at the Maple Leaf Hotel, East City. The chairman of the License Board received the following communication this morning:

Toronto, Ont.,
1st May, 1914.

Re Application of Geo. Lipsett for Liquor License—

Dear Sir,—Replying to your letter of the 27th ultimo enclosing the papers in this matter, I am of the opinion that the certificate of the electors is not in proper form, and that therefore the application is not valid, for the reasons set out in the letter of Mr. Moore to yourself, and which I need not, of course, repeat.

Herewith I return you the papers sent.

Your obedient servant,
E. SAUNDERS,
Chief Officer.

M. A. Morrison, Esq.,
Chairman License Board,
Peterborough, Ont.

THOS. E. BLACK IS APPOINTED

New Caretaker of Swing Bridge at Chemong.

Mr. Thos. E. Black of Bridgenorth has been appointed caretaker of the Swing Bridge at Chemong in succession to the late Mr. O'Leary. Mr. Black was recommended by the Conservative Executive of Smith to the member, Mr. Burnham. The executive committees of each division in the west riding do their own recommending. The member apparently believes in representative government.

SUNDAY STROLLERS MADE MOST OF FINE WEATHER

Some Canoes and Launches on The Otonabee.

Yesterday was the first Sunday in May, and likewise the first real article of summer weather which has visited here this season. The usual path of sun bathers, toward Little Lake Cemetery was tramped for the first time since last September, while Rye's Boat Livery also drew a few of the more daring. A small number of canoes were out, but as the boat livery does not generally open till May 24th there are only a few canoes in readiness. Several launches were out for a trial trip, but all have been seen on local water before. There will be a number of new boats this season.

FRACTURED ARM

Aylmer Street Lady Meets With Painful Mishap

Mrs. G. C. Carruthers, 542 Aylmer Street, broke her right arm and also sustained several other serious injuries on Saturday afternoon, when she fell down the stairs of her residence due to slipping on the carpet. Dr. Neal was summoned, and attended the unfortunate lady, who was removed to Nicholl's Hospital, where she is resting as comfortable as possible. Mrs. Carruthers also suffers from a rather serious cut on the shoulder.

STRANGE WOMAN IS PICKED UP ON THE STREET

The police of Hamilton, who are endeavoring to learn the identity of a woman who was picked up on the streets of that city a week ago and whose identity is a mystery, have secured a probable clue to a solution of the mystery from Lakefield. A traveller named J. C. Kinsella, who stopped at Lakefield, Friday, wired the Hamilton authorities that he lost his wife in Hamilton a week ago, and thinks she is the woman confined to the hospital. The Hamilton authorities are waiting further word from Mr. Kinsella, who is expected to arrive in Hamilton to-day.

LAKEFIELD TRAIN LEAVES AT 8.35

The time of the Grand Trunk train to Lakefield in the morning has been changed, commencing to-day. The train which formerly left at 7 o'clock now leaves at 8.35, and on return arrives in the city at 9.50 instead of 8.00. This will allow persons arriving in the city from Lindsay on the 7.55, from Port Hope at 8.10, or from Belleville at 8.00, to make connections to the northern village.

ACTIVITY AT LUMBER MILLS

Peterboro Lumber Co. Start Today and McDonald's Next Thursday.

After a long winter's rest, the first wheel in local sawmills turned today, when the Peterboro Lumber Co. plant at Burnham's Point commenced operations. Nearly two hundred men were on the premises endeavoring to secure a job, but as many of the old hands, who were accustomed to the work, were present, there were many disappointments. About one hundred men were taken on.

The Shingle cutting department of McDonald's mill was opened today, and they expect to open their sawmill on Thursday. In speaking to a Review scribe to-day, Mr. J. Duignan remarked that although the water was very low they are as far ahead now as they were this time last season. In 1913 they opened their mill on the 30th of April, but owing to the smaller amount of logs this season, it was anticipated that there would be a break in the cut, so they preferred starting a little later than stopping in the middle of the summer. At McDonald's this morning there were over forty men looking for a job, but there was nothing for them to do.

With reference to the business, Mr. Duignan explained that in other years they would have numerous orders in from Toronto and other outside cities, but the trade so far this season has been confined almost entirely to this city and vicinity. The business for the past three months had been worse than for the corresponding months during 1907, the year of the money panic. In 1908 things became a trifle brighter, but Mr. Duignan is very dubious about the prospects for next winter.

AUSTRALIA'S TRANSCONTINTENTAL RAILWAYS

Like Canada, Australia has great undeveloped resources which require the construction of railways, and the above map shows how the problem is being grappled with. Two transcontinental systems are being constructed, one running east and west from Port Augusta in South Australia to Kalgoorlie in West Australia and connecting up Sydney. Victoria and Adelaide with Perth; and the other north and south connecting up Pine Creek in the north with Oodnadatta in South Australia. The dotted lines show the unfinished portions of the roads. At least one Canadian firm has tendered on machinery necessary for the construction of these railways and may establish an office in the Commonwealth in the near future.

FORMER GOVERNOR-GENERAL SUCCUMBS TO PNEUMONIA

Duke of Argyle Was Husband of the Princess Louise and Widely Known in the Dominion as the Marquis of Lorne—Late Duke Came of Ancient Scottish Family and Had Many Public Interests.

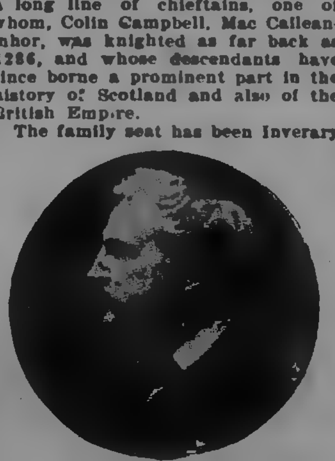
COWES, Isle of Wight, May 4.—The Duke of Argyll, son-in-law of the late Queen Victoria, and former Governor-General of Canada, died Saturday night at East Cowes, aged 69. He had been critically ill for the past week with pneumonia.

James Douglas Sutherland Campbell, ninth Duke of Argyll, was descended from one of the oldest of Scottish families. One of his titles, Baron Campbell, came into the family in 1445, and another, Baron of Lorne, was created in 1457. He was also twenty-ninth Baron Lochow.

As head of the Clan Campbell, the Duke of Argyll was the descendant of a long line of chieftains, one of whom, Colin Campbell, Mac Calleanmhor, was knighted as far back as 1286, and whose descendants have since borne a prominent part in the history of Scotland and also of the British Empire.

The family seat has been Inverary Castle for seven centuries. The ninth duke was born in 1845 and was therefore 69.



DUKE OF ARGYLL.

Educated at St. Andrew's and Cambridge Universities, the duke combined in his mental make-up the traditional academic standing of the nobility of England and Scotland. In 1868 he became Marquis of Lorne and entered Parliament. He was then twenty-three. He sat in the Commons for ten years, during four of which he was private secretary to his father, then Secretary of State for India in the first administration of Gladstone.

Many Canadians still remember the duke when, as Marquis of Lorne, he came to Canada in 1878 to be Governor-General of Canada. His consort was Princess Louise, Queen Victoria's daughter, and many people still have hung upon the walls of their homes pictures of the vice-regal pair. Coming after so popular a Governor-General as Lord Dufferin, it was all the more to the credit of the Marquis of Lorne that he was not in any wise overshadowed by his predecessor, but, on the contrary, distinguished himself in office and was of profit to this country.

Princess Louise, by her tact and gracious presence, made herself popular throughout the Dominion.

On returning to England the duke joined the ranks of the Unionists, and was elected to Parliament for one of the Manchester seats. He continued in Parliament till 1900, when the death of his father called him to the dukedom and the House of Lords.

The duke achieved considerable fame as an author, but this distinction was somewhat obscured by his prominent position as a Parliamentarian and as a public and aristocrat. His chief works are: The United States After the War, written in 1885; Imperial Federation, same year; Memories of Canada and Scotland, 1884; Canadian Pictures, 1885; Life of Palmerston; Tales and Poems; the Psalms in English Verse; Windsor Castle; libretto for an opera; Diarmid, 1897; Life and Times of Queen Victoria; A Gift Book for the Home, 1891; Passages From the Past, 1907.

He is succeeded in the title by Lord Archibald Campbell, a brother.

Mourning at Rideau Hall.

OTTAWA, May 4.—The vice-regal party will go into mourning owing to the death of the Duke of Argyll. His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught will carry out the western Ontario trip as planned, however. Special permission has been secured from the King for this.

His Royal Highness will not attend the ball of the York Club in Toronto, but he will go in state to the Woodbine for three days of the races.

The vice-regal party will make the visit to Quebec as previously planned, but the engagements on this trip have not been settled. The trip to western Canada will also be carried out.

CIGARETTE GAVE FIREMEN A RUN

After going the limit with a cigarette so far as inhales were possible from the snipe, a passer-by casually cast the butt into a pile of rubbish on Louis Street about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A minute later a blaze started, and Chief Howard and his gallants were awakened from a peaceful Sabbath day siesta. A few shots of chemical were sufficient to subdue the blaze.

BROKE HIS LEG DURING SCUFFLE

During an altercation with a companion this afternoon, Chas. Price, a man aged some sixty years of age had his leg broken when he was thrown by the other, with whom he had words. As near as can be learned the men had been drinking, and meeting on Simcoe Street, they engaged in a scuffle. Dr. Frederick was summoned and attended the patient.

MAN SHOULD NOT KEEP TALENTS FOR HIMSELF; SHOULD HELP OTHERS

Extra Accommodation is Necessary at St. Andrew's Church, When Rev. Jas. Potter Preaches at Anniversary Services

Speaking at the morning service on the occasion of the 81st anniversary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church yesterday, Rev. James G. Potter, B.A., pastor of McVicar Memorial Presbyterian Church, Montreal, stated that because God gave a man more talents than his fellow men he should not keep them for himself but should distribute them for the uplift and benefit of humanity. The church was packed to the doors. Rev. James Rollins, B.A., pastor of the church, paid a high tribute to Rev. James G. Potter, and extended a hearty welcome to him. Rev. Mr. Potter is a former pastor of the church.

In opening, Rev. Potter stated he knew of no greater joy than to be able to occupy the pulpit of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Memories of days spent with the church were pleasant. He took his text as follows: "Be of good courage, and let us play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God: and the Lord do that which seemeth Him good" (II Samuel, X ch., 12 vs.). In his address he pictured the lesson taught by Joab and Abishai, who as brothers in the battles against the Syrians displayed spirit of co-operation, when Joab said if the Syrians be too strong for me then you shall come to me and if the Ammonites be too strong for you I shall go to you. The brothers were nephews of David and born of a good mother but an indifferent father. He showed no interest in their future, did not guide them or by his deeds give inspiration. They were fortunate in having an uncle of the type of man like David was. He took an interest in them and in return they were eager to manifest their gratitude. They were willing to die for him and became distinguished soldiers. They displayed unselfish devotion throughout their careers.

A man may be shrewd, wise, etc., but one thing may be left undone. What is it after all if the blessing of God is not recognized. No man liveth or dieth to himself but to God.

Referring to lack of thought for mankind, the speaker said that everyone had a right to do his share in the work of God. It was absurd to imagine that we did not need help and that there were many we should not help. Some may remark they were in this world to make a living and were not responsible for others. That was wrong. In this world of graft and vice when commercialism had men who found shelter behind the law and wilfully crushed their rivals, was it any wonder that many who had felt the crushing influence of such men should look upon their existence as one of bitterness. No man should take the position that he should not receive from others. When God gave one man more talents than another he did not mean that they should be used for self but rather he meant that man was to become a distributor. If personal ambition became a ruling force then the Devil would conquer. How many men who after they had become on easy street forgot their fellowmen. They forget of the assistance they received in their time of oppression.

"The example of the British soldier who said that he was only a chisel while the great carpenter inspired the work should be followed by mankind."

There was still a great work to be done in St. Andrew's church. Eighty-one years may seem a long time, but the future was young. Every man in the congregation should play the man. He should recognize that a certain duty rested with him. The speaker concluded by telling a story he heard of a clergyman and a real estate agent who were discussing automobiles. Although they both agreed that the self starting car had its advantage over the one equipped with a crank, the cost would be $600 more, but they also agreed that it paid to get the best. "Is it too much to ask that we give God the best, I think He expects and certainly He deserves it."

This evening the celebration of the anniversary will be continued in the form of a social gathering in the church. A musical programme will be provided from 8 o'clock until 9 o'clock after which refreshments will be served. The Rev. James Rollins made a stirring plea for a record attendance and especially urged the men to be on hand.

HATS BROUGHT INTO USE TO HOLD CONTRIBUTIONS OF ST. ANDREW'S CONGREGATION

Collection Plates Proved Too Small to Hold the Offerings

SOME GOOD MUSIC

The old custom of passing the hat was revived at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church yesterday, when special collections were taken up for the organ debt fund, aside from the usual anniversary contributions. During the morning service the plates were filled to capacity by the time the sidemen had passed the plates to about half of the congregation, and it was found necessary to unload the contents into hats, which were taken to the rear of the church to await the completion of the receiving of contributions. The total contribution to the fund amounted to $1,075, and the Rev. James Rollins, pastor of the church, is more than pleased, and expects the organ fund to be over-subscribed by the end of the year.

At both services special music was supplied by the choir, under the direction of Herbert C. Treneer, organist and choir director. At the morning service the choir sang Barker's anthem, Jerusalem, with sympathetic taste and excellent interpretative and tonal qualities, while Miss Mae Laing rendered The Ninety and Nine in a very effective manner. Thy Will be Done in duet arrangement, was sung by Miss Olive Howell and Mr. John Anderson. The favorite was handled by the soloists in admirable style, all its charm and beauty being exemplified by them. At the evening service the anthem, Praise the Lord O Jerusalem was given in an excellent manner, the choir showing perfect training, and sang with a sincerity which brought out all the striking qualities of the well known composition. A solo, Fear ye not, O Israel, was rendered by Mr. T. Jones, who displayed excellent tonal qualities and capital idea of the Dudley Buck work. Messrs. C. Thorpe, A. Pillings, J. Anderson and T. Jones rendered Memories of Gallilee in a pleasing manner, while Herbert C. Treneer's playing of the March Pontificial was most inspiring, the organist rendering Gounod's popular and stirring composition in a manner which left no room for doubt as to Mr. Treneer's finished qualities as a musician.

THE CLEARING HOUSE

Owing to the final arrangements not being complete, the Clearing House System, which was to be started to-day, will not be commenced till a later date.

RETAILERS TO-NIGHT

Important Meeting to be Held In the Y.M.C.A.

Some important questions will be discussed to-night at the meeting to be held at the Y.M.C.A., at which every retail merchant in the city will be present.

To-night will decide whether or not a half-holiday will be proclaimed on May 14th, as is being requested by the baseball fans. If the Association is not in favor of it, a committee will most likely be appointed to wait on the Mayor and Council at their regular meeting to-night.

It is hoped that a large number of merchants will be present and express their opinions. Other questions the secretary has chosen for the evening will take considerable time to get through with.

POLICE COURT

Tanglefoot Largely Responsible for Several Cases This Morning

Wm. F. Hamilton pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk while on the prohibited list, before Magistrate Dumble this morning at Police Court. He divulged the name of the party who supplied him with his liquor and was fined $10 to be paid in ten days.

The inability of Robert Dickson of Otonabee to navigate George Street while under the influence of liquor and in charge of a team resulted in his contributing $5.75 into the itchy palm of the court.

Class to John.

John Seeney of Havelock, said he got his booze from the night before, and the magistrate impressed upon him the fact that while he was brought to the station in a back, people going to church did not want to meet drunken men, and assessed him $5.75.

"Too bad, too bad, but it's the first in a month," concluded John.

Six Drinks, $5.

Matteo Orellio, an Italian, appeared in court on the charge of being drunk.

"How many drinks did you have?" asked the Chief.

"Me can no understand," murmured the Italian in melodramatic voice.

After some minutes' look at the culprit Chief Thompson announced that the culprit had had six drinks. Magistrate Dumble then brought the affair to a closing by demanding $5. Friends of the man contributed, and he was hurried away to safer quarters.

THE GLOBE IS SEVERAL YEARS LATE.

THE EDITORIAL in Saturday's Toronto Globe entitled, "Railway Building and Operation," is perhaps the best article we have yet read from the Liberal press on the C.N.R. proposition. It begins by handing out a knock to its city contemporary the News—a deserved knock, judging from the quotation which is a compilation of vigorous adjectives and a pound of assertion, proving nothing and descending to that form of criticism which is truly characterised by the word blatant. The Globe writer, having thus put himself in a satisfied frame of mind, proceeds to discuss the C.N.R. proposition by building up a very fine argument on a supposititious statement in the News that there was a suspicion that money received by Mackenzie and Mann for railways was going to South America for power and other enterprises. So, the Globe says that the Liberal Party is "fighting to the last ditch," "the granting of further public aid." "The time has come for a show-down."

The Globe is in error in the last sentence. The time for a show-down came years ago, when the Laurier Cabinet was railroading the country into a financial crisis, with an enthusiasm that took no thought of the rise of railroad crises in New Zealand, England and the United States, an enthusiasm that was child-like in its faith and might have been disastrous in its consequences. The Reciprocity issue fortunately saved Canada from an experience which was bad in England, worse in the United States but most serious in New Zealand. It is too late now for a show-down. Such a procedure as the Globe and the Liberals are advocating is nothing short of confiscation for the Globe's hypothetical argument practically assumes that the methods of Mackenzie and Mann were within the law. To recover under such circumstances would mean confiscation, an arbitrary, impractical perhaps impossible policy for the Government to follow under the circumstances of the present case. The Globe asks if it is morally right, though perfectly legal, for the owners to let to themselves large and profitable contracts. Can you imagine the Globe being so inconsistent as to be hairsplitting the morals of things legally right? 'Tis difficult, but the fact is in type in Saturday's issue. Here is the Globe supporting the banish the bar policy of Rowell and touting on temperance while at the same time it prints advertisements which tell that beer is a food and which point out the good qualities of many brands of whiskey and other forms of booze. Of course it is legally right for the Globe to accept these advertisements and pay dividends and preachers' salaries therefrom but is it morally right? Had the Globe been honest enough to write such an editorial several years ago when the present problem was in the making, and when Laurier was railroading the country into bankruptcy it would have been entitled to a lasting mede of gratitude. But no rather let the country go to the dogs under Laurier than save it under Borden. It wants a show-down now when it is too late and the Globe and the Liberal party must know that the C.N.R. has now reached such a position that to do what they ask is impractical and unnecessary—that "'Twere to consider too curiously to consider so" in some details relating to the history of the C.N.R.

EDITORSHIP AND OWNERSHIP.

THE MONTREAL MAIL has taken us to task for our editorial on Sir Hugh Graham's position in the Montreal newspaper field. In the first place our editorial contained a lot we did not write, to use an Irishman's way of putting it The Mail quotes at the beginning the dictum, no man can serve two masters, an altruism not requiring argument. But two men of opposite views can serve one master. That is our position. We tried to distinguish carefully between the position of ownership of two newspapers and editorship of two newspapers. We still think that a man may own two newspapers in the same attitude of mind as a man may own the shares of two competing railroads, or stores. To be sure, it has seldom been done successfully, Lord Northcliffe being perhaps the best example, but in theory it is quite a tenable position. The man who owns, runs them as commercial enterprises; the man who edits believes he is advocating the best policy, and seeks to influence public opinion to this side or that, as the case may be. The two men are not the same, their ideas are one on business, but, perhaps divergent on politics. A fair opinion can be presented on two sides of a question.

But take the position that a newspaper must be owned and edited by men of the same opinion. If they are tolerant, they must admit that there is another side to their position on political questions, that they may not be on the right side. They vacillate helplessly and naturally on two sides of the happy medium. If they are intolerant, they place themselves in the position of judging absolutely. The Mail quotes Gordon Bennett; no man more autocratic ever directed a newspaper. As a last resort from contradiction the party system has turned to "the rule of the majority," which in turn is beset by "the rights of minorities." Journalism leaves its opinions for censure or approval to the people, most of whom must rely on a primary sense of right and wrong to decide their individual conclusion. As far as politics and journalism go, the result of the conflict is in most cases a compromise. The success of British politics has been for a thousand years, but most noticeably in the last hundred years, the capacity of British leaders to effect a compromise. Many inconsistencies and contradictions in politics, journalism and business are covered under the aegis of expediency, which is the reason for compromises. Knowing this, what is the objection to a man owning the mouthpiece to two sides of a political question? He does not compose the articles for both sides, he merely owns the business.

Coming to practice, the theory has failed, because it has as a rule demanded too much, because it is greater than the limitations of most men. Selfish interests have over-ruled the necessity to remain, shall we say impersonal, on one side. Combinations of the Graham style have been made usually, not to exemplify a theory, but to achieve an end that was deemed to necessitate such a combination. Montreal has her Tramway Deal. There may be a reason for Sir Hugh Graham's novel position, but the fact remains that such a position might be tried honestly.

Time was when the personal element loomed large in the activities of life. Men bought at John Smith's store because they saw him there directing the business and impressing his individuality for good service on the smallest detail. Such was the case with Horace Greely and George Brown in the newspaper field. That is a condition which is passing. The rise of joint stock companies for the control of newspapers and business concerns, the increasing importance of specialization in industry, the levelling effect of trade unionism and of socialist propaganda, have been powerful agents for crushing individuality, for eliminating it more and more from the activities of life. In the newspaper field the increasingly expensive nature of the mechanical means of production have necessitated combination and the stamping of impersonality on many newspapers through joint stock ownership. The personal element is not necessary for success, because there are plenty of examples where personality only partly enters. Hence the owner can be impersonal if he wills to be so. But such a position is peculiarly difficult to hold because most men like to be interested wholly with what they are connected. Certainly Sir Hugh Graham has not attained an ideal of ownership, but what seems impossible may some time be accomplished.

We admit the weight of history is against us, and considering the strength of man's prejudices and the frailties of human nature, perhaps it is better to persist honestly in an error, to follow vigorously one's convictions, than to explore a new and untried field. At least that is the safer course, and historically the more successful.

THE C.N.R.

THE GOVERNMENT of the Dominion and of the various provinces have been drawn in by Mackenzie and Mann since 1899 to the tune of 197 millions of dollars in subsidies and guarantees of the C.N.R. This should not have happened. Some day the people here in Canada, as elsewhere, will decline to do the banking for private corporations. But that is not the question just now. The question now is "How can the Government wind this C.N.R. business up without loss?" Manifestly it can only do it by taking virtual control, and it has done this beyond the shadow of a doubt. The Government required first of all consolidation. Then it demanded a reduction of the capital by 45 millions of dollars. Then it saw what the system is really worth, and on that basis with supreme control in its own hands it loaned 45 millions (guaranteed) to the system, and will see that it is all applied to the very last dollar to the work itself. The Government also gets as a gift 40 millions of the capital stock of 100 millions.

In other words, it owns two-fifths of the whole system. Claims of prior value are very large but there is no claim prior to this 45 millions. If the road is a failure, we in Canada lose 45 millions more. If not, and that is why the aid is given, then we win and win by a long lead.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MR. BURNHAM took the same stand regarding oleomargarine that has been taken regarding maple syrup. As long as it is pure and wholesome and is not sold as butter, the very poor who could not buy butter, should be allowed to buy it. It is a wanton and unnecessary proceeding to deprive the poor of a pure food when they cannot buy butter at 25 and 30 cents a pound. In Britain the poor buy dripping and peanut butter. It is clean and pure. Why should they not be allowed to do so?

The Tories Helped to Do It.

Toronto Mail and Empire.

The total trade of Canada for the fiscal year ending March 31 was $44,000,000 more than that for the previous year, exports having been $75,000,000 larger. There aren't many real pessimists in Canada. Canada has weathered the tight money storm in magnificent style.

Never Was Whipped.

Montreal Mail.

Gladstone was one of the best-flogged boys in the public schools of England. On the other hand, the mother of John Purroy Mitchell, Mayor of New York, says in The Delineator: "I never whipped my boy. I don't believe in whipping children." It is to be allowed, of course, that Gladstone was merely a Prime Minister. He never had to be mayor of a troublesome city like New York. As for the young Mitchell, his mother, as she built her castles, "saw him only as a jurist, a great lawyer and judge." And although not whipped, he was not spoiled.

"When he was five years old," says his mother, "I began to instil in him a respect for other people's property, other people's rights—their opinions and faults. Letting others' things alone, respecting their rights, their opinions, their faiths—that is my idea of democracy. I might say it is my personal doctrine of American citizenship."

Most serious among a mother's problems in the rearing of her boy this mother places the choice of friends. She says in particular: "I place more weight upon the choice of the girl friends a boy has than of the boy friends he chooses. A boy is a wiser little creature than we imagine in his judgment of other boys. He comes very near accurately classifying every boy he knows. But a girl is a subtle influence in his life. In a way she is a standard. His respect and his faith for and in the finer things are rooted in his estimate of womanhood." Mrs. Mitchell concludes with the expression of her belief that "it is possible for every mother to take an interest in her boy's school work, his playtime and his friends. And it is always possible to find a way to his confidence, which is the finest thing in the world."

FATHER TIME

By Walt Mason

Time drills along, and, never stopping, winds up our spool of thread; the time to do our early shopping is looming just ahead. It simply beats old James H. Thunder how time goes scooting on; and now and then we pause and wonder where all the days have gone. When we are old a month seems shorter than did a week in youth; the years are smaller by a quarter, and still they shrink, forsooth. This busy world we throw our fits in will soon be ours no more; time hurries us, and that like blitzen, toward another shore. So do not make me lose a minute, as it goes speeding by; I want to catch each hour and skin it and hang it up to dry. A thousand tasks are set before me, important, every one, and if you stand around and bore me, I'll die before they're done. Oh, you may go and herd together, and waste the transient day, and talk about the crops and weather until the roosters lay, but I have work that long has beckoned, and any Jim or Joe who causes me to lose a second, I look on as a foe.

Birthdays of Note

MONDAY, MAY FOURTH

Sir Louis Davies, the oldest judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, who is sixty-nine years of age to-day, is a native of Prince Edward Island and prior to entering the House of Commons in 1882, was premier of the Island province. He is a most amiable gentleman and possesses a wealth of interesting reminiscences about the public life of Canada during the past thirty years. One of his best stories has to do with a passage at arms between Sir John A. Macdonald and the then leader of the Opposition, Edward Blake, which occurred early in his Parliamentary career. Blake had spoken far into the night, attacking with bitter invective the premier and his administration. When he sat down after midnight, Sir Louis said, the House awaited with keen expectancy the reply of Sir John. Instead, however, of answering in kind the latter in his smoothest style congratulated Mr. Blake on his ecort and then turning to address the whole body of members said, "The honorable gentleman has told you his side of the case; it remains with you to decide whether you want old Sir John or Edward Blake to run the country." He thereupon sat down amid immense applause, undoing in two minutes the superb argument which his opponent had built up in several hours.

Also born to-day:—

Hon. Gordon Hunter, chief justice of British Columbia, born in Beamsville, Ont., 1863.

Hon. Nicholas DuBois Dominic Beck, puisne judge of the Supreme Court of Alberta, born in Cobourg, Ont., 1857.

Hon. C. E. B. De Boucherville, former premier of Quebec, born at Boucherville, P.Q., 1822.

Lead Balls Do Not Rebound.

Make two equal balls of lead, shoot them about on a billiard table, and you will observe some actions that seem extraordinary. In the first place, if they strike each other head on they come to a dead stop. They do not rebound, for lead has no elasticity. If they strike each other at an angle the result is what is called a "couple." The balls rotate around each other for a part of one turn and each moves off in a straight line tangent to the circle in which they were moving.

He Gave a Reason.

Mrs. Hoon (indignantly)—I wonder why Mrs. Gabbleton doesn't mind her own business?

Her Husband—One reason is that she has no mind, and another is that she has no business. She has no business to mind if she had any mind to mind it, and no mind to mind her business if she had any business to mind.—London Mail.

An easy name to remember. A hard tea to forget.

Red Rose Tea "is good tea"

She sped down the narrow hall, and he, taking time to slip into a long dressing coat, stepped out upon the porch in response to the now prolonged and impatient shouts.

"Who's there?" he shouted. The light from the windows revealed several horsemen in the roadway.

"Friends," came back through the wind. "Let us in out of the storm. It's a terror."

"I don't know you." There was a shout of laughter and some profanity.

"Oh, yes you do, Mr. Shaw. Open up and let us in. It's Dave Rank and Ed Hunter. We can't make the cabin before the rain." Shaw could see their faces now and then by the flashes of lightning, and he recognized the two woodsmen, who doubtless had been visiting sweethearts up toward Ridgely.

"Take your horses to the stable, boys, and come in," he called, laughing heartily. Then he hurried off to the gun room. He passed Mrs. Ulrich coming downstairs yawning prodigiously. He called to her to wait for him in the library.

There was no one in the gun room. The door leading to the back porch was open. With an exclamation he leaped outside and looked about him.

"Good heavens!" he cried, staggering back.

Far off in the night, a hundred yards or more up the road, leading to Grimes' cabin he saw the wobbling, uncertain flicker of a light wending its way like a will-o'-the-wisp through the night. Without a moment's hesitation and with something strangely like an oath, he rushed into the house, almost upsetting the housekeeper in his haste.

"Visitors outside. Make' em comfortable. Back soon," he jerked out as he changed his coat with small respect for his injured arm. Then he clutched a couple of raincoats from the rack and flew out of the back door like a man suddenly gone mad.

CHAPTER VIII.

In Which a Ghost Trespasses.

THE impulse which drove Penelope out for the second time that night may be readily appreciated. Its foundation was fear. Its subordinate emotions were shame, self pity and consciousness of her real feeling toward the man of the house. The true spirit of womanhood revolted with its usual waywardness.

She was flying down the stony road, some distance from the cottage, in the very face of the coming tornado, her heart beating like a triphammer, her eyes bent on the little light up the mountain side, before it occurred to her that this last flight was not only senseless but perilous. She even laughed at herself for a fool as she recalled the telltale hand bag on the porch and the damning presence of a Bazelhurst lantern in the hallway.

The storm which had been raging farther down the valley was at last whirling up to the hilltop, long delayed as if in gleeful anticipation of catching her alone and unprotected. The little electric saddle lamp that she carried gave out a feeble glow, scarce opening the way in the darkness more than ten feet ahead. Rough and irksome was the road, most stubborn the wall of wind. The second threat of the storm was more terrifying than the first. At any instant it was likely to break forth in all its slashing fury, and she knew not whither she went.

Even as she lost heart and was ready to turn wildly back in an effort to reach Shaw's home before the deluge the lightning flashes revealed to her the presence of a dwelling just off the road not 200 feet ahead. She stumbled forward, crying like a frightened child. There were no lights. The house looked dark, bleak, unfriendly. Farther up the hillside still gleamed the little light that was meant to keep Renwood's ghost from disturbing the slumbers of old man Grimes and his wife. She could not reach that light, that much she knew. Her feet were like hundredweights, her limbs almost devoid of power. Grimes' hut appeared to be a couple of miles away. With a last, breathless effort she turned off the road and floundered through weeds and brush until she came to what proved to be the rear of the darkened house. Long, low, rangy, it reached off into the shadows, chilling in its loneliness. There was no time left for her to climb the flight of steps and pound on the back door. The rain was swishing in the trees with a hiss that forbade delay.

She threw herself, panting and terror stricken, into the cavelike opening under the porch, her knees giving way after the supreme effort. The great storm broke as she crouched far back against the wall, her hands over her ears, her eyes tightly closed. She was safe from wind and rain, but not from the sounds of that awful conflict. The lantern lay at her feet, sending its ray out into the storm with the senseless fidelity of a beacon light.

"Penelope!" came a voice through the storm, and a second later a man plunged into the recess, crashing against the wall beside her. Something told her who it was even before he dropped beside her and threw his strong arm about her shoulders.

He was crying something into her ear—wild, incoherent words that seemed to have the power to quiet the storm. And she was responding—she knew that eager words were falling from her lips, but she never knew what they were—responding with a fervor that was overwhelming her with joy. Lips met again and again, and there was no thought of the night, of the feud, the escapade, the Renwood ghost, or of aught save the two warm living human bodies that had found each other.

The storm, swerving with the capricious mountain winds, suddenly swept their refuge with sheets of water. Randolph Shaw threw the raincoats over his companion and both laughed hysterically at their plight, suddenly remembered.

"We can't stay here!" he shouted.

"We can't go out into it," she cried. "Where are we?"

"Renwood's," he called back. Their position was untenable. He was drenched; the raincoats protected her as she crouched back into the most remote corner. Looking about, he discovered a small door leading to the cellar. It opened the instant he touched the latch. "Come, quick," he cried, lifting her to her feet. "In here—stoop! I have the light. This is the cellar. I'll have to break down a door leading to the upper part of the house, but that will not be difficult. Here's an ax or two. Good Lord, I'm soaked!"

"Whe-where are we going?" she gasped as he drew her across the earthen floor.

"Upstairs. It's comfortable up there." They were at the foot of the narrow stairway. She held back.

"Never! It's the—the haunted house! I can't—Randolph."

"Pooh! Don't be afraid. I'm with you, dearest."

"I know," she gulped. "But you have only one arm. Oh, I can't!"

"It's all nonsense about ghosts. I've slept here twenty times, Penelope. People have seen my light and my shadow, that's all. I'm a pretty substantial ghost."

"Oh, dear, what a disappointment! And there are no spooks, not even Mrs. Renwood?"

"Of course she may come back, dear, but you'd hardly expect a respectable lady spook to visit the place with me stopping here. Even ghosts have regard for conventionalities. She couldn't"—

"How much more respectable than I," Penelope murmured plaintively.

"Forgive me," he implored.

"I would, only you are so wet."

The door above was locked, but Shaw swung the ax so vigorously that any but a very strong nerved ghost must have been frightened to death once more.

Shaw Swung the Ax Vigorously.

"It's my house, you know," he explained from the top step. "There we are! Come up, Penelope. The fort is yours."

She followed him into the hall above. In silence they walked along the bare floors through empty rooms until at last he opened a door in what proved to be the left wing. To her surprise this room was comfortably furnished. There were ashes in the big fireplace, and there were lamps which had been used recently, for they were filled with oil.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION

A NEW VOGUE FOR COTTON BLOUSES.

The cotton blouse is coming into its own this spring in a multiplicity of materials that are lovely of color and texture and exquisitely sheer. This one is of linen in sweet pea ecru with darker tan collar and cuffs and fancy buttons down the side of the little vest that is held with snap fasteners. It is the vogue for sheerness that has brought the separate blouse into favor and this very design can be reproduced in cotton crepe, in chiffon or in thin silk.

Modernizing Ben Nevis.

Ben Nevis, Scotland's highest mountain, may be commercialized to meet the demands of tourists. A project is under way looking to the erection of a hotel on the peak to occupy the site of the former meteorological observatory. The plans embrace a railway nearly five miles long. In an ordinary season it is estimated that fully 15,000 people climb Ben Nevis.

CAVE DWELLERS.

Fine Description of Peculiar Home of Africa. Sheik.

Scattered from Babes to Debibat and from Matmata over the Tripoli border are the troglodytes or cave dwellers of northern Africa. They live on mountain sides. Sometimes there are small groups, many times a single family. The towns are built in ovals, with only one entrance for each tribe, so that a small group of men heavily armed could if necessary protect their strongholds from thieves or enemies.

All of the Troglodyte towns are set far in the wilderness and can be approached only with the greatest difficulty. This makes them places of exceptional vantage in time of war. The people could see an enemy approaching in the desert for many miles unless it was at night. Even then the passage-way—a narrow path through the mountain—would be too dangerous for approach, for a misstep would mean a fall of hundreds of feet to the rocks below.

Sheik Ferdjani's cave in Matmata is described by a traveler in the most minute detail.

"The cave was whitewashed. To the left were a wooden chest and a gun, one of many. Back of the gun on a stand cut out of the rock was a dark object, an oil lamp, the form dating back to the Greek and Roman days. There was a white object in the centre, a bedstead cut out of the rock, and there were comfortable mattresses filled with wool and native blankets and rugs. Above the bedstead was a sort of cupboard where snuff, matches and other articles are placed.

"To the right were large oil and water jars. At the back of the cave were couscous covers, the larger ones having come from Ghadames. These covers and couscous plates are highly prized and very ornamental. Above the plates and covers were a Persian picture and an Arab almanac."

Progressive Chinese City.

The city of Canton, China, with a million and a half inhabitants, has no place for a street railway system. Canton is one of the wealthiest and most progressive of all the Chinese cities and it would very much like a modern street railway system. But the space within the ancient walls and fortifications is so crowded that many of the so-called streets are but narrow alleys, not even wide enough for two sedan chairs to pass. There is no room for horses and carriages, and certainly not sufficient space for a narrow-gauge railway. But the Chinese engineers are not so easily baffled and Canton will have its electric railway. It is planned to tear down the ancient stone walls and fortifications which encircle the entire city. The material from these walls will be used to fill some of the old canals which traverse the city. A three-track belt line will be constructed on the site of the old wall, completely encircling the city, and the old canal sites will be used for feeder lines.

Lasting.

"Your suggestion," said a depositor to the bank receiver, "offers very cold comfort. It is a bachelor's comfort—that is to say, no comfort at all.

" 'What,' said a bachelor to a benedict, 'only married a year and already so blue?'

" 'Ah, but,' groaned the benedict, 'I never imagined that a wife would prove so expensive.'

"The bachelor patted the blue married man on the back in a consolatory way.

" 'Yes,' he said, 'a wife is an expensive article; that is true. But then you must remember that she lasts a very long time.' "

Baked Apples.

The next time you have baked apples try this way of cooking them:

Wash, then core the apples; fill the holes with boiled rice or hominy; sprinkle sugar, a grate of nutmeg and a small dot of butter on top of each apple. Mix equal parts of water and grape juice together and use this for basting.

Place the apples in an agate dish and bake until tender, basting several times. When done lift them carefully with a cooking fork into a glass dish, flavor the syrup with vanilla and pour it over the apples. Serve hot or cold with soft gingerbread or lady fingers or sponge cake.

Hats and Politeness.

"French and German hats," said a hatter, "only last half as long as ours. It isn't the poor quality of the hats, but the fine quality of the manners that causes this. Lifting the hat in salutation is the hardest work that falls to the headpieces and the French and Germans lift it to men and women equally, thus giving it twice as much labor as we do. Naturally, then, it wears out twice as quickly. It goes in the brim in no time over the water."

Twenty-Three Nations Understood.

Have you ever looked at Esperanto, which is an attempt at the language the whole West can understand, as the East understands Hindustani or pidgin English? The British Esperantist publishes the words and music of a song that Mr. Harrison Hill wrote, composed, and sang at the Berne Congress, and 23 nationalities joined in the chorus with immediate understanding. — London Chronicle.

Was at the Front.

A retired army officer was in his back garden one day when a tramp came round the end of the house. "I've been at the front," he began, "and"— The old officer beamed on him as he interrupted to ask: "Have you indeed, my man? And were you wounded?" "No," said the man; "no, sir, not exactly. But I couldn't make no one 'ear, so I come round to the back."

ON FISH LIARS

CANADA, so I've heard, possesses the greatest fishin' grounds in the world. They tell me that bass and trout anglers come hundreds o' miles jest to fish in our waters. That's mighty gratifying if it's so. I don't know 'bout the fishin' grounds but I do know we have some fust prize fish-liars in this country.

The difference atween a fish-liar and an ordinary one is that the fish-liar believes what he is tellin' you.

A fish-liar is a feller possessin' plenty of imagination, no conscience to speak of and a bum fishin' outfit. He is found in all parts of Canada and lost only where there ain't some easy mark to listen and believe. He is most active during his open season which is between May 1st and April 30th followin' year.

Judge Willing to Please.

Judges were very considerate in the old days. Lord Brampton, in his "Reminiscences," relates a story illustrating this:

Baron Martin, a famous English jurist of the old school, whose native leniency and sense of fun often placed him at the mercy of the very men he was trying, was once about to sentence an old offender charged with a petty theft.

"Look," said the Baron, with an assumption of severity; "I hardly know what to do, but you can take six months."

"I can't take that, my Lord; it's too much," said the prisoner, respectfully but firmly. "I can't take it. Your Lordship sees I didn't steal very much, after all."

The Baron indulged in one of his low, chuckling laughs before replying:

"Well, that's very true; ye didn't steal much," he said. "Well, then, ye can take four months. Will that do—four months?"

"Nay, my Lord, but I can't take that, either," was the reply.

"Then take three."

"That's nearer the mark, my Lord," the prisoner said, approvingly. "But I'd rather you made it two, if you will be so kind."

"Verra well, then, tak' two," said the judge, with an air of one who is pleased to have done the right thing at last. "And mind, don't come again. If you do I'll give yer—well, it all depends!"

FORTY YEARS OF SOLITARY CONFINEMENT

Convict Was Sentenced When a Boy For Torturing Children.

Boston, Mass., May 4.—Forty years in solitary confinement. This is the world's record of Jesse Pomeroy, who has just completed his 40th year in a small, poorly ventilated cell in the Massachusetts State's Prison at Charlestown, Mass.

When Pomeroy was a boy of 15 he was accused of torturing children in South Boston, Mass., and later when the bodies of several children were found showing they had been tortured to death, the lad was accused of murder, found guilty and sentenced to solitary confinement for life.

For many years the different Governors of Massachusetts have been appealed to in an effort on the part of the friends of the prisoner to have him freed or at least to have his terrible condition of life remedied at Charlestown. Nothing has ever been done. Whenever a movement was started to free the prisoner, stories appeared in the newspapers telling of crimes that Pomeroy has committed since in prison, and a damper was put on efforts to make his existence less miserable.

Agitation to Help Him.

After this 40 years of life in a dingy prison cell a movement is being started to help Pomeroy. Women's clubs in various cities are taking up the matter and seeing if something can't be done, while nearer home, District Attorney Joseph Pelletier, of Boston, is lecturing about New England, and advocating that something should be done for the prisoner.

District Attorney Pelletier said in his last lecture at the Revere House, Boston: "I don't advocate turning Jesse Pomeroy loose, but he should not be kept in solitary confinement. No man should be kept in solitary confinement. Yes, he did commit crime, but there are other crimes among us that are being committed every day, and some of these are just as bad. I think Pomeroy has been used cruelly, and I am doing all I can to help him."

Mother Still Lives.

Pomeroy's aged mother, Mrs. Ruth Pomeroy of 47 Pearl Street, North Weymouth, Mass., is the most pathetic figure in the Pomeroy case. She is 80, bent almost double with rheumatism, and is despondent at her failure in her 40 years of effort to free her son. All these years she has had no other thought. She has been to see in person, every Governor who has been elected in Massachusetts since her boy was sentenced, and she has never missed the one visit a month which the prison officials allow her. Outside of the prison guards, Mrs. Pomeroy is the only human being the poor wretch of a convict sees in his solitary cell, from one year's end to the other. He is allowed 30 minutes of exercise outside his cell, with a guard each day, but he sees no one else, and can not talk to his keeper.

Alleged Copies Held.

Many people in close touch with the case say that the stories which have kept Pomeroy all these years ing cast in his cell, of trying every few months to escape by cutting his cell bars, digging holes in the floor of his cell and by other acts of cunning, are lies invented by heartless persons.

Even those who declare they know it to be a fact that Pomeroy has misbehaved during his forty years of confinement at Charlestown say that it is a blot on the fair name of Massachusetts to keep him longer under the conditions that would drive the average man mad in a few weeks.

NEW YORK, May 4. — Although John D. Rockfeller, jr., was miles away from his father's estate at Pocantico Hills, "mourners" continued their marching Saturday in front of the Standard Oil Building in Lower Broadway, as a protest against the strike in Colorado coal fields, in which the Rockfellers are interested. Upton Sinclair was among the marchers. He was released from prison only Saturday after having paid a fine imposed for disorderly conduct.

Succumbs To Burns.

TORONTO, May 4. — From burns sustained while working at Byng Inlet recently, John F. Johnson, mechanic, employed by a Montreal company, died yesterday in the General Hospital. Johnson lived at 199 Winnokie avenue, Poughkeepsie, N.Y. An inquest was opened Saturday evening.

FEEDING CHICKS

Suggestions Given by Poultry Dressing Experimental Farm

Do not feed too soon: When the chick is hatched it has a sufficient supply of nourishment in the yolk of the egg to last it for several days. What the chick requires for the first few days is not feed but warmth and rest.

A little sand or grit first: When the chicks are removed to their brooding quarters there should be some coarse sand or fine chick grit scattered where they can have free access to it. They should then be left until they show positive signs of hunger which would be between the second and third day after hatching. They may then be given some bread crumbs that have been very slightly moistened with milk; this may be scattered on clean sand or chick grit. If being brooded by a hen she will see that no food is allowed to lie around, but if in a brooder that part of the food that the chicks do not pick up in a few minutes should be removed as nothing in feeding causes so much trouble as leaving food of that nature around until it is sour.

Feed for the first 10 or 12 days. The following daily ration of five feeds given about two and a half hours apart and continued from the time the chicks are two to three days out of the shell until 10, or 12 days of age may be altered or adopted to suit conditions:

Feed first:—Dry bread crumbs slightly moistened with milk.

Second feed:—Finely cracked mixed grains or commercial chick feed.

Third feed:—Rolled oats.

Fourth feed:—Dry bread crumbs moistened with milk.

Fifth feed:—Finely cracked mixed grains.

In addition to the above give the chicks daily a little green food such as grass, lettuce, sprouted oats, etc. Do not have the moistened bread sloppy but in a crumbly state and during this period let the chicks onto fresh soil or grass every day if possible.

Feed after 10 or 12 days. After the chicks are ten day to two weeks old, coarser foods may be followed. The infertile eggs may be boiled and mixed with the mash food and the bread and milk discontinued. Hoppers in which is put cracked grains and dry mash or rolled oats may be placed where the chicks can have free access to them. As soon as they become accustomed to the hoppers all hand feeding except the mash may be discontinued. If the chicks are on range it will be found that after a time they will ge careless about coming when called, at which time the mash may be dropped and dependance placed entirely on the hopper feeding.

Place grit and water, also a dish of sour milk if possible where the chicks will have free access to them. Nothing provides animal food in better form than does milk, the chicks like it and thrive on it.

LOSS OF LIFE IN ECCLES COLLIERY WAS COMPLETE, SAYS GOVERNOR

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 4.—Firm in the belief that all of the 172 men entombed in mine No. 5 at Eccles are dead as the result of Tuesday's explosion, Governor Hatfield returned from the stricken town Friday night. The governor, who, as a physician in the mining district of the state, has seen many explosions, said the explosion in No. 5 mine was the worst he had ever known. He believes that most of the miners were caught unawares and blown to pieces. "The force of the explosion," said the governor, "was so great that the surface coal was burned literally to coke. You could scrape it off with your hands. In my opinion the men were killed by the force of the explosion.'

Sailing Vessels Collide at Sea.

ST. PIERRE, Miquelon, May 4.—Twenty-six men, the crew of the French fishing schooner Jeanne D'Arc of St. Malo, were saved from drowning when the craft was sunk in a collision with the brigantine Galantry thirty miles off Sydney, C.B., Wednesday night. The survivors were brought here on the Galantry Saturday.

The men were rescued with great difficulty, as the Jeanne D'Arc sank almost immediately after the collision.

The new wooden spoons with slotted or perforated bowls save a lot of time in mixing cake batter.

GARAGE WITH FOLDING DOORS

The question of what kind of a door to use on the new garage is sometimes perplexing. Ease of operation, width of opening, security, and other features are all essential. Four doors, each two feet wide, are arranged by means of hinges and a roller track, so that when folded back they permit an open space eight feet six inches wide for the ingress and egress of the machine. When closed, it is first necessary to push each set of doors about three inches to one side in order to release them from the holding plates. It is then possible to double them back upon their hinges and fold them against the wall out of the way. This leaves nearly the entire front of the garage open. When the two sets of doors are brought together at the centre, and the lock is sprung, the door cannot be opened either by forcing inwards or sideways. They may be locked or unlocked from the outside quite as easily as from within.

Beginnings of British Commerce at Montreal

The Canadian Magazine for May contains a noteworthy historical article by A. Gordon Dewey, entitled "The Beginnings of British Commerce at Montreal." The article begins with the occupation of Montreal on September 8, 1760, which "marked an epoch in the development of its (Montreal's) commercial life, and the succeeding period was one of change and growth." There is also another fine historical sketch, that of "John Galt: Founder of Cities," by J. E. Wetherell, which is well illustrated. There is a splendid literary appreciation by Professor A. W. Crawford of Tennyson's "Maud," a carefully considered article on the work of the Canadian poet, Duncan Campbell Scott, by Bernard Muddiman, an apparently unanswerable defence of the Canadian Senate by George Clarke Holland, an insight into lumbering in British Columbia, illustrated, by Norman Rankin, besides several fine Canadian short stories and reproductions of paintings.

DEVELOPMENT OF LIFE ON THREE-FOLD PLAN ONLY TRUE DEVELOPMENT

The 16th verse of the 21st chapter of Revelations was the text of the Rev. Mr. Frost's sermon in Charlotte Street Methodist Church Sunday evening. "The length and the breadth and the height thereof are equal." These are the necessary dimensions for cubes, all the sides must be squares. Thus, the prophet imagined the Holy City, and painted a picture of it, drawing on his imagination. But we are not interested in an imaginative picture. This is a practical age, we see the real and our tastes lead us to make a practical application in character. This heavenly city was noted for its solidity, compactness, and unchangeability.

Life develops along the three dimension plan, the symbolism is that the length of the city means the individual tasks or occupations of men. The depth refers to the social relations while the height refers to the whole life of men, his individual tasks, and his relation to God which means religion. The speaker then gave other references relating to this three-fold plan of life. he turned to the 2nd chapter of Genesis, where the Garden of Eden is described in which man was placed with obligations. The coming of Eve brought social responsibilities. Christian life was not one of restrictions. Men must do justly and love kindness. In Paul the same three-fold idea is exemplified where he says, "Now abideth Faith, Hope, Charity." There is no true development unless it comes along the three-fold line.

The speaker then gave as an example of a one dimension development, the miser, the minister who had too many activities, or a student who concentrated too much on social and athletic work, and of a hermit who shuts out the world and tries to live only in relation to God. The business man who succeeds in business and neglects religion, is developing along the one dimension line. Mahomet was cited as an example of two dimension development where he was successful in spreading his religion and in acquiring religion, but he had no regard for the rights of others.

The three dimension life brings out an all round development. The speaker referred for an illustration to that famous painting, The Angelus, where the hoe means the individual task. The two characters, the man and wife in the picture, represent society or social relationship, while the church bell pealing forth the call to evening prayer, represents the religious side of life. The picture preaches the development of life on a three-fold plan. The way to get this three-fold development was to love God and our neighbors as ourselves. If life proceeds along this line, social problems will be properly solved by the application of the Golden Rule.

Miss Richardson sang the solo part of an anthem, and a male quartette rendered a pleasing selection.

Why Firemen Hurry

Little Ross, aged seven, had been around the corner inspecting the fire station. He came home to tell his mother of what he had seen there. He said:

"And, mamma, even if they are just in the middle of sweeping the floor, they drop the broom and rush off to the fire, and even in the night time when they are in bed if the bell rings they jump up and dress and go to the fire, 'cause if they didn't do that when they got there the fire would be all out."

WHERE PROMISES ARE MADE GOOD

Every detail of our workshop, including the mechanical equipment, is planned to make it a model of accuracy and convenience, which from your standpoint means satisfaction and prompt service in the manufacture of new glasses or repairs on old ones.

Whether we originally made your glasses or not, we can immediately duplicate a broken lens, no matter how complicated. If you meet with a misfortune of this kind, simply telephone us and if we haven't your prescription on file, we will send for the broken glasses, and when you call a little later, you will find them waiting for you.

We have all Mr. Browett's Prescriptions, covering the entire time he was in business in this city.

"PEBLO" Quality Lenses are what we use in all our work. They are the Best—we use no others.

SUNDAY SERVICES AT PARK ST. CHURCH

The services at Park Street Baptist Church yesterday were greeted with exceptionally large congregations. The pulpit was occupied by the pastor, Rev. F. A. Connors, B.A., who in the morning delivered an interesting sermon on "The Constancy of Christianity." The commemoration of the Lord's Supper was observed at the close of the service.

The evening service proved of a most instructive and strong appeal to the unsaved, that of the subject "Ample Provision for the Gospel."

The Sunday School was also greeted with large crowds, there being fully 250 in all out for the service.

Since Easter Sunday there have been sixty-three Baptisms at the church.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

POLICE COURT CASE.

Editor Review:

Dear Sir,—Permit us space in your paper to reply to the police court case Saturday morning. There was no case whatever, it was only an accident, and if the Magistrate had looked for our records instead of the evidence of P. C. Reid, we would not have had a hearing. One of us merely caught the toe of his boot on the plank of the bridge as we met the young ladies, whom we knew, but we had no intentions of even speaking. Had we known as much then as we do now, we would have had a lawyer to defend us.

Yours truly,

ALBERT LEAHY.

ENGLISH TEACHERS ARE NOT OVER-PAID

London, May 4.—The salary question is an acute one with teachers in England. Over 2,000 delegates representing 90,000 members, attended the annual conference of the National Union of Teachers at Lowestoft.

Mr. W. B. Steer of Derby, the new president, referred to the status of the teacher. "The present unattractiveness of the teaching profession," he said, "is now standing in the way of every educational reform, and it must be overcome before progress can become possible.

"At least 14,650 fully qualified teachers are not earning a living wage.

"One headmaster receives more than £500 per year, but two others receive less than £50.

There are 103 headmasters who receive more than £400, but 501 who receive less than £100.

Similarly there are 79 headmistresses who receive between £300 and £350 per year, while three receive less than £50 and 1,162 less than £80.

"The Board of Education and the local education authority each disclaim responsibility and proclaim the other to be at fault.

"Each bids the National Union of Teachers to centre its attack on the others' purse—'Codlin's your friend, not Short'—but each declares that he is Short.

"The average salary of £146 3s. which the nation pays its certificated masters is inadequate, for with equal capacity a man can secure much better remuneration in other professions. The same may be said of the average salary of £101 to the certificated mistresses."

Origin of Stammering.

A new theory as to the origin of stammering is set forth by C. S. Bluemel in a book on that subject. It is usually said that stammering is due to spasm or to incoordination of muscles, but this is no explanation, as it does not tell what causes the spasm or the incoordination. According to Mr. Bluemel, stammering is the result of transient auditory amnesia—forgetfulness of the sound of words—which produces the secondary conditions of mental confusion and fear, these being intensified in some cases by autosuggestion. The initial cause may be slight and limited to early life. It may even lessen and disappear, while the secondary effects remain as acquired habits.

America.

Amerigo Vespucci's letters about the new world were made the basis of a book (about 1507) called "Cosmography," by a certain Waldseemuller, who suggested that, as Amerigo was the discoverer of this "fourth part of the world," it should be called after him. The name took and, first applied to South America, was given later to the entire western continent. James Bryce remarks: "The series of incidents by which the name of a Florentine adventurer was given, first to a continent he probably did not discover and then to another which he never saw, is as curious as any thing in geographical history."

Richard, William, Albert, Edward, Herbert, all of Douro.

The funeral will be held Tuesday morning from the homestead, Lot 3, concession 8, Douro, to St. Josephs Church and Cemetery.

Poaching an Egg.

The food value of an egg is enormous, but an invalid soon tires of eggs served in the ordinary way. Here is a method, involving some trouble, but worth it for the sick person's sake. Break an egg into a flat dish of cold water and let it remain covered with muslin for twelve hours. Then pour the water off very gently indeed, so as to prevent the egg going with it. Now poach the latter in boiling water, adding just a tiny pinch of salt. This, nicely served, can be eaten by any one, for it melts in the mouth, literally. Two might be cooked, for done in this way one egg is not much.—London Answers.

Hot vinegar is good to serve with spinach.

MODEL SYSTEM OF HANDLING THE GARBAGE

German and Dutch Cities Are Ahead in This Work.

German and Dutch cities have a model system of handling their ashes and other refuse which is certainly much ahead of the insanitary methods in vogue in many Canadian and American cities. Covered receptacles are used at the houses and all refuse is carted away in covered wagons, thus doing away with the danger from flies, and flying specks of dust, which ares cattered boardcast when the refuse is taken away in open wagons. Their plan is economical as well as sanitary for the city of Amsterdam is said to obtain a revenue of $20,000 from the sweepings of the street alone. This model system which is used in more than 150 cities in Germany and Holland includes covered cans for the ashes, street sweepings and garbage; also motor trucks, both flyless and dustless; the sections of the truck going directly unopened to the furnace of the destructor. The power generated by the refuse supplies the electric trucks and the rest is used to light and heat public buildings.

There is no odor and no dust, for the collecting wagons carry three or four detachable receptacles and the openings to them have sliding covers. The closed garbage can be inverted upon one of these receptacles and by a slight movement the covers of the can and of the receptacle are slipped to one side and the contents of the can fall into the receptacle without any dust and without exposing the contents of the can to the air. The pulling back of the can closes both covers.

At the destruction plant the receptacles are taken by a travelling crane to the incinerator, where the contents are dropped into the fire. In the furnace the combustion is such that there is neither smoke, odor nor dust as the ashes and the garbage are mixed in the same receptacle. The refuse becomes to a certain extent sanitary, because the lye and potash, already contained in the ashes act like a disinfectant for a reasonable length of time, preserving the garbage from decaying, especially during the warm months. Consequently, being odorless, the garbage will not attract flies either in the house or on the streets.

The ashes also act like sand in cleansing garbage cans, while the lye and the potash serve again as a disinfectant when the cans are returned to damp cellars.

When steaming velvet try the following method: Take an ordinary colander, place this upside down over a basin partly filled with boiling wa-

LOST IN WOODS

Windsor Junction, N.S., Woman Wandered for 48 Hours.

HALIFAX, May 4.—Alone in the woods for two days and nights and nearly driven insane by fear were the experiences suffered by Mrs. Owen, aged 60, when she tried to walk from Windsor Junction, N.S., to the home of some friends near Sackville, N.S. Mrs. Owen belongs to Maple Grove, Hantsport, N.S.

After walking five or six miles, from the railway station at Windsor Junction, on Thursday, Mrs. Owen strayed off the track and during the night got lost in the forest. Without sleep wandered around, falling into a pond and getting out with difficulty. Her boots were torn from her feet, while her clothes were in ribbons. Saturday morning Mrs. Owen, hysterical with fright and exhaustion, reached a road near Fairview, where Rupert Purcell, employed by the I. C. R., discovered her and sent her to Halifax.

MEXICAN FEDERALS ALMOST CAUSED BATTLE NEAR VERA CRUZ

TRUCE VIOLATED

CARRANZA REFUSES TO SUSPEND FIGHTING DURING MEDIATION.

VERA CRUZ, May 4.—After Saturday's acute alarm, when it was reported a considerable force of Mexicans had attacked the American outpost at the water plant, nine miles out, all was quiet here yesterday. Many of the American soldiers attended mass in the old cathedral in the morning, while in the afternoon great crowds attended the bull fight.

The question of the food supply still occupied general attention, but it has not reached a stage which may be regarded as critical, although many products have run short.

Strict orders were issued yesterday from headquarters for the American soldiers and marines in Vera Cruz and the vicinity to remain in the same positions and not to advance or to bring on an encounter with the Mexican troops.

During the alarm over the flurry at the waterworks at El Tejar Saturday, detachments of marines and bluejackets were prepared for an immediate landing. Field guns were put into readiness for conveyance ashore, but at the last moment, when headquarters had established the fact that there was no need for assistance from the fleet, all orders were cancelled.

Official reports declare not a shot was fired, but other sources are persistent in their opinion that shots were exchanged by the outposts.

Fight Must Go On.

EL PASO, Texas, May 4. — Gen. Carranza has formally declined the suggestion of the mediators, that he cease hostilities against Huerta, pending the outcome of the plan of mediation. His note, sent to Washington Saturday, was made public here yesterday.

Mine Hit a Friend.

MEXICO CITY, May 4. — A despatch said to have come from Manzanillo on the Pacific coast, announces that the Mexican steamship Luella was sunk yesterday in the harbor by the explosion of a mine which had been planted for the U. S. protected cruiser Raleigh. No loss of life is mentioned. The steamer belonged to the Pacific Railway Co.

Food at Tampico Bad.

VERA CRUZ, May 4.—Conditions in Tampico are daily growing more serious, according to Capt. Blackadder of the Ward liner Comaguay, which arrived here yesterday flying the Cuban flag. He said the water supply had been entirely cut off and that conditions in the city were very filthy. The inhabitants were bordering on famine and prices were continually increasing, eggs fetching $1 apiece, potatoes and tomatoes 50 cents a pound and other foods in proportion. With the exception of U. S. Consul Clarence A. Miller, and his assistant, there are probably not half a dozen Americans in Tampico, according to the captain.

HIGH EXPENSES

British Budget Has Doubled in Past Twenty Years

LONDON, May 4.—David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will introduce his sixth budget in the House of Commons to-day. The estimates of the national expenditure are expected to amount to about £210,000,000 or £5,000,000 more than was spent by the country during the most expensive year of the Boer war. Just twenty years ago the annual national expenditure was £100,000,000 sterling. Increased taxation is a necessity for the Chancellor cannot count on such an increase in revenue as the trade boom brought last year. How Lloyd George plans to meet the heavy expenditure is yet an official secret, but it is generally believed that a feature of the next taxation will be a substantial increase in the super-tax on large incomes.

At present the super-tax of six pence on the pound is paid on incomes of £5,000 and upwards, but the first £3,000 is not charged.

The new budget is described in advance by Ministerial speakers as a "popular" budget, being so held together that it is not likely that the taxes will contain any proposal tending to raise the cost of living for the wage-earners. A repeal of the remaining sugar duty in fact is predicted in some quarters, but in the best informed Liberal circles this is declared impossible under the present circumstances.

W. H. HILL, Esq.,
Agent for Fidelity and Casualty Co., of New York,
Peterborough,

Dear Sir:—

RE-POLICY NO. 4240188

I beg to acknowledge receipt of the cheque of the Fidelity and Casualty Company, of New York, for the sum of $5,000.00, being the amount of my claim for double liability under my policy in this Company arising out of the accident which resulted in the loss of the sight of my left eye. I wish you would be kind enough to convey to the Company my thanks and warm appreciation for the prompt and entirely satisfactory manner in which my claim under my policy has been settled in full.

It may be of interest for you to know that when I first took this accident policy in your Company, it was due solely to the very friendly and cordial relationship that has always existed between your agent, Mr. George E. Elliott and myself, but when I received the Company's cheque this morning through your office I was deeply impressed with the fact that I in common with the vast majority of people never before realised how prudent and important it is to carry an accident policy in a company that settles so promptly.

Yours faithfully,

EMINENT ENGLISH CLERGYMAN AND M.P. PASSES AWAY ON BOAT

While on His Way From Niagara to Toronto on Eve of Series of Addresses Famous London Preacher Suffers Fatal Attack of Heart Disease—Entered British Commons in 1910.

TORONTO, May 4.—On his way to conduct brotherhood rallies in Canada, Rev. C. Silvester Horne, M.A., M.P., president of the National Brotherhood Council of England, died suddenly of heart trouble at 8.30 Saturday evening on board the Corona, just after the vessel had entered Toronto bay.

Mr. Horne left England, accompanied by his wife, some weeks ago to give a series of lectures at Yale University, and afterwards intended to proceed to Canada to address several meetings in the interests of the brotherhood federation, in which he was so greatly interested.

The suddenness of her husband's death was a great shock to Mrs. Horne, who was formerly Catharine Cozens-Hardy, daughter of the Right Hon. Cozens-Hardy, Master of the Rolls in England, but she is bearing up wonderfully well under the terrible strain.

The body was conveyed from the wharf by A. W. Miles' private ambulance to the residence of N. W. Rowell, M.P.P., whose guest Mr. Horne was to have been during his stay in Toronto.

REV. SILVESTER HORNE, M.P.

The ministers of Toronto held a short and impressive funeral service at Mr. Rowell's house at nine o'clock last night, after which it was announced that the body would be conveyed to Montreal to-day and taken to his home in England.

Born in Cuckfield, Sussex, England, on April 15, 1865, Rev. Charles Silvester Horne received his early education at Newport Grammar School. He subsequently studied theology at Mansfield College, Oxford, and gained his M. A. at Glasgow University.

He first entered the service of the church when he was elected minister of Kensington Chapel in 1888, but he resigned this position in 1903 to take up the duties as Congregational minister at Whitfield's Tabernacle, Tottenham Court road.

Mr. Horne entered the British Parliament in 1910, when he was successful as a radical at Ipswich in 1910.

In 1892 he married Catherine, the eldest daughter of Rt. Hon. Cozens-Hardy, the Master of the Rolls. He is also survived by four sons and three daughters.

The first meeting which was to have been addressed by the late minister was at the Western Congregational Church, Spadina avenue, yesterday morning.

A large congregation was present in the expectation of hearing a man who was so beloved among their fellow members in England, and immediately the Rev. James W. Pedley came forward it could be seen that something unexpected had happened.

The shock of the announcement of Rev. Mr. Horne's death was terrific. For some minutes the congregation appeared stunned, but when the people at last fully realized the sadness of the situation there was hardly a person in the whole church who was not moved to tears. Men and women alike gave vent to their feeling, and it was some minutes before Mr. Pedley could proceed with his address.

Caillaux Would Fight.

PARIS, May 4.—Joseph Caillaux, who was re-elected to the Chamber of Deputies in the general election, held last week, has challenged Fernand D'Aillieres, the Liberal candidate to the chamber against him in the Mamers district, to fight a duel.

M. Caillaux was involved in the Gaston Calmette affair, and he resigned the Ministry of Finance after the killing of Calmette, editor of Le Figaro, by his wife last March. The challenge was sent, it is explained here, because M. D'Aillieres insulted the Mamers voters by posting bills saying clean electors would refuse to become "accomplices in crime."

Lineman Killed.

KINGSVILLE, Ont., May 4.—Carl Marriott, a lineman employed by the Essex Light & Power Co., was electrocuted near Leamington Saturday afternoon, when a pole, which he and other men were erecting, sagged over against a live electric light wire and snapped it, one end falling on Marriott. Frank McGuire, the foreman of the gang, had a narrow escape. Part of the broken wire fell on his wrist, and the resultant shock knocked him down, but he soon recovered and endeavored to resuscitate Marriott, who proved to be beyond aid.

Many Families Have Been Told to Leave Kiev, Russia

CHICAGO, May 4.—That a fresh anti-Jewish crusade has been inaugurated at Kiev, Russia, whereby 580 Hebrew families have been ordered to leave the city despite the petition of many Christians, is contained in a cable received Saturday by the Chicago Daily News. The despatch, which is dated Kiev, May 1, says:

"After the closing here of three private high schools for girls, 580 Jewish familes have been ordered to leave the city. Christian householders petitioned the Government in vain, to revoke the order, as the expulsion of Jews would mean the ruin of many house owners. Notable citizens called on the local governor, Gen. Sokozkin to get his help for the Jews and the community, but they received a curt refusal."

Duncan McMartin Was Pioneer In Cobalt Development

TORONTO, May 4.—Duncan McMartin, mine owner, real estate millionaire, died on Saturday night at the Wellesley Hospital from heart trouble, brought on by an attack of pneumonia. For a week he hovered between life and death, and it was his strong constitution which enabled him to fight off the end for so long.

Mr. McMartin, who was 44 years old, was born in 1869 at Martintown, Glengarry County, Ont. His first position after leaving school was railroading, then followed railroad contracting, and subsequently gold and silver mining interests, in which he met with great success.

When Alexander La Rose, a blacksmith, discovered the La Rose mine, Duncan McMartin, his brother John McMartin, E. A. Dunlap of Toronto, Noah Timmins and L. H. Timmins of Montreal, formed a syndicate and bought the mine. At that time McMartin was one of the contractors for the construction of the T. & N. O. Railway.

In the last general election Mr. McMartin was candidate in the Conservative interests in Glengarry, but was defeated. His taste, however, never ran toward political life, and he was not a member of any club. In religion he was a Presbyterian. He attended strictly to his business and his home.

MILITIA MEN ARE ACCUSED

THE COLORADO NATIONAL GUARDSMEN ARE TO BE TRIED FOR MURDER.

WOMEN SAY NOT ONE HALF THE HORRORS HAVE BEEN TOLD

DENVER, Col., May 4—Prominent among the day's developments in Colorado's strike war are the preparations for the court-martialling and the arrest and trial in civil court of the eighty-six members of Company "B," Colorado National Guards, who, with two officers of the state militia, were held responsible by the jury for the death of two women and eleven children in the burning tents of Ludlow, and the gathering of representatives for the special session of the Legislature, which open to-day.

That a resolution to impeach Governor Ammons will be introduced is virtually certain. Whether the House will adopt such a measure is still a question.

The report submitted Saturday night by the Military Commission, a board created by Governor Ammons himself, finding that the soldiers deliberately set fire to and looted the tents at Ludlow, where the women and children were cremated, will be urged as the strongest evidence of Ammons' alleged inability to govern the state.

When the Legislature assembles a body of 500 women will demand an audience. They are members of the Colorado Women's Peace Association, who sent a committee to Ludlow to investigate the situation. The committee has returned with the report that not one-half of the horrors have been told.

British Soldiers Shunning Booze.

LONDON, May 4.—Rev. E. W. Norris, chaplain to the forces at Chatham, in addressing a men's service in Rochester Cathedral, bore testimony to the extraordinary spread of sobriety in the army. There were, he said, 56,000 total abstainers among the British troops to-day. In some regiments there were from 500 to 700 abstainers. In the first regiment he was in there was not a single temperance man.

Boy Is Set Free.

GALT, May 4.—Before the police magistrate in the juvenile court, with closed doors, the case of Walter Evans, a fifteen-year-old boy, charged with an attempt to fire the C. Turnbull jutting factory, was heard Saturday. A policeman testified to a confession made by the boy that he had purposely lighted a match and thrown it into a bin of inflammable stuff, but had subsequently put out the blaze. His idea was that in case of incipient fire he would be rewarded for detecting and extinguishing it. This admission the accused withdrew, and as there was no direct evidence, the boy was let go on suspended sentence.

PETES HIT IN PINCHES WITH SCHETTLER TWIRLING

Come From Behind By Clouting in Seventh and Eighth

(Special to The Review.)

Youngstown, May 4.—The game between the Peterboro Canadian Leaguers and Barons, a local High School team was all Peterboro, the High School brigade putting up a mighty poor argument. Blount's men scored four in the fifth and three in the seventh, falling on Morgan, a young southpaw twirler, who has been aspiring to a job on the team. Bob Sterling and Ken Tracey divided the pitching, and allowed two runs, four bits, and struck out twelve.

Mully Miller did the receiving in the opening stanza, but received a foul tip on the right hand, causing a nasty gash between the middle fingers. Mully was forced to retire and will be out of the game for a week. This is the first accident to any of the Lift Lock crew, and Manager Blount is sincerely hoping it is the last. Kelly worked the remainder of the game.

Schrage on Regulars.

Schrage replaced Eddie Price at short, and worked in well with Gorman, King and Byrne. He also had a single, as did Swartz, Kelly, Sterling and Fox. King, Byrne and Gorman each had two hits.

Sunday Game.

On Sunday afternoon the Petes did battle with Girards, a fast semi-pro. team, and it was a battle all the way through. The semi-pro. outfit scored two in the fifth, but the Petes came through with three in the seventh, and then put the game on ice by obtaining two more in the eighth. Louie Schettler went the whole route, and allowed six hits, issued four passes, and struck out seven. Griffins, a big-boned individual who opposed him, is credited with having a try-out with Connie Mack. For the first six innings he permitted five scattered hits, but the Petes started a seventh inning rally and Mr. Griffins went further into the bush.

Schrage gave way to Price, and the latter grasped the opportunity to show Blount he was there. He stepped into the pill in fine style, securing three hits out of four times up. Schrage is good, but he has to step fast to shove any of the infielders out in the cold.

Louie Schettler also displayed his ability to wield the willow, and had the same average. Ryberg, Blount, Fox, King, and Gorman all had one bingle. Fox's hit was the most timely, coming in the seventh with two men on, both scoring.

The Petes were in a bad hole right off the reel when Louie filled the bases and had only one down. The next man up drove one at Schettler, who clouted it down and recovering the ball in time to get the runner at the plate. Ryberg drove the ball to Gorman and got the batter. It was a nifty double play and opened the eyes of a few of the spectators.

That Blount, Fox and Swartz will cover the outfield for the Petes was made known by Manager Blount last night, when he let out Gaffney. The boy was fairly fast, and gave promise, but he lacked experience.

The players still are: Miller, Kelly, Ryberg, Sterling, Schettler, Tracey, Cresswell, Belting, Chaney, Gorman, King, Price, Schrage, Byrne, Rockford, Swartz, Fox and Blount. Some will have to go, and in all probability Schrage, Rockford and Chaney will be the birds.

ORGANIZE CHURCH BASEBALL LEAGUE

Athletic organizations of the Peterboro churches are requested to send a representative to a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. to-night to discuss the advisability of organizing a Baseball League for the coming summer. The meeting is called for 7.30 and every church planning to enter should have it's representative on hand.

ON THE LINKS

The membership limit of the Peterboro Golf Club, 125 ladies and 100 gents., has been attained. Owing to the large membership it was found necessary to enlarge the club rooms at the links, and the work is now being executed. Prospects point to a big season with the local golfers.

The executive of the Lindsay Golf Club have decided to procure the services of a professional instructor for the last two weeks in May, and put the game on a firmer basis.

BASEBALLITIS

FRANK KELLY, CATCHER.

Born at Erie, Pa., in the year 1892. Height 5 in., 11 ft., weight 165 lbs. Frank broke into organized baseball the season 1911, with the Erie Club in the Central League, and finished the season with that Club. Was again with Erie in the same League the following year, 1913 again tried out with Erie but had couple of veteran catchers in Shang and O'Leary to beat out for the position, and was let out at the start of the season. He played semi-professional ball throughout the state the balance of the season. Kelly has the ideal build for a catcher, is very fast, and has shown good form in practice this spring. Will battle it out with Ryberg for second string catcher.

LACROSSE

Marmora as of old has a kick coming. Some of their outbursts of literature re the grouping of the teams is as follows:

"The arrangement is so obviously unfair that the local club will put in a strong protest. Why Marmora should drive through Havelock and six miles the other side of it to Norwood for their games and Norwood do the same is more than anyone can understand.

Norwood should be in group 20 as it is closer to every town in that district than Havelock and Havelock is certainly much better situated to reach the towns in group 19. Apparently Mr. Lancaster has already forgotten his promise to work for the best interests of Eastern Ontario, or he has the mistaken idea that Havelock comprises the whole of Eastern Ontario."

Back to the dear old days of yore. Lacrosse has been started. Central Park on Saturday afternoon was the scene of the first practice, and judging by the number out and the numerous railbirds, the national game is to take well during the coming season. Some fifteen players were on the job very early and had an hours' fun when they were replaced by fifteen other players. Several of the old timers were on the job, and displayed no small amount of vim, and their assistance as coaches will be of great assistance to the team.

To-morrow night another practice will be held in the same place, and as there are more sticks on hand, everyone wishing to get into the game is invited out. It is the expectations of the club to be able to select two teams and play a game next Saturday. If you want to be in the swim, be on hand early to-morrow evening.

A consignment of boys' sticks is on the way, so the juveniles will be given an opportunity to start the game by the end of the week.

Joe Lally is back east after rambling all over the western section of the country booming the national game and reports grand success. In his wanderings the Cornwall veteran saw over three hundred school leagues formed or in the process of formation. Winnipeg led the list with 50, Vancouver 34, Calgary 30, Victoria 28. The centres he visited were:

British Columbia — Vancouver, Victoria, New Westminster, Enderby, Armstrong, Vernon, Kelowna, Revelstoke, Nelson, Cranbrook, Fernie.

Alberta — Coleman, Blairmore, Hillcrest, Frank, Bellevue, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Calgary, High River, Red Deer, Edmonton.

Saskatchewan—Saskatoon, Regina, Moose Jaw, Swift Current, Indian Head.

Manitoba—Brandon, Winnipeg.

Ontario—Port Arthur, Fort William, North Bay.

Though he did not visit Kenora, Sudbury or Copper Cliff, teams are being organized there.

Mr. Lally placed 10,000 sticks on his trip—that is the proof of real business. "We will keep plugging," said Joe. "Sentiment is the life of amateur sport. The lacrosse boys are out for the honor and glory of their schools and towns. Studies are the first thing for the schoolboy with lacrosse a good second. We drew the distinction between sport and sportsment and made it clear that amateurism is the real foundation of all sport, and the cleaner the amateursim the more prosperous the sport. It won't be long before we shall be able to produce Drynans and Schofields and Bonnells in plenty."

The Campbellford Intermediate team were out Saturday and under the leadership of W. J. Rae were put through a lively drill. Some of the aspirants to a place are: Betts, Shannon, Mitchell, McRae, Weston brothers, Roe brothers, Lowery, Atkinson, Reid, Adams, Rellis, Peeling, Montgomery, P. Naylor, Holmes, Runions brothers, Doxsee, Nadoo, Sargiuson, Shaw, B. Naylor, Clements, Mains, Nesbitt, DeGruchy, Heppell, Blute, Smith, Stewart, and O'Neill.

Some good lacrosse names amongst the bunch at that.

Earthworms.

When a dry season or winter approaches the earthworms burrow deeply into the ground. At a depth varying from six inches to two feet each worm coils up into a little ball. By the aid of secreted slime it makes a case of dirt round itself and in this state it remains dormant until abundant rains or the spring thaws call it back to a more active life.

A Useful Sphere.

"What are your ideas about women holding governmental positions?"

"I'm in favor of it, only, as a guarantee of good faith, I think we ought to get those English militant suffragetes to join fire departments instead of starting blazes."

SPORTING COMMENT

Evidently the Feds. are giving the organized forces some worry, as it has leaked out that big league representatives have been clocking the attendance at the enemy's games. According to the clockers the opening at Baltimore drew some 16,000 people, while about 42,000 attended the series. Organized forces are gloating over the fact that their clockers have discovered that the Feds. are padding their figures. At any rate, the Feds. drew as many in one game as Dunn's Baltimore Internationals did throughout the entire series.

Lack of condition, lack of combined strength and nine runs lost the first exhibition game of the season for the Hamilton club, as the Strollers of Toronto shoved ten men across the plate. The Hamilton pitchers were wild. The team has suffered more than any of the clubs through bad weather, and will have to be favored with sunshine this week or it will be woefully shy on opening day.

Mausolus from the H. H. Roberts' stable ran a mile slowed up in 1.47 1-5 on a slow track, and is now being regarded as a contender for the Plate.

City Leaguers held Lee's Toronto club to close scores, then the Toronto crew smothered Niagara University, who were expected to make matters interesting. Then again Toronto amateurs beat Hamilton 10-9. There is much joy in Toronto, likewise some glee and a few smiles, especially in the case of Knotty, who loves Hamilton like as much as Rockefeller loves a phoney two-bit piece.

Patrick Jones, of the Hamilton Herald, is a reckless youth. He has "bust" in poetry with the following literary classic:

Don't be harsh boys, give 'em a chance,
They promise to do better to-day;
Their opening stunts were not of the best,
There was no class to their play;
The fielders fielded but they couldn't bat,
And the jury groaned as in the stand it sat;
But, overlook their awful fall,
Old Jup. Pluv. is to blame for it all.

And we think Knotty Lee would reply in a strain like this:

"'Twas but a year ago to-day, how well do I remember,
The fans began an anvil song, which lasted till September.
But none were found who would this plea advance,
'Don't be harsh, boys, give 'em a chance.'"

All the clubs on the circuit are claiming a winner, which is quite natural, but Peterboro cannot be overlooked. Blount has his men going in good style, judging by reports from the training camp, and as none of the clubs are exactly ready and fit for the falling of the flag the local team will get off to a good start, which is a portion of the battle.

We always knew Tom Nelson, of the Brantford Club, was a real sport, but when the Brantford Expositor in commenting on the Review's comment of the raising of the League classification, says the Brantford owners do not or never have considered the money end of it, we ask, Who is this man Nelson? He is down in the directory of the Telephone City as ticket agent of the G. T. R., but judging by the Expositor's statement, we are evidently mistaken and possibly the genial Tom is now president of the road. Money is not considered. Yes, any Canadian or other League magnate would give you a dozen "throwing eggs" for a dozen of newly laid any day in the week. Judging by the showing of the Brantford club last season we agree with the Expositor. Money was not considered.

It is not because of a fluke that Hugh Jennings has his Tigers out in front. A glimpse at the club batting averages of the American League shows the Tigers at the top of the heap with the neat average of .258. The Yankees are close behind with an average of .255. Cleveland, despite their tail end position, in the league, are third with .252. Washington is going very badly with the stick, hitting only .180, which goes to show that the team is being helped along with very good slab work. Connie Mack's world's champs are hitting .230.

The Feds are kicking the leather to all corners of the arena, the Chicago club being out in front with an average of .270, although the club is in fifth position in the league standing.

First baseman Mills, whom St. Thomas purchased from Saginaw, has written the club that he has decided to do the Lillian Russell stunt and quit the game.

Shaughnessey has suspended Pitchers Donovan and Kane for failure to report.

Dusty Bullock may be sold to St. Thomas by the Senators. The dusty boy is anxious to get back in Western Ontario.

Bobby Kerr, the greatest sprinter Canada ever produced, winner of the 200 meter race at the Olympic in 1907, is acting as business manager of the Hamilton club and will accompany the team on its trips. If the team breaks at the gun like Bobby used to and shows as much speed.—If.

Whether it would be advisable to run an eight team league with a single schedule, similar to last season or have the eight teams grouped and play a double schedule or have a six team league, allow each team to play two outside men and have a double schedule—these are the problems confronting the Mercantile Baseball League and which will be settled at their next meeting.

Looking at them from every angle and considering the suggestions made at the organidation meeting the last mentioned appears to be the most logical. Last season this league was composed of eight teams and they played a single schedule which was far from being satisfactory. Four of the eight teams were comparatively strong while the other four were decidedly weak, thus interest lagged unless the first four teams were playing. A little mishap may decide a game as the game last year between the Bankers and Typos was all Bankers after the Pressman's pitcher was injured. If a double schedule had been worked the Typos would have had an opportunity to come back, therefore it is readily seen that an eight team league and a single schedule cannot prove satisfactory and it would be impossible owing to the want of diamonds to have an eight team league and play a double schedule.

The idea of having two teams amalgamate and enter one team thus cutting the number of teams down to four would perhaps set out an excellent class of ball but there would be several average ball players without a place on any of the teams. If the league could be run with a few more men it would be better. Several of the teams say they wouldn't join with another club so it is improbable that that suggestion will be adopted.

Coming to the last idea of having six teams and allowing each team to use two outside men, this as stated above appears to be the only way out of the difficulty. It would be a very fair article of ball and the two extra men clause would allow any of the teams to bring in a battery if they wished to.

With the Riverside Park available and perhaps the Oval it would be a very simple matter to play a double schedule with the six teams and this would set the league on a firmer basis. Thus, the six team league as it will afford pastime for quite a number, good ball for the fans can be run off with a double schedule, looks the best idea of the lot.

The officers elected could be improved upon and if they get six properly organized teams in they should have a banner year. The teams with the appearance of having a good season are:— Drafting Room, Machine Shop, Printers, Bankers and De Laval.

McFADDEN—LONG.

Miss Ethel Vera Long, of Auburn, was united in marriage last Saturday night to Mr. Robt. Allen McFadden, of the north end of the city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. E. Johnson, pastor of the Tabernacle, at the pastor's residence, 633 Aylmer Street. Mr. and Mrs. McFadden will reside with the groom's father in the North End of the city.

JEFFERS—GIBSON.

Toronto, May 4.—The Bloor Street Presbyterian Church, decorated with quantities of white flowers and ferns, was the scene of a large and fashionable wedding on Saturday afternoon, when the marriage was solemnized between Miss Ethelwyn Monro Gibson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin Gibson and Mr. Wellington John Jeffers, of Montreal, son of Dr. and Mrs. Wellington Coleman Jeffers, of Lindsay, Ont. The service was taken by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Neill, assisted by the groom's uncle. Mr. Gordon Mills presided at the organ and played soft music throughout the ceremony, and during the signing of the register Mr. Arthur Brown sang "Love's Coronation." The bride, who was escorted to the alter by her father, looked lovely in her wedding dress of ivory satin duchess and lace, with veil of Brussels net caught with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried an exquisite shower of white roses, orchids, and white heather and wore the groom's gift, a cluster diamond ring. The bride was attended by two bridesmaids, Miss Blanche Perry, of Cleveland, and Miss Helen Bryant, of Toronto, and a flower girl, her cousin, Miss Emily MacIntosh.

Miss Perry was wearing a quaint white gown with flounces of lace and panniers of green net. Miss Bryant was in green satin and silver lace, both wearing white hats with green butterfly bows and carrying bouquets of Molly roses. The groom's gifts to them were pearl and peridot bar pins. The little flower girl was in a dainty white frock with wide green satin sash, white hat with marguerites and green ties, and she carried a basket of red roses and marguerites. Mr. Missleu, of Montreal, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Murray Thompson, Mr. A. Stanbury, Mr. A. Brown, M. P. E. Pentecost, Mr. Anderson, and the bride's two brothers, Mr. Goodwin and Mr. Adair Gibson.

After the ceremony the bridal party and guests drove to the residence of the bride's father, in North Huron Street, where Mrs. Gibson held a reception, wearing copper crepe de chene and black hat with bouquet of lilies and violets. Mrs. Jeffers, mother of the groom, was in blue charmeuse with black tunic and bouquet of white and yellow roses. Mr. and Mrs. Jeffers left later for their wedding trip before going to their home in Montreal, the bride travelling in a suit of Dutch blue and hat with French flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Downs, of 782 Water Street, left on the 4.30 C. P. R. Sunday afternoon, for a few days visit with relatives in Toronto.

Mrs. Lamb, of Toronto, is in the city, visiting her sisters, The Misses Rubidge, Stewart Street.

Mr. John Lang, of Toronto, spent the week-end at the home of his mother, Mrs. Lang, Hunter Street.

Mesdames J. C. Davidson, A. Palmer, of Gilmour Street, Conway, Brewer, Common and Miss M. A. Watt, representing St. John's W. A., Mesdames E. B. Clegg, Joseph Mills, Hounsell, (Dr.) Cameron, Sharpe, and Miss M. H. Poole, leave for Toronto Tuesday morning via C. P. R. to attend the conventions of The Women's Auxiliary and The Imperial Order of The Daughters of the Empire, which are being held in Toronto this week.

MET NEW SECRETARY.

General Secretary Meserve, of the Y. M. C. A., was accorded an informal supper by the Senior Leaders at the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening.

Shortly after the arrival of Physical Director Carson, of Winnipeg, a formal introduction evening will be held in honor of the two new officials.

RETAIL MERCHANTS AND GROCERS NOW ONE ASSOCIATION

The Ontario Retail Grocers' Association and Retail Merchants' Association of Canada will in future be known as one body. The former is now the Grocers' Section of the larger body.

This amalgamation took place last week in Toronto when representatives of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants Association and the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association met.

The old officers of the Grocers' Association are now in charge of the Grocers 'Section of the R. M. A., and from now on the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada will be stronger than it ever was.

It is claimed that many of the heretofore wrongs that existed between the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer will be righted, as the latter are now in a position to demand their rights. Mr. E. F. Mason, of this city, is one of the executive officers of the Provincial Grocers' Section.

CHARGED WITH DRUNKENNESS.

George Taylor, an Indian, will come before County Police Magistrate Edmison on Wednesday morning on the charge of being drunk in Chemong, a local option place.

Not For Sale.

Henry A. Franck, the author, telling of a trip down the spine of South American from Bogota to Buenos Ayres, said:

"Eggs are plentiful, though in the Andes, when you enter a shop with four bushel baskets of them sitting around in various corners, the invariable reply is 'They are not for sale.' The proper and a la mode answer to this is to say in your must fluent and regal Quecha: 'Of course I know very well they are not for sale. No Andine lady who considers herself a lady would think of selling eggs'—meanwhile you are filling your basket or sacks with the fruit in question—'but I have taken three dozen. How much do I owe you?'

"The answer is sure to be a meek 'Dos reales, senor'."

Hardwood floors should be dusted daily.

WITHIN THE LAW

All Canadian Company Supports Miss Catherine Tower

The company that will appear here in the forthcoming production of "Within the Law" at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, May 9th, for matinee and night, can truthfully be called a Canadian company, as all of the important members are Canadian by birth or parentage. Miss Catherine Tower, the charming leading lady, claims Toronto as her birthplace, and is intensely loyal to her native Canada, although her parents took her from Toronto to Syracuse, New York, when she was but a child. It was in Toronto as a member of the famous Royal Alexandra Stock Company that Miss Tower made her first success.

Rockliff Fellowes, the leading man of the company, is a native of Ottawa, and he is a grandson of no less noted Canadian than—George Byron Lyon Fellowes, former member of the House of Commons. His great-grandfather was the famous Colonel McNab, and it was in the old Manor House of the Colonel that young "Cliff" made his first debut.

Mr. Fellowes began his career as an employee in the Bank of Ottawa after finishing a course in the Ashburg College. Later he went to Quebec, and while there was induced to go on the stage. His first appearance professionally was with Harry Woodruff in "Brown of Harvard." He has revisited his home town in a professional capacity but once since adopting the stage as his vocation, and that was as a member of the "Man and Superman" Company.

Another Canadian member of the "Within the Law" Company is little Miss Marie Fitzgerald, who like Miss Tower, hails from Toronto; Miss Jane Seymour, who in private life is Miss Marhorie Fitzpatrick, was born in Hamilton, Ontario, being a granddaughter of the late Fred. Wilson of that city. Harold Hartsall, who plays the part of Gilder, senior, in the play, comes from Sarnia, while George A. Wright, who so skilfully portrays the character of Joe Garson, the lovable forger, was born in Montreal.

RUIN IN A CHINA SHOP.

A Crash That Spelled Agony For the London Curio Dealer.

George Robey, the comedian, frequently drops in for a chat with a dealer in London. In the outer room are vases and jars, cups, groups and sets of pieces valued at anything from 50 to 500 guineas. Inside is the proprietor's private apartment. To reach him you gingerly pick your way through the thousands of pounds' worth of valuable china.

"One day not long ago," Robey says, "I had been chatting within, and a friend was waiting for me in the outer room. As I bade the dealer 'Good morning' and was about to pass into the outer room there came a dreadful crashing of broken china. My friend turned upon me an eye glassy with anguish. Never shall I forget the proprietor's expression of supreme horror as he rushed from his sanctum and saw my friend and myself standing amid the debris of broken chinaware which lay strewn around our feet. He was speechless—choking.

"Legal proceedings? Five thousand pounds? In a word, what was the damage, you inquire. Well, I am sorry to have to confess it, for the proprietor was in bed for a week as the result of the shock, but it was a gag prearranged. For my friend, who had brought with him a couple of dozen cheap soup plates, had, at a given signal from me, dropped them in a heap upon the floor."—London Answers.

LIGHTHOUSES FOR MOTORISTS.

Method Is Found to Prevent Disasters at Cross Roads In England.

An examination of the list of motor accidents of the last two or three years in England reveals the fact that there is a growing number due to cars colliding at crossings where roads meet at right angles. And they arise, not so much from negligence on the part of drivers, but because one or both rely on what is termed the theory of probabilities.

Doubtless many persons have noticed that a car approaching a crossroad seldom slows down, although it gives due notice of its approach with the hooter. The speed at which such cross-roads are taken can only be accounted for, according to a London Times' expert, by the willingness to take a sporting chance of there being no car on the cross-road in a position to bring about any risk of danger—a reliance, in fact, on the "probabilities" of the case.

With the present number of cars on the road it is obvious that in the neighborhood of any given crossing it is extremely unlikely that there will be two cars so symmetrically situated, in respect of speed and distance from the crossing point, as to bring about a collision if no exceptional care is taken. This improbability is at the present day acted upon by quite a large number of drivers to an extraordinary extent.

It is pointed out, however, that the number of cars is rising steadily, and there is a very rapidly-increasing output of motor-cycles and cycle-cars. Unless, therefore, some step be taken in the near future, either by decreasing the intrinsic danger of the crossing or of getting all drivers to approach such places more cautiously, there is no little likelihood that the theory of probabilities may not prove to be the safeguard it is expected to be.

Dangerous cross-roads are sometimes protected by policemen or by road guides of one sort or another, but these protect only a fraction of such danger-spots. A wonderful lamp, however, has been invented which it is probable will become quite a common sight on the high road. It is called the "Aga" flashlight, and is a sort of land lighthouse, which flashes sixty times to the minute. One has been placed at Ruxley Corner, Sidcup, its object being to warn motorists of a dangerous corner.—London Tit-Bits.

Tong War Threatens.

ST. LOUIS, May 4.—The local Chinese quarter, extending over an area of five blocks in the downtown business section, was excited Saturday as a result of the murder of Haw Lin Shuck, a Chinese immigration officer of the United States, Friday night, and the subsequent prediction by Lee Bing, "Mayor of the Alley," that the shots which killed Shuck would inaugurate a Tong war in St. Louis, Chicago and New York. More than two score denizens of the alley, including the "Mayor," were taken by the police. The authorities are seeking an undersized Chinaman, said by leaders to have been sent here from Chicago or New York to put Shuck out of the way.

To Run For Legislature.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 4.—William Spankie, Wolfe Island, stated Saturday that if there was a general election in June in the Ontario Legislature he would be a candidate. Spankie is a former school inspector for Frontenac County and is very desirous of getting a place in the Legislature to advocate his educational policy. He says that the present policy is far from satisfactory. Anthony Rankin, the present member, has not stated as to whether be would be a candidate again, but it is almost certain be will. Spankie is engaged in canvassing. He is ex-warden of Frontenac County.

Help Badly Wanted.

A new record in applications for Ontario farm help when more than a thousand requests for farm hands were sent in during the one day to the Ontario British Immigration Office of the Dominion Government at the Toronto Union Station.

The Government has perfected an organization of a hundred agents, giving several to every county in the province and also placing an agent in every town in Ontario. The object of this organization is to learn the needs of the farmers, place the new arrivals with them when they come, and, most important of all, keep in touch with the newcomer after he is placed with a farmer. Should he for some reason not get along well with the farmer with whom he is placed the immigrant is not to be allowed to drift into the cities as has been the case in other years, but instead will be placed with another farmer.

LATEST FROM DAME FASHION

A HAT AND A PAIR OF GLOVES.

The subtle something that is added to a costume by the right hat and the right gloves here strikes an extra note of style and daintiness in a pair of white kid gloves that are embroidered below the wrists. Silk embroidered gloves will, of course, replace these for the warm weather. A straw turban on classically simple lines with a feather fancy shooting up from the top will add dash that a more elaborate one would fail of.

MILLIONAIRE STARCH MANUFACTURER IS MURDERED AS HE SLEEPS BY HIS SON

Murderer Loaded Weapons and Discharged Seven Shots Into Father's Body

Servants Say He Had Been Acting Strangely for Some Time

Canadian Press Despatch.

New York May 5.—Hiram Duryea, a retired millionaire starch manufacturer and civil war veteran, aged eighty-one, was murdered early this morning by his son, Chester, aged forty-three, at his home in Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn.

Father and son slept on a porch at the rear of the house.

About one o'clock Chester slipped into the house and took a magazine rifle and automatic pistol from a number of weapons kept for hunting. Loading both he returned to the porch, and standing within a few feet of his sleeping father, emptied seven bullets into the body, causing instant death.

Servants told the police, Chester had been acting very strangely of late. Five years ago he showed signs of mental trouble and his father tried unsuccessfully to have him removed to Bellevue Hospital for observation.

Hiram Duryea succeeded his father as president of the National Starch Co. At the outbreak of war, he organized the Duryeas Zouaves, and served through the war as their colonel, retiring with the rank of Brigadier-General.

Chester was divorced from his wife, eleven years ago, and trouble between him and his father began with the General taking the wife's side. Although servants say there was no quarrel preceding the murder, a broken screen, overturned table and books scattered about the floor, indicate there was a struggle.

HIS PLATFORM THE SAME AS YEARS AGO

As is well known when Controller James Simpson talks on the emancipation of the toiler, he is full to overflowing of his subject. "Jimmie" has studied the question deeply and admits that the stand he took years ago is the same now, that he is the people's premier choice on the Toronto Board of Control. Both organised and unorganised labor should hear him on Wednesday.

MERCHANTS WILL AGAIN OBSERVE THURSDAY HALF HOLIDAY JULY AND AUGUST

The Retail Merchants' Association has endorsed the idea to have a half holiday on the occasion of the opening of the Canadian League season here on May 14, but the retail stores will not cease accepting nickles, dimes or any other money, providing its good, until 3 o'clock on that afternoon. Such was one of the many matters disposed of at a regular meeting of the association held in the Y. M. C. A. board room last evening. The meeting was largely attended, and in the absence of Thos. Barrie, the president, Robert Sayer occupied the chair. Many other important matters were brought up, including market conditions, and it was decided to seek further information with a view of improving conditions.

There was quite a discussion over the summer half holiday question, but it was unanimously decided that all retail establishments should close on Thursday afternoon during July and August. The first Thursday in July was excluded owing to the fact that July 1, which is a national holiday, falls on the Wednesday of that week.

Annual Picnic.

The retailers will also hold another picnic this year. The date and place has not been decided upon, but the citizens can rest assured that the affair will surpass any previous outing held under the auspices of the association. A committee was appointed last night to arrange the details.

The visit of the Duke of Connaught and Princess Patricia was also down for discussion, but after careful consideration the meeting was as one in deciding that the stores would not close on that day. The question of decorating was not brought up.

Market Conditions.

Those present were well pleased with the changes in market conditions, but a committee was appointed to again investigate them with a view of improving matters for the benefit of all concerned, and also enlarging the market.

Secretary N. C. Cameron presented a very favorable report on the work accomplished by the association. He drew attention to the amendments the association had secured to the transient traders and peddlers' act, which had worked to the advantage of the city in the matter of increased fees and a better class of people looking for business.

Quite a number of the older members of the organization expressed themselves as well pleased with the work of the association and its accomplishments since organization and stated the meeting was the best the association had ever held. They also advised every retailer in the city to join the association as it was without a doubt an important unit both in the progress of the city and their business as well.

SIX FOOTER ADDED TO POLICE FORCE

H. A. Lawrence is Appointed, as P.C. Phymster Has Resigned.

Harold A. Lawrence was appointed to the local police force yesterday afternoon by the Commissioners at their regular monthly meeting, to assume the vacancy caused by the resignation of Constable Phymster. Lawrence is a local man residing on Park Street. He weighs 200 and stands 6 feet 1 in.

He will commence his duties at $650 per year at the 1st of June.

Constable Phymster resigns on account fo his trip to the Old Country. His resignation takes effect the 1st of June.

A FINE OF $25

Vincent O'Toole Admitted Supplying Blacklister with Liquor

Vincent O'Toole, charged with supplying a blacklister with liquor, was fined $25 this morning on his plea of guilty, before Magistrate Dumble.

John Seiney, who was fined $5 yesterday morning, came back for a similar dose this morning. John said he was sorry, but the court refused to accept his excuse, and he was asked to deposit the above amount with the Chief forthwith.

BOOST THE CITY IN THE OLD LAND

Salvation Army Officers Thank Council for Consideration,

Peterboro Will Not Be Represented at Town Planning Convention

Mayor Buller Will See Opening Of Sewage Disposal Plant At Weston.

"We will do our best to make Peterboro famous in the old land," added Adjutant McElhiney, in expressing the thanks of the Salvation Army officers to the Council, for the consideration of the City Dads, in regard to their measure of assistance towards the trip of the band to the Congress in London, Eng.

To Build Boat House.

The application of Napoleon Trombley, to erect a boat house on the water front at the foot of Dalhousie Street was referred to the Property Committee.

Light and Water.

W. H. Moore, K.C., London Street, suggested a better arrangement of the light at the corner of Reid and London streets, to give a better service. Mr. Moore also asked for street watering. The matter was referred to the F. W. and L. Committee and the Board of Works.

Plans Approved.

A by-law was passed approving the plans of the Baker property on the north side of Patterson Street, where Mr. Baker is now erecting a number of dwellings.

Another by-law approved the plan of the Geo. A. Cox property, which is being sub-divided for building purposes.

Can Remove Tank.

C. N. Banks will move into premises prepared for him by the erection of the new building in front of the Charlotte Street Rink, and his request for permission to remove his gasoline tank and filler in front and underneath the sidewalk at his present premises and construct the same at his new stand was granted.

Town Planning Convention.

The Commission on Conservation is holding a town planning convention in Toronto. Mayor Buller suggested that Ald. Dobbin be delegated from Peterboro, but the Council said no, as it felt that any recommendations that might be made to Council could not be carried out this year.

A Trip to Weston.

The progressive town of Weston, Ont., is officially opening a sewerage and sewage disposal works, May 9th, and Mayor Buller will be present, accompanied by the chairman of the Board of Works or the City Engineer or both.

DEFEND CHARGES TRIED UNDER CRIMINAL CODE

City Solicitor Gordon and Police Chief Differ in Their Opinions

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon will continue to act for the defendants in actions tried under the criminal code, regardless of Chief Thompson's contention that he is not empowered to under the civic act governing city solicitors. The chief interprets the by-law as meaning that the City Solicitor cannot appear as counsel for the defence in local courts where summary convictions are required unless the sanction of the City Council or mayor is secured. He claims that Mr. Gordon had no right to act for the defendants in the pool room gambling case because the act specifies that the city solicitor shall act for the city in any case when the welfare of the city is concerned.

Mr. Gordon, when asked for his opinion, stated that he would act for the defence in criminal cases as long as he desired, as they were all brought up under the criminal code of Canada, and had nothing whatever to do with the city legislation. "As a matter of fact, the gambling case which the chief claims was for the welfare of the city, was not, as the conviction will not stand, in my opinion. I think it was wrong. My interpretation of the by-law appointing city solicitors is that I may be called upon to give the city advice at any time or act for it in such matters as prosecutions brought on by the Board of Health. So far as excluding me from acting for defendants in criminal actions, the act cannot be so interpreted. The County Crown Attorney is engaged for the work of prosecuting criminal cases, and not the city solicitor, and I will continue to appear as counsel for the defence," he said.

REMANDED TO JAIL

Thos. Donnell Was With Chas. Price When Latter Broke His Leg.

Thos. Donnell, an Englishman, was remanded to jail for one week. This morning Donnell was charged with being drunk and disorderly. A charge of causing bodily harm to one Chas. Price will probably be laid. Yesterday at the King George Hotel, during an altercation, Donnell struck Price and in some manner while falling, the latter's leg was broken.

A HERO

Canadian Press Despatch.

Danville, Que., May 5. — Joseph Frechette, of St. George de Windsor, perished in a fire which destroyed his home last night. Frechette saved his wife and daughter, and going back to assist the hired man, whom he supposed to be in the building, was overcome by smoke. Meanwhile the man he sought to aid had escaped by jumping from a window.

OPERATIONS START AT PETERBORO NOVELTY COMPANY

Another industry opened in the city yesterday when operations were commenced in the Peterboro Novelty Co., which has taken over the cabinet making factory at the rear of Belleghem's Furniture Store, on Hunter Street. This company will manufacture everything in the line of cabinet work, making a specialty of moulders' bellows and kitchen tables. The factory has been thoroughly equipped and is to be under the management of Mr. W. A. Weese. Mr. B. Weese is the business manager.

BARRIES LTD. APPLICATION IS HELD UP

AMENDMENT CALLING FOR FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF ELEVATOR QUESTION CARRIES

MAY BE MORE REQUESTS

VIEWS OF OTHER MERCHANTS TO BE RECEIVED BY BOARD OF WORKS

The application from Barries, Ltd., to use space on and underneath the sidewalk, for a goods elevator was held up last night by Council. Ald. Stratton held that the matter should receive further consideration by the Board of Works.

His amendment to the report of the Board of Works, read by Ald. Duncan, was seconded by Ald. McIntyre, and carried.

A merchant with whom Ald. Stratton conversed, told him he said that if the Barrie application were granted, he would also apply. He knew of ten or twelve others who would make the same application. Ald. Stratton said he was also informed that the business streets of Peterboro were used more than any other city in Canada, the same size as Peterboro. In moving his amendment, the centre ward representative suggested that the Board secure the views of merchants.

Mayor Buller said the agreement provided for the removal of the elevator at any time the Council so desired. Ald. Duncan explained that Mr. Barrie was unable to get a right of way into the rear of the premises. He would allow the application.

Ald. Green opined that it would be well to take another week to consider the matter before definite action by Council. If ten or twelve other merchants were going to build elevators it was a serious matter. Ald. Stratton's motion was well thought out.

Ald. Langford—They can only use the elevator in certain hours; I can't see any objections to it.

Mayor Buller said he agreed with Ald. Duncan, also with Ald. Stratton. Mr. Barrie should be encouraged. He was not in favor of having the elevators in the sidewalks, but since one application had been granted, Mr. Barrie should also receive permission.

Speaking of the probable applications from ten or twelve other merchants, Ald. Duncan said they had entrances by way of the rear of their premises.

Ald. Stratton—If after meeting the merchants and they are in favor, I say give it to them all. He said the merchants looked at the elevator in the light of advertising, as people would see the goods being received by the store.

Speaking of the element of danger, Mayor Buller felt that the Barrie elevator would not be half as dangerous as that at the Turnbull building.

Ald. Stratton—If other cities made a mistake, it's no reason why we should.

The amendment carried on a vote of six to four.

TRAGEDY

Four Men Are Drowned When Boat Is Upset in Swift Current

Canadian Press Despatch.

North Bay, May 5.—Early Sunday morning a small boat containing five men upset in the current of the Spanish River at Espanola. One of its occupants reached shore safely, but J. Jamieson, William Blandier, F. D. Ross and S. Brant were carried over the long chute and drowned. The two former men were married with families.

AMENDMENT MADE TO CHARTER OF THE EDWARDS POWER CO.

Ottawa, May 5.—The Edwards Co. Electric Power Bill, the consideration of which was postponed on the objection of J. H. Burnham, for West Peterboro, last week, came up this morning, the Hydro Electric Commission being present. The charter was amended to comply with the laws and rates of the province.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS APPOINT MRS. McELHINEY AS POLICE MATRON

ADJUTANT AND MRS. McELHINEY.

Officers in charge at the Salvation Army. Mrs. McElhiney will act as Police Matron, in conjunction with the police department. It will not be a new work, as both Mrs. McElhiney and the Adjutant have been interested in this line of work for some years. They have accomplished much since coming to Peterboro.

$25 Each Month for Expenses as Salary Cannot be Accepted

At the Police Commissioners meeting yesterday afternoon Mrs. (Adjutant) McElhiney was formally appointed to the position of Police Matron for the city with a set amount of $25 each month for expenses incurred while engaged in the work.

Mrs. McElhiney declined to accept a salary and the Commissioners granted this amount per month for expenses incurred while carrying on the work.

Mrs. McElhiney's duties commence at once and she will resume the ordinary duties that fall to one in the position of Police Matron. The principle cases which will call for her attention are looking after female prisoners and making investigations.

Chief Thompson briefly outlined the duties which would be submitted for the matron.

"I wonder if that will fill the bill?" enquired Mayor Buller.

Magistrate held that this would satisfy the general public opinion. A woman in connection with the Department could easily detect an undercurrent of information which would be valuable.

"Will she have anything to do with these street walkers?" asked the Mayor.

"Well, of course these people are reported on by the constables and I summon them to my office for advice. She could meet them there. I don't think it would be wise to converse with them on the street," said the Chief.

Continuing the Chief stated that they usually complied with the request. It would be most beneficial to every one when they did so. Judge Huycke remarked favorably on the position the Police Matron occupied and the useful information attained through her but he concluded a Police Women was not satisfactory especially in places like this city.

Chief Thompson in speaking of the matter strongly recommended Mrs. McElhiney for the position owing to her thoroughness, deep interest and experience in the work.

Adjutant McElhiney remarked that they were always ready to assist in any of this work. They however could not accept stipulated remuneration for the work.

Mrs. McElhiney who has evinced interest in Police Court cases where women have been concerned since her arrival in the city spoke of the work in this line she would care to carry on. Her heart was in it and she would be glad to do anything to assist.

The item of expense was then arranged and the entire committee evinced a desire to make it larger and spoke of the most reasonable offer.

"We can raise it any time," remarked Mayor Buller.

Magistrate Dumble said that he thought a salary would be more satisfactory, but was content to let the matter stand as it was.

NO DEFINITE ACTION HAS BEEN TAKEN

Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.L.A., Discusses the Political Situation.

Speaking with Mr. James Thompson, M.L.A., to-day on the political situation in Ontario, a Review man was informed that nothing definitely has been done in spite of suggestions and rumors in the Toronto Mail and Globe. The question of leadership has never been discussed and if an election takes place soon Sir James Whitney will likely be the leader of the Conservatives. If an election is decided on which remains entirely with the Premier it will likely take place about the last of June or in November, but in any case the Conservatives look confidently to a conclusive victory on the splendid record behind them. Locally, the sky is clear so that the forces behind the local members appear satisfied with the condition of things and united on the Government's policy.

HALF HOLIDAY FOR MAY 14th

TO HELP IN WELCOME TO PETERBORO BASEBALL TEAM

CITY DADS ALL FANS

STORES WILL PULL THE BLINDS AT THREE O'CLOCK.

Ex-Mayor Bradburn, E. G. Patterson and H. Stenson, were a deputation before the City Council last night with the request that Mayor Buller proclaim a half holiday on the homecoming of the Peterboro Baseball team, for the opening of the season.

Mr. Bradburn said they had been in conversation with the Retail Merchants who met that night and were agreeable to a half holiday, the stores to close at three o'clock. Mr. Bradburn believed the baseball team to be a good advertising proposition for the city. They wanted the people to take an interest in the game and secure as large a crowd as possible for the opening game.

There was no opposition to the Mayor proclaiming the half holiday, which led His Worship to remark that "they were all baseball fans."

It's really a good thing," remarked Ald. Johnston in reference to the baseball team.

Ald. Johnston said it was the best advertisement the city had today. "I hope you will have a bumper crowd and make money," added the East Ward representative.

FURNITURE STORES TO CLOSE AT 7 P.M.

A petition of the retail furniture dealers, asking that a by-law be passed, requiring all retail furniture stores to be closed each day at 7 p.m., Saturdays and days preceding holidays excepted, was sanctioned by the City Council last night.

The petitioners were: E. B. Clegg and Co., J. D. Craig, McFadden and Son, Empire Furniture Co., A. Comstock, Crossman Co. Ltd., D. Belleghem, Lane and Kane, R. Begley, W. T. Butcher, Zacks Bros., R. C. Braund.

GRANT TO HELP IN ENTERTAINING

When Belleville Regiment Visits Peterboro for Two Days

COUNCIL GIVES $100

Col. Clegg and Major Eastwood, on behalf of the 57th regiment asked the City Council, last night for a grant of $200 to assist in entertaining the 15th regiment of Belleville May 24 and 25. They got $100.

The visiting regiment will come to the City on Sunday and Monday. There will be a church parade and one or more band concerts.

"They ought to get something if we can afford it," said the Mayor.

Ald. Langford—Let us be as liberal as we can; it's our duty to help them all we can.

Ald. Anderson reported at the request of the Mayor, that Council had left $265 for special grants. He suggested $100 but he hoped that their program would not conflict with the two ball games on the holiday.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT ASKS FOR TRIP TO THE LIFT LOCK

LAD UNTIED HORSE; RUNAWAY FOLLOWED

The meddlesomeness of a five-year-old youngster was responsible for a runaway last evening on Hunter St. East. The youngster, after succeeding in untying the animal, which was tied to a post, climbed in the rig. Something was not satisfactory in this arrangement and he departed, leaving the horse untied. Shortly after an auto passing frightened the animal, which bolted and ran for several blocks before its progress was stopped.

POLE QUESTION NOT YET SETTLED

Power Company Claim Poles To Be Their Property.

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon reported to Council last night on the matter of the removal of C. P. R. poles from George Stret.

The C. P. R. company claim that the poles cannot be removed and used again, and must therefore be salvaged. This means $1,000 which the city is asked to pay.

But there is a dispute as to the title, the Peterboro Light and Power Co. claiming the poles as their property. This being the case, the city is interested in view of the rights of expropriation of the Power Company's property.

It was decided to allow the matter to stand over as it was felt that it was delicate matter to handle.

Ald. Johnston expressed himself strongly that the city should not pay one cent. He hoped soon to see the day when the city would have the controlling hand. This company, he said, had been given heaven and earth, and yet they were the people who were blocking [illegible] Machine Telephone [illegible] fairly with [illegible] pleased to know [illegible] phone Co. was [illegible] city.

Vice Regal Party Will Spend Three Hours in This City

NO PUBLIC LUNCHEON

Following the course he is pursuing in connection with his visits to other Ontario cities, His Royal Highness The Duke of Connaught will cut his visit to this city on June 1 rather short, and will avoid a public luncheon, according to a letter received by Mayor Buller this morning from the Duke's private secretary. The Duke and Princess Patricia will arrive at 10 a.m. and depart at 1 p.m. The Governor-General evidently displays an interest in the lift lock, as the letter requests that arrangements be made to visit it. The letter is as follows:

Dear Sir:—

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th ultimo, enclosing suggested program and copy of address to be presented to the Governor-General and to thank you for the same. I regret I have not been able to answer it before, but now write to say His Royal Highness will arrive at Peterborough at 10 a.m. and leave at 1 p.m. on Monday the 1st day of June. As this is the case would you kindly send me a program that would suit the above mentioned time. If time permits His Royal Highness would much like to visit the hydraulic lift lock. No mounted escort would be required. I presume the Guard of Honor would be drawn up at the station.

Their Royal Highnesses would have luncheon on their train after leaving Peterborough.

I am,
Yours truly,
Arthur F. Sladen,
Private Secretary.

Ald. Stratton, chairman of the reception committee, has called a special meeting of that body for this evening to decide upon some form of reception to the royal party. Col. [illegible]

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, MAY 5, 1914

SOME FACTS ABOUT EDUCATION.

THE LATEST REPORT on the fifth census of Canada contains some valuable details on Canadian education. Of the persons between the ages of fifteen and twenty years attending school there are 91.37 males as compared with 100 females while between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-four years the proportion of males to females 232.93 to 100. The figures would seem to show that there are a few more girls in high or secondary schools than boys and that men outnumber women in colleges and universities by over two to one.

For the Eastern provinces, the highest percentage of school attendance, at this age, was made by Prince Edward Island with 84.60 per cent., closely followed by Ontario with 84.27 per cent., Nova Scotia with 82.86 per cent., Quebec with 80.96 per cent., and New Brunswick with 80.05 per cent. of the total population between 7 and 14 years of age. Viewing the figures in another way, it shows that of the total number of children between 7 and 14, Ontario had 157 per 1,000 who were not attending school, Quebec 190, New Brunswick 200, Nova Scotia 171, and Prince Edward Island 154 children, whose education had been apparently neglected in the year 1910. For the western provinces, the highest percentage of attendants at school, of children 7 to 14, was made by British Columbia, with 75.33 per cent., Manitoba being a close second with 74.64 per cent. Saskatchewan marks an attendance of 66.71 per cent., while Alberta shows an attendance of only 62.83 per cent. British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba had 247, 372, 333 and 254 children respectively per 1,000 of this age, who did not attend school in the year 1910. These figures do not necessarily mean that these children were growing up illiterates. The statistics are for one year only and many causes, such as illness, lack of teachers, etc., may have contributed to the result.

The western provinces being the mecca of the immigrant and the bachelor homesteader from the eastern provinces, have to face the conditions which are incident to the opening up of settlement in any new country and therefore cannot be adversely compared as regards school attendance with the older provinces of Canada, where conditions are stable. There are many things which render it difficult for the settler, whether immigrant or Canadian-born, to procure a working education for his children—the principal of which are, for the immigrant, if a foreigner, lack of knowledge of our language, and for all classes, if homesteaders, that they have to take up land and make homes beyond the point where municipal organizations exist, and so have, often unwillingly, for some years to deny their children the absolute necessity of a common school education.

That the western provinces have not been remiss in their duty in providing means of education for the multitudes which flock to their cities and spread over the plains in an ever increasing volume, is evidenced by the fact that Manitoba put in operation on an average two new schools per week, each year since 1906, Saskatchewan about five and Alberta about three per week. The records of school attendance for children between the ages of 7 and 14 will furnish, it is believed, a reasonable basis of comparison, as to the extent to which the native-born and the immigrant population are availing themselves of the advantages of the free educational systems provided by every province of the Dominion. At the date of the last census there were in Canada 1,157,656 children of 7 to 14 years of age, and of these 922,820 or 79.67 per cent. attended school for some period of time, however short, in 1910, leaving 235,836 children or over 20 per cent., who did not attend school, from one cause or another.

Of the total population at this age, the Canadian-born numbered 993.612, of whom 810,512 or 81.57 per cent. had a record of school attendance, the British-born numbered 69,109 of whom 72.52 per cent. were at school and of the 94,935 Foreign-born children ,61,683 or 64.97 per cent. were reported as making use of the means of education placed at their disposal. That is to say, in every 1,000 children of either Canadian, British or foreign birth, 184,275, and 350 respectively were absent from school in 1910. Census statistics do not afford any means of determining the causes which produced these results, nor do they give any data relating to the social conditions which surround the lives of the non-attenders at school.

As the length of time spent under instruction, by the population of school age in each year, gives a fair indication of the educational efficiency of the young, it is interesting to note, that only 803,525 or 69.41 per cent. of the total population of 1,157,656 between the ages of 7 and 14, attended school seven or more months in the year 1910. Of the total population at this age the Canadian-born constituted 85.83 per cent. and 87.88 per cent. of the total number who attended school and were 89.01 per cent. of those receiving instruction for more than six months in the year.

Of the total number of 993,612 Canadian-born children 7 to 14 years of age, 810,521 or 81.57 per cent. attended school for any length of time, while only 71.98 per cent. were at school for 7 or more months in the year. The total number of British immigrant children 7 to 14 years of age was 69,109, of whom 50,116 or 72.52 per cent. attended school in the year, while only 61.61 per cent. of the total number were at school for a longer period than six months. Of the Foreign-born at this age 64.97 per cent. attended school for any length of time, as against 81.57 per cent. native-born and 72.52 per cent. British-born. The Foreign-born show the largest percentage attending school for short periods, being 3.72 per cent., for from 1 to 3 months and 13.06 per cent. for from 4 to 6 months, but only 48.19 per cent. for 7 months or longer in the year 1910.

The figures indicate that the law permitting children to be withdrawn from school needs amending. Inspectors especially in rural localities should be instructed to enforce more restrictive measures to keep children in school.

A GREEN EYE ON ONTARIO.

THE MONTREAL GAZETTE, Conservative, prints the following editorial paragraph:—

> The Legislature of Ontario in the session which ended yesterday, among other things, made provisions for increasing the taxes on successions, and also on banks insurance companies, race tracks and other institutions which are presumed to make money for a comparatively small number of people whose complaints can be ignored when election day comes round. With railways owned by the province and run at a loss, the encouragement of municipal ownership of tramway lines and the Hydro-Electric Commission threatening private enterprise in the lighting and power field, the man of capital, and mercantile enterprise does not now count for much except with the tax collector.

This gentle rap at the political fifth rib of the Whitney Government while appearing as though inspired by Sir Hugh Graham is a compliment to the administration it knocks. It illustrates, in the first place, the attitude of the capitalist to taxation, which is that the burden should be borne by those least able to bear it. It is hostile to public ownership and shows a liking for corporate control of franchises and exploitation of the rights of the common people in those enterprises which are justly termed public utilities. The Whitney Government have honestly tried to place the burden of taxation on the broadest shoulders, and, as for public ownership the Hydro-Electric does not threaten private enterprise. The Cataract Company of Hamilton was perhaps the first corporation to feel the competition of the Hydro System, yet it is still doing business in successful competition with the Government scheme. Anyway Ontario capital isn't going to Quebec at a gallop. There are large fields for profitable investment in legitimate undertakings in Ontario that have not yet been developed, and the Whitney Government is helping development along.

DOES NOT BELIEVE WAR WILL CEASE.

PROFESSOR G. S. BRETT of the University of Toronto, in an address on the Psychology of Politics, in which he traced the evolution of politics from the time of Plato to the present day party system, said that he was not one of those who thought war would cease. He claimed that out of war, the unity of a country had come; in this respect he said that war had been one of the most efficient instruments. Historically, Professor Brett has much in his favor; the German Empire owes its unity to the wars engineered by the Iron Chancellor, Prince Bismark and the war of 1812 consolidated the people of Upper Canada more than anything else. Other examples might be given to show that war has been a great factor in bringing about the unity of some nations. Admitting this fact, that does not mean that war was the only means of bringing about unity. The religious revival has been the means of bringing a people very strongly together. Thus the Reformation of Martin Luther in Germany was a great unifying agent. Besides, in modern times there are other factors that keep the people a unit that did not exist in Luther's time, in 1812, or to any great extent in 1870. The great development of railways, the fluidity of labor, the power of united labor, the influence of the press, growth of arbitration and international law, the peace propaganda, world commerce, while tending to do away with war are cutting at the cause of war, and at the same time doing in a peaceful way, what was once done by means of strife and bloodshed. At any rate, there are two sides to the question, and at the present time there is no doubt that the play on sentiment is an easy and powerful way to rouse a people. On that score perhaps the weight of argument goes with Professor Brett; on the side of reason and common sense, the argument is against him. However, not until people become more reasonable than they are, will the question be evenly divided.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

TWO EDITORS of Havana, Cuba, unable to endure each other's published remarks settled the matter by a duel with swords. A sad reflection on Cuba where the sword must be held mightier than the pen.

A Terrible Trouble.

"Isn't it awful about poor Mr. Jones' trouble?"

"I didn't hear about it."

"Didn't you? Mr. Daddy told me that his son has turned out a criminal lawyer."

Adam Beck Stood by the City.

Toronto Telegram.

Toronto was invited to go under a debt of nearly $21,000,000 for an electrical distribution system that could not supply this city's need of radial entrances or rapid transit.

Toronto was committed per the terms of the first McNaught Bill to pro-Mackenzie proposals that would have ignored the Hydro-Electric Commission, ripped up Hydro-Electric contracts, and, in Adam Beck's estimation, assassinated the whole Hydro-Electric system.

Toronto, per the terms of the first McNaught Bill, would have permitted the street railway interests to man its fleets of automobiles with pluggers warranted to stuff the ballot boxes with votes personated from an electorate of 135,000 enfranchised citizens.

Toronto, per the terms of the first McNaught Bill, was menaced by as great a danger as ever confronted an Anglo-Saxon city. The repulse of the pro-purchase forces in the long running fight and Toronto's escape from that danger is mainly due to Adam Beck. Without Adam Beck's steady, untiring devotion to the interests of Toronto and the ideals of the Hydro-Electric cause the people of Toronto might have been deprived of the right to protect the future of their own city.

THE VOTING REMEDY

By Walt Mason

If voting could make us joyous, we'd all be as gay as geese; no troubles would e'er annoy us, and there'd be no end of peace. The orators oft implore us to vote for some certain jay, and then all the woes that bore us will wither and blow away. We vote as we are requested, the jay to an office goes, and still we are all infested by numerous griefs and woes. We list to the language jammers, who labor with tireless jaws, when we should be out with hammers or axes or plows or saws. I look on my home—it's paid for—my garden, with beans and peas; my ponies, you'd like to trade for—and voting brought none of these. I look on my well set table, with beefsteak and pie and cheese, and 'twould be a measly fable to say that my vote brought these. I look on my pile of stovewood, which says that I shall not freeze, and nary a truthful cove would say voting brings sticks like these. My pipe-dreaming neighbor hollers, "Come in, for the voting's fine!" I labor and earn the dollars, and pickle the same in brine. My load I am daily toting with chortles instead of tears; that's better than all the voting you'll do in a thousand years.

Birthdays of Note

TUESDAY, MAY FIFTH

The Hon. John Nesbitt Kirchoffer, whose appointment to the Senate of Canada dates back to the administration of the late Sir John Thompson, celebrates his sixty-sixth birthday on this date. He was born at Ballyromney, Ireland, where his father was rector, and came to Canada when a child. He settled in Port Hope and took up the study and practise of law later moving to Manitoba where he was instrumental in founding the Plum Creek Settlement. He became a prominent citizen of Souris and sat for a term in the provincial legislature. In 1892 he was elevated to the Senate and is now one of its oldest members in point of service.

Also born to-day:—

Adam Crosby, former M.P. for Halifax, born Belfast, Ireland, 1859.

Frederick Dane, Toronto, born Belfast, Ireland, 1861.

Afraid of Conscription.

People have begun to emigrate for fear of conscription in Australia. In the November issue of the bulletin of the Australian Freedom League, which has for its object to combat the spread of militarism in the Commonwealth, a case is given of the three sons of well-known Melbourne merchant who recently sailed for England, and whose example is being followed by others.

A lady writes to the editor of the bulletin as follows: "I have been trying for months to obtain exemption from compulsory military training for my only son and child, but without success, my plea of widowhood failing to arouse any sympathy. If, when my son attains the age when camp life will be forced upon him, my request is ungranted, I shall leave Australia, and am making my plans with this end in view."

The same bulletin quotes from a local paper the fact that the Government of the Commonwealth is confronted at present with a deficit of $5,000,000 due to the increase of expenditure on "defence." "This increases the expenditure," says the note, "from 25s. 6d. to 30s. 6d. per head of the population, making it the highest per head of any country in the world." It is also pointed out that at the present rate the military expenditure, when the system is fully developed, will amount to $50,000,000 per annum. Yet the militarists assured the people of the Commonwealth four years ago that the scheme when in full swing would only cost $15,000,000.

The Wickedest Bit of Sea.

Nine out of ten travelers would tell inquirers that the roughest piece of water is that cruel stretch in the English Channel, and nine out of ten travelers would say what was not true. As a matter of fact, "the wickedest bit of sea" is not in the Dover Strait or in yachting, for example, from St. Jean de Luz up to Pauillac or across the Mediterranean "race" from Cadiz to Tangier, nor is it in rounding Cape Horn, where there is what sailors call a "true" sea.

The "wickedest sea" is encountered in rounding the Cape of Good Hope for the eastern portion of Cape Colony.—London Globe.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Two thousand immigrants for the west were landed at Quebec yesterday by the ocean steamers Megantic, Ansonia and Tunisian.

The fire squad of the militant suffragettes resumed its campaign in Ulster yesterday by burning the new grand stand of the Cave Hill Tennis Club.

J. Vernon McKenzie, a Montreal newspaperman, formerly of Toronto, has been appointed secretary to N. W. Rowell, K.C., Opposition leader of Ontario.

More than 50 lives were lost in a fire which broke out in the commercial section of Valparaiso, Chile, Sunday night. Several buildings were completely destroyed.

Edward Tilson was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary by Magistrate Denison in the Toronto Police Court yesterday on charge of perjury and bigamy. He pleaded guilty.

The Canadian Pacific steamer Empress of Asia, which arrived at Vancouver Sunday, lowered the record for the Yokohama-Victoria trip by two hours, making the trip in 9 days 3 hours.

Wm. C. Clark, son of George E. Clark, of Martintown, Glengarry County, has won the Ricardo prize scholarship at Harvard University, a much coveted reward for special ability and merit.

Michael O'Mahoney, who on April 17, shot at Mayor Mitchel and wounded Corporation Counsel Frank L. Peak, of New York, was yesterday sentenced to Matteawan Asylum for the criminal insane.

Senor Terreros of the Washington Mexican embassy, who is making Toronto his temporary residence, expressed the opinion yesterday that Toronto would be a natural place for the A. B. C. powers peace commissioners to hold their conference.

Uncle Sam's Marines.

At present there are 10,600 marines in active service, but since 1888 only 327 have served long enough to receive a government pension. The age of enlistment is between twenty-one and thirty-five and the term four years. The pay of the private on entering is $15 a month, which increases with service and promotion as well as deportment.

The Mind at Ease.

A calm, serene, contented mind
  That does not fly the track
When there are crisscross purposes
  And trouble round the shack
Is certainly a thing of joy,
  A gem serene and rare,
That some whose minds are money mad
  Might give the world to share.

To be possessed of mental poise,
  Well balanced and secure,
For nearly all the ills of life
  Is found a speedy cure.
The man who has this precious gift,
  Though humble be his lot,
Needs not to give himself concern
  If school may keep or not.

Pathetic is it to be filled
  With doubts and fears and gloom
And have a countenance that's most
  Suggestive of the tomb.
It doesn't make the wheels go round,
  Nor does it pay the bills,
While all around the house and lot
  A load of woe it spills.

And can we train our minds to act
  As trainers do the horse,
So we can make it trot along
  Upon a level course?
Well, if we cannot quite attain
  The heights supreme and high
Where calmness is the guiding force
  It's worth our while to try.

The electrical equipment of a modern hotel requires about 20 motors aggregating 165 horse-power.

COWARDICE COURT
BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

"Here's where I read sometimes," he explained. "I have slept on that couch. Last winter I came up here to hunt. My cottage wasn't finished so I stayed here. I'll confess I've heard strange sounds—now, don't shiver! Once or twice I've been a bit nervous, but I'm still alive, you see." He lighted the wicks in the two big lamps while she looked on with chills creeping up and down her back. "I'll have a bully fire in the fireplace in just a minute."

"Let me help you," she suggested, coming quite close to him with uneasy glances over her shoulders.

Ten minutes later they were sitting before a roaring fire, quite content even though there was a suggestion of amazed ghosts lurking in the hallway behind them. No doubt old man Grimes and his wife, if they awoke in the hours of the night, groaned deep prayers in response to the bright light from the windows of the haunted house. Shaw and Penelope smiled securely as they listened to the howling storm outside.

"Well, this is trespassing," she said, beaming a happy smile upon him.

"I shall be obliged to drive you out, after," he said reflectively. "Do you recall my vow? As long as you are a Bazelhurst, I must perforce eject you."

"Not tonight!" she cried in mock dismay.

"But, as an alternative, you'll not be a Bazelhurst long," he went on eagerly, suddenly taking her hands into his, forgetful of the wounded left. "I'm going to try trespassing myself. Tomorrow I'm going to see your brother. It's regular, you know. I'm going to tell the head of your clan that you are coming over to Shaw, heart and hand."

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "You—you—no, no! You must not do that!"

"But, my dear, you are going to marry me."

"Yes—I—suppose so," she murmured helplessly. "That isn't what I meant. I mean it isn't necessary to ask Cecil. Ask me; I'll consent for him."

Half an hour passed. Then he went to the window and looked out into the storm.

"You must lie down and get some sleep," he insisted, coming back to her. "The storm's letting up, but we can't leave here for quite a while. I'll sit up and watch. I'm too happy to sleep." She protested, but her heavy eyes were his allies. Soon he sat alone before the fire; she slept sound on the broad couch in the corner, a steamer rug across her knees. A contented smile curved his lips as he gazed reflectively into the flames. He was not thinking of Mrs. Renwood's amiable ghost.

How long she had been asleep Penelope did not know. She awoke with a start, her flesh creeping. A nameless dread came over her; she felt that she was utterly alone and surrounded by horrors. It was a full minute—a sickening hour, it seemed—before she realized that she was in the room with the man she loved. Her frightened eyes caught sight of him lying back in the chair before the dying fire in the chimney place. The lights were low, the shadows gaunt and chill.

A terrified exclamation started to her lips. Her ears again caught the sound of some one moving in the house—some alien visitor. There was no mistaking the sound—the distant, sepulchral laugh and the shuffling of feet, almost at the edge of the couch, it seemed.

"Randolph!" she whispered hoarsely. The man in the chair did not move. She threw off the blanket and came to a sitting posture on the side of the couch, her fingers clutching the covering with tense horror. Again the soft, rumbling laugh and the sound of footsteps on the stairway. Like a flash she sped across the room and clutched frantically at Randolph's shoulders.

He awoke with an exclamation, staring bewildered into the horrified face above.

"The—the ghost!" she gasped, her eyes glued upon the hall door. He leaped to his feet and threw his arms about her.

"You've had a bad dream," he said. "What a beast I was to fall asleep. Lord, you're frightened half out of your wits. Don't tremble so, dearest. There's no ghost. Every one knows"—

"Listen—listen!" she whispered. Together they stood motionless, almost breathless before the fire, the glow from which threw their shadows across the room to meet the mysterious invader.

"Good Lord," he muttered, unwilling to believe his ears. "There is some one in the house. I've—I've heard sounds here before, but not like these." Distinctly to their startled ears came the low, subdued murmur of a human voice and then unmistakable moans from the very depth of the earth—from the grave, it seemed.

"Do you hear?" she whispered. "Oh, this dreadful place! Take me away, Randolph, dear"—

"Don't be afraid," he said, drawing her close. "There's nothing supernatural about those sounds. They come from lips as much alive as ours. I'll investigate." He grabbed the heavy poker from the chimney corner and started toward the door. She followed close behind, his assurance restoring in a measure the courage that had temporarily deserted her.

In the hallway they paused to look out over the broad porch. The storm had died away, sighing its own requiem in the misty treetops. Dawn was not far away. A thick fog was rising to meet the first glance of day. In surprise Shaw looked at his watch, her face at his shoulder. It was after 5 o'clock.

"Ghosts turn in at midnight, dear," he said, with a cheerful smile. "They don't keep such hours as these."

"But who can it be? There are no tramps in the mountains," she protested, glancing over her shoulder apprehensively.

"Listen! By Jove, that voice came from the cellar."

"And the lock is broken," she exclaimed. "But how silly of me! Ghosts don't stop for locks."

"I'll drop the bolts just the same," he said as they hurried down the hallway. At the back stairs they stopped and listened for many minutes. Not a sound came up to them from below. Softly he closed the door and lowered two heavy bars into place. "If there's any one down there they probably think they've heard spooks trotting around up here."

"Really, it's quite thrilling, isn't it?" she whispered in her excitement.

"In any event we're obliged to remain under cover until they depart," he said thoughtfully. "We can't be seen here, dearest."

"No," she murmured, "not even though it is our house."

They returned to the big room as softly as mice, and he left her a moment later to close the heavy window shutters on the porch. When he returned there was a grim smile on his face and his voice shook a little as he spoke.

"I've heard the voices again. They came from the laundry, I think. The Renwoods were downright Yankees, Penelope. I will swear that these voices are amazingly English."

CHAPTER IX.

In Which the Auther Trespasses.

THIS narrative has quite as much to do with the Bazelhurst side of the controversy as it has with Shaw's. It is therefore but fair that the heroic invasion by Lord Cecil should receive equal consideration from the historian. Shaw's conquest of one member of the force opposing him was scarcely the result of bravery; on the other hand Lord Cecil's dash into the enemy's country was the very acme of intrepidity.

Down the drive and out into the mountain road clattered the three horsemen. Lady Bazelhurst, watching at the window casement, almost [illegible] with amazement at the sight of them. The capes of their mackintoshes seemed to flaunt a satirical farewell in her face; their owners, following the light of the carriage lamps, swept from view around a bend in the road and bravely plunged into the dark territory over which the enemy ruled. It was the duke who finally brought the cavalcade to a halt by propounding a most sensible question.

"Are you sure she came this way, Cecil?"

"Certainly. This is Shaw's way, isn't it?"

"Did she say she was going to Shaw's?"

"Don't know. Evelyn told me. Hang it all, Barminster, come along. We'll never catch up to her."

"Is she riding?"

"No—horses all in."

"Do you know, we may have passed her. Deuce take it, Bazelhurst, if she's running away from us, you don't imagine she'd be such a silly fool as to stand in the road and wait for us. If she heard us she'd hide among the trees."

"But she's had an hour's start of us."

"Where ees she coming to?" asked the count, with an anxious glance upward, just in time to catch a skirmishing raindrop with his eye.

"That's just it. We don't know," said the duke.

"But I must find her!" cried Lord Cecil. "Think of that poor girl alone in this terrible place, storm coming up and all that. Hi, Penelope!" he shouted in his most vociferous treble. The shrieking wind replied. Then the three of them shouted her name. "Gad, she may be lost or dead or— Come on, Barminster. We must scour the whole demmed valley."

"He's like a wildcat tonight," said the duke in an aside to the little Frenchman, referring to his lordship. "Demme, I'd rather not cross him. You seem to forget that his sister is out in all this fury."

"Mon Dieu, but I do not forget. I would give half my life to hold her in my arms thees eenstan'."

"Dem you, sir, I'd give her the other half if you dared try such a thing. We didn't fetch you along to hold her. You've got to hold the horses, that's all."

"Diable! How dare you to speak to"—

"What are you two rowing about?" demanded his lordship. "Come along! We're losing time."

Away they swept, Penelope's two admirers wrathfully barking at one another about satisfaction at some future hour.

The storm burst upon them in all its fury—the maddest, wildest storm they had known in all their lives. Terrified, half drowned, blown almost from the saddles, the trio finally found shelter in the lee of a shelving cliff just off the road. While they stood there shivering, clutching the bits of their well nigh frantic horses the glimmer of lights came down to them from windows farther up the steep. There was no mistaking the three upright oblongs of light. They were tall windows in a house, the occupants of which doubtless had been aroused at this unearthly hour by the fierceness of the storm.

"By Jove," lamented the duke, water running down his neck in floods, "what a luxury a home is, be it ever so humble, on a night like this."

"Mon Dieu, mon Dieu," groaned the count, "how comfortab' zey look! And here?—Eh bien! Qui fait trembler la terre! I am seeck! I die!"

"Penelope is out in all this," moaned his lordship.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Lung Diseases and Singing.

A medical authority avows that the time will soon come when singing will be regarded as one of the great helps to physicians in lung diseases, more especially in their incipient state. Almost every branch of gymnastics is employed in one way or another by the doctors, but the simple and natural function of singing has not yet received its full meed of attention. In Italy, some years ago, statistics were compiled which proved that singers were especially long lived and healthy in normal circumstances.

Those who have a tendency to consumption should take easy vocal exercises, no matter how weak their voices may seem to be. They will find a result at times far surpassing any relief afforded by medicine. Vocal practice, in moderation, is beneficial in several ways, many muscles being brought into play that would scarcely be suspected of action in connection with so simple a matter as tone production. Therefore, apart from all art considerations, merely as a matter of health, one can earnestly say to the healthy, "Sing that you may remain so," and to the weakly, "Sing that you may become strong."

Farming on Shares.

There is in vogue in Ontario a system of land tenure which is practically unknown in England, that of renting on a share basis, says London "People." This arises mainly from the labor scarcity, and, in some cases, from the fact that young men leave their fathers' farms and go into cities to enter the professions. Consequently, it is that many a farmer is prepared to make an arrangement whereby the newcomer, if he is competent, is able to settle at once upon a thriving farm; have the use of implements, of stock, and share alike in the profits, he, of course, doing the work.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S HATS

RIBBON TRIMMED HATS.

Hats for the business woman should be becoming and neat and such that wind and rain will touch them but lightly. These two elements are sure to act disastrously on any hat after a time. A hat which is trimmed with tulle, guy flowers or a mass of plumes will be shorn of its elegance by the first lively spring breeze or soaked to a shapeless pulp by the copious April showers.

This season the vogue of fancy straw bows combined with well wired ribbon ones makes the hat problem of the business woman much simpler. The attractive and stylish hat with the silk or satin crown is, however, not for her.

A close fitting hat of well woven straw, with a simple ribbon trimming like that of either of the hats illustrated here, would be a wise choice.

JUVENILE MODES.

Dainty New Fabrics That Launder Easily Are Popular.

White was never more popular for children's dresses than it is this season. While there is much to be said in its favor, the busy mother dreads the amount of laundry work necessary in order to keep the little frocks spotless. Unless they are kept immaculate their charm is lost. This season, however, many of the crape weaves require very little ironing, and this is the most difficult part of the laundry work.

The majority of mothers solve the problem of color by arranging enough white dresses for wear on special occasions and, for every day, colored frocks.

STRIPED GINGHAM GOWN.

Among the latter there is a great variety of new weaves as well as the staple ginghams, chambrays, lawns and percales. These latter are offered in such up to date colors and designs that even the most exacting will not hesitate to employ them. As for wear, these old standbys cannot be surpassed.

Blue and white striped gingham was used for this very sensible school frock for a little maid. The collar and cuffs were of white linen. Two rows of white crochet buttons adorned the front of the bodice, and a belt showing a bias arrangement of the stripes encircled the waist. A shady panama hat adorned with a blue band was worn with the dress.

A combination of rhubarb and orange makes a delicious jam.

OLD TIME OTTAWA.

The Capital Has Changed Rapidly In Recent Years.

In the days when shipping and commerce on the canal-side were at their prime, the Ottawa of the last three decades was not even dreamed of. Those who read of the discovery of layers of cities below cities in the old world, such as those of Asia Minor, would be surprised to be told that such a process has been rapidly going on in such places as the capital of Canada — and it is curious how building may succeed building, in turn to be replaced even in the short space of a couple of generations. In those days, not far from the canal, up what is now a side street, stood the old wooden building used as the Bytown Grammar School, presided over by a scholarly old Scottish dominie and divine.

It is now a place of paved streets, many-storied office buildings and the clang of street cars.

But then the conditions were more primitive and idyllic. Near this place, we are told, there ran a brook or stream, across what is now Elgin street, out of a sort of swamp below two graveyards. This brook found its sinuous passage, by all sorts of declivities, mysteriously into the old canal. In this brook fish of a kind were said to have been caught. The dreamer may, perchance, imagine the small boy of that period, weary of much study in the dingy walls of the old school and fain for the outdoors, and the sun and wind's companionship, on his way loitering eager for the gleaming and hurrying bass or perch that flashed under the amber water of a sunny pool; or we may stray with him down to the rude wharf-side, in wonder at some strange craft just arrived from the outside world, bearing those cargoes delightful and mysterious to the boy mind; and with him watch the slow, old-time process of unloading and storing in the equally mysterious gloom of the, even then, dingy and cobwebby old warehouses.

At that time there were few houses in what was called Middle Town; and from near what is now Connaught Place a pathway, wound over the hill to Upper Town. At each end of this path was a turnstile, and this was the only means of approach for many a year. North, on the cliff, were the soldiers' barracks and the town jail—while on the east side of the sappers' bridge was a lodge and gate, which was the entrance to Mayor's Hill, where was the residence of the military commander. That certainly was a different environment from what exists to-day. It is indeed a place now long dead and gone, a mere memory and a dream vanished with the youth and vague longings or imaginings of the schoolboy of that period, now, perchance, like the old Bytown, a part of what is dust and ashes.—Wilfred Campbell, in The Canadian Magazine.

Money Letters Impounded.

Thousands of letters are lying in the dead letter offices in Ottawa, Toronto and other cities that contain money. That is the reason why they are in the dead office. It is contrary to a regulation recently put in force to send money through the mail, unless by postal order, check, or in a registered envelope. The order was issued to stop the sending of money through the mails, and the idea was to remove temptation as far as possible from postal employes.

Many retail houses do a good deal of rural business in this way. Many of their customers enclose coins in envelopes and send them through the post to retail houses. There is no penalty attached to the sending of money through the mails, but the sending of it is contrary to the regulations, and unregistered letters which are being found to contain money have been sent to the dead letter offices.

Representations are being made urging that the rule be rescinded and sums less than $1 may soon be sent by letter.

Quebec Marriages.

The Province of Quebec is the most expensive place there is in which to be married by license. This is because the province puts a tax on marriage by license. Six dollars is drawn down every time a license is issued by the Government. The total cost is eight dollars. Two of these go to the issuer of the document. This money does not go into the general fund of the province, but is devoted to the higher Protestant educational institutions, and is placed at the disposal of the educational board. It is given in this way because Roman Catholics do not marry by license.

The tax amounts to many thousands of dollars every year. In one office alone in 1913 no less than 800 licenses were issued. Undoubtedly the total would be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Strathcona's Romantic Marriage.

The marriage of Lord Strathcona was a romance. He met the lady when he was twenty-nine, and living on the coast of Labrador. She was a widow, and had a little son. There was no priest or church within 1,000 miles, and the marriage was a simple contract without ceremony. It was for this reason that when the High Commissioner became a peer in 1897 a re-marriage was held to be necessary, and it was solemnized with the full ritual of the Church of England.

A Clean Vote.

An innovation was introduced into university election contests at the Trinity College Literary Society annual elections in Toronto recently, when in the last five minutes of polling a number of men were discovered in the shower baths who had not exercised their franchise. These were not permitted to even put on their slippers. One student shouted as they were being carried to the polling booth that it would be a clean vote.

HAD A SURE THING.

Device of a Canny Scot For Trapping Unwary Motorists.

While he was touring Scotland, a well-known British sportsman and motorist heard a new device of the canny Scot for raising the wind.

A friend of his was taking a motor trip through the lowlands, driving his own car. As he neared a small stone cottage standing close to the road he sounded his horn as a precautionary measure. Instantly a flock of chickens tumbled headlong out of the cottage door and spread fluttering across the road. Before the American could check his speed two hens lay quivering in death in the dust, and the survivors had retreated back indoors.

Then magically appeared the owner of the deceased, a severe and whiskered old Scot. He threatened arrest and prosecution for reckless driving. The automobilist protested that he had sounded his horn in warning. The cottager declared he had heard no horn, and his son, who had arrived meantime from behind a hedge, backed up his father. The tourist compromised by paying half a crown apiece for the kill chickens, about twice their value, and, having no use for them, he bestowed the carcasses on the old man.

Thus they parted, but as he reached the crest of a hill beyond the American halted his car to enjoy the view, and chancing to look back he beheld a strange but illuminating pantomime.

The son stationed himself behind the hedge on the opposite side of the road from the cottage, holding under his arm a battered automobile horn.

The father scattered grain in the middle of the road and withdrew. The son tooted the horn. The chickens rushed out.

Art Treasures In New York.

During two weeks recently there were on simultaneous exhibition in New York at different galleries old masters valued at more than $20,000,000. Among them were ten Fragonards of the J. Pierpont Morgan collection, considered worth more than $4,000,000. Three exhibitions, which comprised only a small part of the art treasures in the hands of American collectors, afforded a striking idea of the extent of the importations of old masters from Europe during the last few years.

HOW WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio—"My left side pained me so for several years that I expected to have to undergo an operation, but the first bottle I took of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of the pains in my side and I continued its use until I became regular and free from pains. I had asked several doctors if there was anything I could take to help me and they said there was nothing that they knew of. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—Mrs. C. H. GRIFFITH, 7305 Madison Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Hanover, Pa.—"I suffered from female trouble and the pains were so bad at times that I could not sit down. The doctor advised a severe operation but my husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I experienced great relief in a short time. Now I feel like a new person and can do a hard day's work and not mind it. What joy and happiness it is to be well once more. I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Compound."—Mrs. ADA WILT, 196 Stock St., Hanover, Pa.

If there are any complications you do not understand write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

WHY LINDSAY IN PREFERENCE TO LOCAL FIRMS

Ald. Stratton Draws Attention — To Action of Water Commissioners

Recently the Board of Water Commissioners awarded the contract of supplying office fittings for the new offices of the Utilities Commission, to a firm in Lindsay.

There was only a few dollars difference between the successful tender and that of the Peterboro Furniture Co., and last night at Council meeting, Ald. Stratton expressed himself that when the difference in the tender was only a reasonable sum, the contract should be awarded to a local firm. The work could be done here just as well.

"I was suprised when they went to Lindsay, but I have not gone into the matter thoroughly," said the Mayor.

"I daresay they had sufficient reasons," added Ald. Duffus.

The Other Side.

Seen this morning in regard to the matter, Mr. W. H. Moore, of the Water Commissioners, stated that the aldermen had been wrongly informed. It was more than a few dollars difference. The goods they were getting could not be made here at the same price. They had seen a sample of the fittings and were well pleased.

Other local furniture men would not tender owing to the fact that they were of the opinion that they could not supply the quality wanted at a reasonable price.

McCLARY GAS RANGES SHOWN

Demonstrations in Baking at Adamson and Dobbin's.

The demonstration of McClary gas ranges at the Adamson and Dobbin store is attracting large crowds and creating much interest. Yesterday and to-day large numbers took advantage of the opportunity of the demonstration to examine the qualities of this up-to-date range and sample the baking produced by it between 3 and 4 o'clock. The sanitary finish and durability of the range, coupled with the economy of it, commends itself to all the housewives of this city. The demonstration will be concluded Wednesday, and no doubt large numbers will witness the demonstration before it closes.

Bisley Team To Get Fares.

OTTAWA, May 5.—The council of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association has decided, for this year, to pay the first-class railway fares of all members of the Bisley team, from their homes to Montreal and return. It has been the custom in the past for all members of the team to pay their own railway expenses to the place of mobilization. All transportation from their homes to Bisley and return has been provided for.

FIRE ON HIGH SEAS

Wireless Call to "Hurry Up" is Received at Sable Island Wireless Station, But Vessels Which Answer the Summons Can See No Boats or Life on Ill-Fated Ship—Crew Probably Saved.

HALIFAX, N.S., May 5.—An unknown steamer, on fire from stem to stern and with no signs of life on board, was discovered 300 miles south south of Cape Race yesterday by the steamer Seydlitz from Bremen for New York. Her position was given as latitude 41.27 north and longitude 51.07 west. The Seydlitz immediately called by wireless for assistance and response came from the Franconia, 50 miles to the eastward, bound for Boston, and the Olympic 200 miles to the west, headed for New York.

The Seydlitz circled around the burning vessel, but the smoke hung so heavy about her that her name could not be distinguished.

As no small boats were discovered in the vicinity, and as the Olympic had passed not far from the scene 12 or 15 hours before, it was believed here last night that the unnamed vessel caught fire some time after midnight, and that all hands were rescued by some ship which had no wireless.

The weather on the Grand Banks yesterday was moderate, and it was thought that any transhipment could have been accomplished with no great amount of difficulty or danger.

The Marine and Fisheries Department last night received a wireless despatch from Sable Island station from the steamer Seydlitz stating that the bulk of the burning ship was high out of the water. The funnel and the foremast were gone. The steamer had evidently been burning for some time. The burning ship has a high poop.

The wireless station at Sable Island Sunday night picked up part of a message that was evidently passing between two steamers equipped with wireless. The message read:

"Hurry up; we are on fire." Atmospheric conditions then interrupted and no more details of the ocean tragedy could be learned.

It is believed that the ill-fated ship was a tramp steamer.

An excellent thing for cleansing wall paper is bran filled into cheesecloth bags; also it is better than soap for the bath-tub.

The average girl considers that she's begun to get on in the world when she's been introduced to a man who owns an automobile."

MUST INCREASE REVENUE.

Lloyd George Proposes Extensive Revision of Income Tax.

LONDON, May 5.—David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, introduced the Budget in the House of Commons yesterday, and estimated the deficit for 1914-15 at $26,650,000. Adding to this a charge against the Exchequer of $21,090,000 arising from readjustment of the relations between Imperial and local taxation, and a necessary margin of $1,000,000, the Chancellor showed the need of increasing the national income for the coming year by about $49,000,000.

Mr. Lloyd George's proposals to raise this money include a material increase in the rate of the tax levied on earned and unearned incomes, and the raising of the death duties to the maximum of 20 per cent.

He plans also to reduce the tax burden to the man who expends money on his property to improve in proportion to the amount so spent.

He proposed an upward revision of the graduated income tax, increasing the levy upon earned incomes over $5,000 a year.

There would be levied a supertax on incomes of $15,000 a year and upwards, instead of this supertax beginning, as it does at present, with incomes of $25,000 a year.

With this new graduated scale of income tax rates rising finally to 16d. in the pound, the total income tax, in certain cases, would be as high as 32d. (approximately 64 cents), in the pound sterling.

The allowance for children of parents whose incomes do not exceed $2,500 a year would be doubled.

The Chancellor declared he proposed to make Englishmen who made investments abroad in order to escape the income tax pay their dues, and he said that the death duties on estates over $300,000 would undergo a graduated increase until the maximum would be 20 per cent., instead of the 15 per cent. collected at present.

Queen Eleanor Not Coming.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, May 5.—Queen Eleanor of Bulgaria has definitely decided not to visit America this month, as she had contemplated. An official announcement to this effect was issued yesterday. It read:

"In view of events in America, which Queen Eleanor follows with especial interest, her Majesty's visit to the United States has been postponed until the circumstances are more favorable."

One thing no woman can understand is the fact that men think they are deceiving them.

SIR. THOMAS SHAUGHNESSY ON GOVERNMENT OWNED RAILWAYS

ARGUMENTS FOR AND AGAINST

Four arguments for and four arguments against Government ownership of railways are given by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the "Outlook" for May 2. The fourfold objections are briefly :—that the government does not show the enterprise of the private concern, that the government does not show the economy of a corporation, that rates would rise, and that a sinister result might come from the sudden increase in the number of government employes.

On the other hand the arguments for government ownership might be summarized as follows :—railway property is the most easily socialized body of wealth and its expropriation would tend to level distressing inequalities of wealth, railway investment would lose much of its objectionable speculative character, railway affairs would be administered without unfair discrimination and rates could be adjusted with reference to a maximum development of the country as a whole.

The following conclusions are drawn in a summary :—"I see nothing in the situation that good temper, absolute candor and a strict sense of fair play will not bring out to the best possible results. Like every other great public institution, railways will always reflect as much, and no more, of these qualities as there is current among the general public. A mere change in the form of ownership will make no difference at all, for a government is never any better than its people. Railways will always follow the lead of public opinion—there is no doubt about it, they cannot help it—so it is only necessary to form your opinion clearly and wisely. Really, Government ownership or private ownership is not the fundamental thing. The fundamental thing is honest service on one side and honest compensation on the other ; given this, and you have conditions that will bring the best results to everybody concerned."

RIGHT TO BUILD UNDER SUPERVISION OF CITY ENGINEER.

NEW BY-LAW COMING.

The City Council had a round with the building by-law last night, the outcome being that the applications of J. H. Taylor, J. M. Rossel and Mrs. Reid, to build nine inch walls for new dwellings, inside the fire limits, were granted.

Mr. Taylor and several other gentlemen, including a contractor and a bricklayer, were present, and arguments were used to show that the walls which Mr. Taylor proposed to build would be strong and safe.

Some New Material.

The City Engineer had some new material to be used in the new by-law, which it is proposed to pass, and he explained these to the Council. There was quite a long discussion.

The walls in question must be constructed in accordance with the wishes of the City Engineer. The chairman of the Property Committee and the City Engineer will confer with the City Solicitor in regard to the new by-law.

CONCRETE WORK

Martin Neary, Inspector of Cement for the City.

Concrete laying operations on George Street were renewed this morning. It is the intention of the firm of Foley and Gleason to extend the concrete work between the tracks to McDonnel Street. To-morrow the paving block machine will start operations. This will be followed by two concrete mixing machines on each division.

The quality of cement is being looked after by Martin Neary, who is acting in the capacity of cement inspector for the city.

Fergus Farmer Goes To Jail.

GUELPH, May 5. — Thomas McLelland of Fergus, a brother of the man who was found dead in a swamp in Eramosa Township about a week ago, came to Guelph to attend the inquest into the death of his brother, and was arrested charged with a serious offence on a married woman. Yesterday morning he was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison by Magistrate Watt.

The fine inner leaves of dandelions chopped fine and seasoned and moistened with mayonaise make excellent spring sandwiches.

AUTOISTS MUST BE MORE CAREFUL AT ALLEYWAYS

Police Chief Says Law Will Be Enforced to the Limit

Several citizens have complained that owners of autos are disregarding the traffic regulations concerning machines emerging from alleyways and the police department will investigate the matter. The traffic regulations call for a speed not to exceed four miles per hour and also a warning from the driver of the machine. Evidently the drivers have failed to observe the rules. There are several dangerous alleyways entering on the main streets of the city and it is in connection with those that the complaints are being made. The alleyway just east of the Snowden House on Charlotte Street is said to be very dangerous from the standpoint of a pedestrian, it being claimed that autos dash from the alleyway at a dangerous rate of speed.

R. J. Gollop, proprietor of the hotel, when speaking of the subject with a Review reporter stated that many of the auto drivers disregarded the traffic regulations and he feared an accident might happen any day. "If the auto men do not take more care I will prevent them using the alley way as I have the power to close it if I see fit," he said.

Chief Thompson when spoken to stated thot the law would be enforced to the limit.

REGULATIONS TO GOVERN SCAVENGERS

Five scavenger's licenses have been taken out so far since the new by-law regulating the work went into force on the first of the month.

The regulations provide that no person shall engage in the practice in privy cleaning or removal of night soil unless he has applied to Sanitary Inspector Spence for permission to carry on such business. The license fee for the applicant is only one dollar, but the object of the Health Department was to have the matter under the entire control of the Health Department.

The applicant must have apparatus, qualification and appliances to carry on such business in compliance with the public Health Act.

The notice of the removal of night soil comes through the Sanitary Inspector's Office and the refuse must be dumped in the incinerator.

After cleaning the night soil receptacle the scavenger must in accordance with the regulations use some disinfectant.

Dead animals or carcasses must at the complaint of the Sanitary Inspector or Police Constable be removed to the incinerator.

Every scavenger within forty-eight hourse after notification on the part of the inspector must attend to the stipulated residence.

Breach of the by-law makes the licencee liable to a fine not more than $20 and the license revoked.

Michael Mann, in Court Denies He Was Drunk

"He fell flat on his face; I thought he had killed himself from the heavy fall," said Constable Patterson to the court this morning in the case of Michael Mann, an aged man of fully seventy years, charged with being drunk.

"I never was drunk, it was a weak attack I had, why I have never been drunk before," appealed the old man, who evinced considerable distress in the affair.

"Go home to your family and if you ever come here again after that story, we will believe the constables," said the Magistrate in dismissing the case.

OBITUARY

THE LATE MRS. CAREW.

Mrs. Nathaniel Carew, 474 Donegal Street, a well known and highly respected resident of this city, passed away at her home early this morning. The late Mrs. Carew, whose maiden name was Catherine Carrol, was born in the Township of Emily, but moved to Ennismore after her marriage. Some three years ago she moved to this city, and resided here till her death.

She leaves her husband, one sister, Mrs. A. Sullivan, of Emily, two brothers, John and Timothy, of Emily, also three daughters, Eveline, Gertrude and Vera at home, and three sons, Harold, Francis and Fergus, all of this city.

The funeral will take place on Thursday morning at nine o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and Cemetery.

MRS. PATRICK GUIRY.

The death occurred in Denver, Colorado, on Friday, May 1st, of a former resident of this section, in the person of Mrs. Patrick Guiry, sister of Mrs. M. H. McGeough, Lindsay. The deceased lady (whose maiden name was Annie Powers), was born in South Monaghan, Peterboro County, but resided in South Ops until about 17 years ago, when she moved to Rochester, where her husband died. She afterwards moved to Denver, Colorado.

THE LATE MRS. O'BRIEN.

The death occurred in the House of Providence this afternoon of Mrs. O'Brien, aged 87 years, who has been an inmate of that institution about a year. She formerly lived in Otonabee.

His Prayer Answered.

CANNOT SIGN

AN INJUNCTION RESTRAINS BELLEVILLE COUNCIL FROM SIGNING PAVING CONTRACT.

The accepting by the city council of Belleville of the tender of Foley and Gleason, the Ottawa contractors who are constructing the permanent roadways in this city, has been blocked for the time being. Yesterday J. J. B. Flint, a ratepayer of Belleville, was granted an injunction restraining the city council from signing the contract. The Foley and Gleason tender was the highest. The men employed by the contractors on the work in this city were booked to do the work in Belleville as soon as the local job was completed.

Blame it on the Tire

He didn't pump it full enough,
Though all the air is free:
He left it soft and spongy like,
And scooted on with glee.

He skidded, then he glided, and
He whooped through dust and mire;
And when it burst, he cussed and cussed
And blamed it on the tire.

He drove it on the street car tracks
With confidence superb,
He bumped against the lamp posts,
And he scraped it on the curb.

He slammed it and he jammed it,
To fill his heart's desire,
And when it popped right out, he hopped
And blamed it on the tire.

He cut it on some broken glass,
But thought, "that didn't hurt,"
He kept right on through sand and mud,
And filled the cut with dirt.

It spotted here and rotted there,
And soon he howled in ire,
When it blew up, he blew up too
And blamed it on the tire.

He put on chains that ground and chewed,
And gouged into the tread;
He knew his wheels were out of true,
"But what of that," he said.

He whizzed along and sizzed along,
He picked up nails and wire,
And when they banged his fist he whanged,
And blamed it on the tire.

Who is this man? Go ask the boys
Who meet him every day;
Go ask the boys who have to hear
The things he has to say.

He bores in and roars in,
With words of angry fire,
Though he's to blame it's all the same,
He blames it on the tire.

HENRY THARE IS GATHERED IN BY THE POLICE

His Actions on the Street Warrant an Examination Being Made.

Henry Thare, single, aged about thirty, was arrested on George St. to-day at noon by Constables Patterson and Howard, after running amuck yelling, and causing a general state of excitement along the street.

Thare first drew the attention of citizens by stepping out into the middle of the main thoroughfare and screeching at the top of his voice, "I want my money back." He then walked down the street, followed by the constables. He was arrested near the Market Arcade.

On the way to the station he kept repeating that he was like Andrew Carnegie and Tolstoi. He had given all his money to the church and world when he had it. Now, he had nothing and wanted to buy a wheel. He had no money, therefore his denouncement of the world and request for the return of his money.

On being searched some change and a knife were found. He has been out of work during the winter. He will be examined this afternoon, and will appear before Magistrate Dumble to-morrow morning.

Thare is the man who startled the Charlotte Street congregation some time ago by arising in the middle of the sermon of the late Rev. T. J. Mansell and interrupting the discourse by gestures and remarks.

He gives no reason for his sudden action to-day except that he was without funds and wanted to purchase a bicycle immediately.

HOUSE AT OTTAWA

Government Tables Much Information Concerning Affairs of Canadian Northern Railway—Sir Wilfrid Seeks Still More Details—Budget Proposal Regarding Steel Duties are Adopted.

OTTAWA, May 5.—Premier Borden proceeded yesterday afternoon to lay before the House the sessional program which proved to be quite voluminous. He said that in addition to legislation already noted upon the order paper, bills would be introduced respecting the election list for voting under the Canada Temperance Act, to amend the Superannuation Act and the Civil Service Act, the Dominion Notes Act, and the Dry-docks Subsidies Act.

Also would legislation be introduced, the Prime Minister said, respecting the terminals of the National Transcontinental Railway at Winnipeg, respecting the storage of explosives, and to amend the Joint Stock Companies Act.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier smilingly said that the program submitted was an ambitious one. It not only made prorogation impossible for May 24, but any other date in the near future.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham asked whether it was the intention of the Government to proceed at this session with its bill to amend the Insurance Act.

Hon. Mr. White said in reply that the bill would stand over until next session in view of the representations made by many of the insurance companies.

There was tabled in the House yesterday information concerning the Canadian Northern Railway, including cost of completion and trust deeds of 1908, 1910 and 1913, also a statement of floating liabilities of various companies, and statement of the securities pledged as collateral to loans.

Summing up the statement gives the following figures:

Amount required for construction, $41,987,585; amount due to subcontractors, western lines, $8,348,290; eastern lines, $6,606,424. Total $14,954,714.

Rolling stock required, $27,441,086; amount needed, betterments, $100,379,099; proceeds of securities earned or available against the above, $58,473,983; balance required, $41,905,117.

Floating liabilities of the railway companies embraced in general title of Canadian Northern Railway system amount to $10,408,128.30.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, upon the orders of the day being called, asked for additional data. He desired copies of all correspondence between the Government and the company which preceded and led up to the resolution now before the House. He also desired a list of the liabilities of said companies. Some of the subsidiary corporations, it was stated, he said, were owned outright by the Canadian Northern, while as to others the Canadian Northern had the controlling interest. He desired a list of the companies owned by the C. N. R. and its holdings in the companies. Information was also requested as to the gross and net earnings of the parent road and of the other lines.

The Prime Minister said that all information available would be furnished at the earliest possible moment. He intimated, however, that there was no correspondence on file.

The House yesterday adopted the resolution respecting rebates upon improved pig iron used in manufactured goods for export, and a bill founded upon the resolution was then introduced and read a first time. The measure does not change the existing rate by which a drawback of 98 per cent. is allowed to the importer of raw material who converts the same into manufactured goods for export but it seeks to clear up some confusion in the existing practice and indirectly to encourage manufacturers to use more Canadian pig iron.

During the debate upon the resolution, E. M. Macdonald (Lib., Pictou) charged that the iron and steel schedule had been revised to suit the Ontario steel mills, and that the big mill at Sydney had not benefited at all except incidentally through the placing of a duty upon wire rods.

Mr. White replied that if the Nova Scotia steel men wanted more protection why did they not say so, and not attack the Government with veiled insinuations?

Mr. Macdonald said that the Government had held out hopes to the iron and steel industry that bounties would be reimposed, and thus created a condition of uncertainty which had demoralised all business in Canada.

Shortage at Dale Bank Due to Dabbling in Stocks

MADOC, May 5.—"Speculation on the Stock Exchange, which in the long run proved disastrous," is given by auditors as the cause of the failure of the Dale private bank here. It is said that ever since 1902 trading in stocks has been going on, sometimes unsuccessfully. Discrepancies of $201,955 between the last annual statement of the bank and the actual assets are reported by the auditors, Webb, Read, Callaghan, Hogan & Co., made public yesterday. The discrepancies are on the following: Overdrafts, $3,231,737; current bills and loans, $58,321.28; Osler & Hammond, $384.48; debenture account, $128,025.30; mortgage account, $10,011.31; J. C. Dale's account, $11,480.83. From these amounts $9,508.41 is subtracted for miscellaneous collections and cash, leaving the shortage at $201,855.56.

Western real estate investments also proved unfortunate. Fifty thousand dollars is tied up in this way and cannot be realized till prices again reach their height.

No More Reimbursement.

OTTAWA, May 5.—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux asked if it was the intention of the Government to reimburse the depositors of the bank which recently failed at Madoc.

The Finance Minister said it was not. The bank in question was a private bank.

Mr. White, in reply to a further question, said it was not the intention to recoup the depositors of any bank except the Farmers' Bank of Canada.

MESSAGE OF CONDOLENCE.

Sir James Whitney Cables H. R. H. Princess Louise.

TORONTO, May 5.—The death of the Duke of Argyll, a former Governor-General of Canada, has called forth a message of condolence from Sir James Whitney on behalf of Ontario. The following message was cabled last evening to H. R. H. the Princess Louise of Cowes, Isle of Wight:

"The Government and people of the Province of Ontario desire respectfully to tender you their warm sympathy in your bereavement. The services rendered to Canada by your deceased husband are gratefully remembered.

"J. P. Whitney,
"Prime Minister."

Cyclone Leaves Trail of Ruin.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Texas, May 5.—Two persons were killed when a cyclone swept over Maud, Texas, near here, yesterday. Half the houses in the town were destroyed, according to information received here late yesterday. The cyclone also did severe damage at Redwater and near Pittsburg, Texas, injuring some 14 people in the three towns.

It was stated that all the dwelling houses at Redwater were destroyed.

Federal General Who Defended Torreon May Revolt

VERA CRUZ, May 5.—The outbreak of another military revolt in Mexico, headed by Gen. Jose Refugio Velasco, who was recently driven out of Torreon by Francisco Villa, would not cause any great surprise in the Federal capital, according to conservative observers among the refugees who arrived here yesterday. Gen. Velasco is said to be grievously discontented concerning the failure of the Government in Mexico City to support him properly in the defence of Torreon, and he is declared to have stated that he would never again lead a column of troops against the rebels.

GENERAL VELASCO.

The fall of Torreon and the subsequent disaster to the Federal troops are asserted by Gen. Velasco to have been entirely due to the failure of the War Department to heed his appeal for small arm ammunition at a time when he says it was perfectly feasible for it to have reached him.

BISHOP IS CRUCIFIED.

Zapatistas Enraged at Failure to Get Money.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—Among the tales of atrocities told yesterday by the refugees from the west coast of Mexico, who arrived Sunday on the steamer City of Sydney, is that of the crucifixion of the Catholic Bishop of Chalapa.

According to the account, a detachment of the rebel Gen. Zapata's soldiers called on the bishop to surrender the funds of his church. He refused, whereupon the soldiers are said to have nailed him to a cross and left him to die.

There were 587 northwestern store hogs on the market.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, May 4.—Prices for good to choice steers showed an advance of 10c to 25c per 100 pounds, as compared with last week. The lower grades and cows and bulls, however, were unchanged. Trade was rather slow at the opening of the market, on account of the higher prices demanded, but later the demand improved, and a fairly active business was done, due to the fact that both packers and butchers were short of supplies.

The market for hogs was lower, owing to increased offerings. Prices showed a decline of from 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, with the demand slow, selling at $9 to $9.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars. Ontario hogs were in good demand, at $9.65 to $9.75 for selected lots.

Spring lambs were in stronger demand at from $4 to $7 each, as to size. Sheep were steady, as were calves.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.25 to $8.50; do., medium, $6.50 to $7.50; do., common, $5 to $6; canners, $4 to $4.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; do., medium, $6 to $7; do., bulls, $5 to $7.25; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $50 to $65.

Sheep, ewes, $6.50 to $7; bucks and culls, $5 to $6. Lambs, $8 to $8.50.

Hogs, off cars $9 to $9.75.

Calves, $3 to $10.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

Woman Shot To Death.

CHATHAM, May 5. — Mrs. Alex. Pheasant, an Indian woman living on the reserve at Moraviantown, was instantly killed Sunday when a charge from a shotgun entered her neck. Her husband was working with a shotgun when it exploded. A physician from Bothwell was called and an investigation is now being made. An inquest will likely be held.

Prisoner Commits Suicide.

DORCHESTER, N.B., May 5.—George Dujay, from Montreal, a prisoner in the county jail here, committed suicide yesterday. Let out from a cell to do some work, he entered another cell, where he found a razor, and with it slashed his throat. Dujay was being held pending trial on a charge of perjury in connection with a Scott Act case.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS WITHOUT REBEL LEADER

South American Envoys, in View of His Refusal to Agree to an Armistice Withdraw Their Invitation to Him to Send Representative—Huerta's Condition in Capital is Desperate.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Gen. Carranza and the Constitutionalists yesterday were practically eliminated from the proceedings of the three South American envoys who have undertaken to solve the Mexican problem by diplomacy.

In a telegram to Gen. Carranza, the mediators announced that, in view of his refusal to agree to an armistice with Gen. Huerta, they withdrew their invitation to him to send a personal representative to participate in the mediation negotiations.

The language of the telegram sent by the mediators leaves open to Carranza, however, the privilege of sending a special representative to participate in peace negotiations whenever he is willing to arrange an armistice with Huerta.

This new turn in events ended, in the view of many officials the chance of solving the entire Mexican problem immediately, though it did not lessen the enthusiasm of the mediators, who will continue their efforts to solve the differences between Huerta and the United States, which directly brought about the present crisis.

Reports of the desperate condition of Huerta at Mexico City continue to circulate, and with such circumstantial detail from authentic sources as to leave no doubt of his critical condition.

At the same time the military aspect of the situation became increasingly prominent again. Gen. Funston reported renewed demands by Mexican Federal outposts and the surrender of the water works supplying Vera Cruz. No shots were fired and the Mexicans fell back.

Gen. Funston voiced the prevailing spirit in military quarters in enquiring as to what steps the United States contemplated in view of the threatening situation.

Secretary Garrison conferred with his military chiefs, but said no further orders had been given for the movement of troops, and none are contemplated during the period of negotiations.

Caillaux Fired In the Air.

PARIS, May 5. — Joseph Caillaux, ex-Minister of Finance, and Fernand D'Aillieres, M. Caillaux's opponent in the recent election to the French Chamber of Deputies, fought a duel yesterday with pistols. M. D'Aillieres fired twice at his adversary, but neither shot found its mark. M. Caillaux fired in the air.

The duellists were placed 25 paces apart. The encounter took place in the Parc des Princes.

Set Fire To Her Hair.

LONDON, Ont., May 5.—Mrs. Albert Farrier, 555 Ottawa avenue, went to a dark cupboard holding a lighted match in her hand Sunday night, and set fire to her hair, which was burned completely off. Her face, head, and one shoulder were also badly burned. She is in a precarious condition from the shock.

Farmer Ended His Life.

LONDON, Ont., May 5.—Archibald Campbell, an Alvinston farmer, who came to the London Insane Asylum on April 11 as a voluntary patient, because, as he explained, he was afraid he might commit suicide, ended his life during the temporary absence of the guard by cutting his throat with a table knife he had obtained from the kitchen of the institution.

TORONTO JAIL A DISGRACE.

Dr. Bruce Smith Finds 100 Men Forced to Sleep on Floor.

TORONTO, May 5.—Violent condemnation of the Toronto Jail occupies the greater part of the report of Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith, Government inspector of prisons, sent to the City Council and read yesterday. The report tells of a most lamentable condition of affairs, and recommends that unless a new fireproof jail be built at once, the Government withhold its grant for maintenance of prisoners. Parts of it read as follows:

"Conditions as they prevail to-day are a disgrace to any civilized community. During the past winter there have been nights when more men prisoners slept on the floor than in the cells of Toronto jail."

"There is no other jail in America where such conditions would be tolerated. Fancy 100 men under sentence having to sleep every night during the past winter on the floor on mattresses."

"A modern, up-to-date fireproof jail must be built without delay, and I recommend to the Government that until these provisions are met the grant for maintenance of prisoners be withheld."

The Italian peasants hang strings of teeth arround the necks of their babies to assist them in teething.

Women Convicts Transferred.

KINGSTON, May 5.—Nine women from Edmonton Penitentiary arrived at the Portsmouth Penitentiary yesterday afternoon to serve terms of different lengths for offences from murder down. The women are being transferred on account of the women's department at Edmonton Penitentiary being closed.

Farmer Falls Dead.

GUELPH, May 5.—Thos. Weatherston, of Everton, a retired farmer, 71, fell dead just after climbing into his buggy at the close of a church service at Ospringe. He had been troubled with a weak heart for some time, and death was due to a hemorrhage of the heart.

PETES FINISHING UP FOR FIRST BATTLE ON THURSDAY

Blount Will Start Season With Five Hurlers and Three Catchers

(Special to The Review.)

Youngstown, May 5.—Yesterday morning Curley Blount had his squad out for a batting and infield practice. Cresswell and Belting were on the mound, while Hyberg did the receiving. All the players enjoyed the swatfest, and kept Willie Swartz busy in the outergarden chasing long floaters to the fence. The batting was followed by a fast infield workout. That division of the team is showing more class every day. Joe Byrne, Price, King, Schrage and German were the men figuring in the practice, but Price received a slight injury to his hand, and King went to short, leaving second in care of Schrage. All possess good arms, and German's ability to play the initial sack makes up for any little deficiency in the line of a bad throw. The boy from Atlantic City will be the sensation of the league.

After lunch Blount worked in another batting practice, but it was soon replaced by signal work. Blount was on the lines and coached the players for over an hour. Price was not in the swim ,but the manner in which King plays short demonstrates that he is an infielder of the first rank. All the pitchers delivered a few, while the batters laid down bunts. Blount is keen on signals, and had the players transmitting them from one to another while on the field.

Mully Miller's hand is healing steadily, but it is doubtful if he will figure in the opener. Manager Blount stated to-day that he will start the season with three catchers and five pitchers, but may cut down later.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE

Important Meeting Called for Y.M.C.A. To-night.

The meeting of the Mercantile Baseball League to-night in the Y. M. C. A. should be well attended, as very important business will be dealt with.

In last night's issue a section of the article in connection with the Mercantilers read "the officers could be improved upon." Of course, this was a direct contradiction to the article, and it should have read, "the officers could not be improved upon."

CHAMPIONSHIP HOPES

"Ginner" Fried, the Ottawa utility infielder is hailed as a big leaguer. He played in the same semi-pro. club as Milton Stock, the Giant third-sacker. Evidently this fellow Fried is well done.

Teach, the former Brantford infielder and Kuohl, an outfielder, will walk the plank to-day, according to announcement from Chatham, where the Ottawas are training.

Doc Yates' Hamilton gang made up for the loss of the first exhibition game by beating Scranton on Saturday 9-4, and Niagara University on Sunday 12-3.

George Mullin, one of the star heavers of organized baseball a few years back, and now with the Feds., made his debut in a Detroit uniform 12 years ago yesterday.

Rumor has it that Christy Mathewson will take over the duties of manager of the St. Louis Cardinals in a few months. New York officials deny the story. It is safe to say that it will take a whole lot of argument, money and players to pry the Old Master from a Giant uniform.

Addie L. Richardson, Canada's well known baseball statistician, in this week's issue of the Philadelphia Sporting Life, America's leading sporting weekly, hands the follow- bouquet to Len Dobson, business agent of the Peterboro Club:

"Len Dobson has again been appointed business manager for the Peterboro club, and his appointment gives great satisfaction, not only in the Lift Lock city, where he is extremely popular, but throughout the entire circuit, where he has friends by the hundreds. For popularity, to beat Leonard Mark Dobson you will have to go some."

ERIE MANAGER SAYS HIS YANKS WILL BE STRONG

Expects to Be a Contender From Barrier to Wire.

Erie, Pa., May 5.—When the lid is pried off this week, Manager Smith expects to present to Erie fans a team which they will be proud of. He is satisfied that the Yanks will be strong enough to hold their own with the best in Fitzgerald's circuit.

The team has practically been decided upon now. Either Harris or Dunn will perform in left field, Dawson in middle and Schaffer in right. Gygli will be on first; Smith, second; Behan, short; and Wiltse, third. McNeil and Daniels will no doubt be retained as catchers. McNeil joined the team yesterday, having been with the Buffalo International League team all season. Daniels was one of the best young catchers in the Canadian League last season until he threw his arm out. The wing has been fixed up by Bonesetter Reese, however, and is now as good as new.

"Dummy" Taylor is the only Yankee yet to report. He will probably arrive late in the week. Smith will pick his pitching staff from Taylor, Brown, Dorbeck, Fitzpatrick, Sutton, Stark and Osborne.

LACROSSE PRACTICE

All lacrosse players and those desiring to learn the game should be on hand to-morrow night at six-thirty in Central Park. There are plenty of sticks on hand, and everyone who so desires can be in the game.

PETERBORO GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB

Members of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club are requested to have their draws for the Stratton Trophy played off during the present week. Those appearing first on the list of the draw, a copy of which is in the Club House, are expected to notify their opponents and arrange with them as to the dates of play. Saturday, May 9th at 4 p.m. marks the close of the first round and on no consideration save that of unfavorable weather will any game on the first draw be allowed after that date.

The first game in the mixed foursomes will take place on Saturday, May 9th, at 4 p.m. It is hoped that as large a representation as possible will turn out to take part in this match. All desiring to compete are requested to be on hand sharp at 3.30 p.m.

SPORTING COMMENT

In this season of baseball, when the word is on every lip; the eye of everyone on almost every sport page; eagerly glancing over it for some dope of some favorite, an event of unusual interest, which otherwise would have created no end of argument and comment, has been practically overlooked. It is concerning the big international relay race between Oxford University and Cornell and Pennsylvania representatives a week ago, which was won by the English team, after a finish which was almost as dramatic as the finish in the London Olympic Marathon, when Dorando, the doughty little Italian, collapsed within ten feet of the goal. Hugh Fullerton, the well known sporting authority describes the race in the following words:

Imagine the scene:

A pelting rainstorm; a muddy, treacherous track, slippery at the top, Penn's magnificent team of milers—Bacon, Langner, Madiera and Sproule, Gausen, Tabor and Jackson, grimly hanging to the leaders, with the men of Cornell and Penn State already hopelessly beaten by the desperate pace under the conditions.

At the third mile, McCurdy, the game little Penn captain, leaped from the touch, with Jackson, the hero of the 1,500 metre at Stockholm, 22 yards behind—and a mile to go.

Inch by inch, running desperately Jackson crept closer. The experts thought that McCurdy was saving his strength to stall off the final sprint of the Oxonian, but McCurdy was running his best and close to his own record, through that mud and rain, and still Jackson gained.

McCurdy sprang to the sprint 200 yards from the tape. McCurdy had thrown on all power, all strength, in the last effort, and, to the amazement of the spectators, Jackson, who had been on his toes at a sprinting gait for 220 yards, replied with a greater burst of speed. He wore down inch by inch.

Fifty yards out McCurdy led by only a foot, and stride by stride they came down, neither faltering, neither wavering, running their hearts out, and at the last yard Jackson, with a great leap buried himself past the Penn captain; breasted the cotton thread just before McCurdy's chest came to it—and fell, exhausted, into the arms of his friends.

They had run the four miles in 18.05, only ten seconds slower than the American record, and that through rain and mud that cut at least 25 seconds off the time!

"Fussy" Fureasdon, the Toronto boy who was given a try out with the Leafs two years ago, and also figured on the London roster without any apparent success, has been signed by the Altoona Club.

President McCaffrey smiled. So says an exchange. One would be led to believe that a smile from Jay Jay was a rareity, but when reading the article further, it explains that his smile was caused by both the Leafs and Beavers winning their games, the former at Newark, and the latter at the Island.

Some of the dope in the "Crab Salad" sounds kind of fishy.

BASEBALL FOR CHURCH LEAGUE

At a meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. Parlors last night, representatives from the different athletic bodies of the Peterboro churches organized their Church Baseball League for the coming summer. The following will be the executive:

Hon. Pres.—C. N. Meserve, Sec. Y. M. C. A.

Pres.—J. E. Smith, George St.

Vice-Pres.—A. Harper, St. Andrew's.

Secretary—D. Loucks, St. Paul's.

Treasurer—W. Heaslip, Y. M. C. A.

Four teams have decided to enter this league: St. Paul's, St. Andrew's, Y.M.C.A. and George Street. Any other church team wishing to enter the league is requested to have a representative at the next meeting to be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night at 7.45, when a constitution will be framed, schedules drawn up for the season, and other business conducted. The secretary will be pleased to receive all communications from other church teams interested in playing ball this season.

HUMAN MATCH HELPS ERIE WIN LOPSIDED VICTORY

HANDSOME McNEILL ALSO ASSISTS

Erie, May 5.—The Yankees are in shape for the opening of the season, as they demonstrated in the game against the Buffalo, Bricks and Enos team, which was shut out with five hits by Fitzpatrick, Osborne and Dorbeck. The score was 11 to 0. While the pitching was hardly the kind they wil face in the Canadian League, the Yankees showed their batting ability by getting ten hits, among which were three two-baggers and a home run.

Schaefer cleaned the sacks in the seventh with a drive over the centre field fence, and Wiltse, Smith and McNeil gathered two hits apiece off the Buffalo pitchers. Except for a wobble by Smith, the Yankees gave their pitchers splendid support, although Buffalo got but five hits and few infield grounders off the delivery of the Erie trio.

Manager Smith declares his squad will be fit for their campaign in the Canadian League on May 7 against Peterboro.

SCHOOL BOYS PLAY BALL

CENTRAL, QUEEN MARY AND KING EDWARD TEAMS WON THE OPENERS

The junior public school teams opened their league last evening and judging from the number of spectators on hand, there will be quite an interest taken in the games. The ball was all fairly good, and with a few more practises, the juveniles will be able to set out good enough ball for any one to go and see.

The combat between King George and Centrals resulted in a win for the Centrals by 8-7, but they had it nip and tuck all the way through and had very little on the East City nine. The game was played on the Central's grounds and naturally this favored the winners a little, but they will have to step fast to beat King George's out on neutral grounds.

The batteries: King George, Gillespie and Anderson; Central, Frost and Rutherford. Umpire, Mr. Nichols.

Queen Mary Won.

The battle between Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary at the Oval was a typical opener. Loose playing featured by an odd spectacular spear. The score 13-12, by which the Queen Mary boys claimed the victory, clearly speaks for the closeness of the game.

First one team was in the lead, and then the other, keeping the large number of interested fans all excited. The boys from the west were overjoyed with their victory. The winners play good ball, and will give any of the teams a battle. The feature of their seven innings' work was the double play enacted by Wotten and Schweir.

The batteries: Queen Alexandra, Simpson and Head; Queen Mary, Williamson and Thompson. Umpire, Mr. Munro.

King Edward Strong.

The manner in which the King Edward's, last year champions, walked over the South Central outfit, looks as though the boys from the south will have to be reckoned with before the September breezes blow. The score was 13-1, and clearly indicates the style of play. It was all King Edward, and although they were playing to advantage, being on their home grounds, they displayed enough team work and batting ability to warrant them being reckoned a strong brigade.

Batteries: King Edward, Bartley and Braund; South Central, Montgomery and Campbell. Umpire, Mr. B. Taylor.

Junior Games on Wednesday.

King George at South Central.
Queen Alexandra at Central.
King Edward at Queen Mary.

"Crab Salad" Now.

"Crab Salad" is being served to the readers of the Hamilton Spectator. The Brantford Courier rises and remarks: "The Spectator is running a Crab Salad column. We bet Bobby Robinson has charge of it." Harsh words.

The Ottawa papers have not announced a fatal accident to several baseball players as is the custom in football season. Hamilton sports have been roped in for years by false football reports from Ottawa, but evidently the Ottawa pencil pushers realize that the Canadian League cities are not all "boob" towns" like the hamlet 'neath the hill.

It is a wise housekeeper who does one piece of housecleaning every few weeks, so then the dreaded turmoil of the usual long spring and fall outturnings is entirely avoided.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The annual meeting of the Y. W. C. A. will be held on Friday evening, May 8th, at 8 o'clock. Miss Drummond, who has been secretary of the Y. W. C. A. in Toronto for a number of years, will give the address. The annual report will be submitted. The public are cordially invited to be present. Refreshments will be served.

The young people of Murray St. Baptist Church were afforded an interesting discourse last evening when they heard a lecture by Assistant Crown Attorney Wearing, M.A., on "Life in the Lumber Camps," accompanied by views. Mr. Wearing spent a number of years in various capacities in the woods, and his address was very interesting.

J. J. Preston, M.L.A., of Bethany, was a visitor in town yesterday, on his way to Ottawa.

T. B. Collins, of Millbrook, was in town yesterday.

The many friends of Mrs. G. A. Carruthers who suffered serious injuries by falling down stairs and who is a patient at the Private Hospital, will be pleased to learn that she is progressing as well as can be expected.

Mrs. L. M. Hayes will not receive to-morrow, Wednesday, May 6, but on Wednesday and Thursday, May 20 and 21, for the last time before leaving Peterborough.

Miss Fannie Fitzgerald, of Boston, is among the guests in the city.

Mr. L. R. Genison, of East Orange, is registered at the Oriental.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Martin, of Toronto, are visiting in the city.

Mr. G. H. Taylor, of Montreal, is the guest of friends in the city.

Mrs. Wm. Shaw announces the engagement of her daughter, Tillie, to Mr. C. H. Smith. The marriage to take place the early part of June.—Port Hope Guide.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Culverwell, of "Glenridge," Port Hope, have been travelling on the Atlantic Coast, and are now in Atlantic City. They will shortly return to Port Hope.

His Lordship Bishop Scollard, of North Bay, is spending a few days in Ennismore, visiting his mother, Mrs. J. Scollard.

Mrs. W. S. Roso, 265 Rubidge Street, is spending a few days in Toronto, and while there will attend the Annual Meeting of the Women's Auxiliary.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Pratt, Sussex Street, Lindsay, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Florence Mabel, to Mr. Charles J. DeBats, B.S.E.E., of Walkerville, Ont., formerly of Belleville, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. DeBats, Bay City, Michigan. The wedding will take place May 26th.

Ormie Splisbury, his friends will be sorry to hear, is ill at his home, Downie Street, with tonsilitis.

Mr. Arthur Hall of Detroit, is spending a few days in the city en route to Montreal. Mr. Hall leaves next week for Edmonton, where he has accepted a lucrative position.

Mr. D. Hughes Charles, former manager of the local Bank of Commerce, is in the city, accompanied by his wife. They have just returned from an extended trip to Europe and are here to meet their friends and pay a visit to their cottage at Chemong.

Miss Minnie Howley of Indian River, who was seriously ill with pneumonia, is rapidly convalescing.

A very pleasant time was spent last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Maniece, when friends and relatives gathered to take part in the celebration of the 22nd anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Maniece's wedding day. Dancing, music and supper were enjoyed by the gathering, and congratulations were showered on the host and hostess. Mr. Maniece presented Mrs. Maniece with a handsome ring. Mr. T. B. Maniece proposed the toast of the bride and groom of 22 years ago.

Mr. Cyril Devey has returned from a pleasant week end visit to Toronto. The organist of the Metropolitan Church kindly allowed him half an hour on the fine organ, which has no less than 94 speaking stops. He was greatly impressed with the $40,000 new organ in St. Paul's, Bloor Street, and the fine playing of Mr. Healey William, F.R.C.O., the organist. This magnificent instrument ranks with the finest in the world as the following will show:

Ely Cathedral, 69 speaking stops.

Durham Cathedral, 73 speaking stops.

University of Toronto, 76 speaking stops.

St. Paul's, London, 77 speaking stops.

Westminster Abbey, 77 speaking stops.

St. Stephen's Vienna, 90 speaking stops.

Metropolitan, Toronto, 94 speaking stops.

St. Sulpice, Paris, 100 speaking stops.

St. John's, New York, 106 speaking stops.

St. Paul's, Toronto, 107 speaking stops.

Riga, Riviera, 124 speaking stops.

St. Michael's, Hamburg, 163 speaking stops.

The specification for St. Paul's organ was prepared by Messrs. Palmer and Dixon, consulting specialists of world-wide reputation. A few interesting particulars are here given. There are 4 manuals, 3 electric motors, 25 h.p., 5 swell boxes, 262 miles of wiring. The comparative list given above is with respect to church organs only. In some very large public halls larger organs are, of course, to be found.

WOMEN'S CLUB ENDORSE ACTION OF HEALTH BOARD

Are in Favor of Having the Bread Wrapped.

Erie, May 5.—Bread wrapping, as advocated by the health authorities, has been endorsed by the Woman's Club.

A letter was received in the health office from Mrs. Florence Burton Roth, secretary of the club, offering the co-operation of members in the action.

According to Dr. J. W. Wright, health officer, bakers are making the change gradually. He said it is not the purpose of the authorities to enforce immediate compliance to the rule, as the expense would be heavy upon bakers.

Action is Endorsed.

The letter from the Woman's club was as follows:

"At a recent meeting of the Woman's club of Erie, the sanitary conditions of local food supplies was discussed informally with a view of exerting helpful influence wherever possible in the improvement of such conditions. Upon motion it was voted to extend to the board of health a cordial endorsement of your efforts to protect from infection the local bread supply by insisting upon its delivery in sanitary wrappers. In reference to your position in this matter, we beg to offer our co-operation and support in the hope that Erie may ultimately be provided with an absolutely clean supply of baked goods."

SOCIAL EVENING AT ST. ANDREW'S

Rev. R. Pogue Brings Congratulations from St. Paul's Church.

The celebration of the Eighty-first anniversary of St. Andrew's Church was continued by the members of the congregation and friends last evening in the form of a social gathering. In the church, which was well filled, the Revs. Robert Pogue, of St. Paul Presbyterian Church, and Rev. James Rollins, pastor, delivered short addresses, while Herbert C. Treneer, organist and choir director, and Miss Olive Howell, contributed musical numbers.

Rev. R. Pogue, in his brief remarks, congratulated the congregation on the successful year they had enjoyed and hoped that the Presbyterian church in this city would continue to carry on the magnificent work of God. The Rev. James Rollins also added a word of congratulation and thanked the congregation for the excellent support they had given him during the year.

Miss Howell's solo was enjoyed immensely, her voice being heard to excellent advantage, while Mr. Treneer's organ numbers were played in that artist's usual good form. Refreshments were served in the hall, and much credit is due the ladies for the dainty repast they arranged.

LABORERS PICK SENT STONE FLYING AGAINST WINDOW

Whether it was the proximity of Joe's Pool Room or not that urged a laborer on George Street to attempt a billiard shot this morning is not known, at any rate he tore one off and "scratched" the window of M. Carroll's butcher shop considerably. It appears that when the laborer struck his pick into the earth he grazed a small stone which flew up and was stopped by the said window. A crack three or four inches long was made. It is needless to say that the merchants on the main street can get along very handily without any cut glass on their premises.

BELMONTS

MR. W. G. COCHRANE IS THE CHOICE FOR 1914 PRESIDENCY.

WITHIN THE LAW

All Canadian Company Supports Miss Catherine Tower

The company that will appear here in the forthcoming production of "Within the Law" at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, May 9th, for matinee and night, can truthfully be called a Canadian company, as all of the important members are Canadian by birth or parentage. Miss Catherine Tower, the charming leading lady, claims Toronto as her birthplace, and is intensely loyal to her native Canada, although her parents took her from Toronto to Syracuse, New York, when she was but a child. It was in Toronto as a member of the famous Royal Alexandra Stock Company that Miss Tower made her first success.

Rockliff Fellowes, the leading man of the company, is a native of Ottawa, and he is a grandson of no less noted Canadian than — George Byron Lyon Fellowes, former member of the House of Commons. His great-grandfather was the famous Colonel McNab, and it was in the old Manor House of the Colonel that young "Cliff" made his first debut.

Mr. Fellowes began his career as an employee in the Bank of Ottawa after finishing a course in the Ashburg College. Later he went to Quebec, and while there was induced to go on the stage. His first appearance professionally was with Harry Woodruff in "Brown of Harvard.' He has revisited his home town in a professional capacity but once since adopting the stage as his vocation, and that was as a member of the "Man and Superman" Company.

Another Canadian member of the "Within the Law" Company is little Miss Marie Fitzgerald, who like Miss Tower, hails from Toronto; Miss Jane Seymour, who in private life is Miss Marjorie Fitzpatrick, was born in Hamilton, Ontario, being a granddaughter of the late Fred. Wilson of that city. Harold Hartsall, who plays the part of Gilder, senior, in the play, comes from Sarnia, while George A. Wright, who so skilfully portrays the character of Joe Garson, the lovable forger, was born in Montreal.

The woman who has had experience, says all men are jokes, but unless you want to be looked upon as a joke, it's best to pretend to take them seriously.

SUFFRAGETTE RUINS PICTURE.

John Sargent's Portrait of Henry James Slashed With Cleaver.

LONDON, May 5.—The portrait of Henry James, the novelist, by John Singer Sargent, hanging in one of the galleries of the Royal Academy, was virtually ruined yesterday afternoon by a suffragette.

The woman who committed the outrage, gave her name as Mrs. Wood. She belongs to the group of militants called "The Wild Women." Armed with a butcher's cleaver, Mrs. Wood approached the painting, produced the cleaver from under her cloak, and slashed the picture several times before bystanders seized and stopped her. When the police appeared on the scene Mrs. Wood was handed over to them.

The picture damaged by Mrs. Wood was one of the most prominent canvasses at the exhibition.

J. FOSTER STACKHOUSE TO EXPLORE ANTARCTIC

Although Scott and Amundsen Have Both Found the South Pole Three More Expeditions Are Fitting Out to Travel Across the Ice Clad Continent.

Despite the discovery of the South Pole by both Amundsen and Scott, the Antarctic regions continue to offer a vast and tempting field for exploration. It is announced that Sir Ernest Shackleton has a quarter of a million dollars now in hand for his proposed expedition across the Antarctic continent. A controversy has arisen between Sir Ernest and Dr. Koenig, leader of the Austrian Antarctic expedition, whose aims are practically identical with those of Shackleton and who proposes to cross the Antarctic continent in the same way and from the same base as Sir Ernest. Dr. Koenig claims the prior right to use that base, the Weddell Sea, but Shackleton holds that he formulated his own plans and gave them publicity long prior to the announcements made by Dr. Koenig. The two expeditions will therefore enter the same field, and a race across the unknown continent is probable.

Meantime still another expedition is under way.

J. Foster Stackhouse is completing his plans for an expedition into the Antarctic regions. He has secured Capt. Scott's old ship, the Discovery, which will be commanded by Lieut. A. E. Harbord, R.N., who was navigating officer on the Shackleton expedition of 1907-9. As chief surveyor of his expedition Stackhouse has appointed Baron Congleton, a cousin of the late Charles Stewart Parnell and, strange to say, a determined opponent of Home Rule.

The expedition is being organized for purely scientific researches and will endeavor to explore the little known coast between Graham Land and King Edward VII. Land and the interior of the latter. It will therefore enter part of the territory which Sir Ernest Shackleton hopes to cover in his more ambitious enterprise.

J. FOSTER STACKHOUSE.

Between these two sections of discovered land stretches a vast and practically unexplored region. The expedition will attempt to determine whether this intervening space is land or sea, whether King Edward VII. Land is part of the great Antarctic continent or merely an island or group of islands set in the frozen sea.

The existence of Graham Land and of Coats Land, Enderby Land and Kemp Land on the Atlantic border of the great ice barrier, as well as the discovery of land south by Lieut. Filchner of the German expedition, in 1911, supports the continental theory. On the other hand, the great area of pack ice massed on the north and west coasts of King Edward VII. Land points, Mr. Stackhouse suggests, to the drift of ice northward from the Weddell Sea to the Ross Sea, presumably through a strait separating King Edward VII. Land from Graham Land. This is the most southerly of British possessions.

The crew of the Discovery will consist of twenty-five men, and in addition there will be five scientists, several of the ship's officers also undertaking scientific observations. They will have an aeroplane for photographic survey work, and this, too, will be useful in enabling the leader to choose the best route when he wants to advance. Most of the navigating and scientific staff already have been chosen.

The expedition will be away for three or four years. From Cape Town, where the scientific instruments will be finally tested, the Discovery will sail to the Falkland Islands, a distance of about 5,000 miles. Deep sea soundings, which will have considerable hydrographical value, will be taken in these little frequented seas. On the way the Discovery will ascertain the exact number of islands contained in the Sandwich group and determine the position of the Shag rocks.

Absent-minded.

Sir John Murden Sanderson was notoriously absent-minded. Of the cycle of anecdote that gathered around him much was fabricated. The story of his boiling his watch while holding an egg in his hand, often related also of Newton, is in La Bruyere's "Caracteres." But there seems to be some foundation for the suspicion that in his laboratory he once lunched on a frog and was afterward found deeply contemplating a sandwich.

Giving Happiness.

To make some nook of God's creation a little fruitfuller, better, more worthy of God, to make some human hearts a little wiser, manfuller, happier, more blessed, less accursed—it is a work for a god.—Carlyle.

U.S.

Funston has seen a good deal of fighting, first serving with the Cuban revolutionists against Spain in the capacity of a filibuster. He rose to be Lieutenant-Colonel in the Cuban army, and when the United States went towar with Spain he was sent to the Philipines, where he succeeded in capturing the rebel chief Aguinaldo. He has been twice wounded.

UNGAVA POSSESSES UNTOLD NATURAL RESOURCES

Surveys of Vast Territory Which Makes up the Labrador Peninsula go to Show That Waterpower, Forests and Minerals Are of Immense Value.

The territory of Ungava, or as it has been called, "New Quebec," comprises the Labrador peninsula, and some idea of its enormous extent may be formed from the fact that its coast lines—leaving altogether out of the calculation the seaboard of the Newfoundland strip of the mainland—are of a greater length by many hundreds of miles than the crossing of the Atlantic from Liverpool to Quebec. From Quebec to Blanc Sablon there is a coastline on the south of 1,160 miles. From Cape Chidley to Cape Wolstenholme on the north, the coastline of Hudson Strait measures 1,170 miles, and from this latter mentioned point to the head of James Bay the coastline on the west is 1,380 miles long, making a total length for these three coastlines of 3,710 miles.

The interior of Ungava is a high plateau rising somewhat abruptly within a few miles of the coastline to a varying height of from 1,500 to 2,500 feet. As a consequence, the numberless big rivers draining this plateau, pour themselves over it more or less precipitous cliffs on their way to the sea, in a variety of cataracts and waterfalls of varying heights, affording innumerable water-powers.

Dr. Low, the late head of the Geographical Survey of Canada estimated that a million and a half horse-power could be obtained from the Hamilton falls proper, and over three millions from the whole twelve miles of falls in the river. Other authorities are satisfied with a claim of 300,000 horse-power for the Hamilton, not to calculate upon other great rivers for the moment.

It is probable that no other country possesses such a number of extraordinary cataracts as are to be found upon nearly all the large rivers of Ungava.

One of the most picturesque rivers for rapids and waterfalls in the entire Labrador peninsula is the Caniapscow, the principal tributary of the Koksoak or Ungava river, which almost three hundred miles before its waters reach the ocean, descends with a fall of thirty feet into a gorge varying from thirty to one hundred feet wide, with perpendicular, and in many places, overhanging, jagged, rocky walls that rise three hundred feet above the rushing torrent.

On the Nottawa river, the Iroquois falls, which are seventy feet high are capable of producing 400,000 horse-power, and two other falls of forty feet. No doubt this great natural phenomenon will be found to possess a great commercial value some day.

Wherever there is a sufficiency of forest growth for the extensive manufacture of wood pulp, the water-powers of the far north will doubtless be developed in the not far distant future, especially when they are approachable by steamboats, or where prospective industries may warrant the construction of railway communication. It may be, too, that mineral development will in many parts of Ungava call for the employment of electric energy generated by water-power.

According to the latest report from a surveying party the entire forest along the Nottawa river only covers an area of 75 square miles. The surveyors, estimating the supply at ten cords to the acre, make a total return of three hundred million feet, board measure, which would supply a pulp mill for fifteen years using twenty million feet, board measure, of pulp wood per annum.

It is probable that the largest forests of the interior of the Labrador peninsula are those along the valley of the lower reaches of the Hamilton river, which contains splendid timber where not burned over. The high hills which enclose the lower portion of the valley of Hamilton are wooded to their summits, but as the upper level is approached, the trees become small and stunted. Black spruce forms over ninety per cent. of the wood, the remainder being made up of larch, or tamarac, white birch and balsam fir.

In the valley, on the contrary, the growth of timber is always good. White spruce trees, two feet in diameter, and more than seventy feet high are not uncommon, and a large number of ships' spars have been cut from them. The black spruce does not grow quite so large as the white, but is still large enough to afford good commercial timber, and the same may be said of the larch.

Near the junction of the Minipi river with the Hamilton, the forest produces spruce trees running from twenty to twenty-four inches in diameter and sufficiently long to furnish three logs each.

While the country about Ungava bay in the extreme north of Labrador is treeless, the northern limit of forest growth being a little south of the bay, there is considerable pulpwood on the banks of the upper portions of the rivers flowing into that bay; and in the more southern part of the peninsula, the forest is continuous, except where the country has been swept by forest fires. Explanatory surveys will doubtless, ere long, bring to light something like an approximate idea of the value of the forest growth in the great tree-producing regions of New Quebec.

It will probably take a number of years to determine where the most valuable mineral deposits of Ungava are likely to be found. Only a very few trails have yet been made through this enormous territory.

TWO EARLY ORCHARD PESTS

The canker worm is the striped, looping or measuring larvae which eats the young, developing leaves of apple, pear, chestnut, maple, etc., in severe attacks causing the tree to become brown and barren. The worms are further characterized by their habit of letting themselves down by a silken thread when the tree is jarred.

The best method of control is to wait until the young worms hatch in Spring and spray thoroughly with arsenate of lead at the rate of 4 pounds to 5 gallons of water. Arsenate of lead is a white paste obtainable from a large number of firms.

The well known apple plant louse, or apple aphis, which is responsible for the curling up of the leaves of the apple, was very prevalent last year. It is the purpose of this notice to call the attention of fruit growers and farmers to the insect, in order that they may have an opportunity to control it if they find it abundant on their trees this coming season. The remedy is kerosene emulsion: Kerosene, 2 gallons; any common laundry soap, half-pound; water, one gallon.

Dissolve the chipped soap in boiling water; remove from fire and add kerosene; churn violently with a hoe or old churn dasher until a creamy mass is formed from which the oil does not separate. This usually requires ten minutes. Mix each gallon of emulsion with twelve of water and apply on sunshiny days when the trees are dry.

The earlier the work is done after the larvae appear in Spring the better will be the results, for, after the insects feed awhile, the leaves curl about them, and it is then impossible to do a good job of spraying.

FLYING FOXES OF INDIA.

During the Day They Sleep in Trees, Hanging Head Downward.

People who have lived in India are familiar with the long strings of flying foxes which can often be seen wending their way in single file from their sleeping places in remote trees to the fruit gardens upon which they prey.

These curious creatures, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, sometimes measure as much as four feet across the wings and have reddish brown fur and mole colored wings. After their nocturnal depredations they fly away with the dawn to a tree in some isolated place and there rest during the day, hanging head downward from the boughs in the manner of bats, clutching the branch with their feet.

As the flying foxes gather on the tree selected there is a tremendous commotion, for each newcomer is vigorously driven off from one place after another until he eventually manages to secure a perch for himself. Those on the tree meanwhile keep up an incessant wrangling, each endeavoring to secure the highest and best place to rest on. Sometimes many hundreds of these destructive creatures may be seen hanging from the branches of a large tree.

When opportunity offers they are often shot, and some of the natives consider their flesh a delicacy, though it hardly appeals to Europeans.

A Personal Preference.

A well known magazine writer moved not so very long ago from Brooklyn to California. On the day before the family started west he went for a walk through the neighborhood with his four-year-old son.

"I suppose," said the father, "that you'll be sorry to leave all your little chums here?"

The youngster thought he would. At that he did not seem to show much emotion at the prospect of parting from all his friends.

"Which one will you miss the most?" inquired the parent.

The boy was not sure.

"Now," pressed his father, "which little boy of all the little boys you know do you like the best?"

The little chap considered a minute before answering.

"Well," he said at last, "I guess I like myself pretty well!"—Saturday Evening Post.

EGGS FOR HATCHING

Many of the hatching failures may be traced, either to insufficient care being taken of the eggs prior to setting, or to the use of faulty eggs, as, contrary to what many suppose, eggs intended for hatching purposes must be of a "hatchable" kind, and they must also have some sort of special care bestowed upon them whilst being kept in readiness for the broody hen or incubator.

Now, just because an egg has been laid by a mated hen, it does not necessarily follow that that egg will ultimately produce a chick, even though everything is in its favor during the period of incubation. For instance, abnormally large eggs rarely produce a chick, as, more often than not, they are unfertile, and although instances are on record of such eggs, that have been double-yoked, producing two perfect chicks, such a result is the exception and not the rule. All eggs that are very large or very small, mishappen, rough, thick, or thin shelled, or cracked should be rejected as hatching eggs, as if such are not actually unfertile, the germ nearly always succumbs after a few days' incubation; or if a chick does happen to hatch, it is so weak and puny as to be quite unrearable.

The ideal eggs for hatching purposes are those of normal size, according to the breed of fowl that laid them, of a good shape, neither too pointed nor too round, and having a clear, smooth shell of average thickness.

It is useless to set eggs that are very dirty, as when the shell is coated with filth the pores are choked up and the germ is suffocated. Such eggs must either be carefully washed in tepid water or not set at all, but the best plan is to avoid having such eggs by keeping the nests sweet and clean.

Eggs that are intended for incubation purposes should be frequently collected and stored away in some cool place, but where they are quite out of the way of frosts. They may either be stood small end downwards or laid on their side and gently shuffled daily. Never stand the eggs small end uppermost.

When buying a "sitting" of eggs from a distance always allow them to rest for 24 hours before giving them to the hen or placing in the incubator drawer.

Saved the Smoke.

Brahms was always credited with a frugal mind, and the following tale is related of him, the late Erich Wolff and a cigarette: The cigarette had been offered by the former to the latter, who received it with emotion and placed it carefully in his waistcoat pocket. "Why do you put the cigarette away? Why not light it now?" asked Brahms, who had already struck a match. "I cannot smoke it," replied Wolff. "I shall take great care of it. It is not every day that one gets a cigarette from Johann Brahms." Thereupon the great man opened his cigarette case again and said with a smile of satisfaction, "Then just give me back the good cigarette, will you? For your purpose an imitation will serve just as well."

ON RIDIN'

SOMEHOW er other I can't jest accustom myself to ridin' in one of them ottermobile machines. I know I ort to set back and fold my arms and look as though I was enjoyin' life, but it's no use, I can't do it. Take a feller who, all his life has done his ridin' on an old buckboard with bolts and nuts jinglin' and spokes rattlin' and he can't enjoy smoothe ridin' no how.

He misses somethin' that he has growed used to. It may be the dust in his face, the clatter of the loose bolts or the gatlin-gun reports of the loose spokes; anyway it's somethin' that the benzine wagon don't seem to have, and so he don't hanker none fer a ride in the new fangled rig.

Ye see, it's all in gettin' used to a thing and that's why I say when I ride I want to do it in an old buckboard full o' noise and complaints, and I want to get some dust myself, not let the feller behind have all on it. Sounds queer, maybe; but it's right!

Conscience.

A man's first care should be to avoid the reproaches of his own heart; his next to escape the censures of the world. If the last interfere with the former it ought to be entirely neglected, but otherwise there cannot be a greater satisfaction to an honest mind than to see those approbations which it gives itself seconded by the applause of the public. A man is more sure of his conduct when the verdict which it passes upon his own behavior is thus warranted and confirmed by the opinion of all that know him.—Addison.

Benjamin Constant.

Benjamin Constant, having sided with Napoleon during the hundred days, felt the need of justifying himself when Louis XVIII. returned to power. He wrote the king a letter with that end in view and called upon Mme. Recamier to discuss the subject. She asked him quietly:

"Have you finished your letter?"

"Yes."

"Are you satisfied with it?"

"Entirely satisfied. I have almost persuaded myself."

MILKING MACHINE

The following is a summary of Bulletin No. 144 of the South Dakota Agricultural College on the milking machine:

1. Viewed from the mechanical standpoint, the milking machines used in this experiment caused very little trouble in operating. It is safe to conclude that with reasonable care this type of milking machine can be successfully and profitably operated on the average farm having at least twenty cows.

2. Cows giving a large flow of milk were easily broken to the use of the machine. In general, little difficulty was experienced in getting any of the cows accustomed to the milking machine. The operator, in order to operate most successfully, should study the individuality of the cows.

3. It is best to strip the cows at once after the teatcups are attached to make sure that no milk remains. If the teatcups are properly attached very little milk remains in the udder after the cow is milked by the machine.

4. No definite statement can be made as to the effect of machine milking upon milk and butterfat yield, as the experiments have not extended over a sufficient period of time. Results of these experiments indicate that, if the machine and cows are properly handled, the amount of milk and butterfat is not materially affected by machine milking.

5. Milk drawn by machine was free from sediment and other visible impurities. It, however, contained more bacteria than did the milk drawn by hand into a partly cover pail.

6. The barn air drawn in by the machine proved an important source of contamination: By filtering this air through cotton filters the bacterial content of the machine-milked milk can be greatly reduced.

7. The germ content of machine-milked milk can also be reduced by soaking the various rubber tubes and teatcups in an antiseptic solution. A five per cent. solution of calcium-chloride saturated with sodium-chloride proved to be effective in these experiments, and can safely be recommended.

Left it to Turner.

It seems that Turner went to Paris once at the moment when the world was beginning to notice the productions of Ziem, and the English Venetian, hearing of the French Venetian, decided to call upon him. This he did and so much admired one of the Frenchman's pictures that he wished to purchase it. When Ziem heard, however, that this would be purchaser was the great Turner he insisted upon making the painting a gift. The two artists parted much pleased with each other. Some years later Ziem and a friend were strolling through a gallery of pictures that were about to be sold at auction. "Look, Felix, look," suddenly said the friend, "there is your picture, and it is signed 'Turner'."

"Yes, it is mine," returned Ziem, studying the work closely. But after a minute's examination he looked up and said: "But let it pass as a Turner. It's a poor Ziem."

"BRAINS SUPPLIED HERE."

'Organotherapy' is an Old Medical System Which Has Been Revived.

Is it possible to provide the feeble-minded with more brain until they are normal? Wild though the possibility may seem to the lay mind, it has, nevertheless, been seriously discussed at the Congress of Medicine in Paris. Furthermore, experiments in the science which is known as "organotherapy" have already been attempted.

This science really consists of treating diseased organs with medicines made from similar organs. It is pointed out by medical experts that the building up or doctoring of one organ with extracts from a similar one was practiced 2,000 years ago, although, of course, in a very crude fashion. It is on record that patients suffering from an affection of any particular part of their system were given the same part of an animal to eat, with the idea of repairing the local waste and damage. Thus consumptives were ordered to eat sheep lungs, while for dyspeptics was prescribed a diet in which the stomach of calves ranked as the chief item.

In an address on the subject delivered by a widely-known Roumanian doctor, Dr. Iscovesco, he remarked that special importance is attached to the treatment of anaemia by this method. "The old treatment with iron," he declares, "was never absolutely satisfactory, while if a lipoid extract of blood corpuscles is administered to patients the corpuscles rapidly multiply and the anaemia disappears."

Probably the most startling suggestion made by the doctor was that of curing the feeble-minded by this method. This physician held that so long as organotherapy worked so well along other lines, it stood within reason that it would work well with the feeble-minded. By giving them a lipoid extract of grey matter, an extract of the brain, it ought to increase their mental faculties and in time give to them normal brain.

Of course, if this is possible, it will be one of the greatest wonders and most valuable things in modern or ancient medicine.

BEANS FOR THE TABLE

Anybody can grow beans. Nevertheless, beans bear bountifully and give a crop of extra flavor only when grown in fairly rich, although rather light, soil and kept well cultivated throughout the growing season. And bear this in mind—if the beans are not picked as fast as they develop, those left on the vines will ripen and the vines will cease baring.

Beans crave warm soil. Do not plant until this condition is secured. Then plant only two inches deep. Enrich the soil with well rotted manure, and plant in drills a foot apart in small gardens and two and a half or three feet apart in gardens that can be worked with a horse. Keep the plants four inches apart, and sow seed every two weeks up the supply.

The Organ.

The invention of the organ is attributed to Ctesibius, a barber of Alexandria, about 250 B.C. and also to the great Archimedes, about 220 B.C. The organ was brought to Europe from Constantinople and was applied to religious devotions in the churches about A. D. 650. First used in the churches of Italy, they gradually spread to the other European countries. For religious purposes there seems to be no other instrument invented by man that can take the place of the organ.

The Universal Tool.

The modern soldier is equipped with a remarkable combination of tools, all in one. So varied is its application that it has been called the "universal tool." It is so insulated as to protect the user in cutting charged wires. It can be used as a hatchet, an adz or a spade, pliers, pipe wrench, wire cutters and wire twisters, a hammer, a file, a foot rule, a screwdriver and a can opener, and it can be converted into a shield to give partial protection to a rifleman.

Wrong.

A man recently entered a restaurant and ordered a steak. When the waiter served him with it the customer said, "I'm afraid you'll have to take it back, for I find I've come out without my"—

"Purse," of course interrupted the waiter.

"No," replied the man, "my false teeth!"

A Football of Fate

It Was Kicked Into Many Holes

By F. A. MITCHEL

Bill Somers was probably as much of a football of fate as any man who ever lived. Bill was kicked all over the world. He began as a cabin boy on a ship fitted out for relief of a north pole expedition and spent some time among the Eskimos. Next he was in the heart of Africa trading in ivory. At twenty-five he had made a lot of money and thought he would stay at home and enjoy himself; but, like Sindbad the Sailor, he soon grew tired of quiet and embarked on another voyage.

He bought a vessel and stocked her with cotton goods, such as are used among the common people of eastern countries with warm climates, and started for Asia, intending to exchange them for silks and other goods used in America, but was wrecked in a typhoon off the coast of Ceylon and had nothing left but the dripping clothes in which he was thrown upon the shore.

We next hear of Bill in Peking, China. He didn't seem to do much planning, or, if he did, fate paid no attention to his plans, but kept on kicking him, and he kept on rolling. Like an ordinary ball, he occasionally got into a hole where it looked as if he would remain and rot. But he was always kicked out and recommenced his bounding and rolling both over the land and the sea.

In Peking he found an old, wheezy steamer of about 200 tons burden that had been worn out tramping over the waters, and he concluded to buy her. Where he got the money does not appear, but the probability is that her owner was so anxious to get her off his hands that he was glad to take Bill's note for the amount of the purchase secured on mortgage. The new owner did what he could by way of repair and started down the Peitang river for the gulf of Pechili.

What Bill was going to do with his steamer doesn't pertain to this story. It wouldn't be interesting to follow his intentions, because he never succeeded in carrying anything out.

Captain Somers on this voyage down the river and across the gulf had with him an English engineer, Tom Hooper by name, and a heathen Chinee deck hand whose name was so unpronounceable that he was obliged to submit to the conventional English name of Charlie. Charlie, like most Chinamen, seemed very stupid, but also, like his countrymen, was very sly. As for the engineer, he was as obstinate as Englishmen usually are and as hard to kill.

Captain Somers and his crew passed out of the gulf between Port Arthur and Tengchau, rounded Shantung and found themselves in the Yellow sea. Quite probably they were going to Japan, but this doesn't matter, for before reaching the coast of Korea Somers got a kick which sent him in another direction.

About noon, when Bill was at the wheel—indeed, Bill was always at the wheel, and Tom was always at the engine—he heard something snap below and a fizzing of steam. Up came Tom, showed his face in the companionway and said that one of the small steam pipes had burst. Meanwhile the propeller ceased to turn, and the boat, the Siren, lay helpless. Why Bill had given her that name is beyond comprehension, for she was the ugliest craft in Chinese waters.

Leaving the tiller, Bill went below with the engineer, and the two stood gaping at the exploded pipe, wondering how they were going to repair it without tools or machinery. Bill had congratulated himself on being able to buy the Siren without a cent of money, but now saw how, after all, the seller had got the better of him.

However, Tom hunted through a box of odds and ends and found a bit of pipe that he thought he could put in in place of the exploded one, and there was a soldering jet aboard. But it was necessary to put out the fires in the furnace before anything could be done. Bill concluded to "dump" the furnace, since it would be easier to light a new fire if freed from the remains of the old one. So they followed this plan, and Tom began work on replacing the broken pipe.

Tom had been working some time. Bill had gone into the furnace, which had cooled sufficiently to admit him to make an inspection. The Siren was drifting. Suddenly Charlie came running down into the furnace room, with his eyes standing out of his face and his complexion the color of cinders. Bill looked out through the open furnace door.

"Cap'n," gasped Charlie, "pliates!"

"What?"

"Pliates!"

"Git out o' this!" growled Tom. "We're busy."

Charlie wrung his hands and continued to cry "Pliates!"

"I wonder if he doesn't mean pirates?" cried Bill.

"Yes," cried Charlie; "pliates!"

Bill sprang out of the furnace box and, followed more slowly by Tom and Charlie, ran up on deck. There, several miles away, was a small craft of a Chinese cut pointing straight for the Siren.

"How do you know she's a pirate?" asked Bill of Charlie.

Charlie could not speak enough English to make a reply, and even if he could have replied he couldn't have explained what he knew simply by intuition or experience.

So many holes had Bill been kicked into that he had become accustomed as soon as he rolled into one to set his thinking apparatus to work to discover how to get out. No sooner was he convinced that Charlie was right than he got down below the gunwale to his eyes and told the others to do the same.

"There's no use in their learning how many of us there are, what is our condition or anything else we can help their knowing till they reach us."

The three men watched the approaching craft, one of them, and one only, Bill, revolving in his brain different plans for escape.

"There's only one hope for us," he said presently. "If we can hide they may think the boat deserted. What they'll do then nobody knows. We'll have to take what comes. Perhaps, not finding anything of value aboard, they'll go away."

"'Ide!" exclaimed Tom. "Where have we goin' to 'ide?"

"There's only one place—the furnace. If they don't look in there we're all right. If they do it's all up with us."

All three, stooping as they went, shuffled down the companionway to the furnace. Charlie pulled open the door and went in first. Tom and Bill stood each waiting for the other. It was not politeness that caused one to defer to the other, but pride. Each wished to be the last to shun the danger.

"Go a'ead!" snapped Tom.

Realizing how hard a Briton is to move, Bill yielded. Tom entered last and pulled the door to behind him.

"You lunatic!" exclaimed Bill. "What did you do that for? We're penned in. We can't open the door from the inside."

"But if we'd left the door unlatched they'd 'ave got us," replied Tom.

There was no use arguing the point. If they were not discovered by the pirates they might possibly be boarded by some one who would release them. It was not long before they heard a babel of voices on deck and knew the Siren was being searched for loot. After exploring the upper part of the boat they came down into the engine room. Only Charlie understood what they said, and the others dared not ask him. When the boarders had discussed the matter of finding the Siren deserted they all ran upstairs together.

After awhile a sound was heard that destroyed hope—the sound of an auger boring. The pirates were scuttling the ship.

Whoever was doing the job was some time about it. Gradually the sounds above ceased, and it was evident that most of the pirates had gone, leaving the man below to finish the scuttling. All became still except the sound of the boring.

"Charlie!" said Bill.

"What?"

"You bawl out that one of your heathen gods is in here and if the bloke doesn't light out he'll be struck dead."

Charlie did as required. The man addressed, as soon as he heard a voice coming from the bowels of the ship, ran upstairs. There he talked excitedly with another man, and the two came part way down to the furnace room and listened. Bill ordered Charlie to repeat what he had said, and Charlie told the listeners that he was the most ferocious of the Chinese gods and if they didn't let him out he would visit them and theirs with fire and sword even to the tenth generation. This produced the effect desired, and the door was opened. Bill sprang out and seized one of the Chinamen, while Tom followed the other nearly to the deck. Both were secured and bound.

The danger now was that the pirates would get tired waiting for the men they had left for the scuttling and return. The auger had been left in the hole it had been making, and there was nothing to fear from that. Bill went up the companionway, keeping out of sight, to reconnoiter. The first thing he saw was a boat the pirates had left for the men who were to scuttle the liner, the second was the pirate craft moving away under full sail, and the third was a Chinese government police boat chasing her.

Bill shouted the good news to Tom and Charlie, who came running up the companionway to see for themselves. Their narrow escape from drowning locked in the furnace room was turned to exhilaration at watching the police boat chase the pirates. The former having nothing but sails to propel her and the latter having steam, the chase was a short one. The police quickly overhauled the outlaws, and as soon as this was done the men on the Siren got out a tattered United States flag and hoisted it, union down, as a signal of distress, whereupon the police boat came up alongside.

The two pirates aboard the Siren were put on the police boat, and the disabled boat was taken in tow. Then all started for Peking. Reaching that city, the outlaws were turned over to the proper authorities, and on the day of their execution the three men who had been locked up in the furnace room went to see the job done.

Somers in narrating the adventure says that it was the worst hole fate ever kicked him into, and he doesn't see how there can be a worse one. When he started from Peking again he had found an opportunity to sell the Siren for a profit, and after paying the price agreed on to the astonished mortgagor he went on rolling down into British territory, where he invested his equity and, striking a good thing, instead of rolling farther, accumulated a small fortune.

The Legend of Aconite.

Aconite is classed by homeopathic authorities as the patriarch of drugs as far as literature is concerned. "It comes down to the lower regions and is carried then 'though the wreck of the "silver age mythology."' It is told how Hercules went down to the lower regions and carried the three headed hound Cerberus to the upper world. That ferocious beast was raging at this treatment, and the froth that fell to the ground was the origin of aconite, for it grew up from the froth as from seeds. It was on a bleak, wind swept hill or mountain, and it is in such regions that the plant grows to-day. This hill, in Pontica, was known of old as 'Aconitos'."

Sympathy.

He was middle-aged and untraveled. For forty-five years he had lived in the country. At last he made a trip to the city.

There, for the first time in his life, he saw a schoolgirl go through her gymnastic exercises for the amusement of the little ones at home. After gazing at her with looks of interest and compassion for some time he asked a boy who was standing near if she had fits.

"No," the boy replied. "Them's gymnastics."

"Ah, how sad!" said the man. "How long's she had 'em?"

Another Lady Thinks "Fruit-a-tives" Greatest Tonic In The World.

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th. 1913.
I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth, but they did all that your advertising claims for them, and as I said before, I cannot speak too highly for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other medicines, that I am glad to say so and I trust that some other woman may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" for I know the results will be all that you claim".

YOUTH UNNECESSARY.

Some of World's Greatest Poems — Written by Old Men.

Tennyson's Crossing the Bar was written in his 81st year. Robert Browning's Asolando was published on the day of his death in his 77th year. Swinburne's greatest poem, Tristram of Lyonesse, was not published until that poet was well into middle age. These, according to Richard Le Gallienne, are but a few examples which controvert the widely-accepted theory that poets do their best work in the heyday of youth.

The fact that certain young poets have died premature dramatic deaths, has established a certain picturesque convention, amounting almost to a superstition, which limits the production of poetry to youth and early manhood. This erroneous, but colorable, notion is on a par with the starvation theory of poetry, the garret and candle-end and bread-and-water regime for poets who, it is fabled, have usually gone hungry and fireless and unprovided alike with overcoats or negotiable appreciation.

As a matter of fact, the starved poet is a rare exception, and a mere glance through any history of literature will suffice to show that, on the contrary, most poets and literary men generally have either had private incomes, been made comfortable by kings or other admirers, or have been substantially supported by their readers. This only by way of a side illustration of the tendency to fallacy in popular conceptions of all forms of greatness, which the world prefers to believe the result of miracles rather than processes—or, if it must accept processes, prefers them to be as desperate and romantic as possible.

It has been too carelessly assumed that lyric poetry must necessarily be produced by young men; the point I wish to make, and for which I have the support of literary history is that the older man is just as likely to sing with the "fine, careless rapture" as the youngest poet that ever committed suicide or fell in a tavern brawl or destroyed his health and prematurely sapped his talents with absinth or other forms of dissipation. Those whom the muses love do not by any means always die young.

Early Political Bequest.

The earliest example of a bequest from a political admirer, such as that which has come to Mr. Keir Hardie, appears to have been the legacy of $50,000 left to the elder Pitt by Sarah Duchess of Marlborough, "for the noble defence he made for the support of the laws of England." After Pitt's fall from power, he received a further bequest worth $15,000 a year from Sir William Pynsent, whom he had never met. Disraeli and Cobden also received substantial tokens of regard in this way, and John Thomasson, member for Bolton, gave Cobden $35,000 "in acknowledgement of his vast services to his country and to mankind."—London Daily Chronicle.

Wolsey and His Orange.

Oranges were first brought to England about the middle of the sixteenth century and found ready favor with those who could afford them. Curious use was sometimes made of the fruit soon after its introduction. Cavendish describes Cardinal Wolsey as entering a crowded chamber "holding in his hand a very fair orange, whereof the meat or substance within was taken out and filled up again with the part of a sponge, wherein was vinegar and other confections against the pestilent airs, the which he commonly smelt unto passing among the people or else when he was pestered with many suitors.—London Globe.

A Costly Drink.

Sir Thomas Gresham, the millionaire merchant of Queen Elizabeth's day, in order to shame the Spanish ambassador, who was extolling the riches of his master before Elizabeth, remarked "that the queen had subjects who at one meal would expend a sum equal to the daily revenue of the King of Spain and all his grandees put together." Soon after this the Spanish ambassador was invited to dine with the English knight, when the latter drew from his pocket a pearl for which he had shortly before refused $75,000, ground it to powder and drank it to the health of his mistress, the queen.—National Magazine.

A HISTORIC BELL.

From the Guerriere to the Constitution, Then to a Mill.

One would hardly expect to find an object of historic interest in so prosaic a place as a New England mill—an object older than the oldest title of the English peerage, an object made before the English parliament was formed. Yet such an object is in daily use in a factory at Saylesville, R. I. It is a bell, whose history is a most interesting one. Around the bell, about four inches from the crown, is this superscription: "Peter Secest Amsterdam, Anno 1263, me fecit."

The date, together with other well authenticated facts, leads to the belief that the bell was long used in a convent belfry in England and was taken therefrom for public use during the reformation. But the connecting link between its life in the old world and its advent to America is the famous naval battle between the Guerriere and the Constitution.

The Guerriere, a helpless wreck, was rolling in the trough of the sea, while her brave but defeated commander, Captain Dacres of the royal navy, on the deck of the American frigate, the Constitution, was offering his sword to gallant Captain Hull.

The two officers had been friends in time of peace, having often exchanged hospitalities at the Mediterranean ports, and now Hull's magnanimity shone out.

"I'll not take your sword, Dacres," said he. "Keep it."

In the meanwhile the boats of the Constitution were busily engaged in transporting the crew of the defeated ship to the deck of the victor. A midshipman reported to the first lieutenant that the ship's bell had been carried away by a grapeshot from the Guerriere and that there was no way of announcing the time to the ship's company.

At that moment the Guerriere gave a succession of heavy plunges, and the clear tones of a fine bell rang over the water.

"Go get the Englishman's bell," said the lieutenant to the midshipman. "There will be no further use for it on board that craft."

The Guerriere surrendered at 7 o'clock in the evening of Aug. 19, 1812, and at 8 o'clock the same evening Peter Secest's bell in sonorous tones rang out the hour on board "Old Ironsides."

With the lapse of time the bell, amid the confusion and debris common to a great navy yard, became misplaced, lost its identity and was thrust carelessly to one side. It found its way to the scrap heap, was afterward sold by the United States and finally came to rest in its present quarters.—Boston Post.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

HUNTING WITH DOROTHY

There Was Other Game Than the Partridges

By LITTELL McCLURG

Dorothy was a sportswoman from the tip of her dainty pumps to the top of her aristocratic head. Never had Owen Compton met a girl in whom so many delightful qualities were blended.

That dashing creature known as "the athletic girl" he cordially disliked, holding that young women were intended primarily for cozy corners.

So when introduced to Dorothy he felt sure he would not like her a bit. Handsome she undoubtedly was, and queenly, too, but with her queenliness Dorothy was vivaciousness itself. She could ride with the skill of a cowboy the wildest pony that ever leaped a fence. She could shoot like an expert and row like a university oarsman.

And after galloping gayly over the fields on one of her papa's most dangerous young horses she would come into the drawing room and, with sympathetic touch, play a score of old time melodies surcharged with sentiment.

Before many moons Owen discovered that with all her athletic propensities Dorothy was as tender natured and as warm hearted as any girl who breathed the ozone.

The result was inevitable.

Therefore when Dorothy looked up from the piano, a coquettish light in her dark eyes, and asked, "Owen, when are you coming out to shoot partridges with me?" Owen replied that next morning would find him ready with cartridges and gun.

He appeared by sunup, and Dorothy was awaiting him with her own favorite setter and her own brightly polished little shotgun. In hunting boots, short skirt and a brown jacket, whose large collar fell back over her shoulders, disclosing her round, white throat, she was a veritable vision of the forest.

"As I live, but you do look stunning!" was Owen's comment as he gave her a rapid survey. "Another Diana ready for the hunt, but whether it be birds or hearts it's hard to say!"

She laughed merrily.

"The former, of course, sir!" she declared. "At evening with moonlight setting, you know, is the proper time for wounding hearts. This morning in the bright sunshine partridges are to be our only consideration. Please remember this!"

"Agreed," he said, his eyes flashing back the challenge. "Let's strike out. Look, your dog is just crazy to be off!"

Then down the long slope they went and out into the fields. The autumn sun was a dull, golden disk that seemed to cast its color over the leaves and the ruddy fruit. As they made their way through an orchard Owen stopped and, throwing a stick up into the boughs, brought down several fine apples.

With evident relish Dorothy set her sharp teeth into one of the largest of these. The appeal of the picture was too much for Owen, and he began to quote something about the drowsy winds that fanned "a heart ripe as the apples grown in orchard lands of long ago."

She stopped him with a disapproving glance. "Do you remember what we started out to do?" she asked.

"Yes, to shoot birds, not to talk sentiment."

She nodded, and they pushed out into the open fields again. The setter, a hundred yards ahead, was already standing a covey of partridges. They hurried up close.

"Ready?" he asked, raising his gun.

"Ready," she answered. "You take those on the left; I'll look after those that fly up on the right."

Burr-burr-burr, and a dozen partridges rose obliquely and sailed over the fields.

Bang, bang, spoke Dorothy's gun. Bang, bang, echoed his.

Two birds dropped, one in line of Owen's fire, the other over to the right.

"Honors are even!" cried Dorothy. "It's a hit and a miss for each of us."

He sprang forward, and as the dog brought up the dead birds he dropped them into the sack he carried. Suddenly a hundred feet in front of him a partridge that had become separated from the others ran out of the grass and fluttered off toward a clump of bushes on the hillside.

He lifted his gun to his shoulder and pulled both triggers, but the bird continued in its flight. Then behind him flashed Dorothy's gun, and the partridge dropped like a spent rocket.

At the same moment a sharp, stinging pain ran through Owen's left hand. Instinctively he jerked it up. It was covered with blood.

His face grew pale, for he thought that a good part of the leaden load had struck him. He raised his arm, and the blood ran down in a tiny rivulet over his wrist. With his right hand he reached for his handkerchief to stop the crimson flow. He was conscious that the girl was running up to him.

"Good heavens!" she gasped, her face white as chalk as she saw the blood. "I've shot you, Owen!"

"I'm afraid you have," he said, "but not seriously, I guess."

In a second her hand had hold of the handkerchief and she was wiping away the blood.

"Oh, it's not very serious!" she breathed joyfully. "Look, it's only a deep, red scar now. A stray shot has grazed the back of your hand. That is all, thank goodness!"

He looked closer and saw that what she said was true.

"But it must be bandaged at once," she affirmed in deeply sympathetic tones. "We must get to some water. Come, there's a little spring just over the hill."

Hurriedly she tied a knot in the handkerchief, and they went over the ridge in the direction indicated. Once at the spring she became alert. Removing the handkerchief from Owen's hand, she soaked it in the water and then bathed the wound thoroughly.

The blood had ceased to flow, and there was little pain. In fact, the cool water and the pressure of her hands were decidedly pleasant.

Then she wrung the water out of the handkerchief and tied it neatly around his fingers. "Now, when we get to the house a little antiseptic and a new bandage will complete the operation," she said.

The strain over, she sank down weakly on one of the large stones near the stream. In a second he was all apprehension.

"Why, what's the matter, Dorothy?" he asked. "Positively you look ill!"

"Oh, it's nothing," she replied brokenly. "Only I'm so very, very glad you were not badly hurt. The reaction has made me a little weak, that's all." And she smiled again bravely.

"My dear Dorothy," he said, taking both her hands in his uninjured one, "maybe it is more serious than you think."

"Oh, no, it can't be dangerous!" she exclaimed in sudden alarm. "The bleeding has stopped, hasn't it?"

"Oh, my hand's all right," he replied, "but I fear that's not the only wound you've inflicted."

Sudden terror shone in her eyes. "Oh, Owen, dear, surely no other shot struck you? Tell me—tell me they didn't!"

She was quivering with apprehension.

"Well, I don't know whether it was a bullet or not," he answered, "but I feel that I have been struck, and fatally—right here!" And he put his uninjured hand over his left side and smiled at Dorothy significantly.

She caught his meaning on the instant.

"Are you sure, Owen, that the shot struck home?" she queried encouragingly.

"Dead sure of it, my dear girl," he answered.

"And what are you going to do about it?"

"There's only one thing I can do," he said—"ask you to try to heal the heart wound as you did the other. Will you, dear?"

But there was no verbal reply—none was needed.

"So it was hearts, after all, that my modern Diana went hunting for?" he asked on his way home.

"It looks that way," she said, laughing up at him.

CATALOGUES FOR KINGS.

Royalties Pestered With Tradesmen's Samples.

Tradesmen the world over, manufacturers of all varieties of useful articles and novelties, are assiduous bidders for the patronage of the crowned heads of Europe. Virtually every monarch in the course of a year receives goods to the value of hundreds of thousands of dollars. All the sender would wish is a note of former acceptance. He might live in hopes of orders in the future, but the mere recognition of the receipt and use of an article by a royal personage would be satisfying.

The rule concerning unsolicited sample goods sent to Their Majesties of England is simple. All such goods of considerable value are to be returned to the senders; ordinary samples of little value can be retained and divided among any of the royal servants who wish to keep them.

A year ago, among the samples received by the King were enough cigars, cigarettes, tobacco and pipes to keep the most inveterate smoker well supplied for many years. Five thousand sample boxes of all sorts of cigars arrived in one week from hundreds of different cigar manufacturers, and most of those samples were in silver boxes. They were all returned to the senders.

Queen Mary receives marvelous assortments of exquisite dress fabrics, examples of beautiful laces, embroidery work and shawls, while specially prepared catalogues, never seen by the ordinary public, of varied goods arrive in a perfect avalanche at Buckingham Palace.

Many of these catalogues cost a considerable sum of money to produce. A well-known firm that specialises in children's toys has a special catalogue prepared every year for their royal customers which costs them about $2,500 to turn out.

The King of Spain, when he first visited there several years ago, received, among other things, a model of a motor car made of silver gilt. This beautifully designed car was two feet in length and modeled in proportion. The value of the metal alone must have been $500. The young King bought it for $1,500.

A wealthy and celebrated firm of furnishers sent models of six furnished rooms to the Kaiser when he was staying at Buckingham Palace as the guest of the late King several years ago. The dimension of each room were 12 inches by 8, and the furniture was modeled in proportion. All the chairs, tables, bureaus and other pieces of furniture were of antique design, and were carved in mahogany and satinwood. Many of the chairs in one of the reception rooms were of Louis XV. and XVI. periods, and were exquisitely reproduced in gilt.

The whole model took nearly three years to prepare. The Kaiser purchased it for $3,500.

Falling Leaves.

There is no doubt that climatic conditions influence the fall of leaves from trees. To determine the effects of varying rainfall a French meteorologist has made observations for a dozen years, chiefly on lime trees, which are fed from the deep soil, and has found that, with the usual winter reserve of moisture in the subsoil, foliage is independent of drought and heat. Cold is not so well withstood, premature frosts decidedly hastening leaf fall. Different plant species behave differently, and in one year, with plenty of soil moisture, the leaves of the lime trees fell unseasonably, two months before those of the plane trees and the fruit trees.

He Was Welcome.

Picking himself up after a rapid flight down the stairs, the young man broke forth:

"Of course it is your privilege to throw me out of the house, Mr. Roughman," he said, "but there is no need to add insult to injury by having me land on a mat which has the word 'Welcome' woven in it."

"There is nothing wrong in that," remarked the cause of his sudden descent; "you are welcome"—

"But you threw me out!"

—"on the outside of the house where the mat lies, sir!" concluded the man of the house, closing the door.—London Tit-Bits.

South African Benzol.

In the course of certain Motor Cycling Notes, appearing recently in a Johannesburg newspaper, it was stated that good progress is being made in experiments for the production of benzol in South Africa, although full regularity of quality has not been so easily attained as was at first expected. A new method is, however, now being tried, but it is the intention of those interested not to place any of the fuel on the market until the most searching and long continued tests have proved entirely satisfactory.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

MEMORY'S LAPSE.

ONCE all of us were boys and girls
  But how we do forget
Just what it was that made us glad
  Or caused our minds to fret!
So little can we now recall
  Each childish care and joy
That no one who is grown, it seems,
  Can understand a boy.

We grow impatient with his pranks,
  And seldom do we pause
To make allowance for the fact
  That youth may have its flaws.
We can't reverse the wheels of time
  And back to boyhood chase
And put ourselves for just an hour
  In his bewildered place.

We ask the child to understand
  As much and get it right
As we in our maturer years
  Can comprehend at sight.
But if he only does the things
  That worry and annoy
We feel like reaching for a rod
  With which to train the boy.

Too bad it is we cannot bridge
  The years that we have spanned,
Fall from the heights where we are perched
  And try to understand.
But, no, he must remain to us
  A mystery, as though
We had not lived in that same stage
  Some hazy years ago.

All Fiction.

"I love to wash dishes."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, and I can cook beautifully."

"Can you!"

"To be sure, and I can mend stockings to beat your grandmother."

"Can it be possible!"

"And my jellies and preserves are more than delicious."

"What kind of a girl are you anyway?"

"The kind you read about in books."

Corroborative.

"Do you think women are unreasonable?"

"Certainly, my dear."

"Do you really?"

"Of course they are."

"You horrid thing! You ought to say that we are reasonable whether we have any reason or not. So there!"

Going to Waste.

"He is feeling pretty miserable."

"What is the matter?"

"Health is too good."

"That's a strange reason."

"Well, he took a lot of patent medicine on a debt, and he is afraid he will not have a chance to use it."

By Comparison.

"I wonder why some men are so popular."

"Oh, easy."

"Well, what's the answer?"

"Because some of the rest of you are so punk."

Pose.

"She is a strikingly beautiful girl."

"She didn't strike me that way."

"But did you see her at the punching bag?"

Hardly Noticeable.

"He is a good all round man."

"Where does he shine most?"

"Oh, on the nose, just a trifle."

The economical decoration of your home is largely a matter of knowing the right finishes to use.

For the exterior of your home there is no better paint than Sherwin-Williams Paint (Prepared) SWP. It is made of the purest of materials, combined in correct scientific proportions with the aid of special machinery. The result is a far spreading, long wearing paint in liquid form, all ready to apply.

For floors, the easiest finish to apply is S-W Inside Floor Paint, and this gives particularly good results even on old worn or discolored floors. On a good hardwood floor the best finish is S-W Mar-not, a hard-drying waterproof floor varnish.

For the walls of your home, while water paints, such as S-W Decotint, give pleasing effects, they have not the durability which means true economy, Sherwin-Williams Flat-tone is unquestionably the best paint for walls. It is an oil paint that dries with a soft, flat, velvety finish. It is very durable and can be washed with soap and water. S-W Flat-tone comes in twenty-four beautiful colors, the selection of expert decorators.

For the varnishing of interior work such as wainscotting, doors, furniture, etc., we recommend S-W Excello Varnish, or S-W Kopal, an old fashioned, general purpose varnish, which can be used inside and outside and is just the thing for varnished woodwork in kitchens, bathrooms, or for front doors, porch ceilings, etc. For floors use S-W Mar-not, a special waterproof floor varnish, will not turn white when water is spilled on it, nor does it show scratches and heel marks readily.

We can take care of your every paint and varnish need. Drop in and discuss your paint and varnish problems with us.

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION

TENDENCY TOWARD TIERRED EFFECTS.

The present tendency toward tierred effects is emphasized in this fashionable suit of dark blue mohair and wool fabric. The coat follows in the line of the skirt peplume forming a third tier above the wide hip line. The dropped shoulder line, the decorative collar and the simple trimming of buttons present the mode that is most favored at this moment.

Points for Mothers

Supervising the Children's Reading.

Usually the reason why children read trashy books is because no older person is taking an interest in pointing the way to good books. In order that the little folks may acquire the habit of reading, it is worth while to arouse interest in a subject.

It is not enough that children look at the titles of books that mean nothing to them. It remains for an older person to interest them in a subject and perhaps to read aloud until a sufficient desire is gained for more.

It is a mistake to read down to a child. He may not understand all of a book, but he will catch the fire and spirit.

It is surprising how much children will absorb from mature books that are read to them. They enjoy that which is strong. Their tastes will be vitiated by literature that has not in it the element to make it alive.

Too often parents are so busy they are compelled to lay aside books. There is danger then of boys and girls coming to the front, while the parents fall behind the times. It is very important for boys and girls to feel that their parents are in advance of them. They not only enjoy their intellectual comradeship, but are benefited by looking to their parents for leadership and help.

Manners by Mimicry.

That children early mimic their elders is well known by all who are blessed with little ones. That the mimicry may be turned to good account has been shown by one woman who, being anxious that her little girls should learn the polite usages of society early, started them in the right direction by means of their paper dolls.

These little girls and their friends have their dolls attend teas, make calls, give week end parties, etc. The children are very particular now regarding their dolls' manners since this idea was introduced. Proper notes and acknowledgments must be written by the dolls' owners, for if one forgets her manners a paper doll is the forfeit.

The mother, who sits in the next room with her sewing, is often amused at the conversations, particularly when they play they are telephoning to one another. She says it is almost the repetition of her own talk and that she is awakening quickly to her responsibilities.

The Danger Period.

When a child has been accidentally exposed to a contagious disease mothers often worry unduly in regard to the little one contracting the same illness. Frequently the mother's anxiety continues long after the danger is passed. The following list will show how soon after exposure to contagion the diseases are likely to develop.

The list serves a double purpose. In the first place it indicates just how long all possible precautions should be taken, and in the second place it allays apprehension in due time. The following is the list:

Diphtheria, second day.
Scarlet fever, fourth day.
Smallpox, twelfth day.
Measles, fourteenth day.
Chickenpox, fourteenth day.
Mumps, nineteenth day.
Typhoid fever, twenty-first day.

Baby's First Teeth.

A child's first tooth appears about the sixth or seventh month, and by the twenty-fourth it should have its full complement of temporary teeth—twenty.

These teeth should be carefully watched and the minutest cavity promptly attended to by a competent dentist.

It is a long cherished fallacy that the best remedy for a child's aching tooth is immediate extraction, particularly if the tooth be one of the first ones, for "they don't count."

But they do count for far more than is generally realized. Upon their health depends the health of the permanent set and the consequent comfort or suffering of the adult.

Extraction should be a very last resort and permitted only when all hope of saving a tooth is gone.

Safety Mat For the Tub.

A practical mat can be made that will enable a mother to leave the small child alone in a porcelain bathtub and have no fear that it will fall and be bruised. Take two thicknesses of Turkish toweling, place a thick layer of cotton batting between and quilt the three layers lightly together.

This will make a mat that will be sufficiently heavy to keep its place and allow the child a firm footing in the tub. After each bath it can be hung out on a permanent line that is near to the bathroom so as to be in readiness at a minute's need.

Toothache Remedy.

Here's an unpleasant but very effective cure for a child's toothache:

Take a piece of alum about the size of a walnut, put it in a saucepan with half a pint of milk and beat till boiling.

Let the victim take a mouthful of this, as hot as he or she can bear it, and keep it in the mouth for a few seconds. Repeat until the pain goes. And it will go very soon.

WHAT IS WORN.

Coats generally make the figure look thicker than is natural at the waist line.

Collars on coats and waists are both open and high.

Many of the smartest new waists are of stiff white material.

Some of the most airy and filmy blouses have metallic lace for foundation.

Circular cut flounces on skirts have an increasing vogue.

Around the knees the fashionable skirt is as narrow as ever.

The short skirts are bringing out more fanciful stocking effects.

Modish shades are bright and clear like the colors of flowers.

THE POPULAR VEILS.

Colored Lining Gives Chic to the New French Fabrics.

The latest beauty veil is made of fine black silk spider web net and lined with flesh pink tulle. Two large patches made of black velvet are placed at suitable points, one to fall at the corner of the left eye and the other at the corner of the mouth. This is a specially becoming veil, flattering to the complexion and very comfortable to wear.

Another beauty veil which is a great favorite in Paris is made of pale heliotrope net and dotted with a couple of black patches. On fair complexions heliotrope tulle is very effective. The same may be said of cobweb tulle in a pale shade of lemon yellow.

For ordinary wear the favorite veil is that made of fine black silk tulle and dotted all over with white pin spots. Pale rose tulle dotted with white is also admirably becoming, and for women who go in for looking smart one can recommend the new veils in electric blue tulle, dotted with black and white pin spots and finished with black velvet patches.

A great deal depends upon the veil. Some of these lengths of fine tulle are real beautifiers. Others merely make the skin look hard or coarse. It is a capital idea to stick to one particular style of veil when it has been found to be becoming.

ARTISTIC FURNISHINGS.

A Dainty Receptacle For Music Books or Records.

The charming music cabinet illustrated may be carried out in any wood that suits the taste. It is one of the new art designs. The doors are fitted with pressed glass on which is a conventionalized crocus pattern. The sheets of music may be filed inside the cabinet and music books placed on the shelf underneath. A cabinet of this sort would be a convenient receptacle for the rolls from the automatic piano or the records of the phonograph.

The very latest library and living room sets are beautiful examples of conventionalized orientalism in coloring and design. Studying these embroidered sets haphazardly classified as futuristic, we recognise them as definitely oriental.

MUSIC CABINET.

The sets include scarf, pillow and table mat. One that attracted attention was of rich green rep, done in glistening fiber, in conventional design, with the larger figures heavily padded so that all of the embroidery formed an exquisitely shaded study in golden brown.

A living room set of scarf, pillow and table mat was made of leather brown linen mummy cloth, rich in embroidery of oriental design done in peacock blue, greens, terra cotta and browns. The same color scheme was varied in a mercerized rep hand bag, with a touch of red and black to give it a futurist tone. The bag was lined with emerald green satin.

Children's Hats.

Straw hats of all sorts will be worn by children, but silk hats will be worn, too, and straw and silk will be combined. One popular hat shows a straw brim of tan chip, with a crown of darker crepe de chine. Three little feather birds of brown and yellow are arranged lightly on the right side of the straw band that holds in the fullness of the silk puff at the bottom. Two of the birds are on silk covered wire and they hover in humming bird fashion above the dainty hat.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Charming Little Lad Who Lives In Germany.

YOUNGEST PRINCE OF HESSE.

Children of the Landgrave of Hesse Noted For Good Looks—Games and Riddles For Little People—The Barnyard Ladies.

Not long ago a newspaper in Germany conceived the idea of printing the pictures of the children of the many royal families of that empire and asking its readers to decide by a voting contest which were the prettiest. After the votes were all in and counted it was found that the children of the landgrave of Hesse had received the verdict. There are four of these children, three boys and a girl. Prince Ernest, whose picture is shown, is the second son. He was born in July, 1900. He has a sister, Irene, six years old, and a brother not yet three. His oldest brother, William, is only nine. If they are all as pretty as Ernest they are a handsome lot, but all the beautiful children do not live in Germany. We have a great many on this side of the water.

The Blue Grotto.

The Blue grotto is a famous cave on the island of Capri, near Naples. It is about 170 feet long, 100 wide and 40 high and is reached from the sea by a narrow arch in the limestone cliffs. The water within resembles, according to one eyewitness, "liquid sapphire" and glitters with a pale blue light.

Walls and roof of the Blue grotto are ultamarine in color.

The general blue tone of the place is said to be caused by the refraction of the sun's rays in passing through the water in the cave. The opening of the grotto is so exceedingly small that the light that enters must first pass through the waters.

A stay of at least twenty minutes is necessary to accustom oneself to the light in the Blue grotto.

A Generous Dog.

A clergyman had a favorite Newfoundland dog, which was allowed to run about the house. He had also a sporting dog, which was usually kept chained up in a stable. The Newfoundland procured his food in the house and was well fed. He seemed to think that the dog in the stable was not quite so fortunately placed, and he would frequently take a large bone, jump over the gate which divided the yard of the house from the stable yard and carry the bone to his companion.

Riddles.

Why should the number 288 never be mentioned in company? Because it is too gross.

What can pass before the sun without making a shadow? The wind.

When is a turkey like an English poet? When it is browning.

What relation is the doormat to the scraper? A step farther (father).

Barnyard Ladies.

Cock-a-doodle do!
The mare has lost her shoe,
And Mrs. Pig has bought a wig,
As all the ladies do.

She says, "I'm now in style,"
With a piggy-wiggy smile,
While all the barnyard folk
Consider her a joke.

But never, never mind,
Mrs. Pig, if they're unkind.
Why shouldn't you, my dear,
Wear a curl behind each ear?

Mrs. Hen will wear a comb
Wherever she may roam.
Though it's funny, I declare,
When she hasn't any hair!

And the horse will answer neigh
When you offer him some hay.
Now, it doesn't seem so queer
You should want a wig, my dear.

Looks to me as though the joke
Was on the other barnyard folk.

FINISHING TOUCHES.

INDIAN summer,
Marvelous queen,
Summing up and embodying
All of the charms of the year!
Combination rare,
A poem, a picture
And a warning,
Dipping your brush
In the sunbeams,
You paint the forests
In the brightest colors,
While your winds,
Low and earnest,
Sing the requiem
Of the year.
You are there
With the big splash
Of carmine,
All right,
As the grand finale.
You paint things red
That heretofore
Had been verdant
As the tall and uncut
Grass.
The chromo of nature,
Time for taking stock
And brilliant prelude
To the melancholy days,
When on your good behavior
You make a hit
With one and all,
For well they know
And, knowing, shudder
That the worst
Is yet to come.
For grim old winter
Stands impatient,
Ready to apply
The whitewash brush
Soon as ever
You take your departure.
Glorious Indian summer,
As a scenic marvel
And a climatic wonder
You are there
With the goods!

New Hats.

"Last year we had to build additions to our houses after our wives had ordered their new hats."

"Did?"

"Yes."

"Well, we have to do worse than that this year."

"How is that?"

"Have to mortgage them."

Taking a Chance.

"I notice you call every man you meet governor or judge."

"Well, how do I know but what they are?"

"You know well enough they are not."

"Maybe I do, but with lots of them it is good for one drink."

Welcome.

When you are to your eyes in work
It often happens that
Your longest winded friend calls in
To have a little chat.

And when your cash is at the ebb
How often it befalls
Just when you want to see him least
The bill collector calls!

Pessimistic.

"Why is Brown so disheartened this morning?"

"He says life is so stupid."

"Oh, he does?"

"Yes; he can't find a thing to kick about, for it isn't sufficiently stupid to justify a good hearty kick."

Busy.

"You seem rushed."

"I am—working myself nearly to death."

"Is that so? What are you doing?"

"Hustling for a job that gives good pay and has no work."

Simple Method.

"He discharges every obligation."

"Does he indeed?"

"Yes; discharges them from his mind."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The worst trouble about this matter of getting experience is that it is all sure to cost at least a dollar a throw.

When you are cultivating a sweet disposition it isn't advisable to use either a currycomb or a garden rake.

NORDHEIMER
"QUALITY-TONE"
PIANO

RENOWNED FOR DURABILITY

SIX distinct reasons why the Nordheimer is recognized as the Standard Piano of Canada:—

¶ Because the tone has that pure, delightful singing quality throughout the entire register.
¶ Because its wonderful resourcefulness satisfies the demands of the most exacting pianist.
¶ Because it gives the teacher the greatest opportunity for properly developing the pupil.
¶ Because the touch is responsive, and will not tire the beginner.
¶ Because of its artistic design and splendid durability.
¶ Because its intrinsic value is greater, and, therefore, gives a larger return for the outlay.

The Nordheimer Piano is manufactured from the finest materials throughout, and is an artistic production of the highest merit.

Who Was Honored?

Can you say off-hand which particular Johannes (or John) is celebrated in the name of Johannesburg? On its foundation in 1886 the town was named after Johannes Rissik, the Surveyor-General of the Transvaal at the time. The town had a rapid growth, increasing its population by 22,000 in the course of three years. Though its fame depends entirely upon the mines, Johannesburg has, among other important industries, large brewing, brass-founding, and brickmaking works.

Uses of Menu Cards.

"It wouldn't take so many menu cards to carry us through at dinner," said the head waiter, "if people didn't scribble so many notes on them and make them unfit for use. Memoranda of all kinds are jotted down on these cards during a meal. Arithmetical puzzles are solved, the particulars of business deals are worked out, financial problems are wrestled with, sonnets are composed, and social engagements are made and broken. The fact is I have seen about everything written on a menu card except a popular novel, and no doubt I've found the plots of some of them."—New York Times.

OPEN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE TO PUPILS FROM THE COUNTY

Suggestion is Made at Board of Education Session And Supervision Committee is Asked to Report

"Why not open the Collegiate Institute to the County of Peterboro?" was a question that started considerable discussion at the Board of Education last evening. Mr. W. H. Hill who started the discussion followed up by pointing out the various advantages to the city by making this move. It would double their fees.

It was also a stimulant to the local pupils. Every township would assist in the maintenance of the Collegiate. It was a question that should be taken up immediately.

The outcome of the matter was the decision to have the Supervision Committee look into it and report at an early date.

Col. Miller heartily endorsed the same view. The school he stated was not as full as it used to be.

"It strikes me to be one of the best moves we have contemplated for some time." he concluded.

Mr. Crane expressed himself greatly in favor with the movement. He gave a few figures whereby the Board would profit immensely. Chairman Morrison remarked that they would receive fully two or three thousand dollars per year out of it. The matter was then settled by the above motion being passed.

Report of Building Committee.

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education :
Gentlemen :

Your Committee beg to report that Mr. Bartlett, architect, has awarded Mr. W. J. Johnston the contractor for the King George School the sum of $548.58 for extras, and Messrs. Langford and Sheehy the contractors for the Queen Mary School the sum of $531.50, and your Committee recommend that the award be accepted, and that the Treasurer be authorized to issue cheques to the contractors for the amounts, in full settlement of their claims.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN CRANE,
Acting Chairman.

Mr. Crane commented on the slight cost of extras and asked for adoption of the report.

"How did these extras creep in ?" questioned Mr. Smith.

Chairman Morrison explained that they were for strengthening the walls in different places. Various other little changes resulted in more expense.

The matter was dropped the explanation of the Chairman being satisfactory to Mr. Smith.

The Supervision Committee was authorized to advertise for tenders for the Text Books and Supplies required for the ensuing year and also for the Collegiate Institute supplies, with power to award the contract.

Tenders for Coal.

Mr. Crane mover, seconded by Mr. Hill :

"That the Property Committee be authorized to advertise for tenders for the fuel required for the ensuing year with power to award the contract."

It was decided :

"That Miss A. Weir be appointed a member of the Board of Examiners for the Entrance Examinations for the present year."

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, reported that he had secured Mr. W. A. Adamson as substitute for Mr. Wilson Taylor, B.A., who is ill. It was decided to ask the Minister of Education for the necessary certificate of Mr. Adamson who will assume the duties of the absent teacher until vacation at midsummer. In the meantime Mr. Taylor will be granted leave of absence to recover from his illness. Mr. Kenner also reported that Mr. Holmes of the Science Department of the Collegiate, was in Toronto trying examinations for his degree.

The communication of Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., regarding the final reading of the Auxiliary Classes Bills was received. Mr. Peck stated that he would meet the Board in person shortly and discuss the matter with them.

The above is in reference to the bill for the establishing of schools throughout the Province for the maintenance of the feeble-minded. The local Board disapproved of the matter and wrote the Provincial Government to that effect. Since however the bill has passed its final reading. The bill does not, however, require a school board to maintain the feeble-minded by having a special school for them.

The offer of the Underwood Typewriter Agency to supply the Collegiate Institute with ten new machines and take the nine old ones back at the difference of $75, was accepted by the Board.

Teachers' Salaries.

"These teachers are getting a good salary and I don't feel disposed to give them more than a month's pay when sick," was the remark of Mr. Smith in the discussion of the leave of absence for Mr. Taylor. Mr. Taylor was granted leave of absence for sufficient time to recover from his illness.

"It's our duty," remarked Mr. Eastwood.

Mr. Crane expressed the same sentiments.

Mr. Taylor's salary will go on the same as usual.

The circular letter of S. B. McCready of the Agricultural Department was received and filed for future references. The communication called the attention of the Board to the question of introducing the subject of agriculture into the schools.

Misses Blanche Hales of Millbrook and Clara G. Adams of Robinson St. applied for positions on the Public School Board. The applications were referred to the Committee of Appointments.

COMMITTEE OF RETAILERS WILL INVESTIGATE

The City Council will in all probability be asked in the near future to consider suggestions from the Retail Merchants' Association for changes in the market conditions and amendments to the regulations. The association is opposed to the weighing of fowl and the placing of names on baskets which were introduced some time ago on recommendation of the sanitary inspector. There are several members of the association who think the new regulations have tended to drive some of the farmers from the market. It is claimed that the more work entailed by the farmer in selling his wares, such as weighing fowl and numbering baskets, prompts him to dispose of his goods to buyers who travel through the country instead of bringing them to the city, as those buyers do not demand such restrictions. The association will also probably ask the Council to erect a pavilion on the market square, to shelter the farmers and also pave that part used by the vehicles and horses.

A committee has been appointed by the association to investigate all matters pertaining to market regulations and its report will be received by the association at the next meeting.

LOOKING FOR DOGS.

Detectives Newhall and Patterson were around the city this afternoon in a rig looking for dogs for which tags have not been secured. There are several parties with canines in the city who have not as yet complied with the law of procuring a tag, and it is probable that some of them will figure in Police Court.

Farmers Are Seeding.

Reports from the surrounding districts state that ploughing is about completed and the majority of the farmers are seeding.

IS NOT WANTED

Ex-Fireman is Charged With Disturbing the Peace

According to the evidence of Fire Chief Howard, he does not wish for the company of ex-fireman Freddie Stevens. Stevens appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning charged with disturbing the peace of the fire hall. He was allowed to go on his promise to behave.

Mr. J. R. Corkery, of the firm of O'Connell and Corkery, acted for the defendant.

100 MILITARY CAPS FOR P.C.I. CADETS

At the meeting of the Board of Education last evening Cadet Instructor C. E. Jamieson of the Collegiate waited on the Board and requested that they be granted sufficient money to purchase twenty military caps. After a few minutes of smiling hesitation the Board decided to increase the number to one hundred and twenty caps at a cost of $1 each.

Mr. Jamieson informed the Board that the annual inspection of the cadets will be held on May 21st. The members of the Board were cordially requested to attend.

In all probability the cadets will partake in the Duke of Connaught ceremonies on June 1st.

PUPILS CAN SEE THE BALL GAME

Schools Will Have Early Closing on the Big Day.

The Board of Education are baseball fans. Last night they decided to allow the pupils of the schools of the city to be dismissed early on the opening day of the ball game here. "Some sporty Board," sighed Mr. Crane, one of the veterans.

MONTHLY REPORT OF SCHOOL NURSE

Thirty-two pupils were "sent home" from the Public Schools during the past month for uncleanliness. The report of the School Nurse, Miss Kennedy, as presented to the Board of Education last evening, read as follows:

Referred to dentists, 43.

Inspections made, 406.

Advised to have medical attention, 88.

Referred to eye specialists, 43.

Excluded for uncleanliness, 32.

Miss Kennedy reported one pupil was badly in need of eye glasses, and that his parents were not able to provide such, and asked for the advise of the Board.

The Supervision Committee will attend to the matter.

ON THE LOOKOUT

Merchants' Association Active In Interests of Its Members

The Retail Merchants' Association are keeping a close tab on strangers coming into the city and breaking the Transient and Traders' by-law. With the assistance of Secretary Cameron, of the Association, the police broke up a gang of photographers who were operating here recently. The men who had so far only taken orders, were not liable under the by-law. Then, to protect themselves, they arranged with a local photographer to combine with them and by this means evaded the law. They, however, would have been liable as soon as they had attempted to collect the money for the pictures according to the statement of the secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association.

Several other cases are in the hands of the Association with regard to breaches of the ransient and Traders' by-law.

Mr. Cameron remarked that they were bound to protect the merchants of the city, and that they were going to do so. It was one of their great duties.

JOHNNY MUST GO TO SCHOOL

THE MAGISTRATE SAYS HIS MOTHER IS TO BLAME FOR HIS CONDUCT

Attending only eight days school for the month of April resulted in Johnny, aged thirteen, appearing before Magistrate Dumble this morning. John is evidently the ringleader of his street. The other two youngsters, named Jack, aged ten, and Herbert, aged twelve, say he enticed them away from school. After a severe lecture from the Magistrate, and being warned that they would have to report to the Chief every week regarding their school attendance, the case was adjourned indefinitely.

Johnny's mother informed the Magistrate that she sent her boy to school. Yesterday he was sent to school, but he left at recess. She did not know what to do with him. In rather scathing terms, His Worship said that she was to blame for this. "Who is to blame if the child is not brought up properly?" he asked. "You should have taught him, trained him from the cradle to his present stage in order that he may make a good citizen. Most of these cases end in the boy going to the Central."

"Oh, yes, that's what you all say; the mothers must take the blame," retorted the mother.

"I am not surprised at this, considering the home conditions," remarked the Truant Officer.

"What do you mean?" enquired the women.

Mr. Mowat, School Inspector, also informed the Court that the oldest boy had enticed the other two away from the school.

"Excuse me, Mr. Cochrane," interrupted the mother, "but what do you mean by home conditions?"

"Well, your home is dirty, is what I mean," remarked the Truant Officer.

Jack, aged eight, blamed the other youngster for his absence from school.

The ringleader at the present time has caused the police department more or less trouble and is at present reporting to the Chief of Police each week.

"I am afraid he is incorrigible," remarked the Chief.

Relief Situation.

The relief situation in the city is steadily decreasing. Last month there were only 54 cases which called for assistance. March was fully double this number, while the winter months were higher still.

BAR RECEIPTS ARE CUT DOWN

Charles Knight Pays His Last $2 Into Police Court

The man from Glengarry was revived at this morning's session of Police Court, when Charles Knight, an umbrella mender from Glengarry, presented a discolored optic to the magistrate and asked forgiveness for being intoxicated last evening.

"I have never made such a fool of myself before," he said.

"How much money have you?" asked the cadi.

"Only $2."

"Well, you would only get drunk on it, so we had better take it," concluded the court.

Jim Smith from Toronto.

"If you can afford to sport around the city and live at hotels, you can afford to pay a little $2 fine for your spree," was the sympathy handed to Jas. Smith, who claimed to be from Toronto. He was charged with being drunk. Smith remarked that the fine was rather steep, but he paid up.

$225 IN PRIZES FOR CROPS' COMPETITION

UNDER AUSPICES OF PETERBORO EXHIBITION

F. J. A. Hall, secretary of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, announced this morning that the organization bad completed plans for a cash prize contest for the best crop of oats, barley and potatoes grown by any member of the exhibition. There will be no entrance fee charged, and all members of the organization are urged to compete. Three cash prizes of $75 each, making a total of $225 will be awarded. The competition will be open to all members within a radius of five miles from this city, and only crops of five acres in oats and barley and one acre in potatoes will be considered eligible to make a bid for the prize money. The judges will be appointed by the Government, who will pay a portion of the prize money, and will make their round of inspection as soon as the crops have matured.

TEMPERANCE FORCES MAY PUT CANDIDATE IN FIELD

Arrangements are Being Completed for County Convention to be Held Here

In view of the possibility of an early provincial election, the temperance workers of Peterboro County are hard at work completing arrangements for the County Temperance Convention to be held in Peterboro on May 19. Efforts are being made to have practically every congregation and temperance organization in the county represented at this convention. The temperance sentiment of the county is known to be very strong, as shown by the fact that only two municipalities in the county have any licenses.

While it cannot be predicted in advance what will be done at the Temperance Convention, it is anticipated that representative delegations will be appointed to wait on both the Liberal and Conservative nominating conventions to urge the appointment of candidates that will be acceptable to the temperance interests. Should both parties nominate candidates satisfactory to the temperance interests, who will pledge themselves to vote for the abolition of the bar, the County Temperance Association will not take any part in the campaign. Should neither convention nominate suitable candidates the advisability of placing a third candidate in the field will then be considered. It will not be satisfactory to the Association to take a candidate agreeing to vote for the abolition of the bar if that candidate's personal record is not one which will create confidence in the fulfilment of such a pledge. It is generally felt that the character of the candidates will be as important as their platform.

BETTER BABY SHOW

Details Will Be Completed at Meeting This Week

Look pretty Mary, here comes the judge. Everything is progressing favorably for the baby show, which the local council of women will conduct in September and all details will be completed at a meeting of the organization to be held this week. The council received a grant of $50 from the city to aid in the work of beautifying the city and helping in the promotion of playgrounds. Fifty dollars does not go a long way, but Mrs. W. H. Hill told the Review that the council had only started on its campaign. She was very optimistic over the future of the council's public welfare plans. The baby show is a certainty and all that is required to make it a success is the co-operation of the mothers, but there are few if any mothers who will not take advantage of the opportunity to proudly display their offsprings, who no doubt will be decked out in the latest of baby creations, including the famous winning smile.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

Within the last week five houses, seven lots and a farm have been sold by A. Brown and Co. Hard times are apparently running away from Peterborough. Mr. Brown reports inquiries from places as far away as Ottawa, due to the publicity of his firm in the columns of the Review. The large circulation of the Review makes its advertising pay.

SURVIVORS OF BURNED STEAMER COLUMBIA PICKED UP AT SEA

Ill-Fated Vessel Was Freighter, Which Caught Fire Sunday Night

Canadian Press Despatch.

Sable Island, May 6.—In addition to thirteen men and one dead body from the burned steamer Columbian, picked up by the steamer Franconia, fourteen more survivors in a second boat have been rescued by the steamer Manhattan, which had been cruising about in the vicinity of the disaster.

The Manhattan signalled by wireless here early to-day that she had picked up one boat of the Columbian captain and thirteen others.

One engineer was killed in the explosion, and one man was drowned leaving the ship. The rescue steamer is still searching for other boats. A third boat contains the first and second officers and seventeen men.

BOSTON, May 6.—The mystery surrounding the identity of the steamer which has been on fire in the westbound transatlantic steamer lane south of Sable Island, for 48 hours, was solved last night when wireless messages from the Cunard liner Franconia, told of the burning of the freighter Columbian, from Antwerp, and the rescue of 13 members of her crew from a small boat. The death of Chief Steward Matthews, whose body the survivors had in charge, and the disappearance of a second boat, in which were 19 men, including the first and second officers, were also reported.

Whether the number of missing was represented by those said to be in the second boat, was still uncertain last night. Estimates by officials of the Leyland and Phoenix lines, placed the number of the crew at between 45 and 50. The messages from the Franconia told of only 33 men, represented by the occupants of the two boats. It was thought possible that there was a third boat, commanded by Captain McDonald of the Columbian.

The survivors were so exhausted by their experience that they could tell little of what had happened, and steamship officials expressed the opinion that the omission in the wireless messages of mention of the captain, might be laid to this fact.

After rescuing the occupants of the first boat, the Franconia searched until night fall for the rest of the crew, but without result. Then Captain Miller of the Cunarder sent word ashore that he bad given up the search and would proceed for Boston with the survivors and his 1,733 passengers. He said he expected to arrive at Boston Lightship at midnight Wednesday.

Search for the missing men of the Columbian had not been given up, however. Before turning for his destination, Captain Miller had notified the steamers Manhattan and Haverford, both eastbound, of the missing boats, and they sent word that they had changed their courses and were heading toward the burning steamer.

Survivors On Franconia.

ON BOARD STEAMER FRANCONIA, via Sable Island, N.S., May 6.—Those on board the Franconia are: James Drehan, wireless operator; Antone Elas, carpenter; Ivar Iversen, boatswain's mate; Ungus Prinze, Jens Jensen, A. Abelnik, quartermaster; Gustav Schriborm, donkeyman; Thos. Conner, Juri Lei and Arthur Brantik, able seamen; Antony Cordones and Bennett Rother, firemen, and Frank Wedskind, messroom steward.

The Columbian caught fire Sunday night, when about 300 miles south of Cape Race. A series of violent explosions followed almost immediately. Captain McDonald gave orders to the wireless operator, James Drehan, to send out calls for assistance, but one of the explosions put the wireless apparatus out of commission, cutting off the Columbian from communication with nearby ocean liners which might have gone to the rescue.

With the vessel belching flames and torn by the explosions, it soon became evident that the crew could do nothing to control the fire, and the order to abandon ship was given.

The men left the Columbian in two boats. Chief Steward Matthews was in charge of the first. This boat put away from the steamer and lay to for a time, but in the dense smoke which surrounded the burning vessel the other boat was not visible, and the steward's boat finally drifted far from the scene.

Fishermen Are Rescued.

LIVERPOOL, N.S., May 6. — The Gloucester fishing schooner Jorgina, Captain Rose, arrived here yesterday and reports having picked up in a gale of wind six men and their dories off the French fishing vessel La Normande of St. Pierre, on Bank Quero, May 2. The captain states that half an hour longer and the men would have all perished. The rescued men were sent to the French consul at Halifax.

Rector at Omemee.

Rev. Mr. James of Craighurst, will succeed Rev. H. Earle, at Omemee Anglican charge, at the end of the month.

NO CANTEEN AT PETAWAWA

Kingston, May 6.—There will be no canteen at Petawawa this year. This official announcement was made this morning, and will be of no little interest to those in military circles. It was thought that there would be a permanent corps canteen there until the volunteers went there, but such is not the case. The soldiers will have to do without their "booze" until they return.

PETERBORO STUDENTS AT McMASTER

In the examination results at McMaster University, announced today, appears the name of Mr. A. Haddon, B.A., of Peterboro, as well up at the head of the list, having been successful in theology.

Mr. C. J. Baker, son of Dr. Baker, of East City, heads the list of successful first year men in Arts, and the name of Mr. R. J. Lang, a member of Murray Street Church, appears among the list of second year men.

Miss Alice Gregory, of Lakefield, made a splendid showing in second year Arts.

This is a worthy representation from Peterborough.

RIFLE RANGE TO OPEN SATURDAY

Notice is Contained in Orders Read at Weekly Drill.

Over three hundred men attended the weekly parade of the 57th Rangers last evening, the occasion being their weekly march out and drill.

The orders for the week are:—

Leave of absence has been granted from parade to Major Bennett, Captain Hounsell and Lt. Hall.

Lt. Leck is transferred to D. Company.

The regimental rifle range will be opened on Saturday, May 9th., for the season. Busses will leave the Armouries to convey the men to the ranges on Saturdays and Thursdays at 1.30.

Score cards will be provided to all men requiring the same.

All recruit recommendation forms for men enlisted in the 1914 Drill season should be forwarded to the Orderly room at the conclusion of the drill. Men may be sworn in later, but the forms must be returned immediately.

The commanding officer has been pleased to make the following promotions.

C. Co.—To be Lance Sergt., Corp. Nicholls.

To be Corp., Pte. Hartshorne, vice Corp. Wm. Nome, left limits.

One of the features of the evening was to have been the presenting of a long service medal to Capt. Hounsell, but he was absent and the presentation was postponed.

AN IMPROVEMENT.

The Quaker Oats Company have added to the appearance of their buildings by making the frontage on the south side of Hunter Street into a lawn, which surrounds the watch house of the genial Johnnie Cronin.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1914

CANADA BENEFITS.

THE PREFERENTIAL AGREEMENT between Canada and the British West India Colonies came into force on June 2nd, 1913. The advantages which Canada derives from this agreement are due to the work of the Honorable Geo. E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Borden Cabinet. Some idea of the advantage coming to Canada under this agreement, may be derived from the imports of flour into British Guiana during the calendar year 1913. The value of imports from Canada January 1st to June 1st, before the preference came into force, was $106, 769, while the value since the preference, June 2nd to December 31st reached the sum of $266.828. It is noteworthy that for the same time the imports from the United States were $212,716 for the first period and $151,339 for the second period, and the imports from other countries were $2,869 and for the second period $205.00. The large decreases from the United States and from other countries thus show the substantial benefit Canada is deriving from this trade agreement. Imports from Canada for the year ending March 31st, 1914, are expected to make an even better showing. The general belief is that the flour trade of British Guiana will belong practically to the merchants of Canada very shortly.

BOOKS BEFORE THEIR TIME.

WE NOTICE that the Westminster Gazette publishes a short criticism of a new life of Lloyd George, the forth volume of which contains some of his most remarkable speeches. Such books usually fall short to a lamentable degree of being proper estimates of their subject. The events are too close and too new to the writer to be placed in their proper historical relation. The author necessarily lacks a sufficient historical perspective from which to estimate the events with a reasonable degree of accuracy. The writer resembles a man being so close to a picture that he sees only the central figure, the other details, giving it setting, and beauty, are beyond the range of vision. Such a book is a kind of written silhouette. Take Sir John Willison's account of Sir Wilfrid Laurier written when he was editor of The Globe. If he were writing that biography now it would be different and no doubt a biography written some years after Sir Wilfrid's death would be different from the other two. Such books cannot be recommended. The speeches of the fourth volume of the Lloyd George biography are a good excuse for its publication but certainly did not require an account of his life.

PROSPEROUS CANADA.

THE GRITS will have a hard time preaching blue-ruin when the trade returns show how prosperous Canada is. The complete trade figures for the fiscal year ending March 31st last show a total of $1,112,562,107, or an increase of forty-four millions over the previous year. The exports totalled 478 millions as against 393 millions the year before. Agricultural products were 198 millions—an increase of forty-eight millions. The export of manufacturers showed an increase of fourteen millions, and of annual produce eight millions and a half. The imports fell off from 675 millions to 633 millions. The dutiable imports dropped from 441 millions to 410 millions, and the duty collected was 107 millions as against 115 millions. The prospect is for increased custom's revenue again later in the year.

WHEAT BRAN FROM ENGLAND.

THE WEEKLY REPORT on Trade and Commerce contains an item of interest to wheat growers in regard to the United States tariff. The United States Treasury, under date of April the 10th, 1914, gives the following decision as to whether wheat bran, the product of Canadian wheat ground in England, is free of United States duty under Tariff 644 of the Tariff Act of October 3, 1913. While paragraph 644 of the Tariff Act provides that the product of wheat shall be subject to duty if imported directly or indirectly from a country, dependency, or other subdivision of government which imposes a duty on wheat, wheat flour, or semolina imported from the United States, the department is of the opinion that this provision has no application to the product of wheat manufactured in a country which does not impose a duty upon wheat, wheat flour, or semolina imported from the United States, and as the United Kingdom is listed as a country which does not impose a duty on the articles mentioned imported from the United States, it follows that wheat bran produced from wheat ground in England is entitled to admission free of duty under paragraph 644, even though the product of wheat grown in Canada.

WHERE DO CANADIAN SARDINES GO?

CANADA IS SUPPOSED to have a sardine industry, yet for some unexplained reason, Canadian sardines are not seen on the British markets. The Fish Traders' Gazette states:—

> 'It is a curious fact that although this country is one of the largest importers of sardines, the American (by which is meant the United States and Canada) article is apparently never seen on our markets. Yet our imports of tinned sprats, as 'sardines,' from Norway are large and increasing. In 1912 the value of the sardines (real and fictitious) which we imported was £744,777, and the value of the sprats from Norway was almost half of this, viz., £365,781; in 1905 the value was only £98,812. Now it must be said that there is (according to the best authorities) a difference in the flavour of the true sardine compared with either the sprat or the young herring; but at the same time the process of preparation makes them in all essentials comparable, both dietetically and from the nutritive point of view, provided that the fish are selected at the proper season.'

EDITORIAL NOTES.

DR. HASTINGS, M.H.O., of Toronto, is going to banish the mosquito. While such a policy would be popular in the West we might suggest it as an alternative to Ontario Liberals.

RECENTLY THE TREASURY has published a return of the national revenue and expenditure for the quarter and year ended March 31, 1914. The figures show that the Chancellor of the Exchequer's estimate of the year's revenue has been exceeded by £3,417,897, and that in place of an anticipated surplus of £185,000 he is left with a balance to the good of £749,928. The exchequer balance is £10,434,519, as against £6,329,160 at the commencement of the year. The revenue for the twelve months reached the enormous sum of £198,242,897 and the expenditure £197,492,969.

THE TOP PRICE for shorthorn bulls paid by a well-known Argentine exporter was 710 gs. for a stately animal known as Redgorton Brutus, and prices of from 500 gs. to 600 gs. are quite usual. A bull calf, likely to be a good settler on an Argentine ranch, has been bought at 500 gs. These Scotch and English animals sell for huge figures at Buenos Ayres, when they are changing hands. As much as £6,000 has been paid for a champion bull. Year by year this important trade of selling absolutely the best cattle for rearing purposes to the South American ranches has grown. Very large sums of money are expended by the cattle 'kings' and agents in Argentine to England, Scotland and Ireland. Keen competition has raised the values to a wonderful extent.

THERE ARE 700 acres on the Ontario Agricultural College farm with a million dollar plant and plans are under way to enlarge and increase the number of buildings. The actual number of students in the long course has been doubled in the last six years, and the accommodation is now over-taxed. The College is recognized as the leading institution of its kind throughout Canada.

WITH REFERENCE TO the agricultural tour of South African farmers, which is to take place this year, fifty farmers who have been chosen by the agricultural unions of the previous provinces of the Cape, the Transvaal, Natal, Orange Free State, and Rhodesia, will leave South Africa on June 6. They will make a tour in England, where they will be entertained by agricultural associations. Thereafter they will proceed to Scotland, where they will be given a civic welcome by the lord provost and magistrates of the city of Edinburgh. They will then cross over to Holland, where they will be entertained by the Dutch Government. The delegates will then proceed to Canada and the United States. They will spend a month in Canada and a month to six weeks in the United States. General Louis Botha, Prime Minister of United South Africa, is patron of the tour.

Spring.

By Beatrice Redpath.

In deepest woods there is a vernal stir,
While earth is quickened with the tender green;
Blue waters rend their crystal sepulchre
And there is life where death like sleep hath been.

Bird voices haunt the golden lighted days,
And snowdrops glimmer whitely 'mid the grass,
While in the twilight of the hidden ways
All greenly veiled Persephone doth pass.

—In The Canadian Magazine for May.

Sir Richard's Honour.

Out in British Columbia they are said to take their politics more seriously than do the Eastern Canadians, but frequently there is a gleam of good-natured humour and badinage in the debates of the British Columbia House. Not long ago Sir Richard McBride, the premier of the province, went south and was the guest of a California university, which honoured him with the degree of Doctor of Laws. He returned, took his seat in the House, and the news of his new degree soon became noised abroad in the corridors. It was not long until a Labour member of the Legislature arose and gravely drew the attention of the M.L.A.'s to a report of the honour done the premier in a foreign land. "I congratulate Sir Richard," he said, "for it cannot be gainsaid that he well deserves the degree. He has doctored more laws than any other man in this province!" And even Sir Richard smiled.

Where Nature Awakens.

Toronto Globe.

Every frail response to the grand inspiration of the climbing sun has a charm of its own. The white star of the blood-root rises out of the folded and fleshy leaf of delicate pattern that afforded protection while it was pushing its way up through the black earth and withered leaves, a dainty assurance that the red blood of life again courses in its long-slumbering roots. Like the odor of a broken twig of yellow birch or sassafras, these spangles of white seem varied manifestations of the joy of a universal awakening. The small, lobed, tubular flowers of the trailing arbutus are more coy among the drying forest refuse. Their oval and evergreen leaves have hidden comfortably under the snow, and now try to conceal the faintly-perfumed flowers, whose tints of pink are as subtle as the odor that seems the sweet breathing of spring.

Hepaticas attest the renewal of life with arresting stars of white or the palest of pinks and blues. The three-lobed leaves that survived through the winter are already settling to mingle with the decay of the previous year, but the little, furry stems have uncoiled and are holding up their timidly inviting flowers. Trilliums are up early, and waiting a warmer invitation to unfold their fragile, white petals, and even the coarse mandrake, with damply folded leaves, has made its way out to the light. There is life everywhere—bright, vivid, alert, restless, pulsating life. Crows caw and chuckle from the tall elms where the opened flower buds are thickening the tracery of the twigs. A thrush darts past and is hidden by the low, close cedars. And all over the littered slopes among the coarse refuse of winter the world's ancient heritage of life is bursting into beauty and perfume in response to the northward circling of the orb of day.

THE DRY NAVY

By Walt Mason

John Barleycorn feels tired, by gravy! They've fired Old Red Eye from the navy, and now the brave old salt will fill himself with cistern water when he goes forth to scenes of slaughter, and not depend on malt. Our ships go cruising here and yonder, and wheresoever they may wander, in tempest, calm or fog, on gunboat, battleship and clipper the men will hit the old tin dipper, and never think of grog. The captain, commodore and purser all know that forty-rod is worser than smallpox or the mumps, but custom kept the store room loaded with that old stuff which has corroded the works of countless chumps. The officers, a gent supposes, will all be joyous when their noses are bleached of crimson stains; they'll fight the country's battles better when jugs and bottles cease to fetter their faculties and brains. We're all swelled up about our navy, we all would take our Alfred Davy that it's the best yet born; and we're the prouder now than ever since it's determined it will sever the bonds of Barleycorn. Old Booze, that thing in sin grown hoary, will never bring a country glory—'twill sooner bring eclipse; from admiral clear down to cornet, the naval officers should scorn it, and shoo it from their ships.

ON DOGS

I wonder if you have ever owned a dog: a taggy, sad-eyed, droop-tailed mongrel that stuck close to you and shared your leetle triumphs and big troubles with you?

I reckon a feller who has never owned a dog has missed a considerable lot wuth havin' outin' life. One kin be a mighty no-count piece of humanity in the eyes of his feller-men but to his dog he's the one, big, best everythin' in the world.

ISN'T HE A GRAND MAN

I reckon you can't measure a dog's devotion to his master any more than you kin measure other things as have got the great scientists of the globe guessin'. One thing I know, though, is this, any man who kin live up to what his dog thinks he is, is a good man; and don't you forget it.

Birthdays of Note

WEDNESDAY, MAY SIXTH

This is the natal day of Lt.-Col. Hugh Clark, M.P., who has represented North Bruce in the House of Commons since the last Dominion election. He was born forty-seven years ago near Kincardine and has spent most of his life editing the Review in that town. His chief title to fame is probably the extreme facility with which he can utter puns and other witticisms. In appearance, grave as a judge, his play of humor is all the more effective and in company with a crowd of boon companions he becomes inimitable. One night, when he was a member of the Ontario Legislature and was visiting the Hon. W. J. Hanna in Sarnia, he and the Provincial Secretary were walking along the street, and noticed the window of a bank building standing wide open. Mr. Hanna expressed some anxiety. "Now I wonder why that window is open?" said he. "I suppose," drawled the Colonel with equal seriousness, "it must be to let the drafts in." This is a fair sample of the kind of jest that the member for North Bruce is constantly getting off.

Also born to-day:—

Tenders for Islands in the Kawartha Lakes.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and marked on the envelope "Tender for Kawartha Islands," will be received by this Department up to noon of Wednesday, the 3rd day of June, 1914, for the purchase of certain islands in the Otonabee River and its lakes (Kawartha Lakes) in the townships of Dummer, Burleigh, Harvey, Smith and Ennismore, in the County of Peterborough, in the province of Ontario, tenders to be for each island or portion of island separately, and to state the amount each person tendering is prepared to pay in cash for the island or portion of island.

A deposit of ten per cent. of the amount of the tender, in cash, or accepted cheque on any chartered bank to accompany the same, the balance to be paid within ten days after notification of acceptance of tender.

The islands in question are situate in what is known as the famous Kawartha Lakes, in the County of Peterborough, and are highly desirable for summer residences. These islands are easily reached from Lakefield, which is connected by rail with Peterborough.

Lists of islands and plans may be obtained upon application to the undersigned.

The islands will be sold subject to a reserved price, and the highest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted.

The unauthorized insertion of this advertisement will not be paid for.

COWARDICE COURT
BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

"I am not so sure of that. Trust a woman to find a place where she can't ruin her hat. My word for it, Cecil, she's found a safe roost. I say, by Jove!" The duke was staring more intently than ever at the windows far above. "I have it! Isn't it rather odd that a house should be lighted so brilliantly at this hour of night?"

"Demmed servants forgot to put out the lamps," groaned Bazelhurst without interest.

"Nonsense! I tell you what—some one has roused the house and asked shelter from the storm. Now, who could that be but Penelope?"

"By Jove, you're a ripping clever ass, after all, Barminster—a regular Sherlock Holmes. That's just it. She's up there where the windows are. Come on. It's easy sailing now," cried his lordship, but the duke restrained him.

"Don't rush off like a fool. Whose house is it?"

"How the devil do I know? This is Shaw's land, and he hasn't been especially cordial about"—

"Aha! See what I mean? Shaw's land, to be sure. Well, hang your stupidity, don't you know we're looking at Shaw's house this very instant? He lives there and she's arrived, dem it all. She's up there with him—dry clothes, hot drinks and all that, and we're out here catching pneumonia. Fine, isn't it?"

"Gad! You're right! She's with that confounded villain. My God, what's to become of her?" groaned Lord Cecil, sitting down suddenly and covering his face with his hands.

"We must rescue her!" shouted the duke. "Brace up, Cecil! Don't be a baby. We'll storm the place."

"Not in zis rain!" cried the count.

"You stay in the shade and hold the horses, that's what you do," said the duke scornfully.

After many minutes there came a break in the violence of the storm and preparations were at once made for the climb up the hill. Deveaux was to remain behind in charge of the horses. With their bridle reins in his hands he cheerfully maintained this position of trust, securely sheltered from the full force of the elements. Right bravely did the duke and his lordship venture forth into the spattering rain. They had gone no more than three rods up the path when they were brought to a halt by the sounds of a prodigious struggle behind them. There was a great trampling of horses' hoofs, accompanied by the frantic shouts of the count.

"I cannot hold zem! Mon Dieu! Zey are mad! Ho! ho! Help!"

"Hold to 'em!" shouted Lord Cecil.

"Help!" shouted the count, at the same moment releasing his grip on the reins. Away tore the horses, kicking great chunks of mud over him as he tumbled aimlessly into the underbrush. Down the road clattered the animals, leaving the trio marooned in the wilderness. Groaning and half dead, the unfortunate count was dragged from the brush by his furious companions. What the duke said to him was sufficient without being repeated, here or elsewhere. The count challenged him as they all resumed the march up the hill to visit the house with the lighted windows.

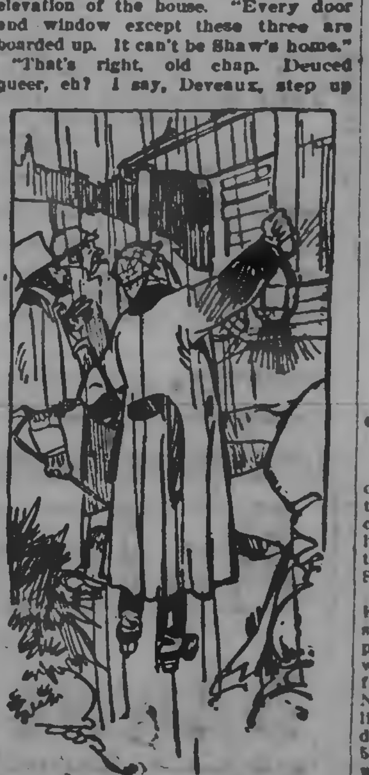
"Here is my card, m'sieur," he grated furiously.

"Demme, I know you!" roared the duke. "Keep your card, and we'll send it in to announce our arrival to Shaw."

In due course of time, after many slips and falls, they reached the front yard of the house on the hillside. It was still raining lightly. The thunder and lightning were crashing away noisily farther up the valley. Cautiously they approached through the weeds and brush.

"By Jove!" exclaimed his lordship, coming to a standstill. He turned the light of his lantern toward the front elevation of the house. "Every door and window except these three are boarded up. It can't be Shaw's home."

"That's right, old chap. Deuced queer, eh? I say, Deveaux, step up and pound on the door. You've got a card, you know."



"I say, Deveaux, step up and pound on the door."

"Que diable!" exclaimed the count, sinking into the background.

"We might reconnoiter a bit," said Bazelhurst. "Have a look at the rear, you know."

Around the corner of the house they trailed, finally bringing up at the back steps. The windows were not only dark, but boarded up. While they stood there amazed and uncertain, the rain came down again in torrents, worse than before if possible. They scampered for cover, plunging three abreast beneath the same steps that had sheltered Penelope and Shaw such a short time before.

"Ouch! Get off my foot!" roared the duke.

"Zounds! Who are you punching demme! Hullo! What's this? A door and open, as I live!" The trio entered the cellar door without ceremony. "Thank God, we're out of the rain at least!"

It was not until they had explored the basement and found it utterly without signs of human occupancy that the truth of the situation began to dawn upon them. Barminster's face was white, and his voice shook as he ventured the horrid speculation:

"The good Lord save us—it's that demmed haunted house I'es was talking about!"

"But ze lights?" queried the count.

"Ghosts!"

"Let's get out of this place," said Lord Bazelhurst, moving toward the door. "It's that beastly Ilenwood house. They say he comes back and murders her every night or so."

"Mon Dieu!"

"Penelope isn't here. Let's move on," agreed the duke readily. But even fear of the supernatural was not strong enough to drive them out into the blinding storm. "I say, look ahead, there's Shaw's place!"

Peering through the door they saw for the first time the many lights in Shaw's windows, scarce a quarter of a mile away. For a long time they stood and gazed at the distant windows. Dejectedly they sat down, backs to the wall and waited for the storm to spend its fury. Wet, cold and tired, they finally dozed. It was Lord Cecil who first saw the signs of dawn. The rain storm had come to a mysterious end, but a heavy fog in its stead loomed up. He aroused his companions and with many groans of anguish they prepared to venture forth into the white wall beyond.

Just as they were taking a last look about the wretched cellar something happened that would have brought terror to the stoutest heart. A wild, appalling shriek came from somewhere above, the cry of a mortal soul in agony.

The next instant three human forms shot through the narrow door and out into the fog, hair on end, eyes bulging, but sightless; legs traveling like the wind and as purposeless. It mattered not that the way was hidden; it mattered less that weeds, brush and stumps lurked in ambush for unwary feet. They fled into the foggy dangers without a thought of what lay before them, only of what stalked behind them.

Upstairs Randolph Shaw lay back against the wall and shook with laughter. Penelope's convulsed face was glued to the kitchen window, her eyes peering into the fog beyond. Shadowy figures leaped into the white mantle; the crash of brush came back to her ears, and then, like the barking of a dog, there arose from the mystic gray the fast diminishing cry:

"Help! Help! Help!" Growing fainter and sharper, the cry at last was lost in the phantom desert.

They stood at the window and watched the fog lift, gray and forbidding, until the trees and road were discernible. Then arm in arm they set forth across the wet way toward Shaw's cottage.

"Poor Cecil!" she sighed. "It was cruel of you." In the roadway they found a hat which she at once identified as the count's. Farther on there was a carriage lamp and later a mackintosh, which had been cast aside as an impediment. "Oh, it was cruel!" She smiled, however, in retrospection.

"If I were only sure that nothing serious had happened to Cecil," she murmured anxiously.

"I'm sorry, dear, for that screech of mine," he apologized.

Suddenly he started and gazed intently in the direction of the haunted house. A man—a sorry figure—was slowly, painfully approaching from the edge of the wood scarce a hundred yards away. In his hand he carried a stick to which was attached a white cloth—doubtless a handkerchief. He was hatless and limped perceptibly.

"It's Cecil!" whispered Penelope in horror struck tones. "Good heaven, Randolph, go to him! He is hurt."

PAIN OF LUMBAGO

Cured by Austrian Doctor's Prescription.

Dr. Stohr, the famous specialist of Vienna, discovered a prescription that has been endorsed by the medical profession the world over, as a harmless and quick relief for those terrible afflictions Lumbago and Sciatica.

This unfailing remedy is called Kephaldol, and has proved to thousands that in cases of severe nervous pain, no matter what the cause, it will afford quick relief. Sufferers from Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Nervous Headache, etc., will find relief with the first tablet. If you find difficulty in obtaining locally, send 50c. direct to the manufacturers, who will immediately forward you a large tube. Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

A Cricketer's Joke.

The curate who startled his congregation by remarking "Here endeth the first innings" would have found a kindred spirit in the organist officiating at Marlborough, England, when Mr. A. G. Bradley was at school there. "Not the least pleasing of the stories of Marlborough," writes Mr. Bradley, "are those which relate to the section of hymns by the school organist for evening services in the chapel attended as a rule by members of visiting teams. W. G. Grace played in a match at Marlborough in the plenitude of his glory and was bowled by a schoolboy's first ball. Whereupon the choir was inspired to sing a song of praise containing the boastfully significant line, 'The scanty triumphs Grace has won'."

Origin of "Bonfire."

Stow, referring to the "bonefiers" which the citizens of London were wont to make on the streets on "the vigiles of festiuall dayes and on the same festiuall dayes in the euening after the sunne setting every man bestowing wood or labor towards them" and which were an occasion of feasting and merriment, says that "these were called bonefiers as well of good amitie amongst neighbors, that, being before at controuersie, were there by the labors of others, reconciled, and made of bitter enemies, louing friendes, as also for the vertue that a great fire hath to purge the infection of the ayre." — London Globe.

Actors and Long Hair.

A theory concerning the reason why old-fashioned members of the theatrical profession used to favor the practice of wearing flowing locks is advanced by Mr. Henry Ainley. In the course of a speech at the Actors' Benevolent Fund dinner he said he was informed that in the dark ages if actors committed any grievous offense they were pierced through the lobe of the ear. From that time, he thought, they began to wear their hair long.—London Standard.

His Growl.

"A man ought to know when to say no."

"You know when to say no, all right."

"Thank you; I think I do."

"Yes, you said no when you felt sure I would ask you again, and you said yes when you saw me beginning to weaken."

THE LATEST FROM DAME FASHION

OF COTTON COATING.

The coat for general utility summer wear is essential in almost all climates and here is a model that is the height of fashion in looseness and straightness of cut and line and in the low drooping belt line at the back. These little coats are often in the brightest of colors, Bermuda pink, cactus green or yellow, and either of light wool or of some of the cotton coatings that are now so fashionable.

QUEER POSTAL PARCELS.

People and Living Animals Accepted In Great Britain.

The British postoffice is one of the most accommodating services in the world. For instance, for the due postage paid it will conduct a person from one address to another in any given city by express messenger.

It will, and occasionally does, send an express messenger to meet a child at one railway station and see it safely across London to another.

In the same way it sometimes conducts strangers round London, the cost being the ordinary mileage fee, plus the fare of a conveyance if a cab or omnibus is taken.

Living animals are also accepted for express delivery, if they are confined in a suitable receptacle, or, in the case of big dogs, if they are provided with collar and chain.

Nearly any package can be dispatched by mail.

The postoffice, however, is rarely required to perform special services for living things. They fall more frequently to the District Messenger Service.

"Just now, for example," Mr. Arthur Lord, the general manager of the District Messenger Company, informed a newspaper representative, "we are busy meeting children arriving in London from school. We meet them at the station, and in some cases give them some lunch or tea, then show them round the town, and see them safely off home from another station. "The same system applies to dogs and cats, especially to prize cats, which are sent up to London in crates or hampers. I remember that one lady used to write each time. 'Please see that the cat does not get in any draughts!'

"We have also taken an elephant, and at another time a donkey, across London."

Recalling other services that can be, and occasionally have been, performed by district messengers, Mr. Lord pictured a boy in neat blue uniform wheeling a perambulator and doing his best to amuse the baby, whilst its mother and the servant had to be away from home.

One messenger delivered a collie dog to the Sultan of Turkey in Constantinople; many, like Jaggers, have made journeys to America and other parts of the world with urgent messages; and some have been required to sit up in the front seat of a motorcar and to act as guide in the London streets to chauffeurs up from the country.

More astonishing services still that have been rendered are the following:

Taking a bottle of medicine to Aix-les-Bains.

Going to Paris to pay a gentleman's bills.

Buying penny toys for a foreign potentate.

Sitting up with sick persons.

Taking charge for a whole night of a lunatic.

Fielding tennis balls for the Duke of Saxe-Coburg.

Taking a young lady to and from school.

And taking dogs out for walks.

To Stop Street Spitting.

MONTREAL, May 5—The spitters, park disturbers and loafers in future will get small comfort in the local recorder's court. A number of offenders yesterday were all fined. "Montreal is notorious for spitting," said Recorder Semple. "It is quite impossible for ladies to walk on the streets in some parts of the town without being subjected to serious annoyance from this habit, and the thing must be stopped." Five dollars and costs is the preliminary stopping price.

Patients Ate Prize Eggs.

A tragedy from a chicken fanciers' viewpoint occurred in London, Ont., recently. A couple of cases of eggs from prize egg-laying pens at the Ontario Agricultural College were shipped to Hon. Adam Beck, care of London Hospital. The eggs were intended for hatching purposes at the Byron Sanatorium poultry yards and were valued at a high figure. Unfortunately the eggs were delivered at Victoria Hospital. Supt. Heard was informed of the arrival of the two cases and supposing that they were a gift from Mr. Beck, had them sent to the hospital kitchen, where in due time they found their way to the patients, who are said not to have noticed any marked difference in the quality of the eggs.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

Special Correspondence.

Norwood, May 6.—Mr. Lloyd Duffield, of Norwood, visited acquaintances in Campbellford on Saturday and Sunday fo last week.

Mr. Claude Riley, of Havelock, visited friends in town on Snday last.

On the 1st of May an insane man by the name of Chiles, of Peterboro, escaped from friends between Havelock and Norwood, and was captured by Constable Puffer, along with a little aid, just above the C. P. R. station and put in the cells. In the evening friends came to let him out, and the man managed to escape, scaring several youths who were so curious as to stand around to see the proceedings.

On Sunday of last week Messrs. Cecil Watson and Robert Cross made a short trip to Campbellford.

Mr. Stanley Laing visited friends in Campbellford on Sunday.

Mr. Earl Ivey, of town, visited his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George Ivey, of Campbellford, over Sunday.

Mr. James Livingston, of town, made a short visit to Campbellford one day last week.

The sports of town are busily engaged in their spare hours in practicing lacrosse for their game on the 25th. It is expected that by the aid of Herbert Stevenson and Rev. Father Kelly, that the young lads will secure a thorough training. Lacrosse is taking well in town, and all sticks that are shipped in are promptly sold. It is expected that the High Schools will get out a very respectable team to play neighboring school teams.

The large conspicuous posters for the celebration of Victoria Day, which is to be held on the 25th. are now out and are attracting the eyes of a good many. Along with the Callithumpian parade in the morning, and lacrosse match in the afternoon, there will be a baseball match, and all kinds of athletic sports in the afternoon. In the evening the committee are giving a splendid concert in the hall, which is expected to be followed by a short dance.

The concert which was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday night of last week proved to be a great success. The company was encouraged by a full hall, and therefore gave their best entertainment.

On Wednesday evening there will be a meeting of the cricket club to arrange for the season's playing. It is expected that there will be still some enthusiasm left for this season. Games will be arranged with Campbellford and Warkworth.

Rev. Mr. Cree, formerly of the Presbyterian Church, Norwood, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Finley in town.

FARM LABOR

Two lone immigrants arrived here last evening and were soon placed with farmers by Immigration Agent Might. To-day, Mr. Might stated that a large party was expected this week and that farmers would be able to overcome part of the labor stringency by the means of this party.

LAID AT REST

The funeral of the late Mrs. Timothy O'Connell was held this morning to St. Peter's Cathedral and Cemetery, Rev. Father Cote officiating at the Cathedral and Rev. Dean McColl at the grave.

Many friends attended the obsequies. The late Mrs. O'Connell had made many friends, and very deep regret is felt at her passing.

Mourners from a distance were her son, Mr. T. O'Connell, and wife, of Rochester, and her daughter, Mrs. McMahon, of Merrickville.

RESIGNATION OF REV. DR. SULLIVAN

Montreal, May 6.—Rev. Joseph Sullivan, D.D., pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church, and formerly of Brantford, Ont., has resigned on account of ill health. He has been much affected by the deaths within the past two years of his wife and son.

FOR PLAY GROUNDS AND BATHING PLACES

The Playground and Public Bathing Committee will hold a meeting some time this week. Ald. Stratton and Ald. Johnston, chairman of the Committees, will report on the suitable sites for a bathing place and public playgrounds in each ward of the city.

The bathing places will likely be at Inverlea Park Jackson's Park and the Little Lake along by Crescent Street.

GYPSIES.

Gypsies from Lindsay arrived in the city this afternoon. Chief Thompson, has received a wire from the Immigration Officer at Lindsay to hold them until he arrives. The local detective force was dispatched to the camp this afternoon on an investigation trip.

St. John's Church.

Instead of the regular mid-week service to-night at St. John's Church, there will be a communicants' service at 8 o'clock.

TANGLED RELATIONS AT CHEMONG INDIAN RESERVE

Situation is Explained in County Police Court, When Geo. Taylor is Fined for Drunkenness in Local Option Territory

George Taylor, a resident of the Chemong Indian reserve faced Magistrate Edmison this morning on the charge of being drunk and disorderly on May 1st in a local option district, namely the Township of Smith. Taylor pleaded guilty and was assessed $20.00 and costs, amounting to $29.81, which he paid forthwith.

This case of Taylor brings to light a great deal of discord and ill-feeling that has been prevalent among the Indians at Chemong. Away back in the early forties, a white man, bearing the name of George Taylor, took to himself a bride of Scotch birth and settled among the Indians at the Scugog reserve. He lived the life of an Indian, and his children, though white, grew up among other Indians, and formed characters of a similar nature. The Taylors grew to young manhood, and then trouble began. Missionaries who sought the recovery of souls in that secluded district, found this family of whites living with and among the Indians and also receiving the money and privileges granted the once rulers of this continent. These missionaries believing that the presence of white people among their wayward band would assist them in their work, raised no objection to them being there.

As of old, the whites and Indians themselves could not get along very well, with the result that when the Taylors became of sufficient number they attempted to lessen the powers of the Indian Council. Naturally, the Indians became suspicious, and holding a secret meeting decided that the Taylors had no right to live with them, so they ordered them off the reserve. The complete band, numbering between twelve and fifteen, were forced to quit their land, and it was sold by the Indians and the money used to pay several debts which the Taylors had contracted.

Settled in Chemong.

This band of whites had grown accustomed to Indian ways and manners, and naturally they could not seek the cities, so they wandered around till they finally settled at Chemong. There they settled down and once again formed part of the Indian tribe. The latter were at that time uneducated and unacquainted with the laws of the country, so it was very easy for the Taylors to secure all the rights they wished. George Taylor, a son of George Taylor, senior, married a white woman, and took her to the Chemong Reserve, and has lived there ever since.

The children of George Taylor, Jr., white by birth but Indian by nature are now men and women at Chemong. They have the majority and elect whom they wish to get the offices. Of late, however, the Indians of Chemong have gained knowledge of laws governing their life. Had George Taylor been a man of temperate habits and favorable disposition, all would have been well, but he was the reverse, it is said. Several times he has come to the Indian village decidedly the worse of strong drink, but as his son is constable, and the other members in the tribe, friends of his, he has been allowed to keep it up. His appearance in Court has, as the records show, been a very common occurrence, yet the fines imposed have had very little effect on him. The Magistrate was always of the opinion that he was an Indian, and was greatly surprised this morning when he learned otherwise.

Chief Objected.

This sort of conduct on the part of Taylor has been going on for some time, and in 1909 their Chief Joseph Whetung applied to the Department of the Interior for advice, but he was treated in a very abrupt manner. He sent a letter to the Chief at Scugog and found the history of the Taylors, which was as stated above. The Indian Constable, John Jacobs, has done his best to keep the tribe at Chemong in peace, but he finds that the Taylor faction is continually causing trouble. He arrested George Taylor on May 1st, but is seeking some means whereby the complete Taylor gang might be sent off the reserve and cease obtaining the annual grants for Indians, while they are really white men.

Magistrate Edmison advised that the Federal member for this constituency, Mr. J. H. Burnham, be consulted, and undoubtedly something would be done. In explaining his platform before His Worship this morning, Mr. Jacobs spoke not only for himself, but for the younger element on their reserve. They don't want members of their tribe coming home the worse of liquor for it sets a bad example, and then their reserve is brought into disgrace by the appearance in police court of men who have no right to live on the reserve. He claimed that the Indians were utterly ignored by the Department of the Interior, and when they complained, it resulted in practically no change. He wants justice and will not have whites living as Indians and holding the controlling reigns.

PERMANENT HIGHWAYS IN PETERBORO COUNTY

County Council is Now in Position to Deal With Important Question as Highway Commission Has Reported

When the County Council meets at its June session one of the important questions on the agenda will be concerning permanent county highways. The provincial government has received the report of its highway commission, which recommends that the government aid in the construction and maintenance of county roads, providing the cities and counties pay a certain percentage of the cost. As the roads are a direct benefit to the cities they are included in the cost. At present there are no permanent highways in Peterborough County, but the councillors are expected to go on record as favoring the government scheme. The government will issue grants to the counties after receiving a certified statement of the expenditures.

RUNAWAY

L. Florence is Seriously Injured

On Charlotte Street this afternoon a runaway team which started from the C. P. R. freight sheds, crashed into a buggy, occupied by L. Florence, a furniture dealer, on Charlotte Street, with the result that Florence was rather seriously injured.

He was carried into his store and received attention from doctors, after which he was conveyed to the hospital in Comstock's ambulance.

The crowd stopped the horses. The buggy was demolished.

TOOK HONORS

In the list published to-day of the successful students who wrote on the annual examinations of applied science and engineering at the University of Toronto, Peterboro boys were prominent. W. T. Hall passed with honors his second year in mining engineering, J. H. Eastwood passed his second year in civil engineering with honors, while in the supplemental examinations, W. H. Bonus was successful in optics.

TWO DEMONSTRATIONS WITH THE PULMOTOR

The pulmotor which may be purchased from the Canada Sanax Co., of Toronto, will arrive in the city on Friday and an expert operator will accompany the machine and give two demonstrations. One demonstration will be given in the Fire Station for the benefit of the firemen and City Council, while another will be given at Nicholl's Hocpital for the medical men of the city.

ALL OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED BY GUN CLUB

Two Silver Cups Among the List of Prizes for Competitors

SHOOT THURSDAY NIGHT

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Gun Club was held last evening in Mr. A. Hall's office, Simcoe Street. Although there was not a very large attendance, all arrangements were made for the coming season. A most favorable report was received from the secretary as to the good financial standing of the Culb at the present time. Many new members are joining and some good sport is looked forward to during the summer months. Several prizes will be competed for under the same conditions as last year, including the two silver cups presented by Mr. O. E. McGraw of Toronto, and several others by the Dominion Cartridge Co., Peterborough Hardware Company, the Kingan Hardware Company, Morgan Hardware Co., the Club, and probably others. These prizes will be competed for under the following conditions. Open to all members. Each member competing must shoot at 200 birds during the season, from May 1st to August 31st. The regular shoot will be held on the first, third and fourth Thursdays in each month of May, June, July and August. Members to be in the competition must shoot at 50 birds in each month. 25 on the first and 25 on the third Thursday. However, should he be unable to attend one or the other of these shoots, his score out of 25 on the fourth Thursday may be recorded. Any members who wish to shoot on other than the regular shooting days, may do so by applying to any one of the following officers: President, vice president, captain or secretary. The secretary to be advised at all times, who will attend if convenient. Shooting will commence at 6 o'clock sharp on all regular shoots. The first to be held tomorrow evening. This being the opening shoot of the season, all members should attend.

At the election of officers, all the officers of last year were re-elected, as follows:

President—L. Hall.
Vice-President—W. M. Lang.
Captain—H. Cook.
Secretary—C. Wood.

ENTERTAINMENT OF THE DUKE AND PRINCESS PAT.

Address of Welcome to Be Made At Central Park

THE COMMITTEES.

The reception committee, of which Ald. Stratton is chairman, met last evening and practically completed arrangements for the reception of the Duke of Connaught and Princess Patricia, who are to visit this city on June 1. An effort will be made if time will permit, to have the governor-general inspect the school cadets and boy scouts, while a children's chorus will be organized to sing "O Canada" and "God Save the King" during the ceremony at Central Park.

The Governor-General and party will arrive at 10 a.m., and will be met at the station by civic officials and a guard of honor, which he will inspect, after which the guard will be dismissed. A ride around the city, which will halt at Central Park, will follow. At the park an address of welcome will be tendered His Royal Highness, and the County, Government and civic officials and their wives will be received by the Governor-General and Princess Patricia. The party will then be driven to the George Street wharf, where a boat will be in waiting to convey the party over the life lock, after which they will be driven to the station, where they depart at 1 p.m. The following are the committees in charge, Mayor Buller and Ald. Stratton to be members of all committees.

Route of Drive—Ald. Duffus and Johnston, and B. D. Hall.

Reception—Ald. Duffus and Johnston, and Col. Clegg and Major Walker.

Address—Mayor Buller and Ald. Stratton.

Decorations and Platform—Ald. Langford, Dobbin and Saunders.

Boat—Mayor Buller and Ald. Stratton.

Inspector Mowat, of the Public School Board, J. W. Fitzgerald, of the Separate School Board, and Major Walker were appointed to make arrangements for the singing of national airs by the school children.

SORRY TO PART WITH PASTOR

Friends Make Presentation to Rev. John Wood, Who Leaves Indian River

Special Correspondence.

Indian River, May 6th.—The Rev. John Wood and family left yesterday for their new field of work at Hillsburg, Ont. On Friday last a number of the friends of Mr. Wood met at the Baptist Church, when a social time was spent in music, singing, etc. Luncheon was served by the ladies, after which Pastor Wood was asked to the platform, when the following address was read by Margaret Kidd, while Miss F. Mann made the presentation.

The address is as follows:—

Indian River, Ont., May 1st, 1914.

Dear Pastor Wood:

As the time is almost at hand at which you are removing from amongst us, and severing those ties which are made by Pastor and people working harmoniously together, both in church work and as man to man, we desire not to let the opportunity pass of meeting together at this time, and of giving expression in some small measure to those kindly feelings which we entertain towards you.

When we say that we shall miss your guiding counsel, your energetic and whole-souled example, your ever cheerful and optimistic disposition, we believe we not only express our own feelings, but those also of the whole neighborhood, regardless of creed. So we ask you to accept this purse as a very slight token of appreciation and esteem, trusting that you may not forget the people of Indian River, and that you may look back with some degree of pleasure to the time spent amongst us.

Although we deeply regret that our happy relationship is so soon to be severed, yet we believe in God's guilding hand, so we hope and pray that He may abundantly bless you and your family and that He may strengthen, bless and guide you in your new field of labor and each day throughout life.

Signed on behalf of the Church,
Margaret Kidd,
Florence Mann,
J. T. Hall,
Andrew Evans.

Mr. Wood was taken by surprise but made a very neat speech in reply, expressing his and Mrs. Wood's feelings towards the people of Indian River.

Rev. Mr. Wood will be missed by all.

WHERE PROMISES ARE MADE GOOD

Every detail of our workshop, including the mechanical equipment, is planned to make it a model of accuracy and convenience, which from your standpoint means satisfaction and prompt service in the manufacture of new glasses or repairs on old ones.

Whether we originally made your glasses or not, we can immediately duplicate a broken lens, no matter how complicated. If you meet with a misfortune of this kind, simply telephone us and if we haven't your prescription on file, we will send for the broken glasses, and when you call a little later, you will find them waiting for you.

We have all Mr. Browett's Prescriptions, covering the entire time he was in business in this city.

"PEBLO" Quality Lenses are what we use in all our work. They are the Best—we use no others.

MR. J. H. BURNHAM, M. P.

Ottawa Free Press (Liberal).

The most interesting and at the same time least understood character in the House of Commons is J. H. Burnham, of Peterboro. Politically he is a bundle of contradictions, and yet he is ever ready to show cause for the faith that is in him. Mr. Burnham is an out-and-out Conservative, and yet one of the genuine radicals in the House. He is a protectionist, yet by some process of reasoning he is at the same time a single taxer. He is a strong Protestant, yet a champion of bilingualism. He is devoted to the monarchial system of government, but would abolish titles in Canada. He is a practical politician, yet a bit of a sage and philosopher. He has been in the House of Commons for three years, yet has preserved the commonsense viewpoint of the imperial observer.

When Mr. Burnham first came to the House in 1911, he was one of the least noticed of the somewhat unimpressive group of new members who came in on the flood tide. He had a habit of jumping up and asking questions at inopportune times, and this won for him the appellation of "Hair-trigger Burnham." The session went through without his winning particular attention, however, but last year he managed to keep in the spot-light solely by virtue of an intensely interesting personality.

As chairman of the Old Age Pension Committee, he displayed a wide range of knowledge, and incidentally won the unstinted respect of everyone who attended its sessions. Then followed his bill to abolish titles in Canada, a front page publicity scheme that made Col. Hughes and some others green with envy. Nothing came out of that measure, but talk about it had scarcely died away when the member for Peterborough came out with a strong letter championing the French language in the Province of Ontario.

Credited with being an Orangeman, and charged by the opposition with having won his election with the bogey of the Ne Temere decree, Burnham's new role was headed up two columns wide, and "leaded" in every newspaper in the province. His reason for taking the side of the French was characteristic. Cardinal Bourne, of London, England, had planned to convert the British Empire to Roman Catholicism through Canada, he argued, and his first step in that direction was to deprive the French-Canadians of their language.

This done, the majority of English-speaking Catholics over Protestants in Canada would be overwhelming, and the work of converting the English-speaking peoples to Romanism well under way. The Irish priests and bishops who were fighting the French were acting under secret orders from Cardinal Bourne, he contended, and for these reasons he arrayed himself on the side of the French.

Not Afraid of Ladies.

This year he managed to once more introduce his bill to abolish titles, and the arguments he adduced in favor of his proposal won applause from many members on both sides of the House. He has a habit of saying just what he thinks and sometimes he says what the majority of the House think, but are afraid to say. When "Andy" Broder introduced his anti-cigarette measure, at least one-half of the private members looked upon it as a foul bill, but with more than a dozen leading lights of the W.C.T.U. looking down from the Speaker's gallery while the debate on the bill proceeded, they refrained from saying what they thought. Not so with the member from Peterboro. Not only did he characterize it as a fool bill, but he told the ladies up in the gallery that before they came to Parliament asking that a good example be set children in the matter of cigarettes, they should try to reform their mode of dress, and give a lesson in modesty to their daughters.

Is Not Common Place.

When the debate on the proposal to appoint a committee to revise the Elections Act was in progress, Burnham declared that "the cynicism of the Canadian public in regard to election crookedness is so great as to be pathetic," and the applause with which the statement was greeted showed that he was not alone in that belief. He showed himself to be so completely master of the old Elections Act, of the British Act, and to be possessed of such a fund of commonsense in respect to such matters, that the committee invited his suggestions for reform throughout the sittings, and his comments while giving his evidence displayed a keen insight into human nature, and the mind of a philosopher, rather than of a politician.

Burnham is anything but commonplace, and he was capable of originality even on such a hackneyed subject as defending the National Policy. Budget debates are notorious for rehashing of the same old cut and dried arguments. For nearly two weeks the Liberals had gone on shooting away all that was demolishable of the Finance Minister's budget, and the Conservatives responded one after another with the moss-covered arguments in favor of Protection, and the N.P. One evening, when things had become almost intolerable in the press gallery, Burnham got on his feet and produced a brand of new defence for the tariff.

Brand New Defence.

He told of the tremendous strides of Japan, of the awakening of the Dragon Empire, and declared that the real yellow peril was the economic peril of the Orient. China was destined to become the greatest industrial and manufacturing country on the fact of the globe, she would be able to produce far more cheaply than any other nation, and therefore Protection in Canada was absolutely necessary to keep our workingmen from having to compete with the products of the cheap labor of China's millions of inhabitants. He did not think that capital required protection. Neither did the consumer. But employment for Canadians had to be protected. The doctrine may not have been sound, but it had the merit of lifting the debate from the common-place.

Mr. Burnham is a newspaperman, and is the author of one or two books, and a number of pamphlets. His versatility is well illustrated in the fact that last Sunday night he addressed a crowded audience in Ottawa, on the subject, "Can We Be Happy?" He has become personally popular with both Liberals and Conservatives, and few members would be more missed from the Commons.

Mrs. McBride and her daughter, Thelma, of Rochester, are visiting Mrs. P. Parsons and Mrs. Dornan of town.

Messrs. Wm. and Freeman Smith of Mount Pleasant were business visitors to Omemee on Saturday.

Mrs. A. C. Hodgetts and son, Master Bernie, are the guests of her friends at Collingwood.

Miss McCrea has returned from Toronto where she spent the winter.

Mr. Elgin Thompson, who was a former student at the High School, has returned and begun his studies at the Academy of his first love.

Mr. Tom Eaglestone of Mount Pleasant made a business call on Thursday.

Reeve Mulligan made a business trip to Ottawa last week.

Mrs. Dodds of Toronto is the guest of Mrs. White of Sturgeon St.

Cannington has extended a call to the pastor of Omemee Methodist Church, and we understand the Rev. J. F. Chapman has accepted it, the transfer occurring at the end of the conference year. Rev. D. H. Currie, Presbyterian, removed to Cardinal; Rev. H. Earle, Anglican, to Port Credit; and with Rev. J. F. Chapman's removal means the exodus of our whole civic clergy inside six months.

The Rev. Mr. Newton of Toronto preached in the Presbyterian Church and Sabbath morning and at Mount Pleasant in the evening.

Something new in the line of masculine neckwear was seen on Omemee streets last week. It has the celluloid collar beaten; the rare article is a collar of bright tin, made in stand-up style. It is shiny, formidable, indestructible, self-laundered and gives the wearer a unique distinction so much sought after in this age.

Miss Maud Handley of Mount Pleasant was in Omemee, calling on friends, the last of the week.

Arbor Day passed, on Friday, just like any other ordinary school day.

Mr. P. Parsons made a business trip to Peterboro on Saturday.

Mr. D. Mitchell has improved his property on Sturgeon St. by erecting a fine fence.

Mr. H. Cunningham was a visitor to Mount Pleasant the first of the week.

Mrs. White has been improving her property on Sturgeon St.

Miss E. Feir was home for the week-end.

Wild flowers in their beauty abound in all the woods surrounding Omemee. Many fine collections have been made.

Mr. Hubert Gardiner was in Omemee the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. D. McMann and son, Master Kenneth, were guests of her mother on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Feir visited with friends at Fowler's Corners the first of the week.

The W.F.M.S. of the Presbyterian Church will meet on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. L. Windrim.

Mrs. J. Weir was a visitor to Peterboro on Saturday.

As a couple of gentlemen were driving into the old Methodist Church sheds on Monday evening, the horse scared at the centre support of the gates, jumped to one side, caught the shaft in the wire fence, breaking the harness and the shaft. Kind friends relieved the gentlemen of anxiety and loaned them a buggy.

Mr. A. C. Winslow of the Bank of Toronto staff has been transferred to the Branch at Welland. He left for his new field of labour last wee.

The Victoria Day concert to be given by the Public Library Board is still under consideration.

The cadet corps has lost a valuable friend and instructor in Mr. A. C. Winslow.

Mr. George McCague of Orange Corners was in town on Saturday.

TORONTO MUST REDUCE RATES

Order From the Hydro Commission is Issued Again.

TORONTO, May 6.—Hydro-electric rate reduction in Toronto has won out. After a controversy extending since last November, an order was issued yesterday by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for a reduction of rates to consumers of all classes approximating 10 per cent., to take effect June 1 next.

While the officials of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission were entirely non-committal on the events connected with the final passing of the order, it is generally understood that the situation arising out of the refusal of the Toronto Hydro-Electric Commissioners to carry out the recommendations contained in the letter of Hon. Adam Beck of Nov. 19 last, engendered much bitterness. For some time the matter was in statu quo, and then about six weeks since a conference was arranged between the Hydro-Electric Power Commission and representatives of the local commission to go into the question. That conference was anything but harmonious, and on its conclusion the local Hydro-Electric Commission undertook to submit data to back up their contention against a reduction of rates. This statement was received about ten days go and there was another meeting of the commission, which was characterised by more fireworks.

I.C.R. NEVER IN BETTER SHAPE SAYS BORDEN

House Votes Down Liberal Resolution Censuring Present Administration of Government Railway—Only Criticism is That Road is Out of Politics, Declares Premier—Naturalization Bill Introduced.

OTTAWA, May 6. — At an early hour yesterday morning the House voted down a resolution proposed by Hon. H. R. Emmerson censuring the Government for its oppressive and inefficient management of the Intercolonial Railway.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson in opening said that the present management of the Intercolonial Railway was deserving of criticism in several respects. During the past year or two the road-bed had been allowed to deteriorate and the passenger and freight service become less efficient than formerly.

He vigorously criticised what is known as the Gutelius-Bosworth agreement under which the I. C. R. moves C. P. R. trains (four hundred tons) from Halifax to St. John for $300 claiming that each service was worth at least double that amount.

Hon. J. Reid, acting Minister of Railway, defended the management of the I. C. R. and analysed the accounts to show the correctness of the surplus claimed by the Government.

E. M. Macdonald (Pictou) quoted from the Truro Citizen, which he said was the organ of the Chief Whip Stanfield, to show that there was much dissatisfaction among Conservatives in the Maritime Provinces with the present management of the Intercolonial.

Premier Borden said that the only criticism of the present management of the Intercolonial was that it was too business-like. Mr. Cochrane had administered the road with firmness and ability, with little regard to party politics. The rates charged under the Gutelius-Bosworth agreement are better justified by comparing them with the rates long established for the carriage of flour from Montreal to Halifax and the carriage of grain from Montreal to Halifax and the carriage of grain from Georgian Bay points to the Atlantic.

Mr. Borden said that his observation and information were that the Intercolonial was never in better shape for giving more satisfactory service than at present. He and Mr. Cochrane alike desired to make the road a credit to Canada. Any complaint would be promptly investigated, and if justified it would be cured. The I.C.R. needed feeders and branch lines, and would be acquiring them to-day had the Senate not killed the legislation passed by the House of Commons at the last session.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham, who followed, said that the Government could acquire all the branch lines it wanted without any general legislation. He said that the branch lines bill as first introduced by Cochrane would have enabled the Minister of Railways to purchase the Canadian Pacific Railway without consulting Parliament.

In the House yesterday afternoon the Minister of Justice, introduced his bill respecting British nationality and naturalization. The object of the bill, he said, was to conform to the agreement between the United Kingdom and the governing states.

Under his bill, Judge Doherty went on to explain, the Secretary of State would issue naturalization papers which would entitle the bearer to citizenship in the United Kingdom and in any of the self-governing states of the Empire which had legislation in conformity with the agreement above mentioned. At present, to acquire naturalization in Canada, three years' residence in the country is required, but only one of these years need be spent in the country. Applicants must also have an adequate knowledge of either French or English.

The Minister also introduced a bill to authorize the appointment of a deputy judge to administer the juvenile delinquents act. A third bill amends the Supreme Court Act. The legislation passed at the last session authorized appeals from the interlocutory judgments where substantial rights are affected, there being some uncertainty as to whether the amendment applied to pending cases the present bill makes it applicable to them.

Hon. Mr. Doherty has also given notice of an act to amend the criminal code. The purpose of it is to make those who knowingly publish or cause to be published, false and fraudulent advertising criminally responsible.

Objections Overruled.

OTTAWA, May 6.—The Dominion Railway Commission, yesterday afternoon, overruled the four chief objections made by the city to the Toronto Union Station plans.

In giving judgment it was ordered that the work go on as originally drafted.

Work must commence at the earliest possible moment. The contract, if let by units, is to be started within thirty days; if "en bloc," within ninety days.

LLOYD GEORGE

London Papers Deal Severely With Budget Proposal.

LONDON, May 6.—The speech of Lloyd George in presenting his budget to the House of Commons yesterday, is said to have been one of the most unLloyd Georgian he has ever delivered, being particularly free from offensive language, attack, or invective, and simply confined to facts.

The Morning Post's comment is that it is a cleverly drafted electioneering document, while The Daily Telegraph charges the Chancellor with setting before the nation a system providing new and numerous benefits for one part of the community entirely at the expense of the other, and remarks that if anything will produce a population of greedy and irresponsible spongers instead of an industrious working class, it will be statesmanship of this sort.

The Financial News says that the prolific nature of the 1909 taxes might have suggested that their subjects should have been allowed a longer close time before being harried again.

ASQUITH SEEKS PARLEYS.

British Premier Takes Initiative Towards Home Rule Conferences.

LONDON, May 6.—The Times is able to state that Premier Asquith has taken the initiative in opening conversations on the Irish issue. A private meeting took place at Downing street yesterday between Bonar Law, Sir Edward Carson and Mr. Asquith to discuss questions of procedure and the possibility of bringing together the various parties in the controversy. Significant also is the activity that is taking place among the federalist back benchers on both sides of the House, more than one hundred of whom have signified their assent to a federal solution as a way out or the present deadlock.

Graft Probe Opens To-morrow.

OTTAWA, May 6.—Messrs. De Salaberry of the Justice Department and Doutre of the Marine Department will open an enquiry at Quebec on Thursday into the recent scandal in connection with the administration of the Marine Department at Quebec. Padded pay rolls and other abuses are alleged, and six of the Marine Department's officials were suspended a week or two ago.

Cut Spine; Cord Not Hurt.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6.—By an operation so delicate that a slip of a hairs-breadth would have meant death, the life of James Keith, a student in the medical department of Jefferson College, has been saved. Three vertebrae were removed without injury to the spinal cord to relieve the pressure of a broken rib. Keith is recovering. He had fallen out of a second-storey window.

Sold Liquor To Indians.

CORNWALL, May 6.—Joseph Lafaivre of Martown, who has been under the eye of the police for some time, was arrested by Officer Crites yesterday on a charge of supplying liquor to Indians. He was brought before Police Magistrate Danis and fined $50 and costs or three months in jail.

MENTAL HEALING

LONDON, May 6.—Spiritual faith and mental healing are dealt with in a report published yesterday by a committee, consisting of ten representatives of the Church of England and ten medical men, under the chairmanship of the Dean of Westminster, Dr. Ryle. The conclusions of the committee are: "The committee desire to express their belief in the efficacy of prayer. They reverently believe, however, that Divine power is exercised in confirmity with and through the operation of natural laws. Spiritual ministration should be recognized equally with medical ministration as carrying God's blessing to the sick. Health, bodily and mentally, is capable of being influenced for good by spiritual means.

"The physical results of what is called faith or spiritual healing do not prove on investigation to be different from those of mental healing or suggestion. The committee recognize that suggestion is more effectively exercised by some persons than by others, and this fact seems to explain the gifts of a special character claimed by various healers. While the religious influences do not essentially differ in operation from the non-religious appeals to the mind, yet the former may often be a most potent form of suggestion. The committee is forced to the conclusion that faith or spiritual healing is like all treatment by suggestion. It can be expected to be permanently effective only in cases of what are called functional disorders as distinct from organic ailments.

"Those who resort to healers therefore, are warned that they may thereby be postponing until too late to arrest organic disease. The committee desire to see increased importance attached to spiritual ministrations as a contributory means to recovery, but they strongly deprecate the independent treatment of disease by irresponsible and unqualified persons."

WHITE MEN MASSACRED

RISING OF NATIVES IN PORTUGUESE CONGO TERRITORY CAUSES ALARM

ANTWERP, Belgium, May 6.—Confirmation of a reported native revolt in the Portuguese Congo and the killing of twenty white men, including some Protestant and Catholic missionaries, was received here yesterday. Many other missionaries are said to have fled from the affected districts, according to a despatch from Boma, Belgian Congo.

The natives are led by a chief from San Salvador. The governor of Angola attacked them, but was forced to retreat, and the natives continued their march toward the left bank of the Congo, burning all the stations on their way, and causing the small garrisons to flee before them.

Passengers who arrived from the Congo yesterday on board the steamer Anversville declared the situation in the Portuguese colony to be desperate, and that the revolt would be extremely difficult to suppress.

Becker In Fear of Life.

NEW YORK, May 6.—In a highly nervous condition, due to the fear that he is in danger of bodily harm from other inmates of the Tombs, Charles Becker yesterday occupies a cell on the fourth tier, having been transferred from the bottom tier after being struck on the head by a missile hurled by some fellow prisoner while he was exercising in the corridor. His second trial begins to-day.

C. P. R. May Use M. C. R.

MONTREAL, May 6. — An unofficial announcement was made in railway circles yesterday that the C.P.R. is about to conclude arrangements for running rights over the M. C. R., between Windsor and Chicago. The arrangement is said to be due to go into effect in the first week in June. The C. P. R. hopes to be able to save three hours in its present Montreal-Chicago time by using the M. C. R.

LARUE'S TRIAL

Alleged Wife Slayer First on Docket at Sault Ste. Marie.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., May 6. —The spring session of the High Court convened here yesterday with Mr. Justice Britton on the bench, and H. D. Gamble, K.C., of Toronto, as crown prosecutor. Three criminal cases will occupy the attention of the court. The first case is that of Joseph Larue, charged with the murder of his wife in March, 1913. Her lifeless body was found in the St. Mary's river. Larue was to have come up for trial at the assizes of last autumn, but just previous to the sessions of the court he effected a sensational escape from the jail, remaining at liberty for two months.

Lancaster Resigns Chairmanship.

OTTAWA, May 6.—E. A. Lancaster yesterday resigned the chairmanship of the railway committee of the Commons owing to ill-health, necessitating a trip abroad. He is succeeded by Richard Blain of Peel.

Britain at 'Frisco Fair.

LONDON, May 6. —The British Government will reconsider its decision not to participate in the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, and it probably will decide that Great Britain shall officially be represented at the fair in a distinctly modified form.

MEDIATORS CHOOSE CANADIAN CITY FOR THEIR DELIBERATIONS

WILL MEET AT NIAGARA FALLS

Secretary Bryan Announces That Sittings Will Commence May 18—Peace Envoys Say They Consider the Entire Range of Mexican Affairs to Be Within the Scope of Their Work.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The three South American envoys who have undertaken by diplomacy to settle Mexico's civil strife, as well as her international difficulties, announced last night that the first formal conference with representatives of the "different parties interested in mediation" would be held at Niagara Falls, Ont., on May 18.

Secretary Bryan made the announcement for the three diplomats in a brief statement, which read as follows:

"The mediators have notified the different parties that Niagara Falls, Canada, has been selected as the place where the mediators will confer with representatives of the different parties interested in the mediation, and that the 18th of May has been fixed as the date when the conference will begin."

Developments in the Mexican situation yesterday were divided between the diplomatic and the military status.

The South American mediators continued their sessions throughout the day, and for the first time it became authoritatively known from them that they considered the whole range of Mexican affairs as properly embraced in their work. Their reply to Carranza had made this clear, and, while eliminating him from the mediation for the time being, it still left the door open to him to come into the proceedings later.

At the War Department it became clear that the status quo at Vera Cruz would be maintained with no advance of the U. S. troops unless to repel attacks.

Congress after a considerable period of silence on Mexico again came into the situation. In the Senate Senator Lippitt of Rhode Island introduced a resolution calling on President Wilson for information as to published reports that it was the administration's purpose to aid Gen. Villa to secure the Presidency.

During a brief but spirited discussion Senator Lodge read from a London paper a scathing denunciation of Villa. The Lippitt resolution went over until to-day under the rules.

Villa Scares Huerta Most.

VERA CRUZ, May 6. — Francisco Villa, the rebel commander, may not make his intended descent on Mexico City before the lapse of another three months, according to a prominent business man who arrived here from the capital yesterday. The refugee who had just completed successful negotiations with Provisional President Huerta for the removal of a large quantity of bullion from the mining districts in the vicinity of the capital says Gen. Huerta is still sending Federal troops northward, as he apparently dreads more the possible approach of Gen. Villa than an advance of the Americans.

Drawing the Line.

"I don't mind listening to a man who is paying for my dinner tell me the story of his life," said the woman. "Men's lives are generally interesting, but I won't stand to hear a woman tell everything she knows, even if she does pay for my dinner. I'd rather pay for my own dinner and get an occasional shy at the conversation."

A Consistent Course.

A railroad president was writing to an underling regarding a matter of improvement the other man wished to inaugurate without loss of time, but of which the president did not particularly approve.

"Dear Blank," he wrote, "don't do anything until you see me.

"P. S.—Then don't do anything!"

HYDRO RATES ARE DOWN

GUELPH GETS BENEFIT OF TEN PER CENT. REDUCTION

TORONTO, May 6.—Consumers of Hydro-electric power in Guelph will profit by a reduction of ten per cent., which was decided upon at the meeting of the provincial commission last evening. This has been under consideration for some time, and the announcement was made by Hon. Adam Beck that a lowering of rates in that municipality was due.

In addition, arrangements were completed to set at work gangs of construction men at different points in western Ontario. The points which will be centres of activity in the near future include Port McNicol, Strathroy, Waubashene, Tilbury and Creemore.

The rates of several municipalities in the Niagara district were fixed by the board after investigation of conditions. These include the townships of Lough, Puslinch and Equesing.

Fear of Baptism Fatal.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., May 6.—Miss Grace MacArthur, 15 years old, died suddenly yesterday morning a few minutes before she was to have been baptised in the Pilgrim Memorial Congregational Church. Miss MacArthur, who was dressed to go to the church, was nervous over the approaching sacrament. She complained of darkness, became unconscious and died before a physician arrived at her father's house. Her death was caused by a hemorrhage of the brain, due to excitement.

Found Body In River.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 6. — The body of a man believed to be John Davis, Walkerville, who disappeared from his daughter's home on April 3, was found just off Fighting Island in the Detroit river. Davis left home without telling his daughter where he was going, and after a thorough search throughout the county and surrounding cities, had been given up for dead. He was over eighty years of age.

Fire In Moose Jaw.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., May 6. — A disastrous fire occurred at the farm of Sherman Blackburn, manager of the Investors' Realty Company of this city, which is situated near Avonica, at an early hour yesterday morning, which resulted in the death of Mrs. Blackburn and her nephew, aged three.

DUKE AT WINDSOR

Governor-General and Princess Get Warm Reception.

WINDSOR, May 6.—For the first time since 1860 Windsor entertained royalty yesterday in the person of H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, and his daughter, the Princess Patricia. The welcome of the city was a whole-hearted one. The weather, which in the early morning hours was threatening, broke towards noon, and the sun shone out bright and warm. It was an ideal afternoon, and the streets of the city were thronged by a gaily dressed crowd, in which Canadians and Americans fraternized democratically.

The formal proceedings were opened by Mayor Clay, who read a brief address of welcome on behalf of the municipalities of Windsor, Walkerville, Sandwich, Ford City, and Ojibway.

Following the civic address, Hon. J. O. Reaume, Commissioner of Public Works for Ontario, read an illuminated address in French, expressing the welcome, the thanks and appreciation of the French-Canadian people of Essex.

The Duke of Connaught then replied to both addresses, speaking in English and later in French.

BLOUNT WILL START PETES TOWARD CANADIAN LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP

Heads the Batting Order With Schettler on the Firing Line —Team Will go Into Game at Full Strength

(Special to The Review.)

Youngstown, May 6.—The illness which threatened to keep Price out of the opening game has practically disappeared, and it now looks as though the team will go into the game with Erie to-morrow at full strength. Schettler has been selected to do the heaving, while it is a toss-up between Ryberg and Kelly for the receiving job. The weather conditions are ideal this afternoon, and the weather man has promised an even better assortment for Thursday, so it looks as though the opening game will attract a huge crowd. The line-up and batting order is as follows:

Blount, c.f.
Fox, r.f.
King, 2b.
Gorman, 1b.
Swartz or Wilcox, l.f.
Byrne, 3b.
Price, s.s.
Ryberg or Kelly, c.
Schettler, p.

(Special to The Review.)

Youngstown, May 6.—Bad weather kept the players indoors yesterday, a drizzling rain making baseball practice impossible. The sun peeped through the clouds early this morning, and light work-outs will be held this morning and afternoon, if the indications which are for a fair day prove correct. The team will not leave for Erie until Thursday morning, and will arrive there about 9 o'clock. Headquarters will be established at the Fisher House.

The club, it was at first felt, would not be in the best of shape for the opening struggle, as the bad weather conditions which the players have had to contend with during training operations and injuries to players, it was thought, would have a weakening effect. Miller's injured hand will prevent him starting in the first few games, and Ryberg will likely be found behind the bat. Price was threatened with sickness, and Fox was due to be moved into second base. Wilcox, a new man signed yesterday, taking Frank's place in the outergarden. The new man arrived yesterday from St. Joseph, of the Western League. He played the outfield with Youngstown last year, and is a likely looking chap. Schettler will likely be sent to the mound in the opening game, with Tracey and Sterling ready to fill any breach the enemy may make in the attack of the Blountmen. Gorman will be found at first, King at short, and Byrne at third, while with Wilcox will be Blount and Swarts in the outfield. Schrage will be let out to-day or to-morrow, the manager figuring he lacks sufficient experience to make good in the Canadian League.

THE CURTAIN RISES; MUFFLE YOUR HAMMERS

The Fitzgerald Circuit Opens in St. Thomas This Afternoon and in Erie, London and Brantford To-morrow

This afternoon the Ottawa and St. Thomas players will form the principals in the prologue to the Canadian League's big show, which according to schedule opens to-morrow with the Petes doing battle with Erie on Yankee soil. Although the schedule set May 7 as the opening date consent was given Ottawa and St. Thomas to open one day earlier owing to the fact that the Duke of Connaught and Princess Patricia are visitors in St. Thomas today. Interest locally centers in the outcome of to-morrow's struggle as the fans are eager to get a line on the strength of the new material which Curly Blount has collected to represent this city.

All over the circuit enthusiasm is more keener than ever before and every city is claiming a winner. That the race will be a good one is admitted by those who have followed the work of the pastimers and that a better class of ball will be dished up owing to new management of several of the clubs and the replacing of Berlin and Guelph by Toronto and Erie is also admitted. Almost every team on the circuit will present several faces new to the followers of the league. Of last year's Hamilton team only Donohue, Dolan, Dougherty, pitchers; Gilhooley, second base; Fisher, catcher; and possibly Harry Corns the slugging outfielder are left. The new blood is well thought of by experts in the city under the hill. St. Thomas has also been given a shake-up and Midge Craven has Nevitt, Hadley, Thraikal and Lamb, in his new arrivals. Ottawa, outside of the heaving corps has not made many changes. Nill at second is the only new one, outside of the hurling department, who is slated to start but Fried may replace Smykal at shortfield. Knotty Lee at Toronto has many who are new to the league, including Killian and outfielders Schneider, firstbase, Shultz, an infielder, Schwab, pitcher, Purtell, infielder, while Isaacs is back in the league again and will be tried at third, and Johnny Murphy last year with Hamilton has also been signed. London has Lamy the great speed skater in the outfield, Whitcraft, shortstop, Mullin third base, McGonagle, Danford and other new phenomenas to place before the public for judging purposes. Brantford is an unknown quantity altogether but when Wagner, Lamond and others have to fight for a place Chief Deneau must have some talent to unearth. Erie will practically have the old Guelph infield and outfield with the exception of Dawson who is making a bid for an outgarden job, Ulygil at first and Manager Smith at second. McNeil will do the biggest part of the receiving while the slabmen are rated high. Dummy Taylor a former big leaguer is among the latter.

The Peterboro team is sure to prove better than last year. Blount has in Tracey, Sterling, Creswell, Schletter and Belting, one of the best pitching staffs in the league while Mully Miller is said to be one of the classiest backstops in minor league company. Kelly will likely be the second catcher. Gorman will replace Rowan at the initial sack while King is slated for second, Price short and Byrne third. Swarts, Fox and Blount will be the outfield.

The Peterboro grounds are in better condition today than they have been at this time of year since the city was admitted to the Canadian League. By opening day the grounds will compare favorably with any on the circuit.

After four games at Erie which include a Sunday the Blountmen will swing over to St. Thomas where they are scheduled to play Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, before arriving home for the opening here on May 14 with the Cockneys. After the London series Ottawa will hit here after which the Petes will jump to London for a series which opens on May 21. Then they will jump back home to entertain Erie on May 25, 26, 27, then back to London again. Some jumps for a starter but as all the clubs the Petes will play should be good money makers for the early going at any rate, the club will probably be rewarded for its circuit trotting.

SIX TEAMS IN MERCANTILE

WM. HAMILTON CO. NINE ENTER—THREE PERMITS FOR OUTSIDE PLAYERS

The Mercantile Baseball League will this season be composed of six teams, namely: Drafting Room, De Laval, Printers, C. G. E. Red Caps, Bankers, and Wm. Hamilton Co., and each team will be allowed to have no more than three permits issued for outside players.

This was the ultimatum of the meeting last evening in the Y. M. C. A., and at which more flowery orations than there would be at a political meeting were rendered. Jack Pilling was present as a representative of the Machine Shop, who have decided to change their name to Red Caps, and urgently requested that a City League be formed. He found assistance in the representative from the Auburn Woollen Mills, who threatened to withdraw his team if the league were mercantile. After quite a lengthy session is was decided to stay by the motion which carried at a previous meeting, that was to remain a mercantile league.

The question of permits was handled with kid gloves, and when it was finally decided to allow three men and no more, all the teams seemed satisfied. The Auburn people couldn't see their way clear to gather a team with that much assistance, so they retreated, leaving an opening for Wm. Hamilton Co. This team has been endeavoring to get into Mercantile Leagues in this city for several years, and they will now have an opportunity to show their goods.

The committee appointed to see about grounds reported that they could procure the Exhibition Grounds for a small remuneration, and as Riverside Park would cost a great deal more, it was decided to consider the southern park first.

A committee was appointed to look over the grounds and interview the Agricultural Association and find out how many alterations will be permitted. The constitution will be gone over and presented at the next meeting, to be held on Friday evening.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the Y. M. C. A. for the use of the hall, and the meeting then adjourned to the corner of Hunter and George, where a great deal of "guff" was passed out, but no minutes were taken. It was ever thus.

PTE. MOORE ON WAITING LIST

Announcement from Ottawa this morning of the militarymen who are eligible for the Bisley team contains the name of Pte. W. H. Moore, 57th Regiment, of this city. Pte. Moore, with three others, is on thewaiting list, and should any of those selected for the regular team withdraw, which is quite probable, he will have an opportunity to make the trip to the Old Land.

FEDERAL FORCES TO INVADE QUEEN CITY

Gilmore Organization Will Transfer Kansas City Franchise to Toronto by June 1—Oppose Canadian League Club on All But Ten Home Dates

After months of talk about placing a club in Toronto the Federals have at last taken decisive action and according to announcement from Toronto the franchise of the Kansas City Club, under the management of George Stovall will be transferred to Toronto and the games from June 1 played at Scarboro Beach. The coming of the Feds will be the signal for a fight for supremacy in patronage but either the Fed, International or Canadian League club will lose because although Toronto is a great baseball town there is no doubt it cannot support three teams. The advent of the Feds may mean the inauguration of a rate war but that is hardly probable. The Canadian League Club will have to bear the brunt of the invaders' campaign as it will have to play to opposition on all but ten of its home games.

The following are the home dates of the Toronto Canadian League club and the visiting Federal club on the dates which they both play at home, together with the name of the visiting Canadian League team.

ALL ABOARD FOR ERIELAND

FANS LEFT THIS AFTERNOON TO SEE OPENING GAME.

BIG TIME BEING ARRANGED FOR WHEN THE BLOUNTMEN COME HOME.

When the 4.33 C.P.R. flyer pulls out of here this afternoon, there will be attached to the train a special first class coach which will carry about twenty-five of Peterboro's dyed in the wool fans as far as Toronto, en route for Erie, where the local ball team opens its season to-morrow against Harry Smith's Yanks. When the local party arrives at Toronto they will be transferred to a special pullman car, which will be hooked onto the Buffalo express, leaving Toronto at 7.10 and will retain the coach until Erie is reached. The same coach will also be utilized by the local party on the return journey, which will terminate here on Friday morning. Twenty-five choice seats have been set aside for the local party in the Erie stadium, and the team will not be without supporters when it makes its 1914 debut.

The enterprise displayed by the local people in running an excursion to Erie is ample evidence that enthusiasm concerning the season's prospect is very wide. President Fitzgerald will attend the opening at Erie, also and will join the local followers at Toronto.

Plans are being completed for the opening here on May 14th, when Doc. Reisling's Cockneys will be the attraction. Secretary E. T. Carr stated this morning that arrangements were being made for an auto parade, headed by the band of the 57th Regiment, and a ceremony at the park with Mayor Buller dishing up the offering. As this is the first season a half holiday has been declared on opening day, attendance records should be broken.

SPORTING COMMENT

Alfred Tennyson was some poet, but as Rube Dickenson would say, "Without comparin' the both of us, might say we're both purty fair."

The Heavy Brigade.

Into the volley of shoots stepped the Great Tyrus,
Into the smoke of Woods stepped the Great Tyrus.
Curves, they broke left of him,
Curves, they broke right of him,
And the crowd wondered.

His was to do or die, his not to knock a fly,
Yet the crowd wondered.
Cheers from the left of him,
Cheers from the right of him.
Clouds rent asundered.

Into the smoke again vainly he wandered,
Strike two and ball two,
Tyrus had blundered.
Groans from the left of him,
Groans from the right of him,
From crowds unnumbered.

His was to do or die, his not to knock a fly,
And the crowd thundered.
"Into that ball of speed, it is a hit we need."
Bing—and the leather soared many leagues onward,
And o'er the plate Cobb strolled, for he had conquered.

All that is needed to attract record breaking crowds to the Erie, Brantford and London ball parks tomorrow is the co-operation of J. Pluv. Interest is at fever height in all three cities and the same may be said of St. Thomas, where the Senators and Saints battle it out this afternoon. The promise of a better class of ball, the addition of new blood in the form of clubs, managers and owners, has stimulated enthusiasm until there is not another league of "B" class rating that can boast of more assured support than the James P. Fitzgerald circuit. It is to be hoped the calibre of the players and the class of ball merits the faith the followers of the great game have evidenced in the league's future.

Darlington, a catcher, and Wein, an infielder, have been released by the Hamilton club, while Haeffner, a backstop, from Allentown, has been signed. Dudley, an outfielder, will cover third during the first few games, as Baldwin, the regular third sacker, is suffering from a split finger.

Conny Murphy, the ancient history of the league, is playing great ball for the Stars and Stripes of Niagara Falls, New York. Conny was some clown in his day.

Jimmy Duffy, the Hamilton "hare" who won the Boston Marathon race, will hook up with Edward Fabre, of Montreal, in a five mile invitation race at Kingston on June 3. The route is rather short for Duffy, but he should give a good account of himself.

We have with us to-day the sun. Here's hoping it does not cut the visit short and spoil the doings tomorrow.

At Dressmaking Classes of Industrial Night School — The Report

Members of the Board of Education were very much pleased last night when they heard a report on the Industrial Night School Classes, of which Mr. A. Hagerman is supervising principal. The Board is elated at the success attained in this, the first effort in regard to these classes.

The report is as follows:

Gentlemen:—

As Principal of the Industrial Night School, I have the honor to report as follows:

Classes were resumed on January 12th, 1914, after Christmas holidays, and continued four nights per week, ending on April 2nd.

Owing to insufficient numbers the Tuesday Drafting Class was discontinued, and a class in Mathematics substituted therefor. Mr. W. Taylor of the Collegiate Institute Staff was engaged and the attendance and interest show that Mr. Taylor's efforts met with the hearty approval of the class.

On the advice of Dr. Merchant, the nature of the work in the electrical class was changed. Mr. A. Gates, B.Sc., of the C.G.E., was engaged to conduct the practical work of this department. That this was a good thing was shown by a constant growth in attendance.

Miss E. Ferguson continued to conduct three classes per week in Domestic Science.

The Dressmaking Classes were all put under the management of Miss Welsh, Miss Howell not feeling in a position to continue in the work. In these classes (three in number) limited in attendance to twenty, some idea of the work may be gained from the fact that at least thirty-five dresses were completed, twenty separate skirts, eighty waists or blouses and a large number of other articles of apparel, consisting of coats, kimonas, underwaists, fichers, etc., were made.

The class in millinery was conducted by Miss Dawson of R. Hall & Son. In this class some twenty-six hats were completed, besides twenty-one shapes in wire or buckram.

The total number of men in attendance reached fifty.

The total number of girls and women reached one hundred and twenty-four.

The total fees paid in for all classes, $295.00.

The total fees returned for all classes, $266.30.

The total fees on hand for all classes, $28.70.

All of which we respectfully submit,

Yours faithfully,
A. F. HAGERMAN,
Supervising Principal.

SUCCESSFUL ANNUAL MEETING WOMENS MISSIONARY SOCIETY CHARLOTTE STREET CHURCH

The annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church met yesterday afternoon in the Guild Room.

The meeting was opened with a most impressive prayer by Mrs. Mansell.

The annual report prepared by Mrs. J. K. Moore, follows, and was read by Mrs. Lane, secretary pro. tem.:

The year just closed has been in some respects our banner year. Ten monthly meetings were held. After the summer vacation our esteemed and capable president, with members of the executive, formed committees to conduct the study of our text book, "The King's Business." This study has been most intelligently conducted and enjoyed by the members. Each meeting was an inspiration and these who took part felt doubly repaid for time spent in study. Some of the homes were kindly opened for our monthly meetings. These were largely attended, and a social half hour was spent at the close. Our Auxiliary contributed upwards of $5.00 towards the Platt Memorial Fund. In October our District Meeting was held in Millbrook. The reports were encouraging. At the evening session our sainted Rev. Mr. Mansell delivered an eloquent address on "Our Work." The speech was pronounced the best ever heard on the subject in Millbrook. Since that event our Auxiliary's Meetings were indeed a benediction. It certainly was our banner year. Until called upon to part with our dearly-beloved pastor, who frequently expressed an earnest desire to have every lady in the church a member of the Woman's Missionary Society. Accordingly, a number of the members canvassed the membership of the church, which resulted in the addition of 74 members, as a tribute of love to our departed pastor and friend. "He being dead, yet speaketh." We also thankfully report 3 new life members, making a total membership of 166.

Mrs. M. A. Morrison then referred in a few beautifully chosen words to the year's work, as to the spiritual progress as well as the financial side being very satisfactory.

As a society, we realize that very much of our success, spiritual and otherwise, is due to the work of our President, who has proven such a worthy exponent of the "Beautiful Life." It is with deep regret that we are so soon and under such lamentable circumstances to be deprived of one who has been so true a guide, counsellor and friend. Mrs. Mansell has endeared herself to the women of our church as few have done, her costliest present brought to crown His head, or grace His name, no gift too rare, she thought.

Financial Report.

The financial report was presented by Miss Allan.

Average attendance, 45.
Annual members' fees, $153.00.
Life members' fees, $75.00.
Rest fund, $8.65.
Platt Memorial Fund, $5.85.
Easter Thank offering, $79.46.

These amounts supplemented by the Mission Circle and the Olive Mission Band and other sources, make a total of $511.44 from a total membership of the three societies of 253.

The Officers.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. A. Parker.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. W. C. Switzer.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Jos. Walsh.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. J. K. Moore, with assistant, Mrs. Thos. Cruikshank.
Corresponding Sec.—Mrs. Mary B. Lyle.
Treasurer—Mrs. Allum, with assistant, Mrs. A. Clegg.
Supt. of Systematic Giving—Mrs. W. C. Austin.
Pianist—Mrs. Lightfoot.
President of Olive Mission Band—Mrs. A. F. Bookhout, with assistant, Mrs. James Lillico.

Mr. A. F. Bookhout was appointed auditor.

Mrs. Mansell in retiring from the chair, thanked the society for the kindness and hearty co-operation shown during her term of office.

Mrs. Parker, Pres. Elect, brought an inspiring message, striking a keynote which should mean continued success during the coming year.

Mission Circle.

The Mission Circle, under the leadership of Mrs. F. C. Neal, reports a good year's work.

One very laudable feature being, that nearly all the money raised has been straight giving on the part of the members. The Circle provided an evening's entertainment for the Old People's Home, also donated some 20 quarts of fruit to the same.

A splendid box of infants' clothing was completed and sent to All Peoples Mission, Winnipeg. Word came back that this was the finest donation of the kind they had ever received.

They also provided good cheer at the Christmas Season. A successful food sale was held last fall, and an instructive evening with lantern slides was enjoyed.

The study of china has proven an educative feature of the year's work.

The Circle numbers 30, and has raised $67.00.

The Olive Mission Band was represented by Miss Agnes Neil and Ethel Morrison, who gave most interesting and businesslike reports of their work.

For convenience, the band has been divided into junior and senior, each taking up study books suitable to the ages of the members.

There are 75 names on the roll, 40 of these are annual members.

There are 17 life members, the latter is an increase of 8.

The Band provided Christmas cheer for 85 children.

They have also made talent money from the sale of cake and candy.

In April they realized $16.00 from a Talent Tea given by eight of the seniors at the home of Mrs. Robt. Neil.

The total amount raised for the year is $95.00.

CLEAN UP

Clean up time is at hand and Mayor Buller is out with a request that all citizens take part and do all that they can to make Peterboro look pretty, not alone in the eyes of her citizens, but also to the many visitors.

One hundred or more things can be done. The back yards, if not already cleared of refuse, might be attended to at once. The old fence would look better with a fresh coat of paint. The gate needs a new spring. The trees need attention, and a few hours spent on the lawn and flower gardens brings it's reward His Worship has suggested the week beginning Monday, May 18, as a favorable time to do the necessary retouching.

A good suggestion is that all citizens be on the watch for caterpillars, and do everything in their power to prevent damage which in past years has been general and severe.

PERSONAL

Miss Ethel Graham of Indian River spent Tuesday in the city.

Mr. F. J. R. Mitchell underwent an operation yesterday and his physicians report his condition as favourable.

WOMAN'S WORK

Contributed by the Executive of the Women's Council

Stunted Children.

It has been truly said that in the planning of our cities the children were left out; for without a playground the child cannot grow as nature intended that he should. Play is growth. The play instincts prescribe the action through which the child's mind, body and character shall be formed. The child needs play as flowers need the sun. Rich people can live in the suburbs, or send their children to boarding school, but for the average city dweller the alternative is stunted children or better city planning.

The children of a larger growth also need recreation. City planning may provide for them parks, boulevards, bathing places, dancing pavilions, social centres, concert halls, water-front promenades, golf links and tennis courts.

A class of woman has grown up in the course of the last twenty or thirty years which is public spirited and honest. That is the Arts and Craft worker, the school teacher, the female doctor, the government inspector; briefly it is the type which by earning its own livelihood has learned to hold up its head.

It is not necessary to prove that every woman is a potentially efficient person, for it is evident that all men are not efficient.

We must not be discouraged because there has been no female geniuses. We must consider certain occupations as physically closed to women, but we must not accept that because women are not fit for certain things they are not fit for other things.

A belief that marriage is a panacea for most evils seems to be taking possession of the minds of certain of our public men, as evidenced by a plan lately outlined in the daily press to have a League for the promotion of Marriage formed in connection with Morality Departments. Also we find magistrates and judges endeavoring to bring about marriages between young men convicted of moral wrong doing and their victims, thereby enabling the young man to escape from well deserved punishment by law, by placing what too often is a life long sentence of suffering, humiliation, very often ill-usage and desertion on his victim, who herself is already suffering all the agony of the loss of self respect and social censure that comes with exposure. Such marriages are viewed with abhorrence by every thoughtful woman. Instead of thus degrading the marriage relation, what we really need to-day is to put marriage on a higher plane. Before all forms of civilization, all forms of government, before all education, the relation of the husband and wife makes the eternal granite on which the whole world rests. Just so fast, just so far, as you make those relations, what God meant they should be, and what they ought to be—just so fast and so far will you uplift society—no faster and no further. Woman has been waiting for centuries to have laws passed for her best protection, without very great results, but she has come to know this fact, viz.: that the best protection must forever be in the heart of man, that our sons, our little children must be reared with that thought. It will not do to take it for granted, that boys will as a matter of course be good husbands, while girls must be educated to be good wives. Boys must be trained to become good husbands. The father must carry himself so in the house to the wife that the boy will see that he esteems her above all other women. The boy must not be required to learn in church, "Honor thy father and mother," and then during the week see his father treat his mother with a discourtesy and rudeness with which he treats no other woman. The boy will surely do as the father does, not as the father says. The cry goes up to-day, How shall we purify public life? Purify the private household hearth, begin there, for public life is no more than the expression of the private life of the people.

NO BONUSES FOR BOOKING AGENTS

For Sending Domestic Help to Canada.

No bonuses will be paid to booking agents for sending domestic servants to Ontario after the first of next December. The Department of Agriculture has decided that the payment of bonuses is no longer necessary, and the experience of the past year or two has indicated that there are disadvantages in the system that help to nullify some of the good results secured.

Immigration Agent Might this morning, remarked that this was an exceptionally good thing. He stated that at present there was a large demand for domestic help.

City Relief Officer Finch Miller well experienced in immigration matters, commented favorably on the regulation. The latter would not have any effect upon farm hands.

He pointed out how many domestics came out under the booking agents inducement of having the ticket purchased and in numerous cases the money was not refunded. This had happened numerous times right here in this city.

Today's Mail and Empire gives the following interview with H. A. McDonell, Director of Colonization.

"We expect to get just about as many domestics in the future," stated H. A. Macdonell, Director of Colonization, "and I do not think the agents will be able to retaliate to any extent by inducing girls to go to other places. Most of those who come here come as a result of friends or relatives writing home, and almost without exception they have made up their minds where they want to go before going to a boooking agent."

That gloomy letters written to the Old Country by out-of-work people here have been making it more difficult for the department to get good farm laborers and domestics to come out, is asserted by Mc. Macdonell. "There is no doubt," he said, "that as far as farm laborers and domestics are concerned the demand is just as large as it ever was, but the exaggerated reports in the Old Country papers have frightened people from coming out here. It should not have any effect upon farm hands and domestics, but it does."

The Department of Colonization, through the Old Country offices, is actively discouraging the immigration to Ontario of clerks and other unskilled workers.

GOT SIXTY DAYS AND TEN LASHES

Carpenter Assaulted Wife and Used Razor

TORONTO, May 7.—James Ritchie, an east-end carpenter, was sentenced to 60 days in jail for assaulting his young wife, Jane, and at the end of the first seven days, he will receive ten lashes with the cat-o'-nine-tails.

Ritchie, who is a big, thick-necked man, punched his frail wife, gave her a terrible black eye and cut her on the hand with a razor. The trouble has been drink.

INJURED AT LUMBER CAMP

TWEED MAN IS BROUGHT TO HOSPITAL WITH A BROKEN LEG

A middle aged man named Freeburn, whose home is in Tweed, and who has been employed in the Buckhorn camp of the Peterboro Lumber Co., met with a rather serious accident on Monday. He was working near the warping rope when it slipped, and striking his leg with great force, fractured the bone between the ankle and knee.

He was taken to the hotel at Buckhorn, and there received medical attention, and the company had him removed yesterday to Nicholls Hospital. He is resting comfortably today.

MOTHER OF MR. G. C. WAINWRIGHT PASSES

Peterboro friends of Mr. G. C Wainwright, who is at present in Montreal, as acting manager of the Bank of Ottawa ,will be sorry to learn that Mr. Wainwright has suffered the loss of his mother. The funeral was held yesterday at Ottawa.

The late Mrs. Wainwright was the widow of the late Major W. R. Stowe Wainwright, and daughter of the late Rev. Cannon Cochrane, D.D., of Halifax, N.S. There are four daughters and four sons.

R. R. BENNETT, M.P.,
for Calargy, a Conservative who is strongly opposed to the Government's proposed guarantee of C.N.R. bonds.

BONE OF NOSE IS FRACTURED

Louis Florence Cannot Recall How He Was Hurt by Runaway Team

Louis Florence, the victim of yesterday afternoon's runaway accident lay very quiet in the public ward at Nicholls Hospital last night when seen by a Review reporter. His head was barely visible, being hid by numerous bandages, yet his vocal organs were free, and his first question was "How did it happen?" The scribe related the incident by detail, but Mr. Florence could not recollect anything whatever. He only knew he had been driving in a buggy, after that, all was a blank.

When asked if he was suffering any pain, the young man claimed that his face was stiff and sore, but he could hardly call it pain. The doctors who attended him, informed the Review man that Mr. Florence's nose was fractured, and his face badly bruised. So far as they knew, he received all his injuries on and about the head, and unless something unforeseen sets in he should be around again in the course of a couple of weeks.

BUTCHERS TO MEET TO-NIGHT

Several Matters Affecting Their Business Will Be Discussed.

A meeting of the local butchers is called for to-night to discuss the proposed public abattoir and to learn more about the proposition.

As the butchers claim that it is an injustice for them to be forced to pay a high license fee for doing business as a retail butcher, the meeting will also discuss this question.

Regular retail dealers, it is claimed, are doing business on the public market and paying practically nothing to the city for the privilege. They are described as transient traders, and it is felt that they should take out a license before being allowed to do business, the same as any one else would have to do. This does not apply to farmers who raise their own stock and sell it.

It is expected that one of the best known butchers in Toronto will be present to give an address.

KEEPING UP GOOD WORK

PERMITS SO FAR THIS MONTH SHOW TOTAL OF $15,050.

FIVE DWELLINGS

So far this month May is running a close second to April in the matter of building. Nine permits taken out since the first of the month total $15,050. This amount was swelled considerably by the $10,000 addition to All Saints' Church. Elhpgrave, Barrett and Sheehy, are the contractors.

Other permits issued are:

C. Huffman, dwelling, Bolivar St., $1,400.

Jas. Garvey, alterations, Rubidge Street, $250.

Mrs. Letteller, verandah, Lake St., $50.

George Lancaster, three dwellings, Lansdowne Street, each $1,000. Total $3,000.

J. B. O'Dette, dwelling, Crescent Street, $1,200.

Each house now being erected is being carefully investigated for any improper plumbing or insanitary conditions, by the Sanitary Inspector, under the instructions of the Board of Health.

HE HAD JUST ONE MORE LITTLE DRINK

But His Horses Were Poor Waiters, and They Galloped Off

Just one more. This just one more resulted in a Douro resident remaining in the city last evening or else he hit the lonely trail on foot. Stopping in front of one of the local hotels for a last "booster," he left his team, attached to a heavy wagon, untied.

It was raining. The horses evidently were of the opinion that hay and straw were better than another "scuttle of suds" for their owner. The result was that when the toiler of the soil came to the door at three minutes past eleven a blank space met his enquiring gaze. In fact his team at this time were well on their way home. The horses when last seen were breaking all chariot records over Hunter Street Bridge. In the meanwhile, the owner of the hurriedly departed team was using sufficient language to scare a Canadian League umpire off the diamond.

MURDERER IS VIOLENT MANIAC

Chester Duryea is Removed From Jail to Hospital

New York, May 7.—Chester Bisnell Duryea, who shot to death his octogenarian father, General Hiram Duryea, famous as the commander of a regiment of Zouaves in the civil war, was last night taken from the Raymond Street jail in Brooklyn to Bellevue Hopital a violent maniac.

Duryea was confined in a straightjacket and removed in a hospital ambulance after he had been hurling himself against the walls of a padded cell in the Brooklyn jail until it became evident he would have to be taken away for his own safety.

WOMAN IMPALED ON IRON FENCE

NEW YORK, May 7.—Mrs. Louise Etchageray, aged 29, wife of Louis Etchageray, Mexican Minister to Costa Rica, fell from a window on the fifth floor of an apartment house in 121st street yesterday and was impaled on a picket fence in front of the building She was rushed to a hospital, where she died. Her husband is now in Costa Rica. She was in care of a nurse.

CROWN ATTORNEY IS SUPPOSED TO ACT

POLICE CHIEF AND CITY SOLICITOR CONTROVERSY

It looks as though the controversy between City Solicitor Gordon and Chief Thompson has been decided in favor of the former. The chief contended that the city solicitor could not act for the defense in criminal actions where summary convictions were required, but according to information received from the attorney general's department, the crown attorney is supposed to act, and is also supposed to act in the matter of appeals if called upon.

He receives the statutory fee for his services.

HAVELOCK LADY FELL FROM TRAIN TO DEPOT PLATFORM

Mrs. Frank Barton Has Miraculous Escape From Serious Injury

That the hand of Providence intervened and prevented a fatal accident yesterday afternoon was the thought uppermost in the minds of those standing at the C. P. R. Depot when the 4.33 train from Montreal to Toronto drew in. Those standing on the platform witnessed a scene that will not be forgotten in a short time. The train was approaching the depot at the rate of about five miles an hour, and as the second last coach passed over George Street a lady, who had evidently been standing on the platform of the coach fell headlong to the station platform.

One Lady Swooned.

The feeling of the large number of witnesses when they saw her fall can scarcely be imagined, and it was made even more intense when she lay where she fell, without making an attempt to rise. One lady onlooker swooned and fell into the arms of a girl beside her, while others were on the verge of collapse. A few men ran to the lifeless form and carried it to the ladies' waiting room, where Assistant Superintendent L. G. Rogers, of Havelock, who was on the train, immediately took charge. Dr. Carmichael, the C. P. R. physician, was soon on the scene, and much to the surprise and delight of the large crowd, found the lady to be only shaken up and able to continue her journey.

Took Weak Spell.

The lady, it was afterwards found out, was Mrs. Frank Barton, who resides near Havelock, and she was going to Toronto. She became weak in the coach, when a few miles from the city, and not realizing the great danger to which she was exposing herself, she made her way to the coach door and stepped out on the platform. Whether she fainted or else lost her balance with the swaying of the train she could not say.

DEAL FOR THE AMERICAN HOTEL

Arthur Mulhall o' Cobourg, Will Be the New Proprietor

The most recent issue of Dun's Financial Bulletin quotes the sum involved in the sale of the American Hotel as $10,000. The hotel was formerly owned by Mrs. Margaret Long, and was conducted by her son. The purchaser was Arthur Mulhall, of Cobourg. The License Commissioners will meet Saturday night to consider the transfer of the license. Mr. Mulhall is an old-time baseball player, and is regarded as one of the most capable hotel proprietors in this district.

REDMOND

HE URGES NO COMPROMISE TILL LORDS DEAL WITH HOME RULE

LONDON, May. 7. — John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, is understood to have opposed any negotiations for a compromise on the question of Home Rule for Ireland until the bill reaches the House of Lords. He had a long conference yesterday with Premier Asquith on the question of a settlement, and as a result of his opposition to negotiations the Government agreed to hasten the final stages of the bill in the House of Commons, which will be completed the week after next.

The Irish Home Rule bill will thus become law as it stands under the operation of the Parliament Act, and should any compromises on the question of Ulster be arranged afterward as a result of negotiations between the leaders an amending bill incorporating them will be passed immediately.

UNKNOWN SWEPT OVER THE FALLS

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., May 7.—Richard Snyder, a fisherman, 28 years of age, living near Chippewa, Ont., was swept over the Horseshoe Falls in a rowboat, which became unmanageable when caught in a current on the upper Niagara yesterday. Snyder was unmarried.

HE WAS GOING TO GET THE SPARKLES

Warne Jewelry Store Was the Object of His Attack

"I'm going to smash your window to-night about 10 o'clock," said a half drunken individual to a clerk in Warne Bros.' store yesterday. "Shure's your livin', I'm goin' to grab some of the sparklers," he continued. But the window is still intact this morning, and evidently the individual who was looking for sparklers got lit up on some other stuff. After leaving the Warne store the man with a Jessie Jimmie spirit, informed a Review reporter that it could be done.

"They told me they'd have me pinched, but I said you can't pinch me fur tellin' you something," he said, as he strolled up George Street in search of "the higher enjoyment" establishments.

LIBERALS MOVING

The local Liberals are anticipating an early election for the Provincial House, and are quietly making preparations to send their candidates into the field as soon as the Government announces the date. Several names have been mentioned, but nothing definite has been decided upon according to G. N. Gordon, who when also asked if he would likely be a candidate, only smiled.

REBELS DROP BOMB FROM A BIPLANE

Canadian Press Despatch.

San Diego, Cal., May 7.—A wireless message from the cruiser California at Mazatlan, says rebels are having the better of the bombardment of that place. The rebels' biplane dropped a bomb into the city this morning, killing four and wounding eight persons.

THE AD. CLUB

J. C. Kirkwood, until lately advertising counsel for Harmsworth Publications, London England, is in the city, and has been secured for an address at a luncheon of the Ad. Club to-morrow evening at 6.30, in Coleman's Savoy.

Mr. Kirkwood has handled some of the largest advertising campaigns in the United States and Canada, and his address will be of special value and interest.

INSTALLING ELEVATOR.

The work of installation of the goods elevator at the new Turnbull building has commenced. The firm of W. B. Morrow and Company, of Toronto, are installing the elevator, which is the first of its kind in the city.

For Retailers.

N. C. Cameron, local secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, is arranging a programme for next Monday night in the Grand Opera House. This meeting will be full of interest to all retailers and their employees. Particulars will be given later.

PITIFUL STORY TOLD BY GIRL

ST. CATHARINES, May 7.—Richard Boyle, agent of the Children's Aid Society, told the board of a pitiful case in Thorold. The father of a family has been ill in a hospital for two years, and the eldest girl, aged 13, after being beaten cruelly by her mother because she refused to work cleaning up hotels, had resolved to end her misery by drowning herself in the canal.

CHURCH DOING A WORK COMMENCED BY LABOR

Controller Simpson Says Labor Movement in its Origin Strove to Better Moral and Social Conditions and Says Policy of Typographical Union is Along the Lines Laid Down in the Scriptures

Urging the labor men of this city to continue to work in the interests of labor organization; outlining the progress of labor throughout the world and condemning the tactics of parliamentarians and employers' associations, Controller James Simpson, of Toronto, held a large audience interested for more than an hour in the Labor Hall last evening.

J. J. Hartley presided over the meeting, and in a few well chosen remarks paid a tribute to the speaker of the evening for his consistency and insistency in the interests of the workingman. At the conclusion of the address, David Moore, on behalf of the meeting, heartily thanked the speaker for the instructive and interesting address he had delivered. Mr. Simpson was cheered repeatedly during his discourse.

In opening his address, Controller Simpson stated that he did not propose to take up too much time with the subject, but would endeavor to impart information and give inspiration to his fellowmen, as he believed every workingman needed all he could get of both. Inspiration was the force which impelled men to interest their fellowmen and bring them into the organization.

"We stand not merely on the threshold, but are in one of the most eventful periods in the history of organized labor. Politicians throughout the world are evincing more interest in the movement and its history than they are in the historical questions of the world. Labor is getting more recognition each day. All over the world the number of men who are showing an interest in the cause of labor is four and five hundred per cent. greater than ever before. And every man who is interested should understand what the movement is and what it stands for. It has been misrepresented by opponents like all other great moral or social reform movements. It has met with much opposition but the men who have stood alone and fought for it have iron blood, granite backbone, and everlasting faith, and it is to those men that the credit is due."

"We all know how the opponents of organized labor in England in years gone by tried to check it. The leaders were exiled to the provinces across the seas. While that might have stemmed the growth it should not have been done, as it aroused the workers to the fact that the movement was feared by its opponents. Those men who were exiled spread the movement to the countries to which they were sent. They resumed the fight which is being continued to-day.

Australia and Germany.

"Australia is but a reflection of the same spirit. Its laws which protect the workingman and its policies are the fruits of a hard struggle. In Australia the government not only controls the railroads and other utilities but it is now erecting government owned factories where the workingman might work collectively for his benefit and that of the industry. Germany is another instance. Bismarck and the emperor adopted the exile policy to stem the revolt against conditions, but later found that concessions would have to be granted. It was the granting of those concessions which inspired the labor interests of Germany to seek more. Germany is a striking evidence of what can be accomplished by development of the labor movement. In China great armies of men, women and children are being exploited in the factories at a wage one-twentieth less than is paid in this country. They are producing the same commodities as are produced in this country. The labor leaders there are struggling to better conditions. They are sacrificing their lives, being imprisoned and otherwise persecuted, but none of those will stop the men who see the dawn of day when industrial workers will be paramount.

"What the churches are doing is but a reflection of what the labor movement has been doing for years in the matter of reform. If we are satisfied that there shall be a mass of poor, relying on charity and a few endowed with wealth then church charity will continue. No

WANDERERS CAMPED IN SOUTH-END

Gypsies Will Not Be Molested by the Police

A band of twenty-five gypsies claiming Montreal as headquarters, are camped just south of the city limits. The entire party present an air of respectability that differs from the usual van people. Last evening Police Chief Thompson investigated the camp in pursuance to a wire from Detective Scarth of the Dominion Police Force, but found everything to be allright. The Dominion Officer in his wire expressed the belief that the party were Mexicans, and he was trying to get them close to the border in order to effect their deportation. Evidently the officer had the wrong party. They will be allowed to remain here unmolested.

The party came here a few days ago from the vicinity of Lindsay. Several of the men could be seen around the city to-day engaged in trying to dicker in horse flesh.

Conversation with one of the men was to the effect that they had always paid for everything they got and were more or less on the trip for a health trip, with horse trading as a side line.

The party are fairly well dressed, the women having the usual gypsy costume.

The party expect to remain around the city for a couple of weeks.

To Read Paper.

Chief Thompson has commenced work of preparing his paper, to be read at the annual police convention, to be held in June at Winnipeg.

MET DEATH ON BRIDGE

CAMPBELLFORD MAN WAS STRUCK BY FREIGHT TRAIN

TOOK SHORT CUT

Campbellford, Ont., May 7. — At noon hour yesterday, while crossing the Grand Trunk Railway bridge, a short cut to dinner ,Geo. Statom, who worked in the Weston Shoe factory here, was hurled into the river by a passing freight train. The body has not yet been recovered. Deceased leaves a widow and family, who reside in Toronto.

COUNCIL WILL FIGHT INJUNCTION

Bellevillians Expected Fireworks But City Dads Were Calm

Belleville, May 7.—Many spectators in attendance at the City Council meeting, it being expected that the session would be one out of the ordinary, owing to the injunction which was issued restraining the Council from giving the contract of paving Front and Bridge Streets to Foley and Gleason. There was, however, no discussion upon the subject, but Mayor Wills stated that the Council would fight the injunction. This was the outcome of a conference held with City Solicitor Masson previous to the Council meeting.

BRITISH WARSHIP SECURES SWIFT PAYMENT OF CLAIM

HAYTIANS WERE BADLY SCARED

PORT AU PRINCE, Hayti, May 7.—The National Bank yesterday advanced to the Haytien Government $62,000, the amount of the indemnity claimed by Mr. Peters, a British subject, whose sawmill had been destroyed by fire during the Leconte revolution. The payment had been demanded yesterday in an ultimatum from the British diplomatic representative.

The incident is regarded as closed. Consternation has been caused in the capital by the British ultimatum, whose time limit expired at 6 o'clock last evening, and which was supported by the presence of the British cruiser Suffolk.

A joint session of the Senate and Congress was called immediately, but was soon dissolved owing to the inability of the legislators to reach a decision.

Bitter criticism was expressed on the Cabinet for not being in a position to meet the payment, which had previously been awarded to Mr. Peters by a court of arbitration.

A resolution was adopted calling on the President of the [illegible] to demand the [illegible] of J. N. Leger, Minister of [illegible], or to dismiss him from the [illegible], as he was held [illegible].

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1914

MR. BURNHAM'S GOOD STAND.

THE BILL regulating the manufacture and sale of butter, introduced in the House of Commons by the Hon. Mr. Burrell, is not altogether a bad measure in spite of Mr. J. H. Burnham's criticism. Some of the provisions are :—

The sale of butter containing more than 16 per cent. water is prohibited ; the rechurning or renovating of butter as a business is prohibited ; prints, blocks, squares or pats of butter must be the full weight of one-quarter, one-half one or two pounds at the time of moulding or cutting : the sale of butter substitutes such as oleomargarine is prohibited.

The expediency of the last provision is doubtful and to this clause Mr. Burnham took objection. The provision is in the interest of the dairy industry which is worth considerable protection. Butter at thirty to forty cents a pound is a fairly high priced commodity but considering the prices of other articles, the necessity for cleanliness in its production and regulations regarding its purity, the price is not relatively a dear price. But there is another side to this question. Many people may not be able to afford such a price for butter. This point Mr. Burnham brought out in the House. People who cannot afford thirty to forty cents may afford fifteen to twenty cents. Substitutes for butter such as oleomargarine and butterine are wholesome foods. They were admitted not to be injurious. We saw these butter substitutes being manufactured in the packing houses in Chicago, tasted them with a cracker and could not notice any difference in them from pure butter save that the latter is firmer and perhaps a shade richer in taste. The manufacture of it was cleanly to a degree, not once did we see a workman's hands touch it while going through the various machines for churning, separating, working and pressing. With this country weathering a period of stringency and many people in need of a commodity like oleomargarine, Mr. Burnham's objection to the provision was quite reasonable.

As a matter of fact objection to Mr. Burnham's criticism was weak. It consisted chiefly in the fear that the substitute would be palmed-off as pure butter. The government has apparently adopted a very rigid pure-food policy. In this regard we would like to know if cotton-seed oil is still being rendered into lard, pure lard, in wholesale houses as were credibly informed two or three years ago. Is the Government which refuses to allow a substitute for butter being honestly manufactured and honestly sold, allowing a substitute for lard or at least an impure lard to be sold as pure lard ? Or again, is it going to shut down on the canning factories where jams and fruit products are prepared? There are plenty of jams sold which are not pure fruit jams and into which the pulp of turnips enters as a large basic constituent. Consider again the production of breakfast foods we have been told that frozen wheat is largely used in manufacturing some of these. Now, cotton seed oil, turnips and frozen wheat are doubtless considered not injurious to health. They may not be as good as pure foods, just as rice and macaroni are not as good a food for hard manual work as pork and wheat bread are. But if some people can perform their work efficiently on the cheaper products they should not be denied them, and, if denied a cheap food in one particular the rule should hold for other lines. The latest and most patent violation of this rule was the sale of horse-meat in Montreal this winter, and which failed to excite little but derisive comment on conditions in Canada's largest city.

The next objection to Mr. Burnham's criticism was the difficulty and expense of supervising the production of butter substitutes, manifestly a weaker objection than the previous one. Supervision is a mere matter of detail. Factories could be licensed and supervised just as a distillery is.

The next important objection to Mr. Burnham's criticism was the competition of a butter substitute with the pure article. While not entering into the discussion this objection seems to have been at the back of the minister's bill which protects the dairy industry from such a competitor. More than likely the dairy industry would not have to consider seriously the competition of a butter substitute. People who can afford the pure article will buy it in preference to the substitute. The increasing demand for pure Canadian butter makes its market as stable and substantial as that of any food commodity. Those who cannot afford to buy butter do not buy it, or if they do it is in very limited quantities. If the price of pure butter were slightly lowered the natural consequence would be an increased sale which would more than make up the reduction in price. But as the demand for pure butter is increasing and as natural causes operate to limit the supply at certain seasons, the competition of a butter substitute cannot be reasonably considered to cause serious price fluctuations. In view of the facts it appears that Mr. Burnham had the best side of the case and is to be commended for taking so reasonable a position and one in the best interest of the Canadian people.

PERHAPS the real reason why the Council decided not to send a delegate to the City Planning Conference was that most of them thought only a single ticket would be provided.

NO DELEGATE FROM THIS CITY.

THE CITY COUNCIL put up a very weak excuse for not sending a representative from this city to the International Conference on City Planning in Toronto. Perhaps they think they know all there is to know about city planning. If so, they should have been bold enough to say so straight from the shoulder and not hide behind the excuse that they could not use any of the ideas or suggestions presented at the Conference this year as though the world would end before another municipal election.

Be it remembered that the Conference is not intended to solve all municipal problems this year. It is purely of an educative nature and no one would say that Peterborough's Council is the acme of erudition. When Mayor Buller said that a representative ought to be sent Aldermen Anderson and Johnston advanced the excuse mentioned and the matter was dropped.

In view of the fact that Mayor Buller is talking about Hydro Radials for Peterboro, it would be the part of wisdom to learn as much about such a scheme as possible. This question will be discussed by eminent authorities yet the body which will have the direction of such an undertaking has apparently contented itself with relying on its own statesmanship and self-sufficient capacity. The question of street-car extension and enlargement of boundaries to include new subdivisions is a problem of not sufficient interest to the council to heed the formation of a city planning act. Here are citizens advocating a traffic policeman for this city and the council not interested in a study of the causes of traffic blockade and congestion. Of course the council will be able to stumble through this city's problems just like any village council does, looking out for re-election, and afraid to shoulder the responsibility for initiative when it is required. However we always thought this city had a progressive and original council.

THE G.T.P. DIFFERENT FROM C.N.R.

THE CASE OF THE Grand Trunk is quite different from the C.N.R. The latter was a Mackenzie and Mann proposition with the government a kind of third party, whereas the former was a scheme struck between the Liberal Government and a new company. The Laurier Government undertook to guarantee 75 per cent. of the cost, whatever it might be, of the mountain section. The company offered it equivalent securities and the amount of the government's assistance was inadequate. On the other hand, the securities were exhausted. The company had nothing more to pledge, as it were. A new ground must, therefore, be found—a new basis for a fresh agreement, rather than the continuation of the old agreement, the terms of which have been exhausted, so to say. It is now for the Government to devise a plan by which it can come to the assistance of the Grand Trunk Pacific to the amount of $15,000,000 The degree of control demanded by the Government in connection with the Canadian Northern hints the gravity of the case. The Grand Trunk Pacific is in a different category. It is not as if the company fell down in any way. On the contrary, it carried out its agreement. It is because the Government part was faulty that the demand is made for further guarantees. In the case of the Canadian Northern there is confession that the end of the tether has been reached and that unless large and generous assistance is given, anything calamitous may happen. The Grand Trunk management has had no misgiving in respect to the application, because the company is perfectly solvent ; the work has been done ; the road is ready, or almost so, for business. There is merely the completion of an arrangement which did not quite meet the need of new conditions which could not have been predicted.

THE CATTLE MARKET.

AT FIRST when the U. S. cattle market was opened to us there was a flurry that pleased our farmers greatly. Any old thing was saleable if it had four legs. In December last, however the Toronto market was considerably higher than the American market. This was so also in February. The markets equalized. But a change is impending. A bill is now before Congress creating an embargo on all foreign cattle not of the best and cleanest class. As in the case of potatoes the U. S. market will draw in its horns again just as soon as the situation is relieved in the U. S. and that is about done. The home market is the market that can be relied on.

EDITORIAL NOTES

THE REVIEW received a beautiful, colored chart illustrating diseases of potatoes in all the various degrees of rottenness and gruesomeness it would rank with some of the mural decorations of medical museums and certainly if potatoes ever get as bad as they are represented they deserve cremation with the man who helps to propogate such atrocities by planting them.

The Liberal caucus appointed a committee to examine and report upon the terms of the new agreement between the Government and the C.N.R. Many Opposition papers didn't wait to examine the terms.

The Duke of Argyll.

Montreal Mail.

The death of His Grace the Duke of Argyll, former Governor-General of Canada, will occasion genuine regret in this country. In the memory of the second generation of Canadians, he holds a place as the Marquis of Lorne, by which title he was known when he represented the late Queen Victoria at Ottawa from 1878 to 1883. With his Royal consort, the Princess Louise, he won the good will of the people of that time, and to this day his name has remained a household word in Canada.

When he returned to the Old Country, the Marquis of Lorne, and later, the Duke of Argyll, remained a friend to this country and never missed an opportunity to give hospitable greeting and entertainment to Canadians who visited Great Britain. He was a gifted and talented man, who left a tradition in this country which will keep his name long familiar to Canadians.

THE HANDICAP

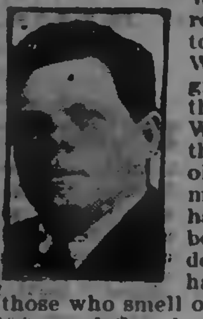
By Walt Mason



Oh, youthful guys, if you would rise, your breath you'll never tarnish with pint or quart of any sort of good old coffin varnish. When you are dry you'll shun old rye, and round the hydrant frolic ; there's naught in town will keep you down like flagons alcoholic. When trade is stale and merchants quail, the grocers and the drapers, the clerks who drink the old red ink first get their walking papers. When railways fire the men they hire, and tell them they must travel, the ones who slug the old brown jug are first to hit the gravel. When merchants say, "To raise the pay of clerks we have a notion," the ones who use the dark red booze are last to get promotion. When there's demand throughout the land for husky men and handy, employers say, "Oh, fade away," to those who smell of brandy. Where e'er he goes a million woes surround the chronic boozer ; the men who pay for work all say : "We want no pickled snoozer." The lovely maid says, "I'm afraid," when drinkers come to court her ; so, youthful jays, improve your ways, and dodge the ail and porter.

ON EDUCATION

I TAKE it that next to honesty, th' most valuable asset any man kin possess is eddication. Without it a feller is about as much use in th' business world as a spavined hoss in a race. Trouble is, though, eddication is a good deal like maple wax. It seems like the more a feller gets the more he wants and anybody who has biled sap in a sugar-bush knows that there's sech a thing as gettin' too much maple wax.

It's the same with eddication. When I see a feller so bound up in search of the why and the wherefor of things thet he can't see wood-vi'lets growin' all 'round him, I'm right liable to give thanks that I'm an old ignoramus. I reckon, at that, I'm some happier in my mind than the chap who has so many letters, indicatin' degrees, arter his name that he has to twist the note-paper sideways t' sign it. How does it strike you?

Birthdays of Note

THURSDAY, MAY SEVENTH

The Hon. William Cameron Edwards, millionaire lumber manufacturer and member of the Senate since 1903, reaches his seventieth birthday to-day. He was born in the township of Clarence, Russel County, and started in the lumber business when he was quite a young man. He is known familiarly as "Don't Worry" Edwards, for it has always been one of his principles not to let business cares interfere with his health. "I never heard of a man who made anything out of worrying," says Senator Edwards. "On the other hand I have heard of many men who have lost their health and ruined their business through worrying. It seems to me that worry is a great waste of energy. If men would only utilize the vital force required for worrying and put it into good hard work there would be fewer business failures in this and in all other countries."

Also born to-day:—

J. W. Allison, Dartmouth, N.S., born Newcastle, N.H., 1851.

H. T. Bovey, formerly of McGill University, born Devonshire, England, 1852.

C. H. Keefer, Ottawa, born Rideau Hall, 1851.

Hon. J. H. Legris, Louiseville, P.Q., born Riviere du Loup, 1850.

A. M. Nanton, Winnipeg, born Toronto, 1860.

Hon. J. H. Turner, London, born Claydon, England, 1834.

COWARDICE COURT
BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

It was Lord Bazelhurst. As Shaw hurried down the drive to meet him, no thought of the feud in mind, two beings even more hopelessly dilapidated ventured from the wood and hobbled up behind the truce bearer, who had now paused to lift his shoulders into a position of dignity and defiance. Shaw's heart was touched. The spectacle was enough to melt the prejudice of any adversary. Lord Cecil's knees trembled. His hand shook as if in a chill. Mud covered, water soaked and bruised, their clothes rent in many places, their hats gone and their hair matted, their legs wabbly, the trio certainly inspired pity, not mirth nor scorn.

"One moment, sir," called his lordship, with a feeble attempt at severity. His voice was hoarse and shaky. "We do not come as friends, dem you. Is my sister here?"

"She is, Lord Bazelhurst. We'll talk this over later on," said Shaw in his friendliest way. "You are worn out and done up, I'm sure—you and your friends. Come; I'm not as bad as you think. I've changed my mind since I saw you last. Let's see if we can't come to an amicable understanding. Miss Drake is waiting up there. Breakfast soon will be ready—hot coffee and all that. Permit me, gentlemen, to invite you to partake of what we have. What say you?"

"Confound you, sir! I—I"— But his brave effort failed him. He staggered and would have fallen had not the duke caught him from behind.

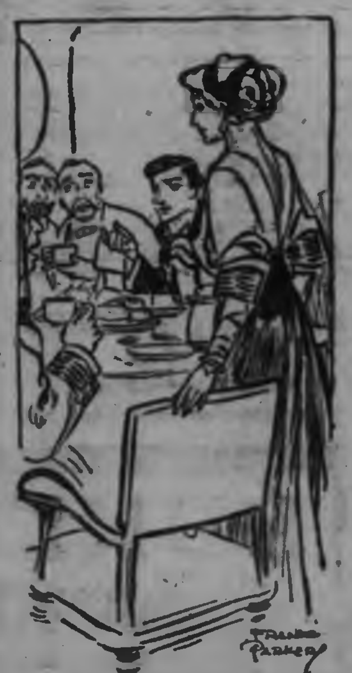
"Thanks, old chap," said Harminster to Shaw. "We will come in for a moment. I say, perhaps you could give us a dry dud or two. Bazelhurst is in a bad way, and so is the count. It was a devil of a storm."

Penelope came down from the porch to meet them. Without a word she took her brother's arm. He stared at her with growing resentment.

"Dem it all, Pen," he chattered. "you're not at all wet, are you? Look at me! All on your account too."

"Dear old Cecil! All on Evelyn's account, you mean," she said softly, wistfully.

"I shall have an understanding with her when we get home," he said earnestly. "She shan't treat my sister like this again."



"When she comes back she will be Mrs. Randolph Shaw."

"No," said Shaw from the other side; "she shan't."

"By Jove, Shaw, are you with me?" demanded his lordship in surprise.

"Depends on whether you are with me," said the other. Penelope flushed.

Hot coffee, chops, griddle cakes and maple sirup soon put the contending forces at their ease. Bazelhurst so far forgot himself as to laugh amiably at his host's jokes. The count responded in his most piquant dialect, and the duke swore by an ever useful Lord Harry that he had never tasted such a breakfast.

"By Jove, Pen," exclaimed her brother in rare good humor, "it's almost a sin to take you away from such good cooking as this."

"You're not going to take her away, however," said Shaw. "She has come to stay."

"What—what the devil do you mean, sir?" demanded Lord Cecil, his coffee cup shaking so violently that the contents overflowed.

"She's going over to Plattsburg with me today, and when she comes back she will be Mrs. Randolph Shaw. That's what I mean, your lordship."

Three of his listeners choked with amazement and then coughed painfully. Feebly they set their cups down and gulped as if they had something to swallow. The duke was the first to find his tongue, and he was quite at a loss for words.

"B—by Jove," he said blankly, "that's demmed hot coffee!"

"Is this true, Penelope?" gasped his lordship.

"Yes, Cecil. I've promised to marry him."

"It isn't because you feel that you have no home with me?"

"I love him. It's a much older story than you think," she said simply.

"I say, that hits me hard," said the duke with a wry face. "Still, I join in saying, God bless you."

"We're trying to end the feud, you see," said Penelope.

Tears came into his lordship's pale eyes. He looked first at one and then at the other and then silently extended his hand to Randolph Shaw. He wrung it vigorously for a long time before speaking. Then, as if throwing a weight off his mind, he remarked:

"I say, Shaw, I'm sorry about that dog. I've got an English bull terrier down there that's taken a ribbon or so. If you don't mind, I'll send him up to you. He—he knows Penelope."

WOULD ABOLISH TIPS.

Senator Davis' Bill Receives Support In the Senate.

OTTAWA, May 7. Tips will be abolished within a month if Senator Davis (Prince Albert) and a number of other Senators and members of Parliament have their way, and it looks as if they might.

Senator Davis' bill, which provides for a fine or imprisonment for tipping and making the employer, the employe and the person offering the gratuity liable, was given a second reading in the Senate yesterday.

In moving the reading Senator Davis said that within recent years an intolerable system of petty bribery had grown up all over the world, known as the tipping system. It had become such a nuisance that it was time it was grappled with by legislation, and he believed his bill would have the support of 90 per cent. of the people of the country who were now subject to a growing scale of graft and tips in order to obtain accommodation and service. A person on a journey had to constantly have his hand in his pocket and had to bribe his way throughout his trip.

The Senator said that tipping had a demoralizing effect on persons who received them. It had a tendency to pauperize waiters, porters and other persons who should stand on a plane of manhood above the servile position which they were placed in through the acceptance of gratuities. Employers should pay their servants and not expect the public to pay their help. Tipping also developed a spirit of arrogance on the part of those serving the public.

Senator Ross of Middleton sympathized with the object of the bill and said "Every man should pay once, but no law of God or man should make him pay twice."

Senator Poirier, Gordon and Cloran all spoke in favor of the bill, and it was given a second reading.

DUKE AS AUCTIONEER.

Marlborough Officiates at Sale of Some of His Land.

LONDON, May 7.—Peers are numerous in various lines of business in Great Britain, but the Duke of Marlborough entered an entirely new field at Oxford Tuesday afternoon when he appeared as a fully licensed auctioneer to dispose to the highest bidder of a number of lots of his Oxfordshire estate.

The novelty aroused a great degree of public interest and the titled auctioneer worked up spirited bidding, disposing of most of the lots at good prices.

In explaining his unconventional course the duke says he desires to lessen the cost of transferring the land—sale by auction does away with the expense of cataloguing—and to make it clear that any applicant for land he owns will receive prompt and business-like treatment at his hands.

Captain Scott's Journals.

The original autograph journals kept by Captain Scott throughout his antarctic expedition, including those carried with him to the pole in which his last "Message to the Public" was written, have been placed by Lady Scott in the British museum. The trustees have authorized the exhibition of the journals in a temporary case in the department of manuscripts.

Why Do Women Suffer

When They Could Be Well?

It is so easy to be well and strong and able to enjoy life, that it is surprising how many women drag themselves through the day suffering tortures from lame back due to kidney trouble. Mrs. Wilcox found the way to cure herself and gladly writes about it so that others may be induced to use the same remedy.

BIG LORRAINE.

"During the last winter, I was bothered very much with a Weak Back. I was advised by a friend to try GIN PILLS and I did. The first box I found helped me very much and I found when I had taken the second, I was completely cured." MRS. F. WILCOX.

If GIN PILLS do not do all that we say they will—let us know, and we will cheerfully refund you your money. Send for a free sample and see for yourself that they will do you good. Then buy the regular boxes at your dealers—50c., 6 for $2.50. 202

TORTURED WITH RHEUMATISM

Could Not Walk, Until "Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured Him

CHATHAM, ONT., April 3rd, 1913.

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioner of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure, left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up, making it impossible for me to walk. My bowels were so constipated that I only had one passage a week until I got to using "Fruit-a-tives". They cured me of both the Rheumatism and Constipation. In my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health. No more Rheumatism or Constipation. You are at perfect liberty to publish this letter if it will be advantageous to "Fruit-a-tives".

GEORGE WALKER

Don't suffer with Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago or Neuralgia all this winter. Take "Fruit-a-tives" now and be free of pain. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VI.—Second Quarter, For May 10, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xvi, 1-13. Memory Verses, 8, 9—Golden Text, Luke xvi, 10—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Our last lesson was concerning a young man who wasted his father's substance in riotous living (Luke xv, 13). Now we read of a steward who wasted his master's goods.

We are all stewards of Him who giveth us life and breath and all things; in whom we live and move and have our being; in whose hand our breath is and whose are all our ways; who giveth richly all things to enjoy. (Acts xvii, 25, 28; Dan. v, 23; I Tim. vi, 17). We are either good stewards, using His gifts for others as well as ourselves, or we are selfish, using all things for ourselves only. The rich man of next week's lesson, we will find, was unbelieving and selfish. The rich man of chapter xii, 16-20, was thoroughly selfish and foolish. The rich young ruler of chapter xviii, 23, was also more interested in his riches than in a proper use of them, and in that connection our Lord said that riches sometimes hindered a man from entering the kingdom. It is not always so, for Zaccheus was rich and Joseph of Arimathea (Luke xix, 2, 9; Matt. xxvii, 57), as also were Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, David and others.

Money is not necessarily evil, but it is written, "The love of money is the root of all evil," and it is better to follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness (I Tim. vi, 10, 11). This present world or age is evil, it lieth in the wicked one, the devil is its god, its friendship is enmity with God, we are not to be conformed to it, for we are not of it (Gal. i, 4; I John v, 19; II Cor. iv, 4; Jas. iv, 4; Rom. xii, 2; John xvii, 14, 16). Therefore we cannot serve God and Mammon, or riches, but we can make good use of Mammon and use this world without abusing it (verses 9, 13).

As to this unjust steward whom our Lord uses as an illustration, he was found guilty of defrauding his employer and was told that he must lose his situation. He at once set about providing for himself when he would be no longer steward by cutting down the indebtedness of all his lord's debtors, thus laying them under obligation to him to befriend him when he would have no employment. He was such a dishonest fellow that he did not care how much he robbed his master if he could only provide for himself. His master commended his shrewdness in thus providing for his future, even though it was at further cost to himself. Our Lord did not speak well of him, for He would not justify a wrong transaction, but He did say that this bad man was wiser in his way than those who made no provision for their future in the world to come.

I have often been asked how our Lord could commend this unjust man and his sin. Our Lord did not commend him; it was his own lord, or master, who told him, virtually, that he was a clever rascal in providing for his future in this fraudulent way. Our Lord said to His disciples that it would be well to use all present opportunities in their reach with reference to the future that many might welcome them in the kingdom. All believers are put in trust with the gospel and with the talents and pounds, and all are stewards of the manifold grace of God, and some are stewards of the mysteries of God, all have received the spirit to profit withal (I Thess. ii, 4; Matt. xxv; Luke xix; I Pet. iv, 10; I Cor. iv, 1; xii, 7, 11). We are debtors to every creature to give the gospel to all, and by going, or helping others to go, and thus win souls, we are gathering unto Him those who will welcome us in His kingdom, even though we may never have seen them face to face on earth. Thus we cause joy in the presence of the angels now and great increase of joy to ourselves in His kingdom.

We cannot remind you too often that there are no degrees in salvation, no one can be more saved than another or more safe at one time than another after Jesus Christ is truly received. All who are in Christ are equally safe, and safe forever. But all saved ones are expected to serve the living and true God as He may direct, and every one shall receive his own reward according to his own labor (I Cor. iii, 8; Rev. xxii, 12; Luke xiv, 14). The Pharisees who were covetous or money lovers derided Him and His teachings, desiring the approval of men rather than the approval of God, and they violently opposed the King and the kingdom until they finally killed Him, saying, "We have no king but Caesar." Those who prefer the friendship of this world are called adulterers (Jas. iv, 4). The true disciple is married to the Lord to bring forth fruit unto God (Rom. vii, 4), but Israel was an empty vine bringing forth fruit unto himself, a degenerate plant of a strange vine bearing wild grapes (Hos. x, 1; Jer. ii, 21; Isa. v, 2).

That which men esteem and which God esteems are as far separate as hell and heaven, and yet the great crowd many professing Christians included prefer the ways of man and the praise of men because the god of this world hath blinded their minds. Let us consider well if we are faithful to the trust committed to us, desiring in all things the approval of our Lord, whose stewards we are, and remembering that we must give an account to Him of our stewardship.

Saving Lives at Sea.

During the year 1913 the Royal National Lifeboat Institution maintained a fleet of 274 lifeboats and saved forty vessels of various sizes. Since the institution was established in 1824 it has been granted rewards for the saving of over 51,400 lives from shipwreck on the coasts of the United Kingdom.

MONTREAL FOR THE MONTREALER

Mayor Will Allow Only Bona Fide Citizens to Take Civic Jobs

MONTREAL, May 7. — Mayor Mederic Martin, who has delegated to himself supreme powers as employer of city help, introduced his policy of Montreal-for-the-Montrealer for the first time Tuesday. He personally selected the men to go on the fire and police forces, and insisted that no appointment should go to men who could not speak both French and English, and who were not Montrealers. He also refused to consider any applications from single men until married men had been dealt with, and made every successful candidate swear that he had not offered money for his position.

HORTICULTURE

At the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa and at each of the Branch Farms and Stations distributed over the Dominion a large amount of investigational work is carried on year by year in the growing of fruits, vegetables and flowers. The purpose of this work is to discover and develop not only improved varieties and strains of these crops but to find out the most successful methods of culture for the different provinces and districts.

The result of last year's work has been brought together in a summary prepared by Mr. W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist, and the Superintendents of the Branch Farms and Stations and issued in Bulletin No. 77, copies of which are available to all who apply for them to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

Referring to apples at the Brandon, Manitoba, Farm the Bulletin states that a large number of hybrid trees are doing well. These are stated to be bearing fruit which makes excellent preserves and jelly.

At Lethbridge, Alberta, culture with and without irrigation was carried on. Sections dealing with ornamental gardening are especially interesting and instructive to those who take pride in the appearance of their home surroundings.

MRS. LYON'S ACHES AND PAINS

Have All Gone Since Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Terre Hill, Pa.—"Kindly permit me to give you my testimonial in favor of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first began taking it I was suffering from female troubles for some time and had almost all kinds of aches—pains in lower part of back and in sides, and pressing down pains. I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the aches and pains are all gone and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. AUGUSTUS LYON, Terre Hill, Pa.

It is true that nature and a woman's work has produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known. From the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham, forty years ago, gave to womankind a remedy for their peculiar ills which has proved more efficacious than any other combination of drugs ever compounded, and today Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is recognized from coast to coast as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases that it has saved them from surgical operations.

S-W Inside Floor Paint
S-W Family Paint
S-W Kopal

It is wonderful what a little money spent in paint, and a little time in applying it, will do in the way of improvement around your home.

Worn floors can be made to look bright and fresh—dingy furniture made as good as new—cupboards and shelves made clean and sanitary—dull woodwork and doors, bright and clean—and the walls instead of being covered with faded, dust-collecting wall paper or streaky and shabby kalsomine, can be made artistic and sanitary. Here are the special Sherwin-Williams products that will do all this for you at small expense.

For your floors use S-W Inside Floor Paint for a durable painted finish, or S-W Floorlac for an attractive finish imitating all the popular hardwoods such as Oak, Mahogany, etc.

Refinish your furniture with a coat of S-W Varnish Stain, a combination of a permanent pigment stain and a durable varnish, which renews the old furniture in such colors as Mahogany, Oak, Rosewood, Walnut, etc. S-W Floorlac can also be used for the same purpose.

Cupboards, shelves, painted baseboards, doors, and wainscotting can all be finished handily with S-W Family Paint, a durable oil paint made in twenty-one attractive colors, easy to keep clean.

The best finish for walls is Sherwin-Williams Flat-tone, a durable oil paint that dries with a soft, velvety flat effect. It is made in 24 colors that are the choice of expert decorators. It is very durable and will last for years and can be washed with soap and water, without injury.

BUTTER SUBSTITUTES

Peterboro Members in House at Ottawa Take Part in Debate

The following are extracts from Hansard on a debate in the House, in regard to a bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of dairy products and to prohibit the manufacture of butter substitutes.

On section 5—butter substitutes and remanufacture of butter prohibited:

Mr. Burnham: What are people to do who wish to purchase an absolutely healthy substance, labelled as what it is, and not purporting to be butter?

Mr. Burrell: This matter has been discussed very thoroughly not only by the dairy associations but also in this House, where the clause was carefully considered. I am not disputing that oleomargarine might be made of perfectly healthy substances and be wholesome as food; but, on the other hand, this is the oldest piece of dairy legislation on our statute book, passed in 1886; and though there have been occasional criticisms, I do not think that any Government has thought it wise to change it, nor, I confess, do I. Although oleomargarine may be wholesome, yet, unfortunately, in practice, where the by-product of carcases of animals can be made up into a product resembling butter, although it may be sold by the merchant on its merits as oleomargarine, yet, by the time it gets to the table of the second-rate hotel or restaurant, it is sold to the customer who pays for butter. In the United States, where they have had some such provision as the hon. member would indicate, they found it almost impossible to work it out in practice, and it has given endless trouble. I must say that in the interests of the dairymen as well as of the general public it would be very unwise to alter this section.

Mr. Burnham: I cannot agree that this legislation is in the interests of the general public. Public inspectors may well be appointed, but the assertion that poor people should not have the privilege of buying a perfectly wholesome product is, on the face, untenable. I do not say for one moment that in the dairy interests this legislation is advisable, but it cannot be in the interests of all the public.

Mr. Murrell: Of the majority of the public.

Mr. Burnham: Surely the object of legislation is to legislate for the people.

Mr. Burrell: My hon. friend knows that you cannot get absolute unanimity of opinion.

Mr. Burnham: I maintain that that portion of the public which is the least able to buy food and the least able to maintain its own rights should have every facility for the obtaining of food and should be allowed to purchase cheap food as long as it is good and wholesome. There is no denying that oleomargarine, if properly made, is good food, and to take any action to prohibit its use is to do something in the interests of the dairy people, but not in the interests of the public who would like to buy it.

Mr. Broder: The real object of this legislation is to do away with imitations of real butter. People may eat lard and tallow if they wish to do so, but it should not be colored and sold to the public as butter. The genuine article ought to be protected.

Mr. Nesbitt: The hon. member for Dundas says that if the people want to eat lard they can, but lard is not oleomargarine; it is a different thing altogether. Oleomargarine is a perfectly wholesome product, probably just as wholesome as butter. Of course, the Bill has been passed by the Agricultural Committee and, as the minister thinks that this legislation is in the interests of the country at large, I do not intend to say anything against it, but I share in a measure the views of the hon. member for West Peterborough.

Mr. Oliver: Has the minister or the Government any information as to any infractions of the law?

Mr. Burrell: I could not give my hon. friend any specific instances. We are continually enforcing our Butter Act; so far as oleomargarine is concerned, I think the law has been pretty well lived up to, because it is known that the department will strongly attack any attempt to contravene the law. Notwithstanding what the hon. member for West Peterborough says, I have no doubt that if we eliminate this section and allow the production of butter substitutes, it would take a whole army of inspectors to prevent fraud.

Mr. Nesbitt: Does the minister know of any oleomargarine having been sold in Canada?

Mr. Burrell: I could not answer my hon. friend on the spur of the moment; I shall be glad to get him that information.

Mr. Oliver: What is the minimum amount of water permitted in butter?

Mr. Burrell: Sixteen per cent.

Mr. Oliver: Is subsection C a new provision?

Mr. Burrell: Perhaps I can make the matter clear by reading section 299 of the old Act:

No person shall mix with butter and acid, alkali, chemical or any substance whatever, which is introduced or used for the purpose or with the effect of causing the butter to absorb water or any part of milk or cream; or manufacture, import into Canada, or offer, sell, expose or have in his possession for sale any such mixed butter, any renovated butter or process butter.

Subsection C of section 5 of the present Bill makes it quite plain that we can prosecute those who undertake commercially what is known as the process of renovating butter by re-churning and adding more water.

Mr. Oliver: There is a difference between grading, mixing the butter and putting it into merchantable shape, and reworking it for the purpose of introducing an extra amount of water. The big dairying establishments have out-stations at which they buy cream and butter from the farmers. The buyer is made up into different forms and quantities, but is probably perfectly good butter, though not in merchantable shape. It is brought to the central factory, graded, reworked, put into merchantable shape and sold. I know that that is a legitimate part of the business of large dairy interests in Edmonton. I have never heard of any objection to its being done; it always struck me as being a very proper proceeding.

Mr. Bradbury: They closed a factory in Winnipeg for doing the very same thing.

Mr. Oliver: Possibly; but it seems to me to be a method strictly in line with the best interests of all parties concerned. It enables the farmer to get a cash price for his butter and enables the dealer to dispose of it to the satisfaction of his customers.

Mr. Bradbury: A firm in Winnipeg composed of men from my own town had a factory in which they invested $15,000. They were buying the cheaper grades of butter and reworking it. I do not know what the process was, but they were not making it out of any other substances than butter made by farmers in the surrounding district. They were put out of business by the late Minister of Agriculture and lost all the money invested. A claim was put in by Mr. D. F. Reid, of Selkirk, who had invested a lot of money, and the late Government promised to compensate him for putting him out of business because when he went into business there was no Act against it. I have always thought that the firm was treated in a very harsh manner, and that the Government of Canada owe these people about $10,000.

Mr. Webster: The re-working of butter is permitted. A merchant goes through selections he has gathered, picks out the colour that suits best, puts it into the worker and makes up two or three tubs of the butter. The Bill does not interfere with that practice, but it does interfere with a man who melts butter and adds fresh milk and acid to give it a peculiar flavour which will last for three or four days.

Mr. Nesbitt: You cannot re-churn butter; that is a farce.

Mr. Webster: My dear man, allow me to inform you that I can take you to a factory in Canada where they have been trying to do that for two years, and in some cases they have succeeded so well that they have sold two hundred pounds of water at the price of butter.

Mr. Oliver: Subsection (a) of clause 3 says that no person shall sell or offer for sale butter that is not in a certain shape, but the last sentence says:

Nothing in this paragraph shall be held to apply to butter in rolls or lumps, of indiscriminate weight, as sold by farmers.

If the farmers sells to anybody but the consumer, the person who buys from him has in turn to sell again, and it seems to me that the section as drafted can scarcely convey the intent that its framers had. There must be some way of permitting the merchant to sell the rolled butter that he has brought from the farmer without reworking it the shape that the first part of the clause calls for.

Mr. Burrell: The first part of the clause applies to creameries and other large establishments who make a practice of selling butter in certain shapes, but it is not meant to apply to the ordinary farmer who may go into a store and offer a lot of rolls weighing either half a pound, three-quarters of a pound, or a pound, which are sold by total weight. The clause is designed to give to the public full weight from all the great butter-making establishments.

Mr. Bradbury: This section says that no person shall sell butter, mouled or cut into prints, blocks, squares or pats, unless they are of the full weight of one-quarter of a pound, one-half pound, one pound, or two pounds, at the time they are moulded or cut. A consumer goes into a store to get a pound of butter, and finding the butter has shrunk in the meantime he takes objection, but the merchant tells him it was of the proper weight when moulded, and there is no recourse for the purchaser." It seems to me that a person who buys a pound of butter should get a pound of butter, whether it has shrunk or not. Again it says that nothing in this section shall apply to rolls or lumps, but it seems to me that butter sold in rolls or lumps should be of a defined weight, and that everything should be sold by the pound. The consumers of Canada are being robbed by legislation of this kind. This section would enable the merchant, or the farmer if you will, to sell butter under weight and to say it was all right when it was moulded. I think the law should be that if a man buys a one pound print of butter he should get one pound.

Mr. Sexsmith: The objection raised by the hon. member for Selkirk (Mr. Bradbury), as pointed out by the hon. member for Brockville (Mr. Webster), is not reasonable. You may ship one thousand pounds of butter, having ample weight when you shipped it, but when you store it the water evaporates and actually you get the same amount of butter, but you get a little less water. It was pointed out before the committee that certain persons in Montreal had been buying butter, recharning it and remoulding it, and that samples were actually discovered which contained fifteen per cent. of water. The object of this clause is to prevent anything like that, and I think it is perfectly clear.

Mr. Bradbury: That may seem fair to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sexsmith), but is it fair to the consumers? For example, if one light-weight loaf is found in the establishment of a baker, his whole supply of bread is confiscated.

Mr. Webster: But bread does not get to be three months old.

Mr. Bradbury: Bread shrinks in weight very rapidly; and the baker has to make allowance for that when he is making up the loaf, and quite properly so in the interests of the consumer. If the dairyman knows that his butter is going to shrink, why should he not be compelled to put in the extra half ounce in the same way as the baker has to. A great necessity today is that we should have some proper law governing weights of commodities which are sold to the consumer. A man buys a pound of tea and he has to pay for the weight of the paper and the lead around the tea, which is absolutely unfair.

Mr. Sexsmith: Is there anything in the law that regulates the percentage of moisture in bread?

Mr. Oliver: Every one knows that bread shrinks in weight.

Mr. Sexsmith: Yes, but there is nothing in the law to say that there shall only be a certain percentage of moisture in it, and the law provides for the percentage of moisture in the case of butter.

Mr. Webster: In many cases where a merchant purchases a roll or a lump of butter, he does not sell it en bloc; he cuts it up to suit his customers, giving one customer two pounds, another one pound, and so on. When he purchases it, he weighs it and pays the farmer for the weight that he gets.

Mr. Sexsmith: Supposing a creamery man puts up a thousand pounds of butter in prints with fifteen per cent. of water, as he is compelled to keep within the percentage of water designated in this Bill, namely sixteen per cent. He sells that butter; it is placed in cold storage for perhaps six months, and the retail merchant sells it again. The butter was in legitimate prints when it was put into cold storage; but, according to the statements of some hon. members, when the retailer sells these prints, if the prints are under weight, say by half an ounce, the retailer should be liable. I think that is entirely wrong, because if we analysed that butter we would find a less percentage of water in it. If the retailer were to be held liable, butter could not be stored at all.

Mr. Sexsmith: The reason of these words:

Nothing in this paragraph shall be held to apply to butter in rolls or lumps of indiscriminate weight, as sold by farmers.

—is because butter sold in this way is weighed by the customers; but butter put up in prints by a creamery or by a farmer in the little patent arrangement used for making a print is not weighed by the merchant when bought by a customer, if put up in a standard quarter-pound or half-pound or pound print. The object of this Bill is to control the creameries, and not butter sold to customers through the retail trade that is not supposed to be weighed. A grocer assumes that a pound of butter bought from a creamery is a pound of butter. If the public is protected to the extent that the creamery must put up the butter in that shape with a certain percentage of water, and that when it is put up it must not have less than that weight, I think that is ample protection.

NINETY PERCENT OF THE CRIMINALS BEFORE LOCAL AUTHORITIES USE CIGARETTES

Ninety per cent. of the criminals who come under the attention of the local authorities are cigarette fiends. Such was the information gathered at the Sheriff's office this morning, while a Review reporter was discussing the proposed amendments to the laws regulating the sale of tobacco. The proposals provide for the segregation of the traffic, that is, that it shall be sold only in licensed tobacco stores, and not in grocery stores, restaurants, cafes, etc. The proposals also ask the government to force manufacturers to stipulate by stamp the ingredients which the "smokes" are made of.

MISHAP AT THE FIRE STATION

Fireman Dudy, who was recently appointed to the fire department, fractured a bone of his left leg while descending the brass pole this afternoon.

LEARN TO SWIM.

The annual free swimming lessons conducted by the Y.M.C.A. will commence on May 18th.

These lessons in past years have proved a great success and the instruction is being carried on this year in a more extensive manner.

MILLBROOK TO HAVE ATHLETIC ASS'N

Millbrook, May 7.—A public meeting, called by Reeve Doak, was held for the purpose of organizing an Athletic Association. The following officers were elected:

President—R. J. Doak.
Vice-Pres.—J. N. McGill.
Secretary—L. C. Russell.
Treasurer—C. W. Richards.
Executive Committee—P. Handley, J. Steele, E. Sootheran, T. Miller, P. I. Bentley, Doc Morden, T. Harkness, J. J. Clark, H. Orr, Ed. McCurry.

Some people never seem to realise the difference between their own way and the only way.

WHERE PROMISES ARE MADE GOOD

Every detail of our workshop, including the mechanical equipment, is planned to make it a model of accuracy and convenience, which from your standpoint means satisfaction and prompt service in the manufacture of new glasses or repairs on old ones.
Whether we originally made your glasses or not, we can immediately duplicate a broken lens, no matter how complicated. If you meet with a misfortune of this kind, simply telephone us and if we haven't your prescription on file, we will send for the broken glasses, and when you call a little later, you will find them waiting for you.
We have all Mr. Browett's Prescriptions, covering the entire time he was in business in this city.
"PERLO" Quality Lenses are what we use in all our work. They are the Best—we use no others.

CHURCH DOING A WORK COMMENCED BY LABOR

man who is willing to work will accept charity when he can earn what charity is giving him, if he can secure work, and that is what the labor movement to trying to provide. We seek to place, by association and relation as individuals, conditions on such a basis that charity will not be a demand but the dispensing of judgment will do away with it. Some claim an identity between labor and capital. So far as I am concerned I claim that the exploiter of labor and the laborer cannot become identified with each other exactly, as the man who sells his labor power wants the highest price obtainable for it.

Surplus Power.

"Henry Ford has revealed what is meant by surplus value. All surplus value is apportioned and applied to machinery. Capital is essential to labor and vice versa, but when we realise what share labor gets of the surplus value we find that the greater mass secures only a bare existence. Henry Ford's investment amounted to $2,000,000, and the profits to $25,000,000. Most employers when shown by the financial statement that their company is making great profits and more in comparison to their item of labor, the stock is watered, but Henry Ford took 50 per cent. of the money which was hitherto going into the pockets of seven men interested in the company, and divided it equally, among his men as their earning power had not been rewarded as per profits produced.

At this juncture Mr. Simpson referred to the great work done by the Typographical Union, which had provided for pensions to old members, and a $1,000,000 sanitarium in Colorado for it's sick. "If that is not carrying out the spirit of the scriptures I am mistaken. Every penny needed to pension the older men and erect the sanitarium has been paid by the members of the union, each paying so much per centage of his wage, so the man who makes $40 per wek is treated on the same basis as the one who only made $12 per week during his work as a typo. That is but one of the manifestations of the spirit of the labor movement.

Canada's Wealth.

"One-third of the wealth of the Dominion of Canada is controlled by forty men. Look how the poor Indian was exploited in the early days by the early French and English settlers. He was given whiskey for his furs. After a while the traders devised a plan of cutting expenses by watering the whisky. The Indian was not so slow after all, and tested the barrel by pouring some of the contents on a fire. If it burned it was good whisky. If it put the fire out it was fire water. To anyone who studies the treatment of the Indian by the early settlers the facts make his blood boil if he has any sense of British justice in his blood. The government gave vast land grants to this ring of traders. They said, the land is all right to look at, but what good is it. Then it was that the peasants of France and England were induced to come to Canada. They were placed in these farms, became the producers but received practically nothing for their work.

"Then again members of parliament in the early days voted themselves railroad charters, and then granted themselves subsidies to build them, and also secured land by grant. Empire builders, like Mackenzie and Mann, for instance. When a man conducts a grocery store and gets into financial difficulties he is referred to as a failure. But when Empire Builders like Mackenzie and Mann get into hot water all they have to do is to ask the government for $40,000,000 and they get it.

"When you see the premier of a western province sitting in the Chateau Laurier on the same leather backed couch with Sir Donald Mann and Sir William Mackenzie, scheming to find some form of securing the sum required, is it any wonder that the workingman should not be urged to get up and fight and organise himself that he may have some say in the legislation of his country. The time has come for him to step in.

"Last week I went to Ottawa as a member of a delegation to ask the government to compel a railway to operate cars on tracks it had laid in Toronto and would you believe me, that a member of the house had the effrontery to stand up and oppose the motion when he was receiving a retaining fee as corporation counsel for the company. And he was supposed to be representing the people.

"I am not in this game to play. Fourteen years ago I used to leave my home and go to the corner of Richmond and Yonge Street alone to preach socialism. Despite the fact that I have never taken back any statement I have made concerning socialism, I was elected to the Board of Control of Toronto last January by the largest vote ever polled for a candidate for that body. I do not claim there are 25,550 socialists in Toronto, but the vote was an evidence that the old prejudice against labor men and one who is a socialist had been broken. Therefore my insistent propaganda has not been fruitless.

A Political Movement.

"Many say the labor movement is developing a political movement within its organization. That is correct. We need representation in parliament to engage in matters directly affecting the labor cause, such as the workmen's compensation act. They say we have no brains. Advertisements read, '500 hands wanted,' but I tell you that Fred Bancroft who represented labor in the drafting of the act, did more for the interests of labor than the lawyers engaged by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association did for the latter. Mr. Bancroft's name should be a household one in the home of every workingman, and I am sure every workingman in the country appreciates to the fullest degree what a great service he has been to labor in the drafting of the act which was passed by parliament last week."

PEERLESS LINENS DIRECT FROM OLD IRELAND

The pride of every good housewife is her Linen Chest, and with summer almost upon us, many are bethinking them of supplies for the country home. Then there is the bride-to-be who has her mind focused on a certain day in June, and who at present is happily employed in filling a "bottom drawer." Is it any wonder then that our Linen Department is at its best now, and stocked to overflowing with things you will surely need, in reliable qualities and at very low prices.

HIGH COST OF DRINK SOLVED

Smooth Individual Turned the Trick at Dental Parlors

A smooth looking individual solved the high cost of drinking problem at the expense of a local dentist this morning. Entering the dental parlors the stranger complained of a bad tooth.

"Which one is it," asked the molar extractor, after he had seated his customer in the chair.

"Thath one, thway back thwere," said the stranger, as he tried to place his finger on the painful member.

Forthwith the dentist commenced prying operations. He had pried into the defective "chewer" for some depth when the stranger said:

"Easy boy, easy. I guess I'll have to have some whisky. I can't stand the pain."

A good sized jolt was supplied the thirsty one, and he reckoned he felt better, but after the dentist had brought his probing equipment into action again the stranger again showed signs of much suffering, and more whisky was given him. The second one was not a mere jolt but was more like a collision. Once agin the dentist tried to locate the seat of trouble, and this time he drew blood. The sight of blood had a decided "thirsty" effect on the stranger, and more of it was demanded. This time a real, regular "take-me-home" slug was provided, after which the stranger remarked, "I guess I'll have to come back again as I cannot stand the pain."

"S'long ole chap, see yuh 'gain," said the stranger, as he wobbled through the door.

"Well, I'll be hanged if I don't boost for local option," said the man with the pull, who not only lost some valuable time, but also parted with three shots in the arm from his medicine bottle.

PUBLIC SCHOOL LEAGUE GAMES

The game between Centrals and Queen Alexandra yesterday afternoon resulted in a neat little victoly for the Central by a score of 12-7. The winners worked two pitchers, Cherett and Frost. Gibson, their catcher, looked after the receiving department par excellence, and was also prominent with the willow.

Umpire—Mr. Nichols.

King Edwards Again.

At the Queen Mary grounds, King Edwards defeated the West Enders by 9-0, the feature of the game being a grand catch in the fourth by "Billy" Mowat, of the West Ward nine.

Batteries—King Edward: Frost and Braund; Queen Mary: Williamson and Flowers.

The southerners cinched the contest in the first innings, when they collected six runs, on their own hitting and loose fielding by the opposition.

Doubled the Score.

The King George boys and the South Centrals played an interesting game, resulting in a victory for the King George's by a score of 14 to 7.

SPORTING COMMENT

Just look at the manner in which Ray Caldwell of Frank Chance's Yankees is mowing 'em down. Ray is Chance's best bet in the hurling department, but McHale, Keating, Fisher and a few more will be just about as good in a few weeks. Yesterday Washington gathered three stingy hits off Caldwell. Evidently Chance was about right when he stated he had the best collection of hurlers he ever managed. For a club finishing in seventh place last year the Yanks are setting some clip and are in second place.

George Ort in an interview states that Knotty Lee's Beavers are stronger than any of the Canadian League clubs of 1913, and he thinks they are the team to beat. Of course George may be right, but it must be remembered that he plays for "the team that is better than any of last year's bunch," which goes to show that even if George is not a good dopester he is a good booster.

According to a London paper, Bobby Heck will either be drafted or purchased by the Cleveland American Association Club. Leave it to those London scribes to beat the pistol. Probably Heck will be sought by the Cleveland club, but it does not seem reasonable, if the club was really eager to get him it would make such an announcement now and then try to secure him by the draft route, where it is heads I win and tails you lose.

First in some things, and last in many, the International League and Big Four rugby association, for instance, Montreal, through the assistance of the scribes, is trying to boost the "last in many" average by claiming that the marathon race which will be run on September 9, will be the first ever attempted in Canada over the full marathon distance. For the benefit of the inhabitants of Peasoupville, let it be known that the Hamilton Spectator conducted three over the full distance, the winners being Cotter of Toronto, Corkery, Toronto, and Ryan, New York. The race was abandoned in 1912 when the Canadian long distance trials for the Olympic team were run off over a twenty mile course commencing from the Spectator office.

On the Canadian League pay-rolls are several men who have seen service in the big show. A list of those who have been to the front for a time at least follows:

Frank Shaughnessy, Ottawa, formerly with the Athletics and Washington; Doc Reisling, London, with Washington; George Nill, Ottawa, with Cleveland and Washington; Kustus, of St. Thomas, with Brooklyn; Hall, of Ottawa, with Cleveland; Shocker, with Ottawa, with Detroit; Dr. Yates, Hamilton; Dummy Taylor, Erie, with New York Giants; Heinie Smith, with Erie, with Boston; Butler, Erie, formerly with New York.

St. Thomas and Ottawa opened the league yesterday in the Railroad City, and provided the fans with a great brand of ball until rain stopped the game in the fifth with the score tied at 0-0. Wilkinson and Nevitt were in the points for the home team and Hall and Lage for the Senators.

Toronto opened its International League season at home yesterday afternoon by winning over the Providence team by the eye lash score of 5-4. Bunny Hearne and Bailey, both portsiders, opposed each other. Jay Jay MacCaffery, the Irish landlord, introduced something different in the opening ceremonies. Instead of having the first ball pitched over the plate it was dropped from an airship which circled the stadium, which is another evidence that Jay Jay is a firm believer in high balls.

Steps Are Taken to Hasten Prorogation by Inauguration of Morning Sittings—Bill to Amend Dominion Land Act is Given Third Reading as is Bill to Prevent the Adulteration of Maple Syrup.

OTTAWA, May 7. — The Government yesterday afternoon made its first step toward hurrying prorogation. Upon the motion of the Prime Minister it was ordered that morning sessions should commence next Monday.

The joint committee of both Houses appointed to consider the new Railway Act have petitioned for permission to sit while Parliament is in session. In this connection Hon. H. R. Emmerson announced yesterday morning that no Liberal members of the House would not submit to being called to committee meetings while the House was considering the Canadian Northern legislation.

In the House yesterday afternoon the Prime Minister tabled more forms respecting the Canadian Northern Railway Co. He explained that the presentation of copies of the returns was delayed by the fact that his typist had been pressed for time. Hon. Frank Oliver thereupon asked (1) What effect the agreement between the Government and the C. N. R. would have respecting provincial guarantees of C. N. R. bonds? (2) Would the contract between the Government and the C. N. R. override the provincial contracts with the road respecting rates, and so forth? (3) What amount of the money to be raised by the Government guarantee was to be expended in paying old debts and in protecting the provinces from bonds they had guaranteed?

The Prime Minister replied that many returns were being tabled which would no doubt answer every question asked by the member for Edmonton (Mr. Oliver). In any event all information asked would be promptly furnished by the Government.

The latest returns contain a statement of issued securities and the Government auditor's report as to receipts and expenditures on the C.N.R. system, as well as the relations towards it of Mackenzie & Mann.

The statement of C. N. R. receipts which have been available for construction, betterment, equipment, shows a total of $284,591,304.

The amount due on construction is $21,262,527.

The totals of expenditure have been $305,853,832.

Another statement shows the expenditures on the system to the contractors, Mackenzie & Mann, up to Dec. 31, 1913. The summary shows receipts from Federal, provincial and municipal subsidies, guarantees and other securities, totalling $222,407,841. Against this are expenditures for construction and equipment of $244,670,169. The amount still due for construction is $21,262,527.

The total of principal payments by the company is $73,746,000, and the interest $4,382,027.

The House yesterday was mainly occupied with a discussion of the bill introduced by Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of the Interior, amending the Dominions Land Act. The bill in effect remitted the interest due from settlers who had pre-empted land and allowed such "pre-empts" to substitute for the ordinary homestead duties the keeping of cattle upon their land.

The Opposition approved the legislation in the main, but Hon. Frank Oliver said that the legislation was made necessary by the faulty fiscal policy of the Government. If the western farmers could send their wheat to the United States market, he said, the value of western lands would be so increased that homesteads and pre-emption entries would enormously increase in value.

Several western members participated and at times the debate was heated.

At the evening sitting the bill went through the committee stage and was given its third reading.

During the evening Col. Sam. Hughes presented his bill to extend the time for filing Fenian Raid veterans' bounty claims.

Mr. Hughes (Kings, P.E.I.) objected, and said that Prince Edward Island was excluded in the scope of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Hughes said that he doubted if extending the operation of the bill would benefit anybody in Prince Edward Island, but if Mr. Hughes thought it would he would be glad to amend the bill so as to include any veterans of Prince Edward Island.

Mr. F. B. Carvell (Lib., Carlton, N.B.) characterized the administration of the Fenian Raid Bounties Act as one of the most contemptible scandals in the political history of Canada.

Major Fowler (Kings, N.B.) called upon the Liberal members from Nova Scotia to resent Mr. Carvell's insinuation that 15,000 Nova Scotians had committed perjury.

Hon. Mr. Nantel's bill to prevent frauds and impositions in the sale of maple sugar and maple syrup went through the committee stage and was given a third reading in the House last night.

MORE SAILORS ARE SAVED

BUT CHIEF AND SECOND OFFICER AND MEN ARE STILL MISSING

BOSTON, May 7. — Search by several steamers in the waters south of Sable Island yesterday and last night had failed, up to a late hour, to add to the list of 27 known survivors of the burned liner Columbian. The total of known dead remained at three.

Somewhere in or near the westbound transatlantic steamer lane probably is a small boat were the chief and second officers, and from 17 to 24 men of the crew. At midnight, 72 hours had elapsed since the boats cast off from the blazing steamer. Its crew left hurriedly with little food or water, and some were suffering from burns. This boat was still the object of search last night.

The result of the search is therefore as follows:

Rescued—Captain McDonald and thirteen men, by the steamer Manhattan on Wednesday, and thirteen men and the dead body of Chief Steward Matthews, by the steamer Franconia on Tuesday.

Missing—First and second officers and seventeen men. An engineer was killed and one man was drowned leaving the ship.

Occupants of the two other boats which put off from the Columbian are safely aboard other vessels. The steamer Manhattan, bound for Antwerp, picked up Capt. John McDonald and 13 men yesterday. The Cunard liner Franconia, which has on board 13 other survivors, will land them to-day. The story of their experiences preceded them to port in a narrative sent by wireless by Captain Miller of the Franconia.

The steamer Haverford searched all day for the missing third boat of the Columbian, without success, according to a message by wireless from Captain Mendus last night. His message said:

"Six p.m.—Have searched everywhere in the vicinity where No. 1 and No. 2 boats were rescued, also where Columbian was abandoned. Sorry to say saw nothing of No. 3 boat, nor of Columbian. Several steamers still searching."

The Haverford was bound from Philadelphia for Liverpool.

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, May 6—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 65 cars, comprising 859 cattle 555 hogs, 95 sheep and 153 calves.

Butchers.

Choice steers, $8 to $8.40; good to choice at $7.75 to $8; medium at $7.50 to $7.75; common at $7 to $7.40; choice cows at $7 to $7.50; good at $6.50 to $6.75; common cows at $5 to $5.75; canners and cutters at $3.50 to $4.50; choice bulls at $7 to $7.50; good at $6.50 to $6.75; common bulls at $6 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

The market for stockers and feeders held about steady. Choice steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $7.25 to $7.50; steers, 600 to 700 lbs., sold at $7 to $7.25; stock heifers, $6.75 to $7.10.

Short-keep feeders sold at $7.75 to $7.85, and even $8 was said to have been paid for this class.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were moderate, and they sold at high prices, as usual. Prices ranged at from $65 to $100 each.

Veal Calves.

Receiptst of veal calves were moderate, but prices remained firm. Choice calves, $9.50 to $10.50; good calves, $8.50 to $9.25; common and medium, $6.25 to $7.50.

Any calves selling at lower prices would be classed as "bobs."

Sheep and Lambs.

There were only 95 sheep and lambs reported on sale. Prices were firm. Sheep, ewes, sold at $6.50 to $7.75; rams, $6 to $6.50; clipped yearling American wethers, $8.50; yearling natives, unclipper, $8.75 to $9.50; spring lambs, $7 to $10 each.

Hogs.

Receipts were fairly large, which caused the prices to be about 10c per cwt. easier. Selects, fed and watered, $8.65 to $8.75, and $8.30 to $8.40, f.o.b. cars, and $8.90 to $9, weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, May 6.—At the C.P.R. live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ended May 5 were 1050 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 560 hogs and 150 calves. Offerings for sale today amounted to 500 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 2600 calves.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for cattle owing to the fact that there was a fair demand for the top grades, of which the supply was somewhat limited and sales of good to choice steers were made at $8 to $8.50 per 100 pounds, but the demand for the lower grades was slow as buyers seemed to have ample stock on hand for the balance of the week, and in consequence trade on the whole was rather quiet. Medium steers sold at $6.50 to $7, and common at $5 to $5.50 per 100 pounds. There was some demand for choice cows at $7.25 to $7.50, but the lower grades sold slow at from $5.50 to $6.50, and bulls brought from $5 to $7.25 per 100 pounds.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

Woman's Suffrage Bill is Lost in House of Lords by Vote of 104 to 60

LONDON, May 7. — The woman's suffrage bill was rejected last night by the House of Lords by a vote of 104 to 60.

Speeches in favor of the bill were delivered by Baron Courtney of Penwith, the Earl of Lytton and Baron Willoughby de Broke, while Baron Weardale, the Marquis of Crewe and Viscount St. Aldwyn spoke against it.

Viscount St. Aldwyn said the arguments for the extension of the Parliamentary suffrage to women, which were based on the results obtained in those states of the United States where it had been tried, did not apply in the United Kingdom, because in those states men were in the majority, while in the British Isles they were in the minority. Consequently, he argued, the granting of the Parliamentary vote to women in the British Isles would mean the handing over to the female electorate the destinies of the Empire.

Among those who voted for the bill were Viscount Morley of Blackburn, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishops of London, Hereford, Bangor and St. Asaph.

Those who voted against the bill included the Marquis of Lansdowne, Viscount Esher, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Earl of Halsbury and the Duke of Northumberland.

PIRATES

SAN FRANCISCO, May 7.—Details of a raid made by Chinese pirates on the steamer Shingtai, on March 31, in which a number of the ship's officers and crew were killed and $30,000 stolen, are brought here by the Japanese liner Nippon Maru.

The Shingtai, a Chinese-owned vessel which flies the British flag, sailed from Hong Kong with 170 passengers, who proved to be pirates. Three hours out of port a pre-arranged signal was given and the pirates drew pistols and knives and attacked four soldiers who had been supplied by the Canton Government to guard the vessel's treasures. They then seized the ship.

Three Rebel Armies Are Converging on Mexico City---Every Eye is on Carranza.

WASHINGTON, May 7. — While the Mexican situation was outwardly calm yesterday, pending the formal opening of the conference of South American mediators at Niagara Falls, Ont., on May 18, there continued an active undercurrent of discussion and peparation for the peace plans, and at the same time definite reports reached the Constitutionalist headquarters here of sweeping victories of their forces near San Luis Potosi and other points far south of Saltillo, where it was thought their next big battle would occur.

The news of Constitutionalist successes reached here in despatches from Gen. Carranza to Raphael Zubaran, Minister of the Interior in the Constitutionalist Cabinet, who had a direct wire set up to the headquarters of Gen. Carranza in Chihuahua yesterday. Gen. Carranza's messages showed that three converging campaigns were in active operation, each within 300 miles of Mexico City. Gen. Obregon, with 15,000 men operating from the Pacific coast side, had captured all the intervening territory, was besieging Mazatlan and was threatening Mexico City from the west.

Another division, Gen. Carranza, reported, had fought a battle at Penzacos, near San Luis Potosi, which is 300 miles north of Mexico City. This is the southernmost point which the Constitutionalists have reached in Central Mexico, and with the army now attacking Tampico, they declare that the general advance on the Mexican capital is to be made within a few weeks from three sides.

The significance of these Constitutionalist successes lay in the fact that San Luis Potosi is far south of Saltillo, and only 300 miles from Tampico on the west and Mexico City on the south. Gen. Carranza's report of the desperate condition of the Federals at Mazatlan was coincident with reports from Rear Admiral Howard, who stated that a land and sea engagement was carried on there throughout Tuesday, the Constitutionalists firing rifles and field guns from Piedra Island, while the Federal gunboat Morelos was supported by the Federal shore batteries.

Aside from the notable Constitutionalists successes, the chief military development of the day was the authorization to Gen. Funston to extend his lines at Vera Crus, as might be required for defensive purposes, without, however, undertaking any aggressive operations. A report also came from Gen. Funston that he could secure no definite information as to active movements by the Federals under Gen. Maas, but he construed what they were doing as being merely defensive. No further reinforcements have been ordered to Vera Cruz, nor has there been any sign of Gen. Wood moving to the front to assume command.

The naval situation was shown in reports from Rear-Admiral Badger as to the Atlantic coast points, and from Rear-Admiral Howard as to conditions on the Pacific coast side. Admiral Badger stated that sharp fighting had occurred between Mexican Federals and Constitutionalists between Vera Cruz and Tampico, and he added that rumors reached him through Admiral Mayo that some of Villa's forces intended to take and burn the City of Tampico. Admiral Mayo put no faith in reports of a truce between Federals and Constitutionalist elements about Tampico.

VICE-REGAL TOUR GOES ON.

Chatham and St. Thomas Visited By Duke and Princess.

CHATHAM, May 7.—The Duke of Connaught, Princess Patricia and party visited Chatham yesterday morning, arriving at ten and departing at twelve o'clock. Mayor McCorvie and a large reception committee met the party at the train and escorted them to the Tecumseh Park, where addresses were presented.

The royal party was then taken to the various educational institutions of the city, and the duke declared a half-holiday for the pupils.

Laid Corner-Stone.

ST. THOMAS, May 7.—The royal visitors arrived here at three p.m., and were met by a guard of honor from the 25th Regiment and a deteahment of city police. The line of route was gay with flags and bunting. The chief function of the visit was the laying of the corner-stone of the new Y. M. C. A. building by the duke. This was followed by a brief ride about the principal streets.

The Poet Defined.

Somebody was remarking on the number of poets who are mentioned by the daily papers.

"Why," he declared, "I never heard of one in twenty of them. What is a poet, anyway?"

And the newspaper man gravely replied:

Special Underground Wires.

Perry Field, Erie, Pa., May 7, 2.30 p.m.—Several thousand fans and fanettes have already gathered on the hardwood and are busily engaged in threshing peanuts and waiting for the sound of the gong that will send the Quakerville nine and the locals away on their four months' jaunt in search of the grand old rag.

3 p.m.—The preliminaries, which included a base-running competition, was won by LeRoy Osborne, a local twirler, who covered the distance in eight steps. The Peterboro fans gave Osborne a great hand, and some one yelled: "You can do it faster than that, can't you, Ossie, old boy?"

It is rumored in the grandstand that Frank McManus, originator of Bringing Up Father, has secured Osborne's signature to a contract giving McManus sole rights to reproduce the feat, along with others which the Human Needle will perform while at bat.

3.15—Owing to the breweries being closed for the day, the official umpire failed to make his appearance, and some delay ensued before the game was started. Finally, Managers Blount and Smith agreed to accept Joy Hilarious Davis, who held an indicator in the league last season, and had just succeeded in escaping his guards and had made his way to Perry Field.

3.30.—Davis has just been taken to the hospital. He had barely started to address the grandstand, when a pop-bottle struck him on the dome, rendering him unconscious. Doctors say he cannot recover. Another umpire named Daly has succeeded Davis.

3.35.—Still another delay. Daly had no sooner taken his position behind the catcher after the visitors had been retired, when Sterling, a Peterboro pitcher, sent in a swift shoot, the ball apparently being purposely missed by the backstop, with the result that Daly received the ball in the bread repository. It looked deliberate, but the fans howled in glee. It's a bad day for umpires. It is said that several attempts were made last season to do Daly up but without success. He is unable to continue the game.

PLAY BALL

Petes Arrayed in Battle Togs Against Erie

Special to The Review.

Erie, May 7.—The players on the Peterborough and Erie rosters will be classed as makers of history this afternoon. They will have the distinction of introducing Canadian League ball to the Yankee city. The management of the Erie Club has made elaborate arrangements for the grand opening at Peary Field where the international battle is to be staged. Interest is at fever height, and the fans are itching for the "play ball" signal. The people here are displaying the right spirit, and the members of the Chamber of Commerce to a man are lined up as boosters. A gigantic street parade in which fifty autos will participate will herald the commencement of hostilities. The Moose Band, which will be situated in a huge auto truck, will supply the harmony. At the grounds the combatants will be lined up in deep centre field, from whence they will march to the plate, where Old Glory will be unfurled, to the strain of patriotic airs. It will then be the duty of Judge Emory A. Whaling to heave the first ball. Then Umpire Miller will announce, a la Madam Butt, "Ladies and gentlemen, the batteries for to-day's game will be: For Erie, Brown and McNeil; for Peterbro, Schettler and Ryberg. Play ball."

The Man Supreme To-day.

The fans will be in a position to look over the players which Manager Smith has collected to represent this city, and Manager Blount has corralled to uphold the honor of Peterboro.

A New Stunt.

The Erie club has arranged a new departure in announcing the playing of games in this city. When a game is to be played, bombs will be exploded at 3 and 3.15. They will be of the harmless sort. The teams will line up to-day as follows:

Erie.

Harris, right field.
Dawson, centre field.
Gygli, first base.
Schaeffer, left field.
Smith, second base.
Behan, shortstop.
Wiltse, third base.
McNeil, catcher.
Brown, pitcher.

Peterboro.

Blount, centre field.
Fox, right field.
King, 2nd base.
Gorman, first base.
Swartz or Wilcox, left field.
Byrne, third base.
Price, short stop.
Ryberg or Kelly, catcher.
Schettler, pitcher.

AS OTHERS SEE US

The Ottawa Free Press, in a survey of the Canuck League teams, hands the following to the Petes:

"Peterboro will be a factor to be reckoned with. Curley Blount, an experienced ball player himself, was left a rattling fine bunch of pitchers from last year's Petes in Sterling, Belting, Tracey and Cresswell, and to these he has added Schettler, one of the best minor league boxmen in the business. A corking good backstop of lots of Class B experience is Mully Miller. With the exception of Joe Don't Worry Byrne, Peterboro has an entirely new infield. Gorman at first, King at second, and Schrage at short are the newcomers. The outfield is a good one, and can hit.

WITH THE PETES

IORWERTH "CURLEY" BLOUNT, OUTFIELDER AND MANAGER.

Size 5 ft. 6½ in. Weight 140 lbs. Started his professional career with Youngstown Club, pennant winners of the O. & P. League in the year 1906.

In 1907 he was again with the Youngstown Club, pennant winners, of the same league.

In 1908 he joined the Fort Wayne Club of the Central League, and remained with that club for the following five years. In this time the Fort Wayne Club was always fighting for the pennant and finally landed it in 1912.

In 1913 signed as Manager of the Youngstown Club in the Interstate League, which Club was in second place when the League disbanded on July 15th. "Curley" finished the season in Greenville, playing independent ball, with an all-star aggregation. Signed contract to manage Peterboro Club this spring. "Curley" is fast, a sure fielder, and a .300 hitter. In his years in baseball he has always been on a first division club, and on pennant winners three seasons. When asked regarding his chance of being a "Pennant Winner" this season, he replied that as he had not played in this league nor had seen any of the games played, he preferred not to prophesy, but he firmly believes he is not underestimating the strength of the League, and assures the fans of Peterboro that he will have a well balanced team and one that will be fighting all the time. To round up a pennant-winning aggregation in one season is a huge undertaking, as the fans will realize. With the exception of the pitching department, which is intact, "Curley" has had to practically build up a whole new team, as most of the stars of last season were either drafted or recalled by the Clubs to which they belonged.

SPORTING COMMENT

The Hamilton owners have caved. Harry Corns will get his raise. In Corns, White and Scheckard, the Athletics have a neat outfield.

The story that the Feds. would invade Toronto was to be taken with a grain of salt according to the wise ones, but evidently there is more than mere fiction in it. The Toronto News, which was one of the papers which scoffed at the idea, now publishes a statement to the effect that Tommy Ryan, well known hotelman, turf follower and sporting promoter, is the man behind. The News quotes Mr. Ryan as saying that the Kansas City Feds. will be transferred to Toronto by June 1, and the games will be played at Scarboro Beach until the new plant which the promoters are going to commence work on at once, is finished. On the new grounds a grandstand to cost $65,000 will be erected, and the contract has been let. The home of the Federals will be near the heart of the city.
